NAZIS: ROOSEVELT

Peace Move, He Says, Would Make Him A Benedict Arnold

[By the Associated Press]

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 1—President Roosevelt said today that "we shall do everything in our power to crush Hitler and his Nazi forces."

Mr. Roosevelt did not define "everything." And nowhere in a Labor Day address to his countrymen did he go so far as to say the United States once more should go to war.

Yet he went further than in any previous public pronouncement in pledging America to "do our full part" in conquering "forces of insane violence" let loose by Hitler upon this earth.

The President spoke with a grimness designed to bring home more sharply to America's millions a realization of the threats which he said had been raised against their fundamental rights by "Hitler's violent attempt to rule the world."

Asks Greater Production

Without getting down to the specific question of convoys or other definite new steps to guarantee deliveries of war supplies, Mr. Roosevelt added that "unless we step up the total of our production and more greatly safeguard it on its journeys to the battlefields, these enemies will take heart in pushing their attack in old fields and new."

Referring to those who "ask me to negotiate with Hitler," Mr. Roosevelt said:

"They . . . ask me to become the modern Benedict Arnold and betray all I hold dear. . . . This course I have rejected—I reject it again."

Speaks From Library

The President spoke by radio from the Franklin D. Roosevelt library here on a program sponsored by the Office of Production Management.

Other speakers on the program were Ernest Bevin, British Labor Minister, in London; Sidney Hillman, associate director of OPM; William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor; and James B. Carey, secretary of the CIO.

Text Of Address

Following is the text of the President's address:

"On this day—this American holiday—we celebrate the rights of free laboring men and women.

"The preservation of these rights is now vitally important not only to us who enjoy them—to the whole future of Christian civilization.

"American labor now bears a tremendous responsibility in the winning of this most brutal, most terrible of all wars.

Weapons For Democracy

"In our factories and shops and arsenals we are building weapons on a scale great in its magnitude. To all the battle fronts of the world these weapons are being dispatched, by day and by night, over the seas and through the air. And this nation is now devising and developing new weapons of unprecedented power toward the maintenance of democracy.

"Why are we doing this? Why are we determined to devote our entire industrial effort to the prosecution of a war which has not yet actually touched our own shores?

"We are not a warlike people. We have never sought glory as a nation of warriors. We are not interested in aggression. We are not interested—as the dictators are—in looting. We do not covet one square inch of the territory of any other nation.

Threat To Our Rights

"Our vast effort, and the unity of purpose which inspires that effort are due solely to our recognition of the fact that our fundamental rights—including the rights of labor—are threatened by Hitler's violent attempt to rule the world.

"These rights were established by our forefathers on the field of battle. They have been defended—at great cost but with great success—on the field of battle, here on our own soil, and in foreign lands, and on all the seas all over the world.

"There has never been a moment in our history when Americans were not ready to stand up as free men and fight for their rights.

Rights Interdependent

"In times of national emergency, one fact is brought home to us clearly and decisively—the fact that all of our rights are interdependent.

"The right of freedom of worship would mean nothing without freedom of speech. And the rights of free labor as we know them today could not survive without the rights of free enterprise.

"That is the indestructible bond that is between us—all of us Americans: Interdependence of interests, privileges, opportunities—interedependence of rights.

All Races, All Faiths

"That is what unites us—men and women of all sections, of all races, of all faiths, of all occupations, of all political beliefs. That is why we have been able to defy and frustrate the enemies who believed they could divide us and conquer us from within.

"These enemies all know that we possess a strong navy—gaining in strength. They know that that navy—as long as the navies of the British Empire and the Netherlands and Norway and Russia exist—can together guarantee the freedom of the seas. These enemies know that if those other navies are destroyed, the American navy cannot now, or in the future, maintain the freedom of the seas against all the rest of the world.

"These enemies know that our army is increasing daily in its all-round strength.

Gains In Production

"These enemies know that today the chief American fighters in the battles now raging are those engaged in American industry, employers and employes alike.

"These enemies know that the course of American production in the past year has shown enormous gains and that the product of these industries is moving to the battle fronts against Hitlerism in increasing volume each day.

"But these enemies also know that our American effort is not yet enough—and that unless we step up the total of our production and more greatly safeguard it on its journeys to the battlefields, these enemies will take heart in pushing their attack in old fields and new.

"Dangerous Assumption"

"I give solemn warning to those who think that Hitler has been blocked and halted, that they are making a very dangerous assumption. When in any war your enemy seems to be making slower progress than he did the year before, that is the very moment to strike with redoubled force—to throw more energy into the job of defeating him—to end for all time the menace of world conquest and thereby end all talk or thought of any peace founded on a compromise with evil itself.

"And we know that a free labor system is the very foundation of a functioning democracy. We know that one of the first acts of the Axis dictatorships has been to wipe out all the principles and standards which labor has been able to establish for its own preservation and advancement.

"Trade unionism is a forbidden philosophy under these rule-or-ruin dictators. For trade unionism demands full freedom of expression and peaceful assembly. Trade unionism has helped to give every one who toils the position of dignity which is his due.

Evolutionary Process

"The present position of labor in the United States as an interdependent unit in the life of the nation has not come about by chance. It has been an evolutionary process of a healthy democracy at work.

"Hitler has not worked that way. He will not—he cannot work that way. Just as he denies all rights to individuals, he must deny all rights to groups—of labor, of business, of learning, of the church. He has abolished trade unions as ruthlessly as he has persecuted religion.

"No group of Americans has realized more clearly what Nazi domination of the world means than has organized labor—what it means to their standards of living, their freedom, their lives. No group has a greater stake in the defeat of Nazism, in the preservation of the fundamental freedoms, in the continuance of democracy throughout the world. We have already achieved much; it is imperative that we achieve infinitely more.

"We Cannot Hesitate"

"The single-mindedness and sacrifice with which we jointly dedicate ourselves to the production of the weapons of freedom will determine in no small part the length of the ordeal through which humanity must pass.

"We cannot hesitate, we cannot equivocate in the great task before us. The defense of America's freedom must take precedence over every private aim and over every private interest. We are engaged on a grim and perilous task. Forces of insane violence have been let loose by Hitler upon this earth. We must do our full part in conquering them. For these forces may be unleashed on this nation as we go about our business of protecting the proper interests of our country.

"The task of defeating Hitler may be long and arduous. There are a few appeasers and Nazi sympathizers who say it cannot be done. They even ask me to negotiate with Hitler—to pray for crumbs from his victorious table. They do, in fact, ask me to become the modern Benedict Arnold and betray all I hold dear—my devotion to our freedom — to our churches — to our country. This course I have rejected—I reject it again.

Responsibility Of All

"Instead, I know that I speak the conscience and determination of the American people when I say that we shall do everything in our power to crush Hitler and his Nazi forces.

"American workers and American farmers, American businessmen and American churchmen—all of us together—have the great responsibility and the great privilege of laboring to build a democratic world on enduring foundations.

"May it be said on some future Labor Day by some future President of the United States that we did our work faithfully and well."

PRESIDENT ASKS FULL U. S. PART TO BEAT HITLER

Pledges Nation To Do All In Its Power To Crush Nazi Forces

Sternly Rejects Proposal That He Should Negotiate With Germany

Back Toward Capital

[By the Associated Press]

Highland, N. Y., Sept. 1—President Roosevelt left for Washington by special train tonight after motoring to Highland from his home at Hyde Park. Secretary Morgenthau, who lives near by, also was on the Presidential special, as were Mrs. Roosevelt and Harry L. Hopkins, lease-lend supervisor.

[By the Associated Press]

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 1—Reminding his fellow-Americans of their constant readiness to fight for their rights, President Roosevelt declared today that "we must do our full part" in conquering "forces of insane violence" let loose by Adolf Hitler.

"There has never been a moment in our history," he said in a broadcast Labor Day address, "when Americans were not ready to stand up as free men and fight for their rights."

The fundamental rights of Americans, established by their forefathers on the field of battle, are threatened, he warned, "by Hitler's violent attempt to rule the world."

Effort Not Yet Enough

The President spoke of the increasing war production of the nation's throbbing industries, but asserted that "our American effort is not yet enough." He hinted at additional steps to guarantee delivery of weapons and war equipment overseas but did not mention specific methods.

Once more he scorned the doctrine of appeasement. Appeasers and Nazi sympathizers, he asserted, have asked him to become a modern Benedict Arnold, to betray a devotion to freedom, churches and country. This was his reply:

"This course I have rejected—I reject it again.

"Instead, I know that I speak the conscience and determination of the American people when I say that we shall do everything in our power to crush Hitler and his Nazi forces."

Leaves Answer To People

While his words were as far-reaching as any he has uttered in public discussions of the explosive international situation, Mr. Roosevelt left for his listeners to determine just what he meant by doing "our full part" and "everything in our power" to destroy the Nazis.

With increasing frequency, demands have been made on both sides of the Atlantic that the United States plunge into a "shooting" war. But the President omitted any direct discussion of such a momentous step.

Seated before a battery of microphones in the Franklin D. Roosevelt library here, the Chief Executive was the final speaker on an hour's Labor-Day program arranged by the Office of Production Management.

Others Participating

Also participating in the program, along with stars of Hollywood and the New York entertainment world, were Sidney Hillman, associate director of OPM; Ernest Bevin, British Labor Minister, speaking from London; William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and James B. Carey, secretary of the CIO.

Enemies who tried to "divide and conquer us from within," Mr. Roosevelt said, know that employers and employes alike were the chief American fighters in the battles now raging.

Production had advanced enormously in the last year, he said, and the product of American industry moves to the battle fronts in increasing volume each day.

"But these enemies also know," the President asserted, "that our American effort is not yet enough—and that unless we step up the total of o. production and more greatly safeguard it on its journeys to the battlefields, these enemies will take heart in pushing their attack in old fields and new."

Much More Must Be Done

While much has been accomplished, he said it was imperative that infinitely more be achieved.

"The singlemindedness and sacrifice with which we jointly dedicate ourselves to the production of the weapons of freedom," Mr. Roosevelt said, "will determine in no small part the length of the ordeal through which humanity must pass.

"We cannot hesitate, we cannot equivocate in the great task before us. The defense of America's freedom must take precedence over every private aim and over every private interest.

"We are engaged on a grim and perilous task. Forces of insane violence have been let loose by Hitler upon this earth. We must do our full part in conquering them. For these forces may be unleashed on this nation as we go about our business of protecting the proper interests of our country."

May Be Long Task

The President cautioned that the task of defeating Hitler might be long and arduous. Apparently in reference to Russia's surprisingly strong resistance to the Nazi Blitzkrieg, he added that those who thought Hitler had been blocked and halted were making a very dangerous assumption.

When the enemy seems to be slowing up, he said, that is the very moment to strike with redoubled force, to end for all time the menace of world conquest and "thereby end all talk or thought of any peace founded on a compromise with evil itself."

At no point in his address did Mr. Roosevelt deal specifically with the Far Eastern crisis. His talk of greater safeguards for American military supplies could apply, however, to deliveries to Russia by way of Vladivostok as well as to transatlantic shipments to England.

Back In Capital Today

The Chief Executive will be back in Washington tomorrow and may be expected to consider again the broad aspects of American-Japanese differences. When the Japanese Ambassador, Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura, delivered a note to the President last week from his Premier, Prince Fumimaro Konoye, it was announced that there would be further meetings between Mr. Roosevelt and the Ambassador.

While his speech stressed international affairs, the President did take note of the Labor Day holiday.

A free labor system, he said, is the very foundation of a functioning democracy, whereas one of the first acts of Axis dictatorships has been to erase all labor principles and standards. Because it demands full freedom of expression and peaceful assembly, he said, trade unionism is a forbidden philosophy under "these rule or ruin dictators."

Labor Realizes Danger

No group of Americans has realized more clearly than organized labor what Nazi domination of the world would mean, Mr. Roosevelt declared.

Calling the preservation of the rights of free laboring men and women vitally important, not only to those who enjoy them, but also to the whole future of Christian civilization, the Chief Executive asserted:

"American labor now bears a tremendous responsibility in the winning of this most brutal, most terrible of all wars."

Depends On Supplies

Bevin said in his broadcast to the United States that victory depended upon overwhelming supplies of all forms of war materials.

"Surely, working people will not allow any disunity in their ranks to hinder the final victory over this monster who would destroy them," he said.

Hillman, in a message to Bevin and "to our fellow-workers in all lands," said:

"Your battle is ours. We will help fight it with all our faith and all our strength and all our skill, in the mine, in the factory, on the farm—today, tomorrow and every day, until the battle is won."

Labor Is Key, Says Green

Green, who spoke from Grand Rapids, Mich., said that labor was the key factor in the defense production program, and added:

"Speaking for the 5,000,000 members of the American Federation of Labor, I assure the American people that there is no more loyal and thoroughly aroused body of men and women in the nation today. We of the AFL appreciate the benefits of freedom. We love our country. We are for the national defense program one hundred per cent. We do not hesitate and we never have hesitated to express our hate of totalitarianism in all its forms."

Green and George Meany, AFL secretary-treasurer, also called for an end to the strife between the AFL and CIO. Green said that his organization reiterates "our standing offer to make peace."

Meany, speaking at Uniondale, N. Y., at the dedication of a memorial to the late Samuel Gompers, founder of the AFL, declared that "there never has been a sound trade-union reason for a divided labor movement."

CIO Against Fascism

Carey, speaking from Philadelphia, said the CIO stood against Fascism, supported this nation's defense program and declared:

"We believe that victory in this war—in order that it be real victory—must be based on the establishment of sound systems of security and peace throughout the world, in which all nations and all peoples may participate on equal terms."

Other quotations from some of the Labor Day speeches follow:

George Hicks, Parliamentary secretary for the British Works and Buildings Ministry, urged American workers to "feel that they are right in this war, fighting side by side at the benches and in the workshops with their British comrades."

Morrison Asks Help

Herbert Morrison, British Labor leader and Minister of Home Security—"Concentrate in giving us every ounce of help within your power."

Secretary of Labor Perkins, in a Radio Address—"We are in fact a gigantic factory, striving to supply ourselves and other liberty-loving peoples with arms and equipment. Every possible ounce of energy and resource at our command needs to be mobilized for the job. This great national defense plant of ours must be kept going at speed and at efficiency in the interest of full production."

Italians Are Scornful Of Roosevelt's Speech

Rome, Sept. 1 (AP)—Fascist circles responded to President Roosevelt's speech today by quoting Adolf Hitler's forecast of "a war of life or death" and declaring that Germany and Italy would win.

Hitler's remarks to British Ambassador Sir Neville M. Henderson at their last meeting—"it will be a war of life or death"—were widely recalled as the Axis powers started the third year of the war with expressions of confidence in the outcome.

Fascists said they found nothing new in President Roosevelt's assertion that the United States would "do everything in its power to crush Hitler and his Nazi forces."

They recalled that he and Prime Minister Churchill spoke of "the final destruction of Nazi tyrany" in their eight points.

"Miserable Rhetoric"

Such talk, Il Lavoro Fascista said, is "miserable rhetoric which brings about nothing."

Italy has taken the view that the United States can prolong the war by supplying Britain, but can do nothing to win it.

Virginio Gayda, editor of Il Giornale d'Italia, said Hitler and Premier Mussolini prepared in their Russian front conference for "a new phase in the war offensive against British forces."

"No compromised peace," he said, "is now any longer possible."

Bevin Appeals To U. S. Labor

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 1 — Ernest Bevin, British minister of labor, appealed today for labor unity in an address broadcast to the United States.

He said:

"You know in your hearts that your future depends upon victory over Naziism. It is acknowledged that victory depends upon overwhelming supplies of all forms of war materials. Surely, working people will not allow any disunity in their ranks to hinder the final victory over this monster who would destroy them."

Hillman Pledges Labor's Aid

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 1—Sidney Hillman, associate director of OPM, today broadcast a message to Ernest Bevin, British Labor Minister, and "to our fellow workers in all lands, many of whom are risking their lives to hear this broadcast."

"Your battle is ours," Hillman said. "We will help fight it with all our faith and all our strength and all our skill, in the mine, in the factory, on the farm—today, tomorrow, and every day, until that battle is won."

"America Responds"

"We know that the outcome of today's fight for freedom and human dignity depends in large measure on what American labor must do and will do for the defense of democracy," he said.

"Together with management, labor is turning out the guns, and ships and tanks and planes that will guarantee victory for those who are fighting the battle of democracy," Hillman said. "All America responds to this task. We have mobilized our man power—and our will power—for the contest between the workshops of democracy and the sweatshops of the Axis."

Labor "Knows Stakes"

He added that American labor, unified and firm, knew what the stakes were and that it had seen Hitler destroy trade unions and murder labor's leaders.

"Our working people know that none of us can be secure in our jobs or safe in our homes while Hitler's gangsters are at large," he said.

War Would End Rights Of Labor, Wheeler Says

Freedom Only Exists In Democracy At Peace, Senator Declares

SEP 2 1941

St. Charles, Ill., Sept. 1 (AP)—Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Dem., Mont.) asserted tonight that the rights of labor would be forgotten if the United States "plunged into war."

"Freedom of speech and assembly, exist only in democracies," he said in an address at a farm festival, "and exist in democracies only when they are at peace.

"The day this nation is plunged into war, labor can forget those hard won rights."

Norse King's Appeal

The Norwegian monarch, whose words were echoed by the others, said in speaking to the United States:

"Hitler and Hitler regimes are hated from the bottom of the heart of the great majority of the people in occupied countries, and you, the citizens of the United States of America, will certainly agree that a united Europe under the leadership of a despised nation is impossible—an impossibility.

Thanks America

"The Norwegian people are fighting a stubborn and tough passive resistance against aggression and they need all the sympathy and assistance it is possible to give them.

"On behalf of the Norwegian people at home and abroad, I take this opportunity to convey to the great people of the United States of America and to President Roosevelt our most sincere thanks for the benefits and sympathies for Norway's fight for freedom, as well as for all the valuable assistance in different ways which we have received and are receiving on an everlasting scale."

Young King Peter said that the Yugoslav people are undergoing bitter hardships "but they are still fighting jailer who knows no right—only might."

He said the United States had given the conquered peoples of Europe new hope and that "even while Hitler is strangling them that your help will be in time."

Premier Pierlot of Belgium said: "We count upon the help of the great American nation. . . . We are proud to be taking part in a struggle in which the future of mankind is at stake. But let me tell you this: Time is pressing. Overe there in the occupied territories all the people are suffering terribly."

Wilhelmina Predicts Death Knell for Hitler

LONDON, Sept. 1 (AP).—Queen Wilhelmina of The Netherlands, in a broadcast to thank her people for birthday greetings, said today that oppressed people "have closed their ranks and are getting ready to sound the death knell over him (Hitler) and his detestable regime." The Queen was sixty-one years old yesterday.

"While our mutual aggressor has now directed his lust for murder and his rapacity against the valorous Russian people, resistance grows more and more bitter at his back," she said.

allowed the aliens unusual privileges. The customs officials did not reveal what they had learned.

42 Hours In Air

None of the Russians spoke English, but through interpreters it was learned that the departure from Moscow was made last Thursday Moscow time, or five days ago, and that the 6,000-mile trip required forty-two hours in the air.

In command was Mikhail Gromov, a veteran of Arctic flights. His principal aides are Pilots Kotikow and Pesorow, both of whom also have had previous experience in the Polar field. All the men are apparently flyers, mechanics or radio operators, most of them of ten or more years' training.

The Russians were secretive regarding the purpose of their trip. A Soviet Embassy spokesman in Washington said merely that he had no news of any such flight.

Each airman carried a diplomatic passport entitling him to unusual privileges, and these were validated by customs officials here.

Arrive Without Warning

The planes began refueling on the waters of Norton Sound, where they landed, but were expected to refuel again at Anchorage or Sitka, where larger gasoline stocks are available. The flyers said they would hop for Anchorage today.

The two planes arrived without any warning. One circled over Nome and the other followed it to a landing on the bay.

Only three Russian planes are known to have crossed Alaskan territory before yesterday.

In June of 1937, three Soviets headed by Pilot Valeri Chealov streaked across the "roof-of-the-world." Route nonstop from Moscow to Vancouver, Wash. A month later, three more, headed by Pilot Mikhail Gromov, took the same route and landed at San Jacinto, Cal.

In August of the same year, Sigmund Levanevsky, Soviet air hero, and five companions were lost on an attempted Moscow - to - United States flight which ended somewhere in the Arctic Ocean or the frozen wastes of northern Alaska. Neither their plane nor their bodies ever were found.

Russian Flyers Expect To Resume Flight Today

Nome, Alaska, Sept. 1 (AP)—Gen. Mikhail Gromov, commander of the forty-seven Russians flying on a secret mission from Moscow to Washington, indicated tonight that his party, traveling in two big seaplanes, probably would take off from this sub-Arctic harbor tomorrow morning.

The veteran Arctic flyer said his expedition, which originally was scheduled to proceed south today, was awaiting the arrival of Russian Consul Fedotoff from Fairbanks before setting a specific departure time.

Weather permitting, the planes will fly south in the morning by way of Sitka, Alaska, Seattle and San Francisco. SEP 2 1941

TANK DESTROYER HONORED

Russian Captain Credited With Stopping 6 Nazi Machines

MOSCOW, Sept. 1 (AP)—The title of Hero of the Soviet Union was conferred posthumously in Moscow today upon an artillery officer, Captain Khigrin, who was credited with destruction of six German tanks.

Serving a long-range gun himself after four of its crew were killed, Captain Khigrin was officially credited with blasting the Nazi machines out of action as they moved over a highway toward his hillside position. He was fatally wounded by a shell fragment, the account said, as "the sixth German tank tottered and fell on its side."

The latest honors list also included decorations for five Red Army units credited with brilliant service at the front. The Seventeenth Motorized Infantry and the 256th Infantry Regiments received the Order of Lenin. The First Motorized Infantry and Fifty-seventh Tank Divisions and the Forty-sixth Artillery Regiment were awarded the Order of the Red Banner.

Rulers Of Two And Officials Of Four Others Broadcast Plea On War's Second Anniversary

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 1—The crowned heads of two nations and representatives of six others, all driven into exile by Nazi Germany, broadcast an appeal from London today on the war's second anniversary for increased resistance to Adolf Hitler's forces.

The speakers on a program relayed here by CBS included King Haakon of Norway; King Peter II of Yugoslavia; Gen. Wladyslaw Sikorski, Polish Premier and Commander-in-Chief; Dr. Jan Masaryk, Minister of Czechoslovakia; Paul Henri Spaak, Minister of Belgium, and Dr. Alexandros Koryzis, Premier of Greece.

Each pledged his country's resistance to the Axis powers and declared that victory would be theirs.

King Haakon said: "Our cause is the cause of all free men. Our victory will be the victory of all free men. Our fight is for the freedom of the world."

King Peter said: "Our people are fighting for their ideals, fighting heroically, without rest or respite."

General Sikorski said that soon Polish troops would be fighting at the side of Soviet Russia against the Germans in accordance with the recent pact between his Government and the Kremlin.

Russians Keep Flyers' U. S. Mission A Secret

[By the Associated Press]

Nome, Alaska, Sept. 1—Forty-seven uncommunicative Russians bearing diplomatic passports stepped ashore in this sub-Arctic town last night from two huge flying boats—apparently on a secret mission to the United States.

The Russians admitted (1) that they had left Moscow Thursday and (2) that they were en route for Washington, D. C., via Anchorage, Sitka and San Francisco.

No names were offered by the airmen except to customs officials, who validated diplomatic passports, which

Nazi Pontoon Span Blasted

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Sept. 1—Russian forces were reported today to have smashed a German attempt to bridge the Dnieper river, barrier to the eastern Ukraine, saved a Ukrainian town after a day and night of fighting in the streets and beaten a Nazi drive into Arctic Russia.

The midnight and midday communiques said only, as they have for days, that fighting was continuing along the entire front.

SEP 2 1941

Bridge Demolished

Military dispatches, however, indicated that Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's central army still was counter-attacking strongly while other Red army forces held doggedly on the Leningrad and southern flanks.

The Soviet Bureau of Information credited the four-man crew of a Russian bomber with demolishing—at the cost of their own lives—a half-finished pontoon bridge which the Germans had labored for three days under heavy fire to build across the Dnieper.

Crash On Pontoons

Their bomber aflame from an anti-aircraft shell, the crew was said to have steered purposely for a crash on the pontoons, exploding their bomb load and wrecking the structure.

The Russians reported nearly 1,000 Nazi engineers and infantry had been killed by artillery fire and bombings as they struggled to build the bridge, which was described only as near the town of "D" (possibly Dnieperopetrovsk).

The Bureau of Information said Russian volunteers fought alongside regular army units in a day and night of street fighting in which German tnak and infantry forces finally were beaten back from an unidentified town in the Ukraine.

Arctic Fight Reported

They fought from barricades and alleys, the Russian account declared, disabling tanks with bottles of gasoline and sometimes meeting the German infantry in bayonet charges. German losses were estimated at more than 1,600 men, six tanks and ten armored cars.

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 1—A Moscow radio broadcast said today that German casualties on the German-Russian front now totaled about 2,500,000, including 1,000,000 killed.

The broadcast was quoted by the BBC in London and picked up here by NBC.

"Strongest Stand of War"

MOSCOW, Tuesday, Sept. 2 (AP)—Soviet military sources said today that the Red Army was making its strongest stand of the war along the entire front, with the tenacious help of Russian units isolated behind the German lines.

Reds Repelled, Nazis Say

[By the Associated Press]

The war thundered into its third year today with the German Army, conquerors of the lands of 160,000,000 persons, locked with the Red Army of Russia in a campaign so intense that the German-people themselves apparently have given up all hopes of an end to fighting in 1941.

Dispatches from Berlin said the average German was convinced that the latest Axis declaration "to wage the war to a victorious end" took precedence over Hitler's message of last New Year's Day which had been interpreted in many quarters as determination to end the conflict in 1941.

(In that message Hitler said: "Soldiers of the National Socialist armed forces of the Greater Reich, the year 1941 will bring the completion of the greatest victory of our history.")

Communiques on Page 16

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 1—Continued Soviet attempts to recross the Dnieper south of Kiev with the support of gunboats have been thrown back with bloody losses, German sources reported today.

The west bank remains German-held, it was claimed.

The high command itself reported the destruction of twenty-seven Russian monitors and gunboats on the river north of Kiev, besieged Ukrainian capital, during the past week.

Still another attempted Red army counter-offensive—supported by many tanks—was reported thrown back on an undesignated sector of the front.

Eighty-six enemy tanks were destroyed, DNB said, eight of them of the fifty-two-ton variety. The attack was said to have been directed at a sector held by one German army corps.

11,432 Prisoners Claimed

The German high command announced that 11,432 Red army prisoners, 239 cannon, 91 tanks, 2 armored trains "and a great quantity of war materials" were taken in the battles in which German forces captured the Estonian capital of Tallinn.

The war bulletin from Adolf Hitler's headquarters said that the Estonian west coast harbor of Haapsalu, across a narrow channel from the Russian-held islands of Daego and Oesel, off the mouth of the Gulf of Finland, also had fallen to German forces.

Convoy Attacked

The communique also reported heavy maritime blows in the Atlantic where, it said, a U-boat sank four merchantmen from a convoy and in the Gulf of Finland, where, it related, more than sixty Russian ships had been sighted burning in German mine fields.

Somewhere in the north, another German dispatch said, six Soviet ships, four of them monitors, were destryed by German ground forces.

These announcements were made as Hitlers armies, the conquerors of nearly three quarters of a million square miles of European territory embracing 160,000,000 persons, plunged into their third year of war deep in Russian territory.

In the first twenty-four months of warfare, touched off by German operations against Poland, Nazi arms have subjugated nations with a total population exceeding that of the United States.

In ten weeks of fighting in Russia the Germans have taken Soviet territory amounting to more than the area of Greater Germany, including Austria and the Sudetenland.

Reichsmarshal Goering's air force, which has played a major role in German conquests, was reported by DNB to be dealing "destructive blows" up and down the length of the eastern front.

Soviet troop concentrations, airports, fortresses, trains and shipping were among its targets, the news agency said. In one particularly successful operation, it related, a bridge over the Desna river, which joins the Dnieper at Kiev, was destroyed by Stukas.

Fortresses were reported singled out for heavy attacks in the Gormostalpol vicinity of the northeastern section, where Nazi flyers claimed destruction of thirteen Russian aircraft.

In the central sector before Moscow, railway facilities were attacked and the Germans said a number of trains were blasted apart near Konotop, station on the Moscow-Kiev line some 120 miles northeast of Kiev.

Two Soviet vessels, one of 3,000 tons and the other of 1,000 tons, were reported badly damaged by Nazi air bombs in the Gulf of Finland.

Hitler received Gen. Munoz Grande, commander of the Spanish volunteer division, at his field headquarters.

Two Red Counter-Attacks Beaten Back, Berlin Claims

Germans Report Repulse Of Russian Attempt To Recross Dnieper River

BY LOUIS LOCHNER

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 1—The German armies were declared today to have beaten back two Red counter-offensives, one a persistent series of efforts to recross the Dnieper river in the lower Ukraine and the other in an undisclosed sector of the front where eighty-six Russian tanks were reported smashed by a Nazi corps.

Repeated Soviet attempts to recapture positions on the west bank of the Dnieper below Kiev were supported by gunboats, it was stated, but were "repulsed with bloody losses."

In the north about Leningrad, where the Russian position was described as one of increasing peril, the Nazi general staff appeared to be concentrating on the islands of Oesel and Dagoe, lying just beyond the mouth of the Gulf of Finland. A dual effort appeared under way to knock out two more of the few surviving positions protecting the Leningrad sea approaches from the west and to wrest from the Russians aerial bases from which it is believed that Red bombers have been springing at Berlin.

The impression in military circles here was that the Russians, in fleeing captured Tallinn, did not manage to get many troops away from that town and from the Estonian west coast harbor of Haapsalu, whose fall to Nazi forces was announced only today in the Estonians cleanup.

Thus, it was believed, neither Oesel nor Dagoe received much reinforcement.

11,432 Prisoners Claimed

As to the battle for Tallinn, a recapitulation by the high command stated that 11,432 Russian prisoners, 239 cannon, 91 tanks, two armored trains and much war material were taken. Other sources asserted the Soviet losses included the annihilation of the Tenth Soviet Army.

In the Gulf of Finland, more than sixty Russian ships, said the high command, were sighted burning in German minefields.

The engagement thus was pictured as a Soviet naval disaster of the first rank; a German war reporter said he saw convoys running up to fifty vessels in flight under heavy dive-bomber attack, from the Tallinn debacle.

Other Blows Reported

Subsidiary blows to Russian naval strength in the south also were reported in the high command's announcement that twenty-seven Soviet monitors and gunboats had been smashed on the Dnieper north of Kiev since August 26.

Politically, the opening day of the third year of war brought these expressions from German spokesmen:

That Japan in her conversations with the United States was standing on the Axis pact as her basis.

That Finland would stick to the Axis "until the final victory."

That "Europe under Axis leadership is determined to gain victory in this holy war over the powers attempting to hinder and retard its development."

Russian Peasants Forced To Work Land By Nazis

Berlin, Sept. 1 (AP)—German dispatches said today that Russian peasants in occupied territory, at the command of the German army and under the eyes of governmental trustees, were harvesting crops left standing by the retreating Red army.

Preparations for fall planting also were ordered as the Reich sent overseers to control Communist collective farms.

"Work must be done by hand," said a dispatch of War Reporter Fritz Meske quoting the army order, "wherever machines and other apparatus for bringing in the crops are missing."

Meske said inducements were offered to the peasants to cooperate—higher prices than were paid in the U. S. S. R., forms of operation to remain unchanged for the present, private property to remain tax free, livestock increases to be permitted.

Meske said farmers obeyed "willingly and almost one hundred per cent."

Meske wrote that the Red army left the battle zone in "a more ravaged state than we are accustomed to in other theaters of war."

German economists, technicians and specialists are studying conditions in occupied Russia, the reporter said, and he declared there was no doubt that German organization soon would put the war-torn regions into production again.

Peace Hint In Finland

[By the Associated Press]

Helsinki, Finland, Sept. 1—Gen. Lennart Oesch, chief of the army general staff, in a victory address to battle-scarred Finnish forces in Viipuri Castle Square, today declared "our fight is not finished" because ancient Finnish soil still is in the hands of the Russians.

Taking cognizance of speculation about Finland's war policy, General Oesch, the commanding general on the Viipuri front, said that, although "by the conquest of Viipuri the dictated Moscow peace is no more," there still is Finnish soil occupied by the Soviet.

"May your success give you strength to carry your task to a final and permanent conclusion," he said.

(The general did not go so far, however, as to declare Finland would not be willing to negotiate a separate peace with the Russians once all territory Finland claims as her own has been reoccupied by Finnish forces.)

Germans Confident

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 1—Authorized German sources declared today they were confident that Finland would not arrange a separate peace with Russia under any circumstances. These sources also declared that the Axis three-power pact was the basis of all negotiations between Japan and the United States.

"There is no reason whatever to doubt where Japan stands," they asserted. "Modalities of carrying out provisions of the three-power pact are Japan's business."

Oesch Makes Comment In Victory Speech To Troops In Viipuri

Negotiation Rumors Persist, But Winant Denies Part In Them

[By the Associated Press]

Helsinki, Sept. 1—A Finnish battle leader, taking cognizance of speculation over the possibility of an early Moscow-Helsinki peace, emphasized old territorial demands upon Soviet Russia today and declared "our fight is not finished."

Lieut. Gen. Lennart Oesch delivered the comment in a victory address to his troops at the castle square of Viipuri, the Karelian Isthmus city seventy-five miles northwest of Leningrad newly regained from the Red army. A Finnish battle flag lowered before the Russians March 13, 1940, was raised again.

"Coercive Peace Is No More"

"By the conquest of Viipuri, the coercive Moscow peace of 1940 is no more," said General Oesch, chief of the army general staff, but he added that "ancient Finnish soil is still in the hands of the enemy."

"May your success give you strength to carry your task to a final and permanent conclusion," he said.

[Willingness of Finland to negotiate a separate peace after her claims are satisfied, however, was not ruled out by the general's declaration. The Finns have denied starting any such negotiations, and circumstances of the speech implied that any peace feelers originated in Russia.]

Finnish Claims Cited

General Oesch's phrases suggested to observers the repeated claims of Finland—often presented by Field Marshal Baron Carl Gustaf Mannerheim—for Russian Karelia, the forested, lake-dotted province which sprawls for one hundred miles east of the Finnish frontier.

Russia clings also to some territory ceded her after the 1939-40 winter war, including the naval base of Hango at the mouth of the Gulf of Finland eighty miles southwest of Helsinki.

Baron Mannerheim, who called upon the Finns June 29 to follow him "this last time" in a holy war with Germany against the Russians, declared anew July 11 his purpose to win all Karelia for a "greater Finland." It was a pledge he first made in 1918.

Greater Finland Seen

"Karelian freedom and a greater Finland gleam ahead of us," he said, "in the mighty avalanche of world events."

Through Karelia stretches the railway which links Leningrad with Murmansk, the great Russian Arctic port. Of its people, largely hunters, fishermen, trappers and loggers, about fifty-seven per cent. are of Russian extraction.

A positive development in Finnish-Russian relations was a Foreign Office announcement that twelve men of the Finnish legation in Moscow and one private Finnish citizen, who had been interned in railway cars in Russia for two months, at last crossed into neutral Turkey yesterday on the way home. The party was headed by Minister Paavo Hynninen.

Rumors Of Peace Deal Widespread In Europe

Rumors that a separate peace between Finland and Russia was being explored—linked with a report that Premier Stalin had ordered his numerically superior northern army to retire to the old Karelian Isthmus frontier—circulated widely in Europe.

The names of two United States diplomats, John G. Winant, Ambassador to Britain, and H. F. Arthur Schoenfeld, Minister to Finland, were mentioned in London as possible intermediaries, but Winant denied he had any such role.

"I know absolutely nothing of any plan to have me act as intermediary in any Russian-Finnish negotiations," Winant said.

Red Withdrawal Reported

The Stockholm correspondent of the Daily Mail reported, in a dispatch unconfirmed in authoritative London quarters, that Red Army Marshal Klementi Voroshilov had moved back fifteen divisions "outnumbering the Finns two-to-one" in some places as much as 150 miles in a voluntary abandonment of territory won eighteen months ago.

"It is unlikely that Stalin ordered such a withdrawal—which means abandoning a strong second line of defense in the isthmus—unless he received assurance that the Finns would come to terms," the Daily Mail's correspondent wrote.

Such a move, however, would permit stiffening of Soviet defense over a shortened front. London sources pointed out also that a separate peace with Finland would relax pressure on Leningrad and diminish the threat against Murmansk in far northern operations.

Peace advantages to the Finns, they said, would include the reclamation of lost territory, the elimination of another winter of campaigning and possible relaxation of the British blockade so that United States food ships might sail again for Arctic Petsamo.

Winant Denies Role

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 1—Rumors that a separate Russian-Finnish peace is being explored came from many quarters in Europe today, but United States Ambassador John G. Winant denied reports that he was playing a central role in the negotiations.

"I know absolutely nothing of any plan to have me act as intermediary in any Russian-Finnish negotiations," Winant said.

He added that he first heard of the rumors when he read the story of the Daily Mail's correspondent, which mentioned Winant as an intermediary

13 Finn Diplomats Freed

(Possible indication that bitter feeling between Finns and Russians was giving way to a more conciliatory attitude, however, was seen in an announcement by the Finnish Foreign Office that thirteen Finnish diplomats and citizens who had been detained in railway cars on the Russian side of the frontier ever since the start of the eastern war had at last been allowed to leave by way of Turkey. Russia's refusal to let them depart had been the cause of sharp exchanges between the two countries.

(In Berlin, authorized sources said they were confident that Finland would not make a separate peace with Russia under any circumstances.)

Along with the peace rumors was a report that Soviet Premier Stalin had ordered his northern army to withdraw on the Karelian Isthmus to the old frontier that existed in 1939.

The Stockholm correspondent of the Daily Mail reported that Stalin had taken the initiative in the peace move that might shorten the Red army's present battlefront by almost 500 miles. This account indicated that Russian Marshal Klementi Voroshilov had drawn his forces back in some places as much as 150 miles.

Finns Deny Initiative

The Germans said that their Finnish allies had pushed on past Viipuri and other points approximately to the old Finnish-Russian frontier.

The Finns officially denied that they had started peace dealings with Moscow, but said nothing as to whether the Russians had taken the initiative in such negotiations.

Informed sources in London declared the Germans undoubtedly would attempt to force the Finns to stay in the fight, but expressed the belief that the present German strength in Finland would not be sufficient to scare the Finns, who battled Russia alone in 1939.

R. A. F. Smashes At Ruhr Area

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 1—Britain's R. A. F. and the German Luftwaffe stepped up their aerial offensive overnight as British bombers smashed hard at the Ruhr and Rhineland industrial centers of Essen and Cologne and the Germans bombed Hull.

In operations which the British said were carried out despite cloudy, unfavorable weather the Air Ministry said "a considerable force" of R. A. F. bombers carried the attack into Germany.

In addition, docks at Boulogne were reported bombed and mines were laid by plane along German coastwise shipping lanes.

Seven British bombers and plane were listed as missing.

The R. A. F., in one of its days since last fall, began its at at dawn yesterday.

The offensive continued almost without stop and when night fell additional raiders left England for the Continent.

Among the many attacks which reached Lille, Cherbourg, the Netherlands coast, Brest, and targets near Le Trait and Lannion, the Air Ministry said, an American-built Fortress plane made a daring daylight attack on Bremen.

Nazi Raiders Reply

As though in answer, German raiders, coming over in formation for the first time in recent weeks, made a night attack on northeastern and eastern England. A communique said residential property was damaged and a number of casualties caused.

The main point struck in northeast England was Hull which on July 17 underwent the last heaviest raid on Britain.

Two public air-raid shelters in a working-class district in Hull were hit. Rescue squads still dug in the ruins today for trapped persons.

In another Hull district two domestic shelters were demolished and three persons killed and ten rescued. Several surface shelters were blasted in another section. The raiders dived on the city through a heavy anti-craft barrage.

Anti-aircraft guns were heard in the suburbs of London for the first time since July 27, but no air raid siren sounded and no bombs were dropped.

Berlin Belittles Raids From East

BERLIN, Sept. 1 (AP)—Night air raids on Germany both from the west and the east [evidently the combined effort of British and Russian air forces] were reported by the High Command today.

Its communiqué mentioned only British planes specifically, saying seven were shot down, but reported "individual enemy planes made ineffectual efforts to attack Northeast Germany" while the R. A. F. was over the northwest. Damage to residential sections in several areas, including Cologne, was reported.

The Luftwaffe apparently stepped up its air offensive for the communiqué reported bomb damage to dock facilities, a warehouse and supply depots at Hull, England. Other German bombers, it said, raided other English east coast centers and airports in Lincolnshire. Two British bombers were said to have been shot down over England.

Summing up thirty days of air warfare in August, German sources claimed 260 British planes were destroyed over western Europe, including 216 fighter planes and forty-four bombers.

The D. N. B. news agency quoted the newspaper Paris-Soir tonight as suggesting editorially that one Englishman living in France be executed for every Frenchman killed on French soil by British air raiders.

Nazi Bombers Attack 3 Unarmed U. S. Ships, Correspondent Writes

New York, Sept. 1 (AP)—The American Magazine said today that Gordon Gaskill, a correspondent, had reported that Nazi bombers staged an unsuccessful moonlight raid on three unarmed American merchant vessels at Suez on July 14, shortly after their arrival with war supplies for Britain.

Gaskill said he was aboard one ship which carried $5,000,000 worth of supplies and that the planes roared overhead four times, thrice dropping bombs.

Although no direct hits were scored, one of the vessels suffered several sprung plates and broken portholes, he reported.

"Anti-aircraft guns, searchlights and British fighters were making the air hot, but the bomber risked one last visit," Gaskill wrote. "This time he dropped incendiary bombs, which made a series of harmless plops ten yards off the starboard side. Then he roared for home, but a British fighter got him just over the mountains."

Scores Of Fire And Explosive Missiles Dropped. Toll Not Given

Channel "Invasion Season" Of 1941 Finds R.A.F. Taking Offensive

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 1—DNB quoted the newspaper Paris-Soir tonight as suggesting editorially that one Englishman living in France be executed for every Frenchman killed on French soil by British air raiders.

[By the Associated Press]

A Northeast English Town, Tuesday, Sept. 2—Waves of German bombers attacked this important town last night with scores of heavy explosive and fire bombs.

The raid lasted only a short time, but local observers said it was the heaviest yet suffered.

Casualties were suffered, but the toll was not immediately learned.

Nazi Bomber Crashes

Ground batteries threw up a terrific barrage and one German bomber crashed in a near-by field.

The ship burst into flames and its crew perished while a crowd of miners gathered about the craft.

A second German bomber later was reported destroyed as British night fighters took to the air in strength.

Another northeast town also was attacked and raiders were reported over northwest England, east Anglia and Scotland.

1941 "Invasion Season" Finds R. A. F. On Offense

BY DREW MIDDLETON

London, Sept. 1 (AP)—The "invasion season" of September came to the English Channel with longer nights and good weather today and found the R. A. F. running its own offensive from northern Europe to Africa.

While Nazi warplanes dived through an anti-aircraft barrage in the greatest numbers in weeks to blast open several air-raid shelters at Hull on the east coast in a Sunday night attack, and gave London its first air-raid alarm since July 27, the R. A. F. smashed hard at Germany's Ruhr and Rhineland and the French coast and raided Bremen with American-made fortress planes by day.

Late tonight German raiders crossed the northeast and east coasts and bombed a northeastern town.

Mediterranean Raids

In the Mediterranean, the British carried out a new series of raids which reached from the island of Rhodes in the east to Tripoli in western Libya in Africa, burning and blasting hangars, quays, ships and munitions depots.

At home, the British Press Association announced, Britain's aircraft production last week reached new heights. No figures on the output were given.

Fires and explosions splashed the darkness where a large quantity of bombs was dropped on the Spanish quay and shipping at Tripoli Saturday night, a communique from Cairo said. In Rhodes hangars broke into flames at Calato and Maritza, and a ship was hit twice in a new torpedo plane attack on Italian shipping off Lampedusa Island.

Raids Heaviest Yet

An Air Ministry resume said the R. A. F., now augmented by arrival of the South African air force in the western desert, delivered in August the heaviest bombing raids yet conducted in the Middle East.

Ranging farther afield, the R. A. F. has delivered concentrated assaults against the Corinth Canal, in Greece, where it was said a landslide has blocked the waterway for months; Eleusis and other German-occupied airdromes in Greece, airports in Crete and even has sent fighter-planes in sweeps over Sicily, close to the Italian mainland.

Informed neutral military observers said the R. A. F. is trying to smash "invasion bases" of the Axis in the Middle East just as it did on the Channel last year.

Contrast Noted

The battle on England's home front was in strange contrast with a year ago when Germany sent 300 planes in one day to attack cities and harbors.

In the daylight sweeps over the Channel yesterday, in which Lille, Cherbourg, Brest, Le Trait, Lannion and points along the Dutch coast were attacked, the British said their fighters outnumbered the Germans, few of whom offered fight. The British said it was one of the biggest days for the fighter command since last September's Battle of Britain. When the British went back at night they bombed Essen and Cologne.

Two public shelters at Hull were opened by Nazi bombs in turn and many persons killed. Three domestic shelters also were hit, six out of nine persons in one of them being killed, and three persons killed in another.

"But she must realize how urgent is our necessity just as we realized it after Dunkirk. And she must make the same sort of effort that we made then and have done our best to keep up ever since."

The Sunday Times, an allied paper, yesterday told the American people "we are frankly disappointed with the American contribution."

The Daily Mail said "United States arms production has been undergoing the miserable phase of muddle and internecine war that we have already experienced here; United States supplies are arriving steadily, but not in the dazzling quantities conceived of by so many."

Britons Urge U. S. To Hasten Supplies

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 1—Longer nights and more propitious weather in the English Channel mark the opening today of the "invasion season," against which Prime Minister Churchill has warned England.

Home troops were keyed to greater alertness, which was reflected in the civil population, and as though in warning, the Luftwaffe gave Britain one of her most severe raids in many weeks.

The German planes came over in formation instead of singly as in recent weeks, and officials described them as more numerous than of late.

U. S. Urged To "Wake Up"

Meanwhile newspapers reminded the nation that the United States was not in the war and said supplies were not coming over as fast as some thought.

With the headline "America, Wake Up," the Daily Sketch said America's realization of danger still was only in the mind.

"It would ill become us to rebuke her, since we ourselves were slow enough in waking up," the newspaper said. "But she needs to do more than she is doing now if her promises are to be kept. There is no question that she has meant all her promises in the letter and in the spirit.

Meanwhile, the Daily Express' Stockholm correspondent said many new Red army land divisions had arrived from the interior and were attacking south of Leningrad, near Gomel in the center and at Rogachev on the Dnieper river 160 miles southwest of Smolensk.

Mitchel Field Flyer Killed In Iceland Plane Crash

Aug. 19 Accident Brings First Official Disclosure on Army

REYKJAVIK, Iceland, Sept. 1 (AP).—The death of Lieutenant George E. Meeks in a plane crash on August 19 was announced today. He was the first American casualty in Iceland. He was twenty-seven years old.

Lieutenant Meeks attended the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis for two years. He was graduated from Randolph Field and Kelly Field, Tex., in the class of '40. He was assigned to the 8th Pursuit Group at Langley Field, Virginia, and moved with the group to Mitchel Field, New York, where he was stationed until he was transferred recently to Iceland.

Army In Iceland, Too, War Department Story Of Pilot's Death Reveals

SEP 2 1941

Washington, Sept. 1 (AP)—Announcement today of the death of Lieut. George E. Meeks in a plane crash in Iceland on August 19 disclosed officially for the first time that army units have reached the island.

The War Department announced here August 22 that Meeks had been killed at an off-shore base, but would not say which base. Presumably the reticence at that time was because of unwillingness to reveal that army flyers, and perhaps other army units, had reached Iceland to reinforce the Marines previously dispatched there.

Meeks was the son of Capt. George C. Meeks, retired commander of a Washington fire engine company.

Meeks attended the U. S. Naval Academy for two years. He was graduated from Randolph Field and Kelly Field, Texas, in the class of 1940.

He was assigned to the Eighth Pursuit Group of Langley Field, Va., and moved with the group to Mitchel Field, N. Y., where he was stationed until he was transferred to Iceland recently.

He was 27 years old.

The post he held and the cause of his death were not disclosed. The announcement that he died on active service and not in action, however, indicated death was due to causes other than wounds of battle.

Nazis Crack Down Upon Petain Move

Berlin, Sept. 1 (AP)—DNB quoted the newspaper Paris-Soir tonight as suggesting editorially that one Englishman living in France be executed for every Frenchman killed on French soil by British air raiders.

[By the Associated Press]

Vichy, Sept. 1—Marshal Petain's announcement setting up the French Legion of War Veterans and Volunteers of the National Revolution, as the authoritarian one-party base of his regime was stripped out of the German-controlled Paris press today by German censors, indicating that the movement was headed for trouble.

The Paris version of Petain's statement yesterday to war veterans celebrating the first anniversary of the founding of their Legion showed deletion of almost half the marshal's words, including every reference to the Legion and its new role.

Vichy Had Broadened Legion

The Petain speech, partly quoted, was said merely to have been delivered to "war veterans."

The Vichy Government had broadened the Legion, making it, in effect, a totalitarian-style political party, as another step toward the authoritarian state it has been [illegible] since the armistice with Germany.

Navy Chief Replaced

Vice-Premier Darlan, in his capacity as Vichy's Navy Minister, shook up the French naval high command today, removing his long-time collaborator, Admiral Leluc, as commander in chief.

In his place he named Rear Admiral Auphan, the youngest admiral in the navy, and also appointed him director of the Naval Ministry secretariat.

There was no explanation of the change in political circles, where Leluc had been known as Darlan's right-hand man.

Leluc, who flew to a meeting place behind the German lines to receive Hitler's peace terms in June, 1940, recently was named a Counselor of State.

Auphan is widely regarded as one of the brightest young officers in the French Navy. Before he was given his new combined job he was charged by Darlan with reorganizing the war-depleted French merchant marine.

Woman Arrested

The charges also said that the former Minister of Labor furnished news to the De Gaullist radio.

He was a political leader of the Isere Department for forty years.

Paris Broker Shot To Death

BY ROY PORTER

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, German - Occupied France, Sept. 1—Adolphe Rosenthal, a well-known Paris stock broker, was found murdered today in an underground traffic lane at Porte Maillot, fashionable Paris suburb. His death was attributed to a new outburst of anti-Jewish terror.

Rosenthal was killed by a revolver shot in the temple, fired at close range. Police said he had been spirited away from home by three pretended policeman who said they were going to take him to a concentration camp.

He was a brother of Leonard Rosenthal, diamond merchant who now is in the United States. Leonard Rosenthal's transactions in diamonds, pearls and emeralds once reached astronomical figures.

Robbery obviously was not the motive for the crime since a pocketbook containing 1,500 francs was found in the dead man's pocket.

Broker Slain, Fresh Outbreak Of Anti-Jewish Terror Feared

BY TAYLOR HENRY

[By the Associated Press]

London, Tuesday, Sept. 2—An Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Göteborg, Sweden, reported today that four tons of powder and other war supplies were blown up by saboteurs at a powder works near Drammen, Norway.

[By the Associated Press]

Vichy, Sept. 1—Marshal Petain's announcement of a new government party, the Legion of War Veterans and Volunteers of the National Revolution, was censored out of the German-controlled Paris press today—an indication that the totalitarian-style movement was trouble-bound.

Even La Petite Gironde, of Bordeaux, circulating in both occupied and unoccupied zones, omitted mention of the legion in reporting the anniversary celebrations of the veterans.

The coldness of the Paris press was all the more marked since Petain's move was first publicly suggested by the Paris newspaper Les Nouveaux Temps.

Vice-Premier Darlan, acting in his capacity as Navy Minister, shook up the naval high command, removing his long-time collaborator, Admiral Maurice Leluc, as commander in chief. In Leluc's place, Darlan appointed Rear Admiral Auphan, youngest admiral in the navy, and appointed him also as director of the Navy Ministry secretariat. Political circles could offer no explanation for the change.

The French said they had been notified by the British that Gen. Henri Dentz, former high commissioner for Syria, and other high French officers held as hostages for the return of Britons following the Syrian campaign, would be released Wednesday.

To Keep Only 2 Hostages

The British said they would keep only two hostages until the return of two missing British officers. An authoritative source said the two Britons had not been returned because they were not in physical condition to be moved. One was said to be in Belgrade; the whereabouts of the other was not made known.

The Paris press was not reticent in printing the statement last night by Fernand de Brinon, Vichy representative at Paris, that there had been no general political discussions with Germany. Asked whether talks for an agreement were in view, de Brinon said:

"This is the wish, but for the moment we are only trying to prepare for the possibility of such discussion."

Broker Slain In Paris, Anti-Jew Terror Feared

Paris, Sept. 1 (AP)—A new outbreak of anti-Jewish terror was suspected tonight in the slaying of Adolphe Rosenthal, a once-prominent Paris stock broker, whose body was found today in a traffic underpass in the Porte Maillot district.

Robbery evidently was not the motive since a wallet containing 1,500 francs lay untouched in the dead man's pocket.

Rosenthal was killed by a shot in the temple from a small cheap pistol of the same type that was used by Paul Colette to shoot Pierre Laval, former Vice-Premier, and Marcel Deat last week.

Body Thrown From Auto

He apparently was shot sometime between 11.45 P. M. Sunday and 1 A. M. Monday from close range and his body then thrown from a speeding automobile not far from his home.

Investigating police said Rosenthal left his home Sunday evening, apparently lured to his death by three men posing as policemen who told him they were taking him to a concentration camp.

He was a brother of Leonard Rosenthal, widely known diamond merchant, whose transactions in diamonds, pearls and emeralds once involved huge sums. Leonard Rosenthal is said now to live in the United States.

Both Laval And Deat Reported Convalescing

Versailles, Occupied France, Sept. 1 (AP)—Pierre Laval and Marcel Deat, eading French exponents of collaboration with Germany, were reported out of danger and convalescing tonight from wounds suffered in an assassination attempt August 27.

The assassin, Paul Colette, was freed of a charge of Communism which might have meant his summary execution by order of the special anti-Communist court. An investigating committee reported it had found no evidence to support the charge of Fernand de Brinon, Vichy representative in Paris, that Colette was a "camouflaged Communist" instead of a supporter of the Free French movement of Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

13 Die In French Crash

[By the Associated Press]

Marseille, France, Sept. 1—Thirteen persons were killed, including a French member of the French-Italian armistice commission which sits at Turin, Italy, today when an Air France transport plane crashed near the Marseille airport. One of the plane's motors was said to have died shortly after the takeoff.

Four persons were seriously injured when the large plane pancaked into Lake Bolman, near Marseille airport, only a few minutes after it had started for Toulouse.

The member of the Armistice Commission who was killed was M. Gourret, who also is general director of the port of Marseille.

Thirteen Meet Death In French Plane Crash

One Of Victims Of Accident Was Member Of Armistice Commission

Marseille, Sept. 1 (AP)—An Air France transport plane dived suddenly today into Lake Bolmon, a small salt-water estuary northwest of here, killing thirteen occupants.

A French member of the French-Italian Armistice Commission, Jean Gourret, was among those killed, and an Italian member, Mario Petorinu, was one of three others gravely injured.

First reports of the accident said that the pilot noted something wrong with one engine soon after taking off this morning for Toulouse, and turned back. The balky engine was said to have stalled as the plane struggled back toward Marignane airport, a few miles outside Marseille.

Gourret also was general director for the port of Marseille.

New Teheran Raid Reported

SEP 2 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Teheran, Iran, Aug. 31 (Delayed)—For the second time since Iran ceased fighting, bombs which the Iranians said were Russian fell today on the outskirts of this capital. Some civilian casualties were reported.

The bombs were said to have fallen in a working class district to the south of the city and in an open field a mile from the Doshan Tappen airport.

Two bomb craters five feet deep in the field were examined by Lieut. Col. Francis Tompkins, United States military attache, who said he found propaganda leaflets near by telling the Iranians that the Russians were their friends.

Today, however, Russian planes again were over the Teheran area dropping leaflets for an hour and forty-five minutes, and explosions were heard.

The belief was expressed in some quarters that the Soviet air force was continuing its activity to "persuade" the Iranian Government not to delay in accepting British-Russian terms.

These were being considered today and the Premier told Parliament a final settlement probably would be reached within two days.

Soviet forces were reported here to have entered the pilgrimage city of Meshed and Neyshapur, site of the tomb of the poet Omar Khayyam.

It was learned that Major Afkhami, adjutant to the commander of the Iran Air Force, was taken to a hospital after Iranian anti-aircraft batteries opened fire on two fleeing Iranian planes Saturday. It was not known whether he was in serious condition.

Teheran, Iran, Sept. 1—A British mechanized column, after an overnight contact with the Red Army at Kazvin, ninety miles northwest of Teheran, retired today in the direction of Aveh pass on the Hamadan road.

Aveh pass is sixty miles southwest of the point where the unresisted Soviet forces, moving in from the north, and the British, advancing from the southwest, met yesterday morning.

When British and Soviet army officers met at Kazvin, they saluted each other and sat down in tongue-tied silence to rounds of beer and vodka. It was several hours before the ice was broken when an interpreter was found.

"Clarity" Produced

In Teheran, government leaders announced negotiations with the British and Russians thus far have produced "a certain amount of clarity" and that final results may be forthcoming by tomorrow.

British sources said one of the terms for a settlement would be the immediate roundup of Nazi agents, whose presence in Iran brought the Russo-British march into the country. They predicted all probably would be sent either to India or Siberia or interned in Iran.

Iran Invasion: Troops Occupy Kermanshah

SEP 2 1941

By Edward Kennedy

Associated Press Foreign Correspondent

With British Forces in Iran, Aug. 30 (Delayed)—Indian troops entered Kermanshah this morning and formally took possession of the city, second largest in Iran and capital of the great western province of the same name.

The occupation represented an advance in this rugged sector of some 150 miles. There were several fierce encounters with the defenders, but contrary to earlier reports no battle was fought at the famous Paytak Pass.

Everything was set for a battle there, but the Iranians retired at the last minute.

Decorous Plan Offered

When the armistice agreement was reached, the Iranian command at Kermanshah offered a decorous plan for retiring a little each day, but the British commander rejected this, insisting that his men proceed forthwith into the city.

"We'll have to telephone the Shah about it," was the Iranian reply.

The British waited and the final reply was: "All right, the Shah says you can come in."

British forces have fought in a number of deserts in this war, but the Iranian desert regions have proved the worst of all. Several soldiers have been lost.

Terrain Was Treacherous

Much of this terrain is flooded by the Tigris river in the winter and turns rapidly to desert under the scorching summer sun and oven blasts from the Persian Gulf. It looks strangely like a dried out but soft sea bottom.

The worst areas are known as "subka" land into which a vehicle will sink once the frail surface breaks.

Tracks are effaced so soon in the soft sand regions that it is very easy to lose the trails. On the way from Ahwaz after the occupation of that city, four war correspondents went astray.

Route Is Lost

Tracks which indicated the route suddenly disappeared. We went many miles without finding any trace of them. At sun down, and without a compass, we were lost.

We knew our general direction was west so we marked the place the sun set by a star just above it and went toward that star. Two hours later it sank beneath the horizon and we continued blindly, hoping we were right. The car got stuck in the sand dunes twice but we got it out and eventually reached the Tigris three miles off our course.

Indian Force Credited

As fuller information of the campaign became available, it was increasingly apparent that the Indian army scored one of the greatest British achievements in this war.

By making deep inroads in lightning speed, which, together with Russian successes in the north, caused the Shah to ask for an armistice, the Indians achieved the kind of success originally hoped for in Syria. Lack of equipment and inadequate forces caused the latter campaign to drag out six weeks.

Simla, India, Sept. 1—A British communique said today contact had been established between British and Russian forces in Iran.

It said a detachment of British troops yesterday moved from Kermanshah north to Sinneh where a small detachment of Soviet forces was met.

The Russians, the communique reported, "withdrew to their headquarters after a mutual exchange of compliments."

Martial Law Proclaimed

The announcement also reported the proclamation of martial law yesterday in Teheran and British occupation on Saturday of Hamadan, about 200 miles southwest of the Iranian capital.

The communique follows:

"In north Iran our troops entered Hamadan on the evening of August 30 and found the situation quite peaceful.

"The local officials and the departments were most helpful and the inhabitants very friendly.

Taken To Avert Vladivostok Friction

SEP 2 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Tokyo, Sept. 1—The British-Russian success in Iran and reports here that the United States will send most of its aid to Russia by way of the Middle East instead of Vladivostok gave the Japanese stock market a stronger tone today.

Shipping stocks were particularly strong on the report that the United States might avoid offending Japanese feelings by sending Russian aid through nearby waters to Vladivostok.

On the conciliatory side, too, was "an open letter to Foreign Minister Toyoda" by Retsu Kiyosawa, commentator in the widely read commercial paper Chugai Shogyo.

Some Compromise Urged

He urged that Japan return to the diplomacy of the past when Japan was more open to bargaining. In recent years Japan's uncompromising diplomacy, which has been marked by insistence upon an "immutable policy" in East Asia, has tended to convert friends abroad into enemies, Kiyosawa said. He urged Toyoda to try to regain friends abroad.

The militaristic daily Kokumin, however, declared that "the European war which extended to Iran, is now threatening to involve the prosperity sphere" of Japan. Kokumin contended that Japan must bolster her total war structure and continue to pursue the immutable policy based on the tri-power pact and Japan's ambitions for a Japanese new order in East Asia.

Britain Criticized

Kiyosawa cautioned his countrymen against expecting an early end to the European war, although he said Germany had conquered a territory more than three times as large as Japan.

The newspapers Kokumin and Hochi, meanwhile, purported to see political motives in the British arrangements to send a ship to Japan to remove British nationals. They said Britain thus again was bringing up rumors of dangers in East Asia.

Other newspapers continued to mention Premier Konoye's message to President Roosevelt last week as the start of direct negotiations toward a settlement between the United States and Japan in the Pacific.

With one minute of silence, signaled by the sound of sirens at 11.58 A. M., Japanese throughout the empire and particularly in the capital, paid tribute today to almost 100,000 persons who perished in the Tokyo earthquake and fire disaster eighteen years ago.

The observance coincided with the start of the East Asia days—the first day of each month—when citizens are reminded by closed bars and other means that sacrifices are needed to finish the campaign in China and build a sphere of prosperity in East Asia.

Army Spokesman Warns 4-Nation 'Encirclement' Shall Be Broken

Declares Tokyo Is Willing To Risk Conflict To End Economic Pressure

[By the Associated Press]

Tokyo, Tuesday, Sept. 2—The Japanese army's chief spokesman declared bluntly last night that Japan was determined to use force if necessary to "break through the encirclement by the United States, China, Britain and the Netherlands" even though this may mean "entry into a long-term war against Britain and America."

The spokesman, Lieut. Col. Itsuo

30.24 — 11539

Mabuchi, chief of the army press section of imperial headquarters, told the nation in a broadcast that Japan was resolved to build her coprosperity sphere in East Asia despite British-American efforts at restraint.

War Against Inaction

"The longer we remain passive against such moves, the more dangerous it will be for this country," he said. He added that the Washington and London governments were well aware of this and were acting accordingly.

Soldiers should not be employed uselessly, the colonel declared, adding that therefore diplomatic efforts should be pushed as long as possible.

"Peaceful means will not be allowed to be dragged along forever," he said. He added that if diplomatic means failed Jaban would "break out of encirclement" forcefully before economic pressure reduced her to pauper status.

Military Note Injected

The broadcast was a part of a memorial meeting for the 100,000 who perished in the Tokyo earthquake and fire of 1923. It injected a militant note in contrast to other developments of the day. Japanese hopes for postponement of a showdown had risen with reports that the United States might avoid offending Japanese feelings by sending most of its aid to Russia through Iran instead of Vladivostok.

The stock market took a stronger tone on news of British-Russian successes in Iran and press reports that the main shipment of American supplies to Russia would be through Iranian ports rather than the Sea of Japan.

Tanker's Approach Watched

The press and nation has watched uneasily the approach of the first American tanker bearing aviation gasoline which is forbidden to the Japanese. The tanker left Los Angeles August 14 and is expected to arrive in the Sea of Japan this week. The Japanese have made representations over the shipment.

The press kept up its insistence on the "immutability" of Japan's tie with Germany and Italy. But now that it has dawned on Japanese that the Russian-German war may be protracted, commentators have stressed the necessity of solving Pacific problems without new conflict.

Danger spots have been the Manchoukuo-Siberian frontier, the Sea of Japan and the Malay Peninsula, where Japan contends Britain, the United States and the Netherlands are acting to thwart Tokyo's "legitimate economic interests."

Conciliation Urged

Foreign Minister Vice-Admiral Teijiro Toyoda was urged by the widely circulated newspaper Chugai to adopt a bargaining attitude and emulate Japanese statesmen who in the past have prevented formation of any strong coalition against Japan. Newspapers have seen conversations between President Roosevelt and the Japanese Ambassador, Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura, as a sign that a complete break with Washington might be averted.

Japanese now acknowledge that Germany's war against Russia is going slower than expected and believe the campaign may extend through the winter, with possible damaging effects to German morale.

Situation Delicate

The situation in Vladivostok, which Japanese call a dagger pointed toward the heart of Japan, is described in Tokyo as tense and very delicate. Kazuyuki Kajiura, diplomatic courier just arrived from Moscow, said in an interview with the newspaper Yomiuri that a new cruiser and several destroyers were in the port, engaged in maneuvers.

Vladivostok was said to be plastered with anti-Nazi posters. All citizens were carrying gas masks. Munitions and fighter planes were being unloaded in the harbor and anti-aircraft guns were being placed in the mountains behind the city.

German Request Denied With Assertion That Compliance Would Admit Right Of Conquest

[By the Associated Press]

San Jose, Costa Rica, Sept. 1—Costa Rica today refused Germany's request that its consulates be withdrawn from occupied countries by declaring such action "would be admitting the right of conquest to which Costa Rica and other nations of the American Continent are opposed."

Foreign Minister Alberto Echandi in his note asked Germany to reconsider its request.

The Costa Rican note said:

"My Government cannot accede to the request of closing the consulates because their officials are accredited to nations with which we have political and commercial relations, nations which in spite of being occupied cannot be said to have lost their international jurisdical entities, although their sovereignty happens to be limited simply by reason of the German military occupation.

Invasion No Excuse

"Your excellency knows that total or partial invasion of the territory does not in direct effect substitute the defeated government with a victorious one during the time that the war lasts.

"In accordance with that doctrine, the Government of Costa Rica believes, nevertheless, that in spite of the occupation of their territories, the Governments of France, Belgium, Holland, Luxembourg and Norway continue to exist juridically in the occupied regions, for which reason it doesn't consider necessary the closing of the consulates.

"To do otherwise would be admitting the right of conquest to which Costa Rica and the other nations of the American continent are opposed. For the reasons which I have stated, I respectfully request that you reconsider your petition."

[By the Associated Press]

Mexico City, Sept. 1—President Avila Camacho in his first annual message to Congress today pledged the nation's arms in defense of the Western Hemisphere and forecast a complete rapprochement with the United States.

He warned foreign investors, however, that Mexico's social revolution is to continue on its course.

Aligning Mexico with the United States and other countries against the Axis powers, the Mexican Chief Executive declared the Mexican army is being reorganized to "cooperate at any given moment in defense of our territorial integrity and the security of the American continent." He said his Government would not "recognize conquest by force" anywhere in the world.

A "general settlement, both just and equitable, of the various questions pending" between the United States and Mexico is about to be concluded, he said. Willkie To Represent Film Industry In Senate Inquiry

Subcommittee To Probe Charges Propaganda Pictures Are Being Produced

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 1—Wendell Willkie confirmed toady reports that he would represent motion picture interests during a forthcoming Senate inquiry into whether the film industry has engaged in propaganda.

In response to questions, Willkie said by telephone from New York that he had requested a one-week delay in the investigation, scheduled to start next Wednesday.

GAS SALES CURB TO BE DISCUSSED

Eastern States Dealers To Open Conference In Philadelphia Today

Head Of Group Warns Of Possibility That Stations May Be Closed

[By the Associated Press]

Philadelphia, Sept. 1—The possibility tha nearly all of the 100,000 Eastern seaboard gasoline stations will colse as a result of the oil shortage, unless the Government insur dealers a "living margin," was seen tonight by Benpamin L. Jacoby, president of the Associated Gasoline Retailers of Philadelphia and vicinity

Jacoby said the shutdown would be discussed at an Eastern States conference of gasoline retailers here tomorrow and Wednesday.

He blamed the situation on the Government's gasoline quota regulations, effective today, which fixes dealers 'quotas for September at fifteen per cent. under their July sales.

Predicts 25% Cut

Ralph K. Davies, acting petroleum coordinator, who fixed the quota, "doesn't know the first thing about the gasoline business," Jacoby asserted, adding that July is a poor busines month because of vacations. He predicted the actual reduction in dealers' sales for September would be twenty-five per cent. as a result.

Declaring that "dealers at their meeting here are going to protest all phases of this curtailment to Washington, to President Roosevelt himself, if necessary," Jacoby said one of these courses appeared inevitable:

The Government must permit dealers to raise their prices sufficiently to offset their losses from curtailment of their gas supplies.

A direct Government subsidy similar to those given farmers for not raising crops to keep dealers in business.

The dealers will find it just about as cheap to close up and lose money as sto stay open and lose money under the present Government setup.

Nation Would Feel It

The dealers don't want to close if they can avoid it, he declared, but added:

"If 90,000 dealers of the 100,000 closed their stations only three or four days, the nation would soon recognize the need for keeping them open. Even the defense program would feel it."

Jacoby also challenged the existence of an oil shortage, the reason for the gasoline consumption curtailment program.

"Id like them to show me," he declared. "There are plenty of tank cars available to haul the oil East, if the big companies wanted to pay the extra freight."

U. S. Extends Control To 95 P. C. Of Exports

SEP 2 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 1—A survey of American trade restrictions in the interests of national defense disclosed today that President Roosevelt has brought approximately ninety-five per cent. of all exports—some $4,000,000,000 worth of goods annually—under the export control licensing system.

"Export control schedule No. 19," which became effective August 17, has been interpreted by the Administrator of export control to include practically all exports which have not previously required licenses.

421 New Categories

The new export control schedule contains 421 additional categories of commodities—from naval stores to hamburger steaks. It covers a list of commodities which in the past have accounted for approximately fifteen per cent. of all exports.

Export officials emphasized that all commodities on the export control list—except high-grade oil and gasoline and a relatively few other strategic war materials—are not embargoed, but may not be shipped abroad except when export licenses have been granted.

One official summed the situation up by remarking that there was little, if anything, left that was worth going to the trouble to license.

Administration of the licensing system has been linked closely with American diplomacy, with licenses granted liberally for exports to Britain, China, Soviet Russia and the other American Republics.

In their practical application the embargo and licensing restrictions have hit Japan the hardest since that nation, always a heavy purchaser here, has been—particularly since the war—dependent on the United States for major portions of its needed oil, steel and iron, cotton, machinery, tools and other commodities for daily life and industry, as well as for supplies for the Japanese army and navy.

ARMY FLYERS MAY QUIT TO FERRY PLANES

SEP 2 1941

Release Of Pilots To Aid Pan American As Civilians Hinted

Officials Silent On Proposal For Sending Craft To British In Near East

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 1—Army flyers released from military service and holding the status of civilians, it was learned today, probably will help Pan American Airways operate its new plane ferry and air transport service across the Atlantic ocean and Africa to British forces in the Near East.

While official sources were silent on such a possibility, well informed quarters indicated arrangements already are being made to permit army pilots to resign from the service and join the Pan American staff.

Announced By Roosevelt

President Roosevelt immediately after returning from his conferences at sea with Prime Minister Winston Churchill, announced that Pan American would undertake the task of ferrying planes and transporting plane parts to the Near East.

This work will require a large number of pilots and copilots as well as technical experts and ground crews at bases on the African West coast and inland. Army assistance in furnishing the men would be in line with the practice established several months ago with respect to the Far East.

Incidental Benefits

At that time it was disclosed some military flyers would be permitted to resign and go to China in purely civilian capacities to help the Chinese operate their air force, swelled by the addition of American-made combat planes.

Aside from the general purpose of helping Britain, informed quarters said, there would be at least two incidental benefits to this country from permitting army flyers to resign and aid in the ferry service to the Near East.

Strategical Advantage

One is the strategical advantage of manning plane bases on the west African coast and in the interior with Americans capable of safeguarding this country's interests in event of a Nazi move into the French west African port of Dakar. German occupation of this port long has been pictured by officials here as a possible first step in a Nazi move on South America.

Another benefit, it was said, would be to give young American flyers, now being turned out of training schools at the rate of more than 12,000 a year, invaluable practical experience as copilots of multi-motored ships and pilots of smaller planes.

Training Ahead of Plane Output

Army pilot training is running ahead of its plane acquisitions because of the large number of combat craft being turned over to Britain. It was partly for the purpose of giving experience to its flyers that the army earlier this summer set up its ferry command to deliver British-bound planes from manufacturing centers to East Coast ports.

What routes Pan American will follow in flying bombers and other long-range craft to the Near East have not been disclosed officially, but speculation has been that both the United States base at Trinidad and fields in the vicinity of Natal, Brazil, might be used.

British Bases

On the African west coast, the British have bases at Freetown and at Bathurst, the former being about 500 miles south of Dakar and the latter about one hundred miles south. From Natal to Freetown the overwater distance is about 1,600 miles.

Bombers flown to the African ports and shorter-range planes shipped across and assembled there could be ferried to Royal Air Force operations centers in the Near East by way of intermediate bases, probably including Khartoum, in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan.

CONFLICT IN ARMY ON DEFENSE SHOWN

Officer Says Ample Land-Based Air Power Makes Sea Invasion Impossible

But Chief Of Staff In Spring Got $92,000,000 From Congress For Coast Artillery

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 1—Differences within the army over projected strengthening of the nation's coast defenses broke into the open today with a declaration by a member of the General Staff Corps that "the bomber has made the American coast impregnable to invasion."

Lieut. Col. Thomas R. Phillips, army commentator on tactical problems, asserted in Army Ordnance, semi-official publication, that "the whole business of invasion across the sea against ample land-based air power no longer is in the book of possibilities."

Citing the British experience in trying to invade Norway, Phillips contended that "the presence or absence of harbor defenses along the American coast would be of no importance whatsoever against a sea-borne invasion, as long as we possess ample land-based air power."

92 Millions For Guns

Last spring, Congress appropriated $92,000,000 for an extensive program of modernization of coast defenses. It provided for replacement of virtually every old battery with new long-range guns.

At the time, Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff, told Congress that the high command's concept of seacoast defense requirements "has been changed as a result of the change in status of the French fleet and as to the future possibility of a less active English fleet in the Atlantic."

Phillips, at present stationed at the headquarters of the army's Puerto Rican Department, said the seacoast program was described as designed to make the country safe for fifty years to come. Then he asked:

"Is this really looking forward, or are the harbor defenses being provided to cover the fifty years which have just passed?"

He went on to say that harbor defenses originally were constructed to permit movement of a country's naval forces in and out of the harbors, to protect harbor facilities and ships from enemy gunfire and torpedoes, to prevent enemy ships from entering the harbor and to furnish incidental support to defense against landing attacks.

One Need Eliminated

"If a hostile fleet cannot remain on guard outside a harbor to prevent the exit or ingress of our own fleet because of the threat of bombing," he continued, "then no harbor defenses are necessary for that purpose alone."

On the other hand, he said that protection of ships and harbor facilities from naval gunfire and torpedoes is still as necessary a function of harbor defenses as ever.

"The European war has shown that ships can stay within bombing range at night long enough to make raids on shore installation," he said. "The French and British both raided Italian shore installations and escaped with minor damage."

"Air power has not superseded coast defenses, but it can perform some of their functions more effectively than guns ever did."

On Texas Defenses

Discussing a proposal by Maj. Gen. Johnson Hagood, retired, for new harbor defenses in the Houston-Beaumont area in Texas to protect the oil fields from invasion, Phillips asserted that air power not only has made such an invasion impossible but "new American defenses closing the gaps in the Caribbean through the Greater and Lesser Antilles will make this sea, through which the Gulf ports of the United States must be approached, a trap which no hostile naval force or transports ever would dare to enter."

"The West Indies, if fully exploited to close the Caribbean," Phillips added, "furnish complete protection for the American Gulf Coast. Not only are no new harbor defenses needed, but those now in existence have little further reason for being maintained. And not only do American defenses along the Antilles protect the Gulf Coast, but they also secure the northern shores of Venezuela and Colombia, the Panama Canal and the Eastern coast of Central America and Mexico."

Reports Average Briton Expects U.S. To Enter War

New York, Sept. 1 (AP)—Hubert Chappell, vice-president of the Central Hanover Bank in charge of the London office, arriving from England today on the American Clipper, said it was the man in the street and not top British officials who expected the United States to become a belligerent.

The officials, he said, felt they were receiving a large part of American production and expected airplanes, guns and particularly ships from America to replace those lost.

The Rev. Edward Ziarkowski, returning from Rome where he studied, asserted that Germans in Italy, along with wealthy Italians, took refuge in Rome because they felt it enjoyed immunity from British bombing.

Began With First Alarms

He said the influx into Rome began at the sound of raid alarms in Naples.

The priest, en route to Kulpmont, Pa., said Italian confidence in the infallibility of the German military machine had been shaken since the Russian invasion, and added:

"They were led to believe that the Germans would capture Leningrad, Kiev and Moscow in three weeks and that the Soviet would be completely defeated in four weeks. Now . . . they are digging in for a long war. The Italians feel that Germans are fighting for them, but it does not seem to mean much to the Italians. The people are against Mussolini's foreign policy, but they feel that if they had not joined the Axis Italy could have been defeated within five days."

War Communiques

SEP 2 1941

Russian

Moscow, Sept. 1 (AP)—The Soviet Information Bureau communique said today:

In the course of the night of August 31-September 1 our troops fought the enemy on the whole front.

In "X" sector of the northern front, the enemy hurled a German SS division and a White Finnish brigade against one Soviet regiment. By courageous resistance the Red army men thwarted all plans of the German command. Soon our regiment was reinforced by another unit and the resistance of the Soviet troops grew stronger.

The Fascists gave up hope of breaking our defense by frontal attack and decided to outflank our units. Across swamps and thick forests the regiment of the White Finns penetrated our rear and cut the highway. The Nazis reckoned that by this move that they would sow panic and confusion among our Red army men. But the enemy miscalculated.

Our troops organized a circular defense and repulsed all enemy attacks just when our reinforcements arrived on the scene. Drichkin's detachment joined the action straight from the march and in a fierce encounter overwhelmed the enemy.

The badly battered Finnish regiment was pressed against a lake. Red army men of Evselv's detachment turned its flank. The Finns themselves were now in encirclement. By a determined attack, Soviet troops finished off the White Finnish regiment.

Out of 2,000 Fascist soldiers who penetrated our rear, not over 600 escaped encirclement. Forty sub-machine guns and machine guns, many mine-throwers, rifles and other military equipment were captured or destroyed. According to testimony of Corporal Harlamo Jugo Vilgo, taken prisoners, "almost all company commanders were killed or wounded. In many sections only two or three soldiers remained out of twelve."

Guerrillas are giving no respite to German and White Finnish troops which have seized certain districts of the Karelian-Finnish republic. The Fascist command has detailed considerable forces to fight the guerrillas and has strengthened protection of roads, bridges and warehouses, but the undaunted guerrillas find the enemy's weak spots and deal him telling blows.

A small White Finnish force was quartered in the Village "K." At night a guerrilla party commanded by "L" surrounded it and launched a surprise attack in which it killed twenty enemy soldiers, destroyed a provision store and captured two machine guns and several scores of rifles. A guerrilla detachment commanded by "M" learned that the enemy intended to transfer motorized-mechanized troops to the area "N."

In a short space of time the guerrilla group covered a large distance and, forestalling the Finns, blew up a bridge on the way. The enemy tanks were forced to halt. Another group of guerrillas of this detachment destroyed a telegraph line at many points and mined roads. In area "P," guerrillas set fire to a forest in which enemy troops were advancing. The fire barred the enemy's progress. The Fascists rushed back, but here, too, the forest was burning along the road. The Fascists sustained heavy losses. The guerrillas know no fear in fighting Fascist bandits. While executing his commander's orders, guerrilla Zernov suddenly encountered a group of White Finns. Without losing his presence of mind, he hurled at them two hand grenades. Four enemy soldiers were killed. Zernov reached a river and swam across it and safely returned to his detachment.

Hundreds of thousands of wounded German men and officers have packed all hospitals in Germany, Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Poland. The other day the Fascist command ordered occupation of all Belgian hospitals for wounded. Thousands of gravely ill Belgians are being ousted by Gestapo men in Brussels, Antwerp, Liege, Ghent and other Belgian cities. In addition, the Fascists are requisitioning hundreds of private houses and apartments. The requisitioned houses will be equipped as hospitals for Fascist officers. Another party of 40,000 wounded Germans is expected in Belgium within a few days.

German Fascists continue their savage atrocities over French patriots. Eighteen Catholic priests have been thrown in prison at Strasbourg on special order for anti-Fascist utterances, among them Abbots Ebert and Pink. In Moselle department sixty priests have been sent to concentration camps in the past few days alone. Spontaneous demonstrations of protest against the Fascist invaders break out daily in Paris. Thousands of Parisian women participated in one such demonstration held in Roquette street. In a movie theater in Melun all spectators demonstratively left the house when a Fascist newsreel appeared on the screen. Gestapo agents drove the public back to the hall. The next day the German commandant of Melun prohibited the French to appear on the streets after 9 P. M. In the Paris suburb of Courdevoie patriots burned a plant filling German orders. In Seine-Oise department a tremendous warehouse with forage requisitioned by the Germans was gutted by fire.

Leningrad workers respond by new feats to Vorishilov's, Zhadanov's and Popkov's appeal. Kazachenko, a turner at "X" plant, now turns out four times as many articles as he formerly did. Mikhailov finishes over 200 parts per shift on a gear-cutting machine instead of the scheduled 70. Driller Shuvalov, turner Soloviev, planer Sokolov, gear cutter Plank and hundreds of other Stakhanovites now produce three to five quotas per shift. In another Leningrad plant, output increases with every day. Workers in the first machine shop within the past few days have quadrupled their output of most important defense production. Turner Nekhkats, driller Ridzin and others daily treble their quotas. The other day a tool shop received a rush order. The work was entrusted to two turners—Kruznetzov and Rykhlevsky. They quickly mastered production of the new article and almost doubled the plan.

In the course of the night of Aug. 31-Sept. 1 our troops fought the enemy on the whole front.

The Moscow radio broadcast the following communiqué:

Soviet bombers raided the Berlin district and the cities of Koenigsberg, Danzig and Memel on Sunday.

Incendiaries and high-explosive bombs were dropped on military and industrial targets in Berlin, Koenigsberg, Danzig and Memel. Fires and explosions were observed in all the cities enumerated.

All our planes, with the exception of one, returned to their bases.

MOSCOW, Tuesday, Sept. 2 (AP)—The Soviet Information Bureau issued the following communiqué today:

During Sept. 1 our troops fought the enemy along the whole front.

Our air force continued to inflict concentrated blows on enemy Panzer troops, infantry and artillery, and to destroy aircraft on airdromes.

According to incomplete data, thirty-one German planes were destroyed in air combat on Aug. 30. We lost sixteen planes.

British

SEP 2 1941

London, Sept. 1 (AP)—An Air Ministry communique said today:

Overcoming bad weather and persistent clouds, a considerable force of R. A. F. bombers last night attacked objectives in the Ruhr and Rhineland, principally in the Essen and Cologne districts.

Docks at Boulogne were also bombed and mines were laid in enemy waters.

Seven of our bombers are missing from these operations. An aircraft of the fighter command is missing from a night patrol over enemy-occupied France.

A joint communique of the Air and Home Security Ministries said:

Last night a larger number of enemy aircraft operated over this country than of late.

These mostly were over the east and northeast coasts, but a few penetrated as far inland as the home counties.

There was some damage to residential property at a place in northeastern England, where a number of persons was killed or injured. From elsewhere only slight damage has been reported and the number of casualties is small.

One enemy aircraft was destroyed.

SIMLA, India, Sept. 1 (AP)—A British communiqué follows:

In North Iran our troops entered Hamadan on the evening of Aug. 30 and found the situation quite peaceful. The local officials and the departments were most helpful and the inhabitants very friendly. British residents were all safe and sound.

On Aug. 31 another detachment of our troops moved from Kermanshah on Sinneh to make contact with forward Soviet forces. They met a small detachment of the latter, who withdrew to their headquarters after a mutual exchange of compliments.

There was no change in the southern area.

It was found that slight damage had been done to the railway tracks between Bandar Shahpur and Gargar.

Martial law was declared in Teheran Aug. 31.

Middle East

Cairo, Egypt, Sept. 1 (AP)—An R. A. F. communique today follows:

Heavy bombers of the R. A. F. again raided Tripoli harbor during the night of August 30-31. A large quantity of bombs was dropped on the Spanish quay and on ships unloading in the port.

Large fires broke out, and volumes of black smoke rose in the air. One ship at the quayside was hit and set ablaze. Large fires were still burning from the heavy attack on the previous night and others were smouldering.

Aircraft of the fleet air arm bombed dumps near Bardia, causing a number of explosions suggesting that ammunition dumps had been hit.

Other heavy bombers of the R. A. F. raided airdromes at Maritza and Calato on the island of Rhodes. At Maritza, direct hits on hangars and aircraft were observed, and fires broke out in various parts of the airdrome. At Calato, explosions and fires followed the attack.

During the night of August 30-31, aircraft of the fleet air arm made a torpedo attack on a merchant vessel near Lampedusa Island. One torpedo struck the vessel which stopped with a heavy list. A second torpedo also is believed to have found its mark. From these operations, one of our aircraft is missing.

The British Middle East general headquarters communique said:

Libya: In the frontier area, there was a considerable amount of enemy shelling.

At Tobruk, enemy artillery activities were less than usual.

Italian East Africa: In the Uolchefit area, a small party of patriots, supported by a few light guns, successfully attacked an enemy position, capturing a few prisoners.

German

Berlin, Sept. 1 (AP)—The High Command communique, issued from "the Führer's headquarters," said today:

Units of the German army destroyed 27 Soviet monitors and gunboats on the Dnieper north of Kiev since August 26.

In the course of the mop-up of Estonia, the harbor of Haapsalu on the west coast was taken. In the battles for Tallinn completed August 28, 11,432 prisoners, 239 cannon, 91 tanks, 2 armored trains and a great quantity of war material were taken.

German naval forces continued mining operations in the gulf of Finland. More than sixty burning enemy ships were observed in our minefields.

In the Atlantic, one submarine after repeated, tenacious attacks, sank in a convoy four enemy marchantmen totaling 14,000 tons.

Stronger units of battle planes last night attacked the important harbor of Hull on the British Isle. Bomb hits caused the destruction of dock facilities, a warehouse and supply depots and there were numerous fires in the city.

Other battle planes bombed additional harbor facilities on the English east coast and airports in the county of Lincolnshire. They shot down two bombers over England.

In the course of the evening hours yesterday in North Africa German battle planes effectively attacked military facilities at the British naval bases of Alexandria and Port Said.

British planes last night flew into western Germany. Bombs caused damages in buildings in residential sections of several places, including Cologne. Individual enemy bombers made ineffectual efforts to attack northeast Germany. Night chasers and anti-aircraft shot down seven British bombers.

Italian

Rome, Sept. 1 (AP)—The Italian high command's communique today said:

On the Tobruk front enemy attempts to approach were completely broken up by immediate reaction of our detachments, which inflicted losses on the adversary.

German planes bombed the barracks, harbor works and defense fortifications of the fortress, where numerous fires were started. German fighter planes shot down a Blenheim bomber.

Enemy planes dropped bombs on several places on the island of Rhodes, where several were injured. There was little damage.

In various sectors of the Gondar front, constant activity is reported by our detachments, which frustrated enemy actions and surprised enemy elements, dispersing them and capturing ani[illegible]d material.

ROOSEVELT

LONDON, TUESDAY, SEPT.2-(AP)-PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S SPEECH GENERALLY WAS INTERPRETED AS "FORESHADOWING THE IMMINENT ADOPTION OF CONVOYS--ESCORTING AMERICAN-MADE WAR SUPPLIES TO THE BATTLEFRONTS BY AMERICAN WARSHIPS," THE DAILY MAIL'S NEW YORK CORRESPONDENT SAID IN A DISPATCH TODAY.

SEP 2 1941

BRITISH NEWSPAPERS PLAYED UP THE PRESIDENT'S PLEDGE THAT THE AMERICAN PEOPLE "WILL DO EVERYTHING IN OUR POWER TO CRUSH HITLER."

THE DAILY SKETCH SAID THERE WERE "REASONS FOR HOPING AMERICA NOW IS BEGINNING SUCH AN AWAKENING TO DANGER AS WE EXPERIENCED A YEAR AGO," AND THAT THE PRESIDENT'S WORDS WOULD ASSIST THAT AWAKENING.

THE LONDON TIMES SAID THE SPEECH "SHOULD PUT AN END TO THE TENDENCY WHICH HAD BEGUN TO MAKE ITSELF FELT ON BOTH SIDES OF THE ATLANTIC TO QUESTION THE EFFECTIVENESS OF AMERICAN HELP IN THE FIGHT AGAINST HITLERISM AND THE DETERMINATION BY WHICH IT IS INSPIRED.

"THE SPEECH IS A MORE DIRECT CHALLENGE TO HITLER THAN ANY THE PRESIDENT YET HAS MADE. WHETHER HITLER WILL TAKE IT UP IS ANOTHER MATTER. NO DOUBT THE GERMAN GENERAL STAFF CAREFULLY IS WEIGHING UP THE PROS AND CONS OF A DECLARATION OF WAR OR OF A FORCIBLE INTERFERENCE WITH THE STREAM OF AMERICAN SUPPLIES WHICH WOULD PROVOKE A DECLARATION FROM THE AMERICAN SIDE. BUT FOR THE TIME BEING AT ANY RATE THEY PREFER TO ACCEPT THE DISADVANTAGES OF THE PRESENT POSITION RATHER THAN INCUR THE RISK OF OPEN HOSTILITIES."

THE LEGION IN FRANCE HAS BEEN COMPARED BY SOME OBSERVERS TO THE STAHLELM, GERMAN VETERANS' ORGANIZATION AFTER THE WORLD WAR WHICH WAS TAKEN OVER BY THE NAZI PARTY AFTER HITLER'S RISE TO POWER.

FOR MANY MONTHS MILITARY MEN ATTACHED TO PETAIN'S STAFF HAVE BEEN ORGANIZING WAR VETERANS, ALL OF WHOM TAKE AN OATH OF LOYALTY TO PETAIN.

IT FITS INTO THE PROGRAM OF MAKING FRANCE A TOTALITARIAN STATE, ALONG WITH ECONOMIC AND POLITICAL MEASURES WHICH HAVE BEEN TAKEN BY THE VICHY GOVERNMENT. POLITICAL PARTIES RECENTLY HAVE BEEN ABOLISHED AND FORMER PARLIAMENTARIANS HAVE BEEN DEPRIVED OF THEIR SALARIES,

ALTHOUGH THE SENATE AND CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES TECHNICALLY STILL EXIST.

THE MOVE CAME AS INCREASING UNREST IN FRANCE WAS EVIDENCED BY LAST WEEK'S SHOOTING OF FORMER VICE PREMIER PIERRE LAVAL AND HIS NEWSPAPER EDITOR SUPPORTER MARCEL DEAT. BOTH ARE REPORTED RECOVERING IN A VERSAILLES HOSPITAL.

BY EDWARD E.BOMAR

BERLIN'S EXPRESSION OF CONFIDENCE THAT FINLAND WOULD NOT ARRANGE A SEPARATE PEACE "UNDER ANY CIRCUMSTANCES" HAS A RING OF FINALITY. ADOLF HITLER IS NOT ACCEPTING THE RESIGNATION OF ANY AXIS JUNIOR PARTNERS JUST NOW.

IF THE TIME ARRIVES WHEN RUSSIAN RESISTANCE HAS BEEN COMPLETELY CRUSHED, HE MAY BE IN A MORE LENIENT FRAME OF MIND, BUT NOT NOW.

TECHNICALLY, OF COURSE, THE FINNS ARE NOT MEMBERS OF THE AXIS AT ALL. THEIR CONTENTION IS THEY HAVE NO ALLIANCE, AND ARE FIGHTING THEIR OWN SEMI-INDEPENDENT WAR TO RECOVER LOST TERRITORY WITHOUT HAVING MADE ANY COMMITMENTS TO THE NAZIS.

BUT HITLER PROCLAIMED THEM TO BE HIS ALLIES ON JUNE 22 WHEN HE LAUNCHED THE INVASION OF RUSSIA, AND ALLIES THEY APPEAR DESTINED TO CONTINUE, WILLINGLY OR OTHERWISE, UNTIL THE REICHSFUEHRER HAS DECIDED THEY HAVE PAID THE PRICE HE SETS ON THE VALUE OF NAZI COOPERATION.

IN A DIFFERENT CATEGORY, THE RUMANIANS LIKEWISE LACK ENTHUSIASM FOR KEEPING UP THE FIGHT, NOW THAT THEY HAVE RECOVERED BESSARABIA. THERE WERE REPORTS VIA TURKEY THE OTHER DAY THAT SOME LEADERS WERE EAGER TO CALL IT ALL OFF. BUT RUMANIA IS LASHED SECURELY TO THE NAZI CHARIOT. RUMANIAN TROOPS HAVE BEEN TAKING PART IN THE SIEGE OF ODESSA. THE RUSSIANS ASSERTED THE OTHER DAY THAT THEY HAD SMASHED TWO RUMANIAN DIVISIONS THERE.

ITALY'S MARTIAL FERVOR LIKEWISE HAS EVAPORATED. THE BULGARIANS SIGNIFICANTLY WERE NOT REQUIRED TO TAKE PART IN THE ATTACK ON THEIR FELLOW SLAVS, IN THE FACE OF NAZI EFFORTS TO RECRUIT "TOKEN" FORCES FROM OTHER EUROPEAN COUNTRIES TO GIVE THE INVASION THE APPEARANCE OF A CRUSADE AGAINST BOLSHEVISM.

ONE WONDERS ABOUT THE HUNGARIANS' ENTHUSIASM. BUT NO NATION IS GOING TO BE ALLOWED TO QUIT THE AXIS BUND AT THIS STAGE, AFTER FIGHTING A MERE HALF-WAR.

SEP 2 1941

FINLAND'S SPOKESMEN MAKE OUT AN APPEALING CASE FOR HER. MADE BY GEOGRAPHY A BUFFER BETWEEN RUSSIA AND SCANDINAVIA, FINLAND HAS BEEN FIGHTING RUSSIAN EXPANSION WESTWARD FOR NEARLY A THOUSAND YEARS, AND IT IS CONTENDED THAT THE PRESENT FIGHT IS AS MUCH A SIDESHOW OF THE GREAT WAR AS WAS THE 1939-40 WINTER CONFLICT.

AFTER THAT STRUGGLE ENDED IN A PEACE DICTATED BY MOSCOW, THE FINNS COMPLAINED THEY WERE STILL SQUEEZED BY THEIR GIANT NEIGHBOR. THEY EXPLAIN THEY THEN ASKED BERLIN REPEATEDLY WHETHER GERMANY WOULD HELP IN CASE FIGHTING WERE RENEWED, BUT RECEIVED NO REPLY. THE ANSWER CAME IN HITLER'S JUNE 22 PROCLAMATION.

THE FINNS WAITED SEVERAL DAYS BEFORE GOING TO WAR AGAIN. THEY HAVE PUSHED AHEAD STEADILY TOWARD THEIR FORMER BOUNDARIES, PROTESTING THE WHILE THAT THEY HAVE NO INTEREST IN HELPING THE NAZIS GIVE RUSSIA A MORTAL BLOW.

COLONEL PER ZILLIACUS, THE FINNISH MILITARY ATTACHE IN WASHINGTON, SAYS HE SEES NO REASON WHY FINNISH TROOPS SHOULD TAKE PART IN THE FINAL ATTACK ON LENINGRAD, SHOULD THE IRON RING THROTTLE THE CITY. FINLAND IS LOATH TO SHED MORE OF HER BLOOD, HAS MADE NO AGREEMENT TO SEND TROOPS ANYWHERE TO AID GERMANY, AND HAS NOT BEEN PROMISED ANYTHING BY HITLER, COLONEL ZILLIACUS INSISTS.

THE FINNS NEVERTHELESS HAVE BEEN OF FIRST CLASS HELP TO THE GERMAN INVASION. WITH 16 OR SO VETERAN DIVISIONS, BETTER ARMED NOW, PARTIALLY WITH AMERICAN NAVAL PLANES AND GUNS, THEY CLAIM TO HAVE DESTROYED NINE OF SOME 25 RED ARMY DIVISIONS OPPOSING THEM.

SEP 2 1941

THEY THREATEN TO SEVER THE IMPORTANT RAILWAY LINE TO THE MURMANSK GATEWAY IN THE FAR NORTH, ISOLATING POSSIBLY EIGHT MORE DIVISIONS. AT LEAST THREE GERMAN DIVISIONS, MEANWHILE, HAVE BEEN PERMITTED TO CROSS FINNISH TERRITORY TO FIGHT THE RUSSIANS IN THE NORTH.

WITHOUT THE FINNS, THE WEHRMACHT MIGHT WELL HAVE FOUND IT IMPOSSIBLE TO TURN THE NORTHERN FLANK OF THE RED ARMY'S 2,000-

30.24—1155

MILE LINE. WITH WINTER COMING ON AND THE GERMANS RELATIVELY SHY OF SKI TROOPS, THE FINNS CAN BE OF GREAT USE TO THEM. FOR FINLAND TO LAY DOWN ARMS NOW WOULD BE EQUIVALENT TO A SMASHING RUSSIAN VICTORY.

ALTOGETHER BERLIN'S CONVICTION THAT TALK OF A SEPARATE PEACE IS PREMATURE IS READILY UNDERSTANDABLE.

Odessa's Supply Of Drinking Water Cut Off By Rumanians, Nazis Assert—Germans Declared Within Twenty Miles Of Leningrad

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Sept. 2—S. A. Lozovsky, Vice-Commissar for Foreign Affairs, said tonight that Hitler had appealed to Mussolini to fill gaps caused by huge Nazi losses on the Eastern front.

Lozovsky said the plea was the reason for their meeting on the front last week.

Reds Admit Fall Of Tallinn, Claim Huge Nazi Losses

SEP 3 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Wednesday, Sept. 3—The Russians acknowledged today the loss of Tallinn, Estonian capital whose capture the Germans announced last Friday, but declared this and other Nazi gains have been at such enormous costs in man power that Adolf Hitler was compelled to rush reserves from occupied Europe to his Eastern armies.

The early morning communique said Tallinn, which had been used as a Baltic Red fleet base, was given up only after fierce fighting. It added that stubborn fighting continues along the entire Western front.

Hitler Reported Hard-Put

In three days since Saturday the Russians placed German plane losses at 198, with Russian losses less than a third of this figure.

The Soviet general staff said Hitler was so hard-put by his losses that in some cases he was having to leave wounded men to hold Nazi-conquered areas of western Europe.

This information was attributed to captured German officers. It was offered as confirmation of earlier Russian assertions that Hiler's original invading forces were dissolving under the shock of casualties declared already to have mounted to 2,500,000 men with 1,000,000 of them killed.

Regiment Annihilated

It was supported by a claim in the midday Soviet communique that in a single sector of the central front about Smolensk—where a Russian counter-offensive was reported still rolling with the aid of "stormer" bombers assaulting Nazi troops from altiudes of a few yards—a German western infantry regiment of the One Hundred and Sixty-first Division had been annihilated.

Only eight to ten men survived in each German company, it was asserted, and these were taken prisoner.

The communique quoted a captured German company commander, First Lieut. Ludwig Roberg, as declaring that his outfit had arrived ten days ago from Toul in France, and that the whole Toul garrison had at the same time been sent hurrying to the Russian front.

Garrisons Sent Up

German garrisons in Belgium, Holland, France and elsewhere in the west, he was represented as saying, had been sent up.

"At the beginning of the war," his story continued, "regular army contingents (in the west) were replaced by reservists. Now the reservists, too, are being dispatched to the Eastern front and replaced by wounded soldiers who as yet have not completed treatment. Many of them still wear bandages."

Aside from reporting progress for the central counter-offensive, today's Soviet military dispatches also indicated that heavy aerial action was in progress to relieve the hard-pressed southern Red armies standing in the lower Ukraine.

Bombers of the Black Sea fleet air arm were reported in running assault on German-held ports and concentrations of troops. A German warship was declared to have been disabled and eighty-three German tanks destroyed, along with more than fifty armored cars and many tank cars.

Recalling that two months ago the Germans had claimed to be standing before Kiev in the Ukraine, the Government newspaper Izvestia remarked sardonically:

"They still stand before Kiev."

Before Leningrad in the north—where it was claimed that the markets were still filled with all sorts of food—the Nazis would have no better luck, the paper added.

Nothing was said in the afternoon Soviet communique as to the specific battle positions before Leningrad, Kiev or at the center.

Hitler's Infantry Routed in Smolensk Area, Reds Claim

Regiment Rushed From France Declared Beaten; Soviet Troops Dig In

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Sept. 2.—Red Army units counter-attacking on the central sector toward Smolensk have routed a German infantry regiment rushed to the eastern front from France only 10 days ago, it was announced officially today.

The beaten regiment was of the 161st German Division, the Russian daily communique stated in its supplementary portion. It said the regiment came to the eastern front from the German-occupied French city of Toul, near Nancy and close to the German border.

The Black Sea naval air force was described as in action against land as well as martitime objectives, fighting along the entire front, and Odessa still held out under a German-Rumanian siege.

Red Navy bombers raided Axis ports and troop concentrations over the last three days, a communique said, damaging a warship and destroying 83 tanks and more than 50 armored cars.

Strengthened Stand Noted.

The strengthened stand of the Red Army from hard-pressed Leningrad to the banks of the Dnieper was noted in dispatches.

A captured lieutenant of the 161st Division, Ludwig Robert, was quoted by the Soviet Information Bureau as saying that tremendous losses on the eastern front had compelled the German high command to withdraw garrisons from occupied countries—France, Belgium, Holland and others.

"The whole garrison of Toul," he was quoted, "has been sent to the Russian front. At the beginning of the war regular army contingents were replaced by reservists. Now reservists, too, are being dispatched to the eastern front and replaced by wounded soldiers who, as yet, have not completed treatment. Many of them are still wearing bandages."

During France's participation in the war Toul was headquarters of the Lafayette Squadron, made up of French pilots flying American-built planes.

Red Star, the army newspaper, said that the Red Air Force was supporting ground troops in the counter-attacks to the west. During the last few days, dispatches said, squadrons of "stormers," bombing and machine-gunning from a low altitude, had inflicted heavy losses on German troops and air bases.

The Log of One Unit

The log of a unit of three squadrons showed the following operations:

August 24—German Airdrome with eighteen planes destroyed.

August 25—Enemy motorized infantry column attacked with more than thirty trucks destroyed.

August 26—Three motorized columns of 165 trucks raided successfully.

Leningrad Like Front

A Tass dispatch from Leningrad said the city was becoming like a front line zone, with parks and gardens lined with trenches and the streets filled with troops and munitions trucks.

The night blackout was said to be as complete as that on the front.

A Pravda dispatch from Leningrad reported, nevertheless, that collective farm markets were filled with meat, milk, cream, eggs and vegetables and that the food supply was growing daily.

For the fifth consecutive day the official Moscow communique declared Russian defense positions unchanged as the Red Army stood off German onslaughts and struck back in sector after sector along the entire front.

Vessel Sunk in Baltic.

The midday war bulletin said Soviet naval planes sank a vessel during an attack on Axis shipping in the Baltic Sea.

The Moscow radio broadcast a statement that the German Army was bleeding to death slowly from the wounds of almost 10½ weeks of costly assault. It declared the Nazi casualties had mounted to 2,500,000—with 1,000,000 of that total killed.

No specific sectors were named in Moscow war reports, but the midnight communique credited massive Russian tanks with literally smashing beneath their heavy treads a German light tank attack at the outskirts of a city identified only as "D."

The attackers first ran into heavy Russian artillery fire, the war report declared, and then into a counter-attack by big Russian tanks which, in their first sweep forward, crushed 20 German tanks and put others out of action.

99 Tanks Declared Lost.

Altogether, the attacking Germans were said to have lost 99 tanks, 100 trucks, 10 armored cars, 50 motorcycles, 60 cannon and many lighter arms. A thousand Germans were reported killed.

An official announcement last night said the Red air fleet attacked the Berlin district Sunday night after a bombing sweep westward across Memel, Koenigsberg and Danzig.

The Russians said large fires were started in all of the cities attacked. (The Germans said planes approaching from the east that night failed to reach Berlin.)

Odessa's Drinking Water Supply Cut Off, Nazis Claim

SEP 3 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 2—The Germans claimed tonight that their troops had broken through outer defenses to within twenty miles of Leningrad, while Rumanians in the south had cut off the drinking water supply for the 500,000 civilians and soldiers in besieged Odessa.

DNB reported that Rumanian troops participated in the siege of the Black Sea port had occupied its main waterworks.

Informed German quarters said the most advanced Panzer units stood before Krasnogvardeisk, railway junction from where they could see the smoke of Leningrad's great factories twenty miles to the northeast.

Approaching Railroad

This advance unit would be only twenty miles west of the Leningrad-Moscow railroad along a spur line from Krasnogvardeisk, a junction for railways from Pskov, Tallinn and Leningrad. It was said to have reached the town after two weeks of hard fighting from Kingisepp.

The head of another column in the ring of steel the Germans said they were tightening about Leningrad was said to have passed Luga, seventy miles to the south. Much booty and motorized equipment and many guns were reported seized in fighting north of Luga in which "strong Soviet formations" were annihilated.

Roads Made Impassable

The battle was said to have occurred in the most difficult weather and along roads made impassable by heavy rains. Columns of German soldiers had to carry heavier weapons forward, the German account said.

In the south Rumanian troops were said by the DNB agency to be besieging Odessa's main waterworks, where some Red troops were holding out. Cutting off the water supply, the agency stated, seriously endangered Red army soldiers and civilian defenders of Odessa, which has been under siege since August 12.

Already Short Of Food

Odessa was said to be already suffering from a shortage of food.

A number of Soviet counter-attacks were acknowledged, but the German accounts said all were repulsed. Soviet attempts to regain the western shore of the Dnieper south of Kiev by boat crossings under cannon fire were said to have been thwarted "with heavy losses to the Russians."

DNB reported that German infantry had stormed Soviet positions on heights in the northern sector of the front yesterday and held them against repeated Russian counter-attacks.

Although the area of the fighting was not specified, it was indicated that it was on the Leningrad front.

German big guns were said to have destroyed eight of ten Red army batteries which sought to hold up the German advance in the north. In the Viipuri area north of Leningrad the Russians were reported to have suffered heavy losses to the Finns.

On the sea front the Germans reported destruction of the Russian destroyer Straschny by a mine near the Estonian island of Oesel.

The Germans said the Luftwaffe was continuing its destructive work unabated, especially in air attacks on soldiers and war materiels in the Leningrad area.

They also reported heavy assaults on railways and communications in the middle sector and Stuka attacks on western Crimea.

Railroads Blasted

In the middle sector of the front Luftwaffe attacks disrupted three railway routes for Russian supplies, DNB said. Trains standing at railway stations at Lozovaya and another town were said to have been hard hit. One munitions train went up in flames, DNB reported.

Northwest of Lake Ilmen, which is south of Leningrad, twenty-eight trains were said to have been halted by heavy bomb damage. On the Dneiper dive bombers were credited with sinking a monitor and six barges. Four other monitors burst into flames after being hit, the agency reported.

A German mine sweeper sank a Russian speedboat and damaged three others in an engagement in the eastern Baltic, DNB announced. The Russian boats were said to have been supported by a coastal battery.

Odessa Waterworks Are Reported Under Siege

SEP 3 1941

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 2.—The most advanced German units in the Leningrad drive are standing before Krasnogvardeisk, 20 miles southwest of that second city of the Soviet Union, informed German quarters said today.

Rumanian troops were declared by D.N.B., official news agency, to be besieging the main water works of Odessa, isolated Russian city on the Black Sea.

Cutting off of the Odessa water supply, the news agency said, would seriously endanger Red Army soldiers and civilian volunteers defending the port, already said to be suffering from a shortage of food.

The report of the German movement to Krasnogvardeisk—a junction for railways from Pskov, Tallinn and Leningrad—followed a D.N.B. report that German infantry had stormed important heights in the northern sector of the front yesterday and held them against repeated heavy Russian counter-attacks.

Airports in Arctic Raided.

Russian military facilities and airports south of Arctic Murmansk were raided "with excellent effect" by German bombers yesterday, D.N.B. said. East of Alakurtti, the agency reported, combat planes bombed Soviet soldiers and then machine-gunned them in low-diving attacks.

Eight of 10 Red Army batteries which sought to hold up the German advance in the north were reported to have been destroyed in a furious artillery duel and, in the south, Stuka dive-bombers struck their first blow of the war at peninsular Crimea. A ring of steel was said to be closing about Leningrad.

D.N.B. said German troops, despite difficult terrain and weather conditions, had destroyed Russian units north of Luga yesterday and seized much booty, vehicles and guns, mired in swamps.

Resistance "Tenacious."

South of Lake Ilmen, the news agency said, the Soviet forces showed "extraordinarily tenacious and bitter resistance," but the Germans overcame them and continued their advance. Lake Ilmen is 100 miles south of Leningrad.

German sources said the Russians suffered heavy losses at the hands of Finns in the Viipuri area above Leningrad, tabulations thus far listing 143 cannon and 64 tractors.

On the southern sector, 1,200 prisoners were reported captured and 9 Soviet tanks and 14 planes were declared destroyed.

(The Berlin radio heard in New York said a German cyclist detachment sank a Soviet gunboat on the Dnieper yesterday and, "in the panic which ensued among the Bolshevists," boarded and captured an accompanying 40-ton motorship.)

South of Kiev the Russians attacked a German division's positions yesterday but were driven back, D.N.B. said.

This attack was prepared with a heavy artillery barrage and supported with tanks. The Germans stopped it, then counterattacked immediately, driving deep into the Russian lines and taking many prisoners in heavy fighting, D.N.B. said.

Adolf Hitler's field headquarters in a noon communique said operations on the eastern front were "progressing according to plan."

Railways in the Kharkov district, 130 miles northeast of Dnieperopetrovsk, and in the area south of Moscow were effectively bombed, it said, while on the Dnieper River dive bombers sank one Soviet gunboat and set three afire.

Dispatches from the Leningrad area said German and Finnish troops were pushing ahead relentlessly everywhere, overcoming stubborn resistance rallied by Soviet Marshal Klementi Voroshilov.

The prominence given by German newspaper and military commentators to reports of the fighting created the impression that the battle for Russia's second-largest city rapidly was nearing a climax.

Tighten Ring at Leningrad.

The Germans declared their land forces and those of the Finns already were threatening Leningrad from the north, west, south and southeast. The ring is gradually being squeezed shut, it was said, leaving the Russians less and less space in which to operate.

On the sea front, it was said, Leningrad's only protection was afforded by the remnants of the Red Baltic fleet and the fortress of Kronstadt, situated some 20 miles west of the city.

The Red fleet has been reported badly crippled, but the Germans acknowledged that Kronstadt, with its modern fortifications, may be a tough nut to crack.

All day yesterday, military dispatches said, the Luftwaffe kept Russian troops and artillery positions in the Leningrad zone under continuous bombardment. Roads leading to the city also were said to have been bombed repeatedly.

Reports of operations at the southern end of the long battlefront were highlighted by news of the first air attack on the Crimea, where vital military targets on the western side of the peninsula were said to have been battered heavily.

1,108 Planes Claimed.

German anti-aircraft artillery and reconnaissance planes destroyed 1,108 Soviet warplanes between the start of the German-Russian war June 22 and August 27, D.N.B., official news agency, declared today.

The agency credited anti-aircraft guns with bringing down 1,018 planes and said Nazi air scouts had shot down 43, and destroyed an additional 47 on the ground.

The same air units were said to have disabled 396 tanks, destroyed 171 bunkers and 26 battery positions and sunk two Russian merchant ships in the same period.

Russian Crops Harvested.

German dispatches said Russian peasants in occupied territory, at the command of the German Army and under the eyes of governmental trustees, were harvesting crops left standing by the retreating Red Army.

Preparations for fall planting also were ordered as the Reich sent overseers to control Communist collective farms.

"Work must be done by hand," said a dispatch of war reporter Fritz Meske quoting the army order, "whatever machines and other apparatus for bringing in the crops are missing."

Meske said inducements were offered to the peasants to co-operate—higher prices than were paid in the U. S. S. R., forms of operation to remain unchanged for the present, private property to remain tax free, livestock increases to be permitted.

Meske said farmers obeyed "willingly and almost 100 per cent."

57 Nazi Divisions Lost, Russ Say

SEP 3 1941

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 2—The British radio quoted reports from Moscow today as saying that Germany had lost fifty-seven divisions, either decimated or so battered that they have ceased to exist as military units, on the Russian front.

It listed these as twelve armored divisions, thirty-seven infantry divisions and eight divisions of Schnelltruppen—speed troops. The broadcast was heard here by NBC.

The fifty-seven divisions would be made up of possibly 850,000 men. Russians declare that these and other German units have suffered a total of 2,500,000 casualties, including 1,000,000 dead, in the campaign.

FINNISH DRIVES PUSHED

Heavy Attacks Cited in Denial That Peace Is Sought

HELSINKI, Finland, Sept. 2 (AP)—Heavy Finnish attacks against Russian troop concentrations and supply bases on the Karelian Isthmus today gave prompt support to the declaration of a Finnish battle leader that the war against Russia "is not finished."

A tremendous explosion during an attack against a Red Army supply base on the Isthmus indicated, according to an official Finnish announcement, that a direct hit had been scored on an ammunition dump. Direct hits also were scored, it was said, on motorized supply columns and troop concentrations.

The Finnish attack was carried north and destroyed three Russian engines on a siding of the Murmansk Railway, the announcement said. These attacks followed a declaration by Lieut.-Gen. Lennart Oesch that the war against Russia would continue. There had been rumors that Finland would drop the fight against Russia now that she has recovered most of the territory lost in the Russo-Finnish war of 1939-40, but Gen. Oesch brought out old Finnish territorial claims against Russia and said the war would go on.

Finland's largest daily, Helsingin Sanomat, run by former Foreign Minister Elias Erkko, said today: "Finland took up arms to destroy the eternal eastern menace and to secure for herself a peaceful life within a safe frontier. Our people are absolutely unanimous in the belief that only a common victory can guarantee the permanence of our own victory."

Moscow Denies Report Of Peace With Finns

Moscow, Sept. 2 (A. P.).—S. A. Lozovsky, vice-commissar for foreign affairs, denied tonight foreign reports that actual negotiations had been started for a separate Russo-Finnish peace.

"In Finland there is a great desire for peace, but reports of negotiations do not correspond to reality," he said.

Hull Denies Hearing Winant Would Mediate

Washington, Sept. 2 (A. P.).—Secretary of State Cordell Hull told questioners today that he had no information that John G. Winant, American Ambassador to Great Britain, would act as an intermediary in attempting to end the war between Finland and Russia.

Aerial Reinforcements Received by Russians

LONDON, Sept. 2 (AP).—A Moscow dispatch to the London News Chronicle said today that strong aerial reinforcements for the Red air force had arrived in Russia.

"The material that has now arrived," the dispatch said, "is both as to quantity and types obviously a military secret. But when this new help makes its bow on the battle-front the Germans are going to get a shock."

Meanwhile the Daily Express' Stockholm correspondent said many new Red Army land divisions had arrived from the interior and were attacking south of Leningrad, near Gomel in the center and at Rogachev on the Dnieper River 160 miles southwest of Smolensk.

British-Russian Terms Answered, Iran Says

By Wireless to The Sun

TEHERAN, Iran, Sept. 2 (AP).—The government of Iran announced today that it had replied last night to British-Russian terms and that the details would be made public at a "suitable time."

The new Acting Minister of War, Gen. Mohammed Nakhjevan, took his seat with the cabinet today, replacing Gen. Ahmad Nakhjevan, who is a kinsman. The shift was not explained.

Practically all shops in the city opened today under threat of punitive action by the Military Governor of Teheran. The Governor said alarmed merchants who closed their stores had made it difficult to obtain necessities.

The Iranian air force adjutant, Maj. Afkhami, died today of a neck wound suffered Saturday, it was reported.

In Kazvin, 90 miles from the capital, Russian troops were reported to have given a party for two unidentified American visitors.

The United States Legation here was trying to confirm the safety of American missionaries in various Russian-occupied sections of the kingdom.

A traveler arriving from the holy city of Meshed, now occupied by Soviet Russian forces, asserted he saw Soviet planes machine-gunning Moslem pilgrims on roads Thursday some hours after the Iranian cease-fire order.

He reported 12 civilians were killed by bombs Thursday in Meshed, in Northeastern Iran.

Britain and Soviet Reach Agreement With Iranians

Broad Principles for Accord Decided On In Teheran Parley

SEP 3 1941

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—The broad principles of an agreement to settle the situation in Iran have been reached by British and Russian ministers and the Iranian government at Teheran, authoritative quarters reported today.

No armistice terms have been signed, but the Iranians were showing "good feeling and sense" in conversations during the past three days, it was said.

Many details still are to be worked out, including the status of the German Legation in Teheran, the quarters, said, but when a final agreement is reached there will be "no possibility of further trouble" from Germany in Iran.

Further Communiqués Unlikely

SIMLA, India, Sept. 2 (AP)—The situation in Iran was reported quiet today, and authoritative sources said that British headquarters here probably would issue no further communiqués on the progress of occupation operations being carried out by British Imperial and Soviet Russian troops.

[By the Associated Press]

Nome, Alaska, Sept. 2—A Russian military mission, traveling across the Arctic to the United States, took off today on a hop to Anchorage, 500 miles to the southeast.

Anthony Fedatoff, a Russian consul to the United States who had flown here from Washington to meet them, was aboard.

Called "Technical Mission"

Washington, Sept. 2 (AP)—The War Department announced today that the Russian military mission en route to this country was a "purely technical mission," coming here to observe American aircraft at the plants at which they are made.

Officials said the forty-seven Russian airmen would visit a number of American aircraft factories, but the itinerary was not disclosed. The visitors will confine their activities to observation and will not engage in training.

Russians in Nome Expected to Hop For Capital Today

Alaskans Think Soviet Group Is Scheduled to Ferry U. S. Warplanes

By the Associated Press.

NOME, Alaska, Sept. 2.—Alaskans in this far northern settlement speculated today on the possibility that the group of 47 uncommunicative Russians who arrived here Sunday night in two flying boats would ferry American-built warplanes back to their embattled homeland.

The take-off of the two big ships, en route to Washington, was expected today, weather permitting, despite official silence on that subject and all other aspects of the mystery flight over "the roof of the world."

Russian Consul Fedotoff arrived from Washington, via Fairbanks, late yesterday and went into conference with Gen. Mikhail Gromov, commander of the expedition and one of the Soviets' outstanding airmen.

The speculation of Alaskans over the possibility of the men ferrying airplanes back to Russia was based on the fact that most of them appeared to be aviators.

The flying boats are expected to fly south via Sitka and Seattle to San Francisco. A report from Anchorage indicated there might also be a stop at Kodiak, where a large United States naval air base is being constructed.

In Washington some quarters were reported as indicating that the mission might be largely of technicians, coming to look over the latest American planes and to discuss technical problems.

There was official silence in the Capital, both in Russian and governmental offices, as to the purpose of the mission. Some Washington quarters indicated they knew of the flight at about the time the airmen took off from Moscow five days ago.

The presence of the flying mission in Nome coincided with the arrival of two Russian Army officers and three Embassy attaches in San Diego. They were believed to be on a buying mission to the Consolidated Aircraft Corp. which built the two PBY type ships which landed in Nome.

Consolidated officials said the seaplanes were built for Russia under a $1,000,000 contract in 1937, with the approval of the United States Navy. Three PBY ships were included in the contract.

Russians Visit Bomber Factory

Soviet Airmen En Route To Washington On War Plan

San Diego, Calif., Sept. 2 (AP)—Five Soviet Russian officials visited the Consolidated Aircraft plant today.

The party, headed by Maj. Gen. Alexander K. Repin, chief of an aviation mission from U.S.S.R., arrived yesterday by plane from Washington, accompanied by Col. Philip R. Faymonville, U.S.A., formerly with the American embassy in Russia.

Asked if his group was on a purchasing mission, Repin answered that it was an inspection tour. He said they had visited Eastern aircraft plants.

Reliable sources reported, however, the group was interested in Consolidated bombers, and that the quintet might be here in connection with possible plans to divert to Russia some of the bombers now going to Great Britain.

The same sources said it was probably the two seaplanes which arrived in Nome, Alaska, Saturday from Moscow with 47 men aboard would come to San Diego.

These seaplanes, of the PBY type manufactured by Consolidated, are the result of a $1,000,000 contract made with Russia in 1937.

Repin said that every plane which could be given to Russia would hasten victory over Germany.

"Russia's scorched earth policy is helping win the war," said Repin. "We will win sooner if other countries will help us, but the difference is only in time."

Seattle, Sept. 2 (AP)—Thirteenth District Navy headquarters received a terse message from the new Navy air base at Kodiak, Alaska, tonight that the two Russian flying boats that took off from Nome earlier today had landed there at 7:25 p. m. (Pacific Standard Time).

The elapsed time for the flight was nearly seven and a half hours.

Information at the time of the Nome takeoff set Anchorage as the destination, but the members of the 47-man technical military mission apparently chose Kodiak because of the better seaplane facilities there and possibly because of the water route around the coastline.

The Nome-Kodiak distance is about 600 miles direct and about 800 around the coast. Kodiak is the site of one of the large United States Navy Air Bases now under construction.

ANTI-RED QUIP IS CHARGED TO HIGH BRITON

Minister Accused Of Hoping Nazis And Foe "Exterminate Each Other"

Moore-Brabazon's Attitude "A Terrible Crime," Says Laborite

[By the Associated Press]

Edinburgh, Scotland, Sept. 2 — A British Cabinet Minister was accused before the Trades Union Congress today of voicing the hope that Germany and Russia would "exterminate each other," thus leaving Britain the dominant power in Europe.

The charge was made against Col. J. T. C. Moore-Brabazon, Minister for Aircraft Production, by Jack Tanner, president of the Amalgamated Engineering Union, which is dominant in its important field embracing aircraft production. The congress, his sounding board, is known as the British working man's parliament.

Situation "Extraordinary"

Assured by Tanner that the charge could be substantiated, Sir Walter Citrine, the congress secretary, said "that the person impugned will have to pursue the matter," adding, "It is an extraordinary situation if such a statement can be made by a Cabinet Minister in a Government whose Prime Minister has so fully pledged the country to render every possible help to Soviet Russia."

Tanner did not specify the time or circumstances of the alleged remark, which he said expressed a point of view that "may result in nullification of our whole war effort."

An authoritative quarter in London said Tanner evidently was referring to a passage "in a recent ex tempore speech which was open to misinterpretation," and which, presumably, Moore-Brabazon made at a private gathering.

Minister's Views Cited

The Minister's views on Russia were declared by this quarter to be those of a public announcement in which he called for all possible help for everyone who was "fighting Britain's battles."

There was no quotation of Moore-Brabazon's extemporaneous remarks by this source, but Tanner told the story this way:

"There are people in high places who declare they hope the Russian and German armies will exterminate each other and, while this is taking place, we British commonwealth nations will so develop our air force and other armed forces that if Russia and Germany destroy each other we shall have the dominating power in Europe.

"This point of view was expressed quite recently by a Cabinet Minister, a gentleman who holds a very important position, none other than the Minister for Aircraft Production, Col. Moore-Brabazon.

"Terrible Danger"

"I think everyone will agree that such an attitude is a terrible danger and a crime against the people of this country and the people of Russia. If Russia succeeds, we succeed; if Russia fails, we fail.

"The impression is still strong that certain elements desire to switch to war against Russia. I hope the Government will remove from its ranks those who are reactionary enough to make the statements they have and (who) in effect desire the defeat of the Soviet Union."

The congress unanimously called for establishment of an Anglo-Russian trade union council and pledged its support to all efforts to supply war materials to Russia.

It praised the alliance with Russia and the Roosevelt-Churchill declaration of aims.

Sir Walter added the proviso, however, that "we are not prepared to collaborate with the British Communist party. We have found them totally unreliable for carrying out any policy."

British Minister Accused of Hoping For Soviet Defeat

Plane Production Chief Named at Congress of Trade Unions

[By the Associated Press]

Edinburgh, Scotland, Sept. 2—The charge that Col. J. T. C. Moore-Brabazon, Minister for Aircraft Production, had expressed the hope that the German and Russian armies would "exterminate each other" and leave Britain the dominating power in Europe was made today before the Trades Union Congress by Jack Tanner, president of the powerful Amalgamated Engineering Union.

Tanner did not name the occasion on which Colonel Moore-Brabazon is supposed to have made the remark, but he declared that such a viewpoint "may result in nullification of our whole war effort."

"Open To Misinterpretation"

Later an authoritative quarter said the Tanner charge "evidently refers to a passage in a recent extempore speech which was open to misinterpretation," made presumably at a private gathering.

This source added that Moore-Brabazon's views on Russia were those in a recent public announcement in which he said, "Everyone fighting was fighting Britain's battle and for that reason they (the British) should give all the help they could."

Names Moore-Brabazon

"There are people in high places," said Tanner, "who declare they hope the Russian and German armies will exterminate each other and, while this is taking place, we British commonwealth nations will so develop our air force and other armed forces that if Russia and Germany destroy each other we shall have the dominating power in Europe.

"This point of view was expressed quite recently by a Cabinet Minister, a gentleman who holds a very important position, none other than the Minister for Aircraft Production, Colonel Moore-Brabazon.

"Crime Against" Russia

"I think everyone will agree that such an attitude is a terrible danger and a crime against the people of this country and the people of Russia. If Russia succeeds, we succeed; if Russia fails, we fail.

"The impression is still strong that certain elements desire to switch to war against Russia. I hope the Government will remove from its ranks those who are reactionary enough to make the statements they have and (who), in effect, desire the defeat of the Soviet Union."

Official Startled

Sir Walter Citrine, secretary of the T. U. C., which is British labor's parliament, said he was startled by the charge and added it was a serious situation if Tanner's accusation could be substantiated.

"It can," rejoined Tanner.

"I feel sure," said Sir Walter, "that the person impugned will have to pursue the matter. . . . It is an extraordinary situation if such a statement can be made by a Cabinet Minister in a Government whose Prime Minister has so fully pledged the country to render every possible help to Soviet Russia."

Earlier the T. U. C. had unanimously indorsed a proposal of its general council for establishment of an Anglo-Russian Trade Union Council. It also pledged its support of all efforts to supply Russia with war materials, praised the Anglo-Soviet alliance and lauded the Churchill-Roosevelt declaration.

Sir Walter, in support of the proposal, asserted firmly, however, that "we are not prepared to collaborate with the British Communist party."

"We have found them totally unreliable for carrying out any policy," he said.

London Press Plays Up Moore-Brabazon Story

London, Wednesday, Sept. 3 (AP)—The London press this morning headlines accounts of the charge made at the Trades Union Congress in Edinburgh that Col. J. T. C. Moore-Brabazon, Minister for Aircraft Production, had voiced the hope Germany and Russia "would exterminate each other."

The Laborite Daily Herald in a two-column front-page article forecast that the Minister "may be forced to go." It added that "the resignation from the Government of Colonel Moore-Brabazon has become an immediate political issue."

The Daily Mail's front-page account was headed "Minister is accused by T. U. C. member."

The News-Chronicle said questions about the colonel's attitude would be asked in Parliament.

JAPAN CONSIDERS SEA SAFETY ZONE TO BAR U. S. SHIPS

Konoye Studying Plan Shutting Vladivostok From American Aid

Nazis Reported to be Using All Possible Pressure To Force Tokyo to Enter War

Tokyo, Sept. 2 (AP)—A plan to establish a "safety zone" all around the Japanese islands and thereby possibly shut off the big Siberian port of Vladivostok from American shipments was before Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye today while the Japanese press read a variety of meanings into President Roosevelt's Labor Day speech.

Gen. Senjuro Hayashi, director of the Asia Development Federation, which represents about sixty nationalist organizations, said Prince Konoye had agreed to consider the federation's proposal for a safety zone.

Vladivostok is approachable by sea only through straits between the Japanese Islands; so such a program might isolate it just as the first American shipload of aviation gasoline for Soviet Russia is nearing Japanese Empire seas.

A Japanese spokesman said new representations against the shipments were being made to Russia and the United States.

Urging maintenance of Japan's present foreign policy, the Asia Development Federation declared, "the United States of late has unreasonably tightened economic pressure against Japan" and supplied materials "to nations hostile to our Axis powers."

Both these American actions must be rejected by Japan, it stated.

Nichi Nichi Views

Nichi Nichi, large Tokyo paper, remarked that President Roosevelt had not mentioned Japan in his Labor Day radio talk.

"If silence about Japan means readiness to accept principles laid down by Japan there is some cause for hopefulness, but this country cannot be a party to any scheme which entails the old status quo condition," the paper asserted.

"Japan takes a position of watchful waiting to see what this new silence portends."

Nichi Nichi added, "if the United States hides behind the name of freedom of the seas and objects to Japan's justifiable road, Japan will not hesitate to break through whenever it is necessary."

Both Nichi Nichi and the foreign office paper, The Japan Times and Advertiser, suggested that the Roosevelt speech indicated a labor crisis in the United States.

"Washington fears a possible disintegration of the national production," said the English-language Times and Advertiser.

Going farther, Chugai Shogyo editorially asserted:

"When Roosevelt declared the Hitler Nazi Army should be wiped out we believe he meant to say the Axis group should be wiped out as a whole. We consider the United States went too far in declaring an intention to destroy the Axis without participating in the war, merely by acting as a munitions factory."

Pressure Redoubled

Nichi Nichi, in a dispatch dated Bangkok, said British pressure on Thailand has redoubled recently.

British-Thai relations are intimate, it said, and Chinese-Thai relations are close, whereas Japan is almost a newcomer.

"In the field of propaganda Britain is way ahead in grasping the Thai people," it said, "and Britain has succeeded in creating a fear of Japan."

Domei, Japanese news agency, said fresh British reinforcements had arrived at Singapore and other Malayan bases.

Meanwhile, Japan heard that the United States had a six months' supply of raw silk and was using 50,000 bales a year to make parachutes.

This word came from Shiro Zuzuki, Yokohama silk expert just returned from three months in the United States.

Quantities of silk needed for parachutes are insignificant compared with silk stocking requirements he said, but he added that use of substitutes in American women's stockings was growing.

SEP 3 1941

Tokyo

[By the Associated Press]

Tokyo, Sept. 2—Premier Konoye was reported today to be considering the establishment of an ocean safety zone all around Japan as the first American ship bearing aviation gasoline to Russia approached the Empire's waters.

Vladivostok, ringed by Japanese islands, was the gasoline carrier's destination.

Gen. Senjuro Hayashi, director of the powerful Asia Development Federation—representing about sixty nationalist groups—told the federation today that Premier Konoye had agreed to consider its proposal for the creation of a safety zone embracing the entire ocean area adjacent to the Japanese islands.

Apt To Mean Sea Patrol

(Presumably such a zone, extending territorial waters of the islands into a solid sea area, would be patrolled by Japanese warships and planes.)

Firm maintenance of Japan's present diplomatic policy, with adherence to her Axis obligations as the basis, was advocated by the federation in a resolution sent to the Premier yesterday with the safety-zone suggestion.

"The United States of late has unreasonably tightened economic pressure against Japan," the federation said, and it declared that this action as well as supply of materials "to nations hostile to our Axis powers" must be rejected.

"Opinions Unsatisfactory"

The developments came as Domei reported the arrival of fresh British reinforcements at Singapore and Malayan bases, and a Government spokesman said Japan again was drawing the attention of Moscow and Washington to her concern over shipment of United States war supplies to embattled Russia.

SEP 3 1941

The spokesman, Ichii Kishi, told a press conference no official replies to Japanese representations had been received, but said there had been "expressions of certain opinions which were unsatisfactory to Japan."

Might Okay Iran Route

Some Japanese expressed the opinion that an oil shipment crisis could be avoided without loss of face to either side if American supplies to Russia were routed through Iran instead of the sea of Japan.

(This would be about triple the distance by sea.)

Kishi indicated Japanese-United States negotiations were in a delicate stage, for he told correspondents the less said about them at this time the better.

Discounts Bellicose Speech

Asked to comment on an army spokesman's declaration that Japan would use force if necessary to avert encirclement by the United States, Britain, Russia and other nations, Kishi said it had no connection with the Washington talks.

He also remarked it would be a mistake to draw any inference from the apparent difference between bellicose utterances of military men and conciliatory attitudes expressed by civilians.

Lieut. Col. Itsuo Mabuchi, chief of the army press section of Imperial headquarters, said in a broadcast last night that Japan was resolved to construct her Asiatic co-prosperity sphere even though it meant "entry into a long-term war against Britain and America."

Force If Diplomacy Fails

Mabuchi, in an unusually frank statement, asserted it would be dangerous to wait passively too long, but said soldiers should not be sent to war uselessly and therefore diplomatic efforts should be pushed as long as possible.

"Peaceful means will not be allowed to be dragged along forever," he said, adding that if diplomatic means failed, Japan would break out of encirclement forcefully before economic pressure reduced her to pauper status.

Firm Stand Demanded

General Hayashi did not disclose the extent of the ocean safety zone, which, along with some other policies, was proposed in the resolution the Federation sent the Premier yesterday.

Other points said to have been included in that resolution were:

1. Firm maintenance of Japan's present diplomatic policy, with adherence to her Axis obligations as the basis.
2. Strengthening of the new order and coprosperity sphere in East Asia.
3. Rejection of the acts of third nations aiding the Chungking regime.

"Japan Wants Peace"

The resolution said:

"As declared at the time the tripartite pact was concluded, Japan's desire is to settle world disturbances and bring about peace.

"With the above desire in mind, Japan now is paying the utmost attention to a speedy settlement of the China affair and establishment of a coprosperity sphere.

"U. S. Misunderstands"

"However, the United States' misunderstanding of Japan's true intentions and misunderstanding of the hopes of Asiatic nations, is hindering settlement of the China affair and attempting to check Japan's peaceful advance in the South by cooperation with Britain and the Netherlands.

"Japan and the Japanese positively cannot allow such actions by the United States.

"The United States of late has unreasonably tightened economic pressure against Japan.

"This attempt on one hand to check our activities and on the other to supply materials to nations hostile to our Axis powers evidently is to put the European war on a long-term basis.

"We must reject all such actions on the part of the United States.

"We ask serious consideration from the United States Government and people."

Singapore Preparations Noted

Domei reported from Bangkok, Thailand, today the constant arrival at Singapore and the Malayan peninsula of British reinforcements from Malta and Gibraltar.

The news agency said anti-aircraft emplacements, dugouts and shelters were being constructed and that blackouts had been enforced for several nights. Some firms and shops in Singapore have been closing because so much of the city's population has moved away to rural districts, Domei added.

Nippon Ponders Plan To Isolate Vladivostok With "Safety Zone"

Shanghai, Sept. 2—German advisers are pressing the Japanese Government toward a policy of aggression on the Asiatic Continent and defiance of the United States and Great Britain, reliable foreigners recently arrived from Japan said today. They added that the Nazis are bringing all pressure possible to force Japan into war.

These foreigners, including Axis nationals, asserted that the Konoye Government probably would have to choose between yielding to the extremist elements—notably the army—or face the possibility of overthrow by violence.

Moderates Intimidated

Moderates in Japan who wish to avoid war with the democracies are being intimidated, it was said. The recent attempt to assassinate Baron Kiichiro Hiranuma, Vice-Premier and Minister without Portfolio, was a deliberate warning to the moderates, the travelers said.

Baron Hiranuma, considered an outstanding moderate, began an investigation of Nazi penetration of Japanese government and industry when he was Home Minister in an earlier government, the travelers said.

News of the plot against Hiranuma leaked out prematurely, and on August 13, the night before he was shot, an Axis journalist telephoned police and asked whether Hiranuma was dead. This newspaperman has been under close police investigation since, according to the travelers.

Seek a Way Out

Foreign Minister Teijiro Toyoda and Tsuneo Matsudaira, veteran diplomat now serving as minister of the imperial household, were said to be trying determinedly to find a way out of the present crisis toward an understanding with the United States.

The moderates are said to feel that Japan will run into catastrophic defeat if she challenges the United States, Britain and Russia.

Tokyo's population, described as virtually without air raid defenses, was said to be in near panic over the prospect of air attacks.

Travelers Report Japan in State of Dangerous Ferment

Nation Declared Pressed By Germany to Take Aggressive Action

By CARL LEE

By the Associated Press.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 2.—Reliable foreigners, including Axis nationals, arriving at Shanghai said today Japan is in a state of dangerous ferment, with extremists being pressed by German advisers toward immediate aggressive action on the Asiatic continent and with moderate leaders making one last effort to avoid war in the Pacific.

The German advisers were said to be demanding continued Japanese defiance of the United States and Britain.

The consensus in these stories of the behind-the-scenes struggle in Japan is that the Konoye government either must yield to the extremists, notably army elements, or face the possibility of violent overthrow, since, it is said, the supernationalists will not hesitate to use force.

The recent shooting of Baron Kiichiro Hiranuma, Vice Premier and minister without portfolio, was not merely an isolated individual manifestation, but a deliberate warning to moderates in whose ranks Hiranuma had come to be considered outstanding, the travelers said.

The informants reported that Hiranuma, while Home Minister in the previous Konoye cabinet, began an investigation of Nazi penetration of Japanese government and industry and growing Nazi influence over the army. They said the Nazis were bringing every conceivable pressure to bear to force Japan into war.

News Got Out Prematurely.

These persons asserted that news of the plot against Hiranuma leaked out prematurely and on the night before the shooting, that is, August 13, an Axis journalist telephoned police to inquire if Hiranuma was dead. Since the shooting, it was said, this newspaperman has been under severe police interrogation.

Hiranuma is recovering.

The arrivals from Tokio said that despite the Hiranuma attack such leaders as Foreign Minister Vice Admiral Teijiro Toyoda and Minister of the Imperial Household Tsuneo Matsudaira were determinedly seeking a way out of Japan's dilemma through an understanding with the United States.

The informants said this group should be called realists rather than moderates, since they fear that Japan faces catastrophic defeat if she challenges the United States, Britain and Russia.

The arrivals emphasized, however, that not even the so-called moderates were willing to promise a complete reversal of Japan's expansionist policies, but merely hoped for a breathing spell to delay a Pacific showdown while attempting to win American recognition of those policies.

War Seen Inevitable.

The informants said a majority of foreigners in Japan believe the United States is not willing to bargain with Japan's expansionist policy and hence to them war in the Pacific appears inevitable.

The British-United States freezing of Japanese credits with consequent suspension of trade was said already to have crippled Japanese economy severely and business elements were pictured as unanimously hopeful of restoration of trade with the United States and Britain, lacking which, Japan's position appears certain to become more desperate.

The arrivals reported that Tokia's population was in near-panic over the prospect of air raids. They said the capital was virtually without shelters and that civilians would be defenseless.

Prior to air raid precautions drills started yesterday at Tokio the government attempted to organize air defense through associations of residents and enlistments of young girls, boys and women. Some residents expected construction of big shelters, but found these impossible because of subsurface water.

Gardens to Be Refuges.

The [illegible] decided, according to these informants, that in event of raids the people would abandon their homes, taking refuge in their gardens under tatamis—floor mats made of reeds.

In Kobe buckets of water and piles of sand were reported placed outside every house to fight incendiaries.

One foreigner commented: "Th precautions are pitiful—at least the seem so until you remember Chung king."

New York, Sept. 2 (AP)—Thirteen attaches of the Japanese Foreign Office, who arrived last Saturday from Lisbon, left New York by train tonight for San Francisco to take ship for Tokyo.

They had accompanied Yosuke Matsuoka, former Foreign Minister, on his visits to Rome, Berlin and Moscow.

"It is our time to go home," was the only explanation they would give of their departure.

Peiping Press Shifts.

Peiping, Sept. 2 (A. P.).—In contrast with its recent pro-Axis attitude, the Japanese controlled press here today chorused that Germany will find ultimate victory difficult because of American aid to Britain. The unexplained about-face comment continued with predictions that Moscow would survive through the remainder of the year and that it was almost impossible for Germany to gain a victory over Russia before winter.

The British-Russian occupation of Iran threatens Germany with strong democratic lines from many directions, it was said. The British-Russian air forces were described as already equal to the Luftwaffe while British shipping losses were listed at only 20 per cent of their former high.

The papers closed with the comment, seemingly officially inspired, that the victors in this war will be those who maintain their neutrality the longest.

Bangkok, Sept. 2 (AP)—Field Marshal Luang Bipul Songgram, already commander in chief of the Thai army, today was appointed special commander in chief of the Thai navy and Thai air force.

It was announced August 25 that the Premier had given up duties as Minister of Defense, Foreign Affairs and the Interior, and that he was remaining Premier in name only.

Police Major General Aduldet Charas was appointed to act as Premier. These changes were made to relieve the Premier of the pressure of the work, it was said at the time.

GUAM, Sept. 2 (AP).—Three Americans on their way home from China reported today that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek had offered to let them operate transportation on the Burma Road as a private enterprise if they would stay to supervise carrying needed war materials to the republic.

The trio, Daniel Arnstein, Marco Hellman and Harold Davis, all of New York, said they were offered unlimited profits if they would accept the proposal, but they refused.

American-Built Bomber Again Blasts Important German Port

Torpedo-Carrying Planes Battle Nazi Shipping In North Sea

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 2—An American-built Fortress aircraft bombed Bremen in the second raid upon the big German port in three days by these speedy, high-flying planes during a widespread dawn-to-dusk R. A. F. offensive today against the German-held continental coast and against Nazi shipping by torpedo-carrying Beauforts in the North Sea.

The Bremen attack followed one Sunday in which bombs were declared dropped squarely in the middle of the port by a Fortress bomber without opposition from the Luftwaffe.

No Nazi Planes Seen

The crew of the fortress, which flew the substratosphere to press home th attack, said no German planes were sighted but that ground defenses sent up a terrific barrage of shells.

Beauforts pouncing on a German convoy off the Norwegian coast hit the largest vessel with two torpedoes and probably destroyed it, and a hit was scored on [illegible] escort vessel, the Air Ministry announced.

SEP 3 1941

In numerous sweeps over northern France and the Channel, the British said, not a single German fighter rose to the challenge. From all the operations only one plane, a Beaufort, was reported missing.

Regular Crossings

The day's offensive was carried out by R. A. F. planes moving across the Channel with conveyor-belt regularity.

Planes setting out for the attack with heavy loads of bombs were passed in the air by craft returning with empty racks.

Heavy rumbling which rolled back to the English coast indicated that the attack was as heavy as it was prolonged.

Attack Ship Off Dunkerque

In one incident British planes attacked an enemy supply ship off Dunkerque and left it "enveloped in smoke," the Air Ministry stated, despite the fact it was protected by six anti-aircraft ships and four E-boats.

The big daylight assault followed a night raid centered upon the German industrial city of Cologne. Other Rhineland points also were raided.

Light German activity was reported over England during the day after heavy night attacks on a northeastern English district. (The Germans reported a severe attack on Newcastle.)

Vast R. A. F. Attacks Are On

Air Squadrons Strike Across Channel in Day Raids and on Heavy Scale at Night, Too.

London, Sept. 2 (A. P.).—The R. A. F. launched another heavy attack on the German-held coast of northern France this evening after its daytime assaults had filled the skies with planes from dawn to late afternoon.

SEP 3 1941

Heavy explosions rumbled across the Channel and Dover Strait tonight from seemingly an air attack as vigorous as it was strong numerically. Then the planes turned homeward, some skimming the waves and zooming up just in time to clear the chalk cliffs of England.

In the morning and afternoon raids, the planes passed one another coming and going with the regularity of railroad trains on busy tracks.

Last night the German industrial city of Cologne bore the brunt of a severe attack.

British planes attacked an enemy supply ship off Dunkirk, leaving her enveloped in smoke during the morning attack, an Air Ministry communique said. The attacked vessel was protected by six anti-aircraft ships and four E-boats, the Ministry said. One of the attacking Blenheim bombers was missing, and two German Messerschmitt fighters were shot down, the account said.

A lone raiding plane dived on a railway station in East Anglia today and machine-gunned two freight trains.

Workers hurriedly crawled under the cars. No casualties were reported, although the station was riddled with bullets.

The German industrial city of Cologne bore the brunt of a severe R. A. F. night attack.

The Air Ministry said the night attack was not on a particularly heavy scale, but declared "good results" nevertheless were achieved. Loss of one plane was acknowledged.

The government reported small-scale German activity in general over Britain, but said one district in Northeast England bore the brunt of the raiding and suffered damage and casualties. Two German aircraft were claimed destroyed.

How Air Fortress Met Test

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 2—The first of Britain's big American-made Fortress bombers to be tackled by German interceptors came through a seven-plane assault, battered and smoking, some of the crew dead and others wounded, and returned to Britain, with its mission fulfilled.

The official account of the test was made public tonight—an elaboration of a brief report of the dogfight that ensued August 16 when one of the winged Fortresses carried out a high altitude bombardment of the German battleships Scharnhorst and Gneisenau at Brest, France.

It did not say how many of the plane's crew were killed.

The Air Ministry news service, which carried the account, said the Fortress flew at less than the "full ceiling," which is the substratosphere at between 30,000 and 40,000 feet—thus indicating that the five Messerschmitt 109F's and two Heinkel 113's were benefitted by the denser air at the lower altitude.

Not many pursuit planes can achieve, for operations, the extreme ceiling of the air-borne Fortresses.

"Flying at a great height, but not at the Fortress' full ceiling, the bomber crossed the Channel," said the news service.

"Near Brest the bomber was separated from the rest of the detachment. . . . It flew on, attacked and returned by itself. . . .

"Not all the crew saw the bombs burst, but the fire controller, a flight sergeant who is now recovering from his wounds in a hospital, saw one bomb out of a stick burst on the quay just beside one of the battle cruisers. He did not see the other bursts."

Anti-aircraft shells were bursting all around the big plane.

"Three minutes after the bombs had gone, the fire controller—it's his job to stand with his head in the astro-hatch and watch every part of the sky—saw two Heinkel 113's coming out from a light cloud about a thousand feet below the Fortress and slightly to starboard," the story continued.

Joined By Messerschmitts

"They were joined almost at once by five Messerschmitt 109F's. All the fighters appeared to come from the same quarter of the sky. Their arrival was so prompt that it was obvious that they had come from a standing patrol.

"The fighters made many attacks from both sides and from dead astern. Two of the Fortress' gunners and the wireless operator were severely wounded. In spite of his wounds the wireless operator continued to signal to his base. The captain swung the bomber quickly from side to side and dived—now fast, now slow.

"Down came all the fighters after him, firing all the while. The Fortress No. 4 petrol tank was punctured and the crew thought the engine had caught fire. As one of them said, 'there seemed to be no part of the bomber not hit.' . . .

Fighters Broke Away

"Then when the fight had gone on for twenty minutes the Fortress reached a low patch of cloud and all the enemy fighters broke away. Black smoke was now pouring from the bomber.

"The fighters had scarcely left when the fire controller, though wounded in the hand and leg, tried to reach the other wounded men. To do so he would have had to walk along the gangway which leads from the pilot's cabin to the rear. But the gangway was now covered with a tangled mass of wires and cables, and guide ropes along the side had been shot away.

"The bomb doors were wide open below. This was a result of damage done by the German fighters—and the gangway was a narrow bridge over empty air. The fire controller had to be held back, so anxious was he to get to the wounded men.

Parachute Caught

"The observer then tried to make a crossing, but when partly over he found that a slip was almost certain and went back for his parachute. He tried again but this time his parachute was caught and entangled in the wreckage.

"As soon as he reached the English coast the captain made for the nearest airdrome. He still thought the No. 4 engine might be alight.

"With flaps out of action, tail tabs shot away, bomb doors wide open, tail wheel stuck half up and half down, brakes not working, only one air aileron any good, and a scarcely controllable rudder, the captain had to land on a strange airdrome that was rather too small for the Fortress.

"With his second pilot doing everything he could to help him, he made the landing."

Nazis Gloat Over Two Major Raids On England

Berlin, Sept. 2 (AP)—Authorized German commentators declared tonight, with obvious satisfaction, that for two consecutive nights the Luftwaffe has launched major attacks against Britain after a rather long pause.

Taking note of the British concentration on defense, German military spokesmen declared that "an island is no longer a problem for the German army on the basis of experience in Norway and Crete."

Dienst aus Deutschland, a commentary close to the Foreign Office, said this statement showed that "the problem of military conquest of England itself should be in the foreground."

Hull And Newcastle Raided

Last night Newcastle was raided, and the night before Hull was bombarded with several thousand pounds of explosives and thousands of incendiaries, the commentators said.

This, they declared, indicated resumption of intensified activity on Germany's Western front and was intended as proof that the Luftwaffe was not so occupied with Russia as not to have plenty of planes left for pounding away at England.

DNB said Newcastle was heavily damaged last night and that near-by airports were raided and military objectives elsewhere in England were attacked.

Reviews 2 Years Of War

In a general review of the war with Britain, which completed its second year tonight, the German news agency asserted that "by declaring war on Germany, Britain consciously unchained on September 3, 1939, the thirteenth continental war in British history."

"Two years since have passed," it said, "filled by British defeats and unheard-of German victories. In these two years Great Britain had to give up one military position after the other on the Continent after expeditionary forces in France and Norway in 1940 and in the Balkans in 1941 had been crushed and forced to overhurried flight.

"Neither could British diplomacy in the face of able German counter movements, succeed in unchaining war on two fronts as she had hoped to do. The German high command has, therefore, been able in each decisive moment to collect its forces and crush its opponents.

In Favor Of Nazis

"At the end of the second year, the war on the Continent has been clearly decided in favor of German arms, although the fight against the Soviets is as yet uncompleted."

The agency declared that Britain had tried in vain to "make ever new peoples fight her war" while she concentrates her own forces " exclusively for defense of her own political power, above all the British isle proper."

Newcastle Raided.

Berlin, Sept. 2 (A. P.).—The British east coast port of Newcastle was heavily damaged last night by German aid raiders who also blasted airports near the city and attacked other military objectives elsewhere in England, DNB, the German official news agency, said today.

Berlin Reports Strong Raid by R.A.F. Bombers

Reich Counts 3,853 Killed, 9,445 Injured in Attacks By Air Since War Began

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, Sept. 3 (Wednesday).—British bombers attacked this capital last night with heavy explosives and incendiary bombs in one of the liveliest raids of the war.

Three of the planes identified officially as British were reported shot down.

Northern, central and southwestern areas of Germany also were attacked.

The planes attacking Berlin were acknowledged as "strong units," but an official communique said that only a few bombers managed to penetrate anti-aircraft defenses to reach the capital's heart.

Apartment houses were damaged in the capital and "insignificant damage" resulted elsewhere, it was said.

3,800 Killed, Nazis Admit

London, Sept. 2 (AP)—The German radio in its foreign service tonight alleged that casualties in R. A. F. raids on Germany were 3,853 dead and 9,445 injured from the start of the war until August 29.

(Up to June, acknowledged British civilian casualties in air raids were 41,150 killed.)

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 2—The biggest radio blackout of the war was reported in Germany and German-occupied countries tonight, indicating large-scale British or Russian air raids were in progress.

The BBC said that German stations and German-controlled stations in eastern Europe, including Budapest, Bucharest and Prague, shut down sometime after nightfall. It added that this was the first time so many stations were off the air at the same time.

German stations still were off the air four hours later.

A BBC broadcast heard by CBS said the Bucharest station also went silent and that the German stations till were off the air four hours after closing down.

2 AMERICANS, 8 OTHERS DIE IN FERRY PLANE

Eastbound Transport Cracks Up On Mountainside In England

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 2 — An eastbound transatlantic transport plane previously reported missing has been found wrecked in an isolated mountainous district of the west coast with all ten aboard dead, including an American naval officer and the assistant military attache of the Belgian Embassy in London.

The American officer was Capt. Sherwood Picking, en route to London to become assistant United States naval attache. The Belgian was Count Guy de Baillet-Latour, who had been in Washington on an official mission.

Announcement of the discovery of the plane's wreckage was made by the Air Ministry tonight.

A second American lost was Charles Alvan Spence, of Little Neck, N. Y., flight engineer of the plane.

Others Aboard

The others aboard were:

DR. MARK BENJAMIN, of Wembley, England, of the central scientific office in Washington.

DR. FOSTER B. MOWAT, of Bristol, attached to the British Library of Information.

E. TAYLOR, of Farnborough, Hampshire, England, principal technical officer of the British Air Ministry.

COL. L. H. WRANGHAM, of the Imperial Army.

CAPT. KENNETH GARDEN, of Sydney, Australia.

FIRST OFFICER GEOFFREY L. PANES, of Tonbridge, Kent, England.

RADIO OFFICER SAMUEL WALTER SYDENHAM, of Edmonton, Alberta.

Count Guy de Baillet-Latour had been in Washington on a mission for the Ministry of Colonies of the emigre Belgian Government. He formerly was director of a mining company in the Belgian Congo and was president of the Belgian Football Federation in England. His wife is the daughter of James Clement Dunn, political adviser to United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

Father Not Aboard

It first was announced that his father, Count Henri, president of the International Olympic Congress, was aboard the plane. The Belgian Embassy, however, said it was Count Guy, and that Count Henri was still in German-held Belgium.

Captain Picking, a native of Baltimore and a resident of Portland, Maine, was commander of the submarine O-10 during the World War, winning the Navy Cross for heroic action. He also was awarded the Victory Medal with submarine clasp.

DR. MOWAT, an eminent British historian, was professor of history at the University of Bristol since 1928 and had been on a lecture tour in the United States since November.

Appeared At Universities

His tour, under auspices of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, included appearances at the universities of Arkanas, California, Indiana, Michigan, South Carolina, Wisconsin and West Virginia and at Rollins and Beloit colleges.

He was professor of history at the University of Wisconsin in 1925-26.

Two westbound ferry planes crashed in England August 19 and 14, killing forty-four persons, including eighteen Americans. An eastbound plane crashed in Newfoundland in February, killing three persons, including Sir Frederick Banting, co-discoverer of insulin.

The British raiders also machine-gunned a passenger train at Pozalo, near Ragusa, Sicily, injuring some passengers, the daily war bulletin declared.

Mass formations of Italian planes, meanwhile, were reported to have bombed the British stronghold of Tobruk, Libya, in repeated attacks, hitting gasoline and ammunitions dumps.

Four British planes were shot down in attacks on Tripoli and Bengasi, the communique added.

Ferry Plane Is Lost With 2 Americans

SEP 3 1941

Six Passengers and Four Crew Members Feared Dead

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—Two Americans and Count Guy de Baillet-Latour, son of the chairman of the International Olympic Committee, Count Henri de Baillet-Latour, were among 10 persons aboard a transport plane of the R. A. F. ferry command given up for lost today by the Air Ministry.

The ferry command at first announced that the Olympic official himself was aboard the plane, but the Belgian Embassy later confirmed that it was the son, who is assistant military attache of the Belgian Embassy in London and son-in-law of James Clement Dunn, political advisor to United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

On Mission in Washington.

Count Guy had been in Washington on a mission as a member of the staff of the minister of colonies of the emigre Belgian government. His father still is in England.

The Americans were Capt. S. Picking of the United States Navy, a passenger, and Flight Engineer Charles Alvan Spence of Little Neck, Long Island, a member of the crew.

The plane left North America (presumably Canada) yesterday for England. In announcing that the craft was missing today the Air Ministry said the next of kin of those aboard had been informed.

One of the passengers on the plane was Dr. Mark Benjamin of Wembley, England, of the Central Scientific Office in Washington.

Others on Plane.

Others aboard were:

Passengers:

Prof. R. Mowat, Bristol, British Library of Information.

E. Taylor, Farnborough, Hampshire, England, principal technical officer, British Air Ministry.

Col. L. H. Wrangham, Imperial Army.

The crew:

Capt. Kenneth Garden, Coogie, Sydney, Australia.

First Officer Geoffrey L. Panes, Tonbridge, Kent, England.

Radio Officer Samuel Walter Sydenham, Edmonton, Alberta.

Prof. Mowat had been in the United States as a visiting professor at several colleges under a Carnegie Institute plan, and had addressed the Canadian Institute on Public Affairs at Geneva Park, Lake Couchiching, Ontario, just before leaving for England.

Two Previous Fatal Crashes.

The ferry command, whose airmen fly new American-made bombing planes to Britain and bring flyers to the American side of the ocean for more, suffered two serious crashes recently which took a toll of 44 lives, including those of 18 Americans.

On August 10 a plane taking off from England for North America, returning pilots for new assignments, crashed and killed 22, including 7 Americans. Four days later in an almost identical accident a second returning plane crashed and burned, killing another 22, including 11 Americans.

Planes flying to England, such as the one lost today, frequently carry important British and American passengers, including Army and Navy officers, diplomats and distinguished visitors to England.

Capt. Sherwood Picking, who had been ordered to London as assistant naval attache, had been on duty in the office of the chief of naval operations, in Washington, since May 13, 1941. A resident of Falmouth Foreside, Portland, Me., Capt. Picking was born at Baltimore in 1890.

He is the son of Rear Admiral Henry Forry Picking. After being graduated from the Naval Academy in 1911, he served on the U. S. S. North Dakota until 1913. He commanded several submarines in the Asiatic fleet until 1917.

Awarded Navy Cross.

He was awarded the Navy Cross with a citation during the World War when he served as commander of the submarine O-10. In 1922 he returned to Washington, where he was placed in command of the Aeronautical Test Laboratory. The following year he was on duty at the Portsmouth (N. H.) Navy Yard.

After two years in the Bureau of Ordnance here he was given command of a destroyer in 1929, and in 1931 became naval inspector of machinery at the Groton (Conn.) Electric Boat Co. He was commander of Submarine Squadron 5 in the Asiatic fleet from 1934 to 1936, and until 1939 was on duty at Harvard University in connection with the naval R. O. T. C. unit there.

From 1939 until early this year he was commander of the submarine base at Coco Solo, in the Panama Canal Zone.

His other decorations include the Submarine Clasp for his World War duty.

Married Heroine 1936.

Count de Baillet-Latour was married at St. Matthew's Church here on April 30, 1936, to Marianna Armour Dunn, daughter of the State Department official. Immediately after the wedding, the young couple went to Brussels where they lived for some time with the Count's father, an international banker.

Count Guy was a graduate of Eton College in England and of the University of Louvain in Belgium. He was a reserve officer in the Belgian Army.

Most of his visits here were purely social, it was said at the Embassy today. He was in Washington in the middle part of August on an official mission for the emigre Belgian government in London and presumably was returning to England on the R. A. F. plane.

Countess de Baillet-Latour and their two children are residing with her father.

No D. C. Connection Found.

Although Dr. Mark Benjamin was said to be connected with the Central Scientific Office in Washington, no office by that name could be located immediately.

Prof. Mowat, one of the most distinguished English historians, was professor of history at the University of Wisconsin from 1925 to 1926.

"The Royal Air Force Ferry Command regret to announce that the trans-Atlantic aircraft reported missing is now known to have crashed into a hillside in the United Kingdom. There are no survivors."

De Valera Accuses Paper Of Fifth-Column Tactics

Charges 'Irish Independent' Seeks to Undermine Faith

DUBLIN, Sept. 2 (AP).—Prime Minister Eamon de Valera's newspaper, "The Irish Press," accused "The Irish Independent," Dublin's largest newspaper, today, of fifth-column tactics.

"The Press," organ of the government party, Fianna Fail, assailed as sinister the following passage from an editorial in "The Independent": "Anybody in touch with public feeling in this country must be disturbed by the cynicism, not unmixed with despair, which is so common at the moment. There is a danger that, having lost faith in those charged with management of the country's affairs, the people may begin to lose faith in themselves."

"The Press" said of this: "In any country in the world it would be regarded as the most contemptible of all unpatriotic acts to undermine the authority of those who are endeavoring to bring this country safely through the most dangerous emergency in its history, but 'The Irish Independent' is not only attempting this but also trying to shake people's faith in themselves. Its ambition seems to be to become the organ of a native fifth column."

Doubt Cast On Return Of Lord Halifax To U. S.

London Reports Published He And Hoare Are Considered As Viceroy Of India

London, Sept. 2 (AP)—There was published speculation today that Viscount Halifax might not return to the United States as Ambassador. It was said in these accounts that both he and Sir Samuel Hoare were being considered for the post of Viceroy of India.

Informed persons, however, deprecated these reports, along with one that Capt. Oliver Lyttleton, now special representative of the War Cabinet in the Middle East, might replace the Viscount in Washington.

Lord Halifax himself said upon his arrival from the United States two weeks ago that he expected to return shortly.

Vichy Coup In Tahiti Fails

Sydney, Australia, Sept. 2 (AP)—News reaching here said Vichy sympathizers in the Tahiti Government failed recently in an attempt to seize control from the De Gaulle Free French, who assumed the rule of that South Pacific island last spring.

The reports said the Free French Governor General Richard Brunot arrested a number of citizens, who probably will be deported, and freed De Gaullists who had been imprisoned by a local governor. The majority of the population supports the Free French movement, which is in control in all the French Pacific islands.

FASHION CAPITAL REBELS

PARIS, Sept. 2 (AP)—This hard-hit but persistent fashion capital has put up grimly with less food and drink and ersatz apparel such as pumps made from old Panama hats, but the howls were loud and long over a plan to turn out "assembly line clothes." Authorities today hastily dropped the matter.

Laval and Deat Better; Colette Faces Hearing

Former Vice-Premier Sits Up, Takes Food for First Time

VICHY, Sept. 2 (AP).—Pierre Laval's physicians issued a bulletin this morning saying the former Vice-Premier, who was gravely wounded by an assassin's bullet at Versailles last Wednesday, was showing "progressive improvement."

The condition of Marcel Deat, Laval's newspaper friend, apparently was so much improved that his physicians did not bother to issue a bulletin today. Laval was reported able to sit up in bed for a time and take food for the first time since the shooting.

Paul Colette, their young assailant, was expected to appear before an examining magistrate some time today, with a defense attorney appointed against his will but in accordance with the law. He was visited in St. Pierre Prison yesterday by his parents, who came from Caen to see him.

France Wants Girls Socially Gracious and Good Cooks, Too

SEP 3—1941

Vichy, Unoccupied France, Sept. 2—(AP)—Madeleine is to be educated for a decorous life in the drawing room, a useful one in the kitchen and she will get some outdoor exercise to make her a healthy mother, under the Vichy Government's reorganized educational system for French girls and boys.

Girls will be taught more music, drawing, dressmaking and domestic science at school, and their brothers will study more mathematics and physics and get more manual training.

Five hours of physical training each week will be required of boys; four of girls.

The classical side of education also will be stressed with six years of compulsory Latin.

Since the French revolution the school system of France has been a bone of contention between Left and Right.

New War Bond Offering Announced in Italy

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Sept. 2.—Italian banks announced today the imminence of a new government bond issue, the second within eight months, to help finance the war.

Circulars urged customers to buy bonds as a patriotic duty. Nine-year 5 per cent treasury bonds are expected to be offered September 15 at 97.50 lira per 100 lira, as were similar bonds issued last February.

Subscriptions to the February issue were last reported in March at 18,016,000,000 lira, or 918,000,000 at the present nominal exchange rate.

Finance Minister Thaon di Revel estimated in April that Italy's budget deficit this year would amount to 65,000,000,000 lira, about $3,422,000,000.

Berlin Refuses to Believe Tobacco Famine Is Over

Assured Supply Is Plentiful, Smokers Still Queue Up

BERLIN, Sept. 2 (AP).—The retail tobacco trade announced today that the troubles of Berlin smokers are over and that there need be no more standing in line before tobacco shops. In fact, signs in the shops advised customers it was forbidden to stand in queues. They did not seem to impress the populace, however.

Some tobacconists also displayed signs reading: "No Jews admitted." The ban against Jews is usually invoked when a commodity is scarce.

But the retail association insisted there is no tobacco shortage, and inserted advertisments making four contentions: Tobacco supplies are more favorable than in peace-time because practically all Balkan production now is available to Germany; there have been more tobacco imports daily since termination of the Balkan campaign released transportation facilities for such shipments; German cigarette production is a third higher than in peace-time, and all cigarette stores are adhering rigidly to prescribed hours of sale.

"Don't buy more than you need daily," the association cautioned. "You'll save time and temper. There will be no difficulties if the smoker disciplines himself. There is enough for everybody."

Just how far self-discipline is supposed to go was unspecified, but there still are lines before some tobacco shops.

Thirty-two of the thirty-four other Vichy officers held by the British also will be released, the British said. All but two of the Britons held by the French reached Beirut the last week end.

The two Britons still in French hands were said to have been left in France because they were ill. When they are set free, the British said, the two remaining French officers will be released.

SWITZERLAND IS TRAPPED IN ECONOMIC NET

Both Axis and Allied Nations Exert Controls Over Neutral Nation

BERN (Correspondence of The Associated Press)—Switzerland's predicament today shows what can happen to a small, neutral country caught in the crossfire of economic warfare between Britain and Germany.

Invasion Unnecessary

It demonstrates how economic jurisdiction over a nation can be accomplished without military invasion or political subjugation.

It illustrates the methods by which free-trade countries could be brought into collaboration with a totalitarian economic system organized and directed by a single world power or group of powers.

This is not to say that Switzerland has been conquered economically. Switzerland still is free, neutral and democratic. Yet—

1. Switzerland cannot export so much as one microscopic watch screw today without the permission of the German and Italian governments and, in some cases, of the British government. German control authorities actually have been installed at two stations on Swiss territory itself.

2. Although the country lives by imports, it cannot bring in so much as one pound of coffee without the approval of either the British or Axis authorities, or both.

Must Sell to Nazis

3. Within certain limits, it must sell to Germany anything—notably manufactured goods—which the Germans choose to take from the country. And—

4. It must not only supply Germany but must advance credit out of its own pocket to producers selling to Germany whenever German payments lag more than three months.

The four major restraints on Swiss economy were imposed with the utmost legality and correctness. All are sanctioned by the international rules of warfare or result from negotiations.

The latest additions to the trade controls were made in a treaty concluded in July with the German government, an agreement extending from July 19 to the end of 1942.

In return for considerable concessions, Switzerland scored two important and several lesser points. Restrictions on its export trade were relaxed somewhat and it obtained increased quotas of three vital raw materials—coal, iron and oil.

COSTA RICA WON'T CLOSE CONSULATES

Denies German Authority Over Occupied Lands.

San Jose, Costa Rica, Sept. 2 (A. P.).—Costa Rica, the little Central American republic of 600,000 population, sat tight today awaiting developments on her refusal to withdraw her consulates from German-occupied territory.

Foreign Minister Alberto Echandi asked Germany in a note yesterday to reconsider her request to have the consulates withdrawn, because such action "would be admitting the right of conquest to which Costa Rica and other nations of the American continent are opposed." Costa Rica has consulates in France, Belgium, Holland, Luxemburg and Norway.

"My Government cannot accede to the request of closing the consulates because their officials are accredited to nations with which we have political and commercial relations, nations which, in spite of being occupied, cannot be said to have lost their international judicial entitles," Dr. Echandi wrote.

"Total or partial invasion of the territory does not in direct effect substitute the defeated Government with a victorious one during the time that the war lasts,' the note said.

Brazil Will Feature U. S. Army Equipment On Independence Day

Rio De Janeiro, Sept. 2 ((AP))—New mechanized military equipment obtained by Brazil from the United States will have its first public showing in an Independence Day parade here Sunday.

There will be light tanks, armored cars and trucks which arrived recently in the first shipment of $100,000,000 worth of war supplies on order.

Under an agreement with Washington delivery of this order is scheduled to be completed within three years. Brazil has six years to pay, with part payment in strategic materials.

The United States agreed on May 14 to take over all Brazil's production of 11 strategic materials for the next two years, except for those absorbed in private industry, and Brazil undertook to permit exportation of these materials only to the United States.

Ecuadoreans Take Over Nazi Airline's Facilities

By the Associated Press.

GUAYAQUIL, Ecuador, Sept. 2.—An army detachment took custody today of the Guayaquil and Quito hangars and facilities of Aerea Sedta, subsidiary of Lufthansa, the German aviation concern.

Newspapers carried announcements by Aerea Sedta that on next Friday all activities of the line would be discontinued and that the last flight to Loja and Cuenca would be tomorrow, a plane leaving those cities for Quito with a call at Guayaquil.

The suspension followed similar action by Bolivia and Peru against German air lines. Pan American more than a week ago announced extension of its lines in Ecuador.

Mexico Will Resume Relations With England

Mexico City, Sept. 2 (AP)—Diplomatic relations between Mexico and Great Britain, suspended in the 1938 oil expropriation crisis, will be renewed shortly, Foreign Minister Ezequiel Padilla said tonight.

"As a matter of fact, we have had relations with the English since they began their valiant defense of democracy. These have been spiritual relations. All that is lacking now are the steps of protocol. I believe that will be resolved before long," Padilla said.

The powerful Confederation of Mexican Workers and the local Communist party have been agitating for a renewal of relations with Russia, but Padilla made it clear that Mexico now contemplates no such move.

Padilla did not explain whether the impending renewal with England meant that the bitter expropriation controversy had been settled.

"I am speaking only of diplomatic matters," he said.

The Foreign Minister said Mexico had made no decision on the future of Germany's honorary consuls here since the recent order closing the Reich's fifteen consulates.

Vancouver, B. C., Sept. 2.—(AP)—A former Vancouver school teacher serving with the Women's Royal Navy Reserve, Lieut. Florence Williamson Macpherson, was reported presumably lost at sea today in advices from England to her mother here. A two-year veteran of the "Wrens", she was the widow of Lieut. Martin Hugh Macpherson, who was lost in action with the Royal Navy in November, 1939.

Canada Names Censorship Chief

OTTAWA, Sept. 2 (Canadian Press)—Governmental responsibility for direction of all censorship activities has been vested in Joseph T. Thorson, Minister of War Services, it was learned today. JAPAN SPARED BY ROOSEVELT IN LABOR TALK

SEP 3 1941

Capital Wonders Whether Diplomacy Will Solve Far East Issues.

HE SPOKE OF NAZIS ALONE

But President Scorned Plea That He Approach Hitler for a Negotiated Peace.

Washington, Sept. 2 (A. P.).—The fact that President Roosevelt made no mention of Japan and Far Eastern affairs in a militantly phrased Labor Day address stirred conjecture today that diplomacy may yet produce a peaceful solution of problems in the Pacific.

The speech, delivered to the nation by radio from Hyde Park, bristled with strong words aimed at Adolf Hitler and the Nazis, but not once did Mr. Roosevelt speak directly of the Nipponese end of the Axis.

Some analysts of foreign affairs suggested that the President might have refrained deliberately from touching on the situation in the Pacific pending the outcome of diplomatic exchanges between the Japanese and American governments.

They read significance into the fact that he spoke of Hitler and the Nazis alone when he spurned appeasement in yesterday's address.

May Confer With Nomura.

There was a possibility he might confer later in the week with Japan's Ambassador, Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura.

The President received the ambassador last week, along with a message from the Japanese Premier, Prince Fumimaro Konoye. The contents of the note have remained secret, nor has it been disclosed whether Mr. Roosevelt has forwarded a reply.

Secretary Hull indicated that Admiral Nomura would see the President again, perhaps several times.

Mr. Roosevelt had spent the week end at his Hyde Park home, leaving for Washington by special train last night. He arrived in the Capital this morning.

Demanding his attention upon his return to the capital were a preview of a Senate tussle over taxes and methods of spurring on a nation to do "everything in our power" to crush Hitlerism.

House and Senate leaders, including Senator George of Georgia, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, were invited to the White House this morning for a weekly report on the legislative situation.

Wants to Smash Nazis.

It was in yesterday's address that Mr. Roosevelt told the American people that "everything in our power" would be done to smash the Nazis.

He said: "We must do our full part" in conquering "forces of insane violence let loose by Hitler upon this earth." But he left unanswered one momentous question:

Must America enter the war, or will it suffice for her to be the arsenal of nations now combating the might of Axis arms?

The President made it clear, however, that he thought "our American effort is not yet enough."

There was reason, therefore, to believe that he would check up promptly on the program of mobilizing American industry for defense production, on operations of his new super-supply board, and on the progress in correlating British, Russian, Chinese and American needs for war supplies.

Already he has requested a resurvey of American and British requirements through 1943, but aids said that they did not know whether a report on that subject was ready.

Labor Pledges Aid.

Spokesmen of the working men and women of the United States used Labor Day speeches to voice uncompromising defiance of Hitlerism and to pledge unceasing efforts for its destruction.

Because of its pronouncements on international affairs, President Roosevelt's speech commanded major attention.

Mr. Roosevelt categorically ruled out the suggestion—advanced by several of those hostile to administration foreign policy—that he approach Hitler to seek a negotiated peace in Europe's war.

Such a role, he said scornfully, would make him "the modern Benedict Arnold," betraying everything he held dear. "This, of course, I have rejected—I reject it again.

"There has never been a moment in our history when Americans were not ready to stand up as free men and fight for their rights."

SEP 3 1941

The burden of much of Mr. Roosevelt's Labor Day address matched earlier talks made by Sidney Hillman, labor's associate director in the Office of Production Management; by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and by James B. Carey, secretary of the Congress of Industrial Organizations who spoke for Philip Murray, C. I. O.'s ill president.

They all participated in an hour long radio broadcast which spanned the Atlantic to bring in Ernest Bevin, British Minister of Labor, who sent the greetings of English workers and appealed specifically for a greater flow of military supplies from the United States.

Mr. Bevin also urged a united labor front against "this monster who would destroy us." A somewhat similar note was sounded by Mr. Green, who declared that the A. F. of L. still held out "our standing offer to make peace."

Roosevelt-Hull Confer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2 (AP)—President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull reviewed the critical Far Eastern situation today in discussions which may provide the basis for a reply to the recent message to Mr. Roosevelt from Prince Fumimaro Konoye, the Japanese premier.

The Japanese premier's message has not been made public, but it is understood to have requested a sympathetic re-survey of problems faced by both nations in the hope of discovering some formula by which the growing gap between divergent Japanese and American policies may be bridged.

The President is expected to reply to the message in the near future, but the White House has given no hint of the nature of the reply.

At his press conference today, Mr. Roosevelt referred all questions on the Japanese-American situation to Secretary Hull.

The President, Secretary Hull, and Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura, the Japanese ambassador, have conferred once since the receipt of the Konoye message, and more talks are scheduled at dates not yet announced.

Hull said today that he was continuing to talk with the Japanese ambassador on Japanese-American relations.

In answer to press conference questions concerning an unpublicized meeting with Nomura, Hull said he expected that he might from time to time talk informally with the Japanese Ambassador—as with other envoys—at the State Department, his hotel, or even on street corners, concerning questions of interest to both governments.

Hull reiterated that the talks are purely exploratory and that no decisions have been reached.

Questions under discussion have not been disclosed, but the shipment of American oil to Soviet Russia through the Pacific Port of Vladivostok is one which, in Japan, has recently created the most discussion.

In Tokyo: Britain First

[By the Associated Press]

Tokyo, Sept. 2—President Roosevelt's Labor Day speech was interpreted by authoritative circles today as indicating Prime Minister Churchill's success in enlisting United States cooperation, Domei said.

The news agency said these sources commented that the "Atlantic charter" written by the two Government leaders at their recent ocean conference now had become the highest foreign policy of the United States.

The President was considered to have British war needs in mind rather than United States needs when he urged American workers to unconditional self-sacrifice.

Ichii Koshi, spokesman for the information bureau, declined comment on President Roosevelt's speech pending receipt of the official text.

Charges U. S. Aggression

The Japan Times and Advertiser, close to the Foreign Office, took occasion, however, to comment on the President's assertion that the Americans "are not a warlike people."

"There are other means of aggression than the use of armies," the paper said.

It declared the United States had been aggressive in the Orient ever since it acquired the Philippines, by interfering between states in the Far East, by high-pressuring certain powers, by supporting a political party in China to keep the war with Japan going and by applying boycotts to one nation while supplying another with munitions.

"Warlike methods have been applied to prevent the attainment of a peaceful China," the organ asserted.

The big newspaper Nichi Nichi, discussing Mr. Roosevelt's speech, said the President's words "indicate his uneasiness over the national defense industry," which, it said, was apparently very slow.

"Cause For Hopefulness"

"If his silence about Japan means readiness to accept principles laid down by Japan, there is some cause for hopefulness," it said, "but this country cannot be a party to any scheme of world adjustment which retails the old status quo . . . Japan takes a position of watchful waiting to see what this new silence portends."

Chugai Shogyo, another paper, said, "When Roosevelt declared the Hitler Nazi army should be wiped out, we believe he meant to say the Axis group should be wiped out as a whole. We consider the United States went too far in declaring to destroy the Axis without participating in the war but merely by acting as a munitions factory."

A silk expert, Shiro Suzuki, returning from three months in the United States, said American raw silk stocks would last six months.

Roosevelt 'Flirts With Bolshevism,' Germans Declare

U. S. Executive Assumes 'Role of Kerensky,' Berlin Sources Say

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 2. — President Roosevelt's Labor Day speech was described by authorized German sources today as developing "nothing new whatever" as to foreign policy but revealing the American executive, from the domestic viewpoint "in the role of Kerensky."

These sources said Alexander Kerensky, Socialist leader who served as premier of Russia in 1917, tried to use Bolshevism for his imperialistic plans, but had to learn that "Bolshevism goes its own way."

Similarly, they said, "President Roosevelt is now flirting with Bolshevism to use it for his ends."

These sources expressed the opinion there was a discrepancy in the Roosevelt address for, they said, on one hand he emphasized workers' rights in phrases directed to Moscow and, on the other hand, stressed principles such as religious freedom, "which Bolshevism can never acknowledge.

They said he forgot to mention "the most important freedom—The right to work."

In brief but sharp attacks, the controlled German press said workers in the United States were "still fighting for rights which were taken as a matter of course in Europe at the turn of the century."

"For that reason," said the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, "Roosevelt guarded against dealing with these matters too extensively and soon arrived at the favorite old theme of 'bad Nazis.'

"In order that workers won't think about their rights, Roosevelt says they should work harder to enable the British to continue the war."

Personal Hatred of Axis Charged to Roosevelt

ROME, Sept. 2 (AP).—Fascist circles said today that President Roosevelt's promise to do everything possible to crush Nazi forces was inspired by personal hatred for Germany and Italy.

Otherwise they interpreted the speech as recognition that United States aid "was an insufficient guarantee of victory for the democracies."

President Roosevelt "does not hesitate to declare loudly he is motivated by implacable hatred against the Axis powers," the newspaper Popolo di Roma said, "and his action, inspired by his personal sentiment which profoundly honors those against whom it is directed, will be conducted to the end regardless of the different opinion of any Americans."

Convoys Foreshadowed, British Paper Reports

LONDON, Sept. 2 (AP).—The British press prominently displayed today President Roosevelt's Labor Day pledge that the American people would do everything in their power to crush Hitler. Editorials termed the talk the President's most direct challenge to the Nazis.

The Daily Mail's New York correspondent said the speech was being interpreted "as foreshadowing imminent adoption of convoys—escorting American-made war supplies to the battlefronts by American warships."

The Times said in an editorial the speech "should put an end to the tendency which had begun to make itself felt on both sides of the Atlantic to the question of effectiveness of American help in the fight against Hitlerism and the determination by which it is inspired."

Ernest Bevin, British Minister of Labor, appealed yesterday for labor unity in an address broadcast to the United States. He said:

"You know in your hearts that your future depends upon victory over Naziism. It is acknowledged that that victory depends upon overwhelming supplies of all forms of war materials. Surely, working people will not allow any disunity in their ranks to hinder the final victory over this monster who would destroy them."

RAW MATERIAL LACK TO CLOSE SOME PLANTS

SEP 3 1941

New Master-Board Says That Less Essential Industries Will Have To Slash Production

Roosevelt Announces Drive To Raise Defense Output By Spending More Money, Employing Extra Shifts

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2—The new Supply Priorities and Allocations Board made it clear today that a shortage of raw materials needed for defense would necessitate the closing of some less essential industries.

The board, appointed as the master-agency of the defense production effort, took up its duties as President Roosevelt announced a new drive to increase production by spending more money and putting extra shifts to work.

General Appropriations Rise

The President's statement was made at a press conference at which he said the increased expenditures would come through a rise in general appropriations, rather than through augmentation of the lease-lend fund. However, a new lease lend program, estimated to total $5,000,000,000, is expected to be ready for Congress within a week.

As the President spoke, the board, under the chairmanship of Vice-President Wallace, was holding its first meeting and drawing up a declaration of general policy to guide its activities. Essentially, it called for:

Employment of All Available

1. Employment of every available man and machine "on direct defense requirements or at work essential to the civilian economy."

2. Curtailment of production of less essential articles so that there may be "an abundance of the essential," and stripping the civilian economy of non-essentials. To this end, a system of controls will be devised with a view of assuring the wisest use of available raw materials.

3. Routing out and putting to use of materials which are being hoarded by certain industries and traders. Speculation in such materials cannot be tolerated, the board said.

All actions taken by the board will be publicly announced and the reasons for them stated. "Thus," the statement said in conclusion, "in an hour when free men must unite to defend their freedom, we shall move forward in that spirit which holds that in a world where mad men are running loose, none but the free are strong, and none but the strong are free."

To implement the declaration against hoarding, Wallace told reporters after the board meeting that a nationwide inventory of all raw material supplies would be undertaken at once.

"Will you require businesses that have been hoarding materials to reveal what they have got?" he was asked. "We'll know what they've got," Wallace replied.

With the knowledge of what materials were being hoarded by particular firms, the vice-president said he thought it would be a simple problem to get those materials into production. But, in case of an extreme shortage, he made it plain that there would be no hesitation about forcing them into use.

Donald M. Nelson, executive director of the board, who participated in the press conference, said the program would also involve a campaign to pick up scrap metals, simplification of models used in production for civilian use, and reduction of their number.

Admits Some Must Close

He was asked about the possibility that some businesses may have to shut down production entirely because of the diversion of materials to more important uses.

"There may be some if there aren't enough materials to go around," he said. "There are bound to be some." He declined to elaborate or to speculate as to what industries might be so affected.

In addition to Wallace and Nelson, the board is composed of Secretary of War Stimson, Secretary of the Navy Knox, William S. Knudsen, director of the Office of Production Management, Sidney Hillman, co-director of OPM, and Leon Henderson, chief of the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply. All attended today, except Stimson, who was represented by Undersecretary Robert P. Patterson; and Knox, who was represented by Undersecretary James V. Forrestal.

To Send Message to Congress

Mr. Roosevelt said he would send a message to Congress soon on appropriations for defense production, but quickly indicated that soon might mean any time between now and January. He would not indicate how much more in defense appropriations was contemplated.

With respect to the $7,000,000,000 appropriated originally for the lease-lend program, he said it had all been allocated and orders had been sent out covering nearly half the amount. Orders will cover the remainder within 60 or 90 days, he added.

The President also said a greater portion of defense funds should be expended in existing plants with less emphasis upon the construction of new factories. Heretofore, he said, the smaller manufacturers had not received a proper share of the work.

The priorities system, he indicated, would have many plants engaged exclusively in production for civilian use, with others working only on military items, for the production of which they were especially suited or could be adapted.

The drive for increased output, he said, involved no increase in working hours. But, he added, additional shifts of men would be put on the job. It was hoped, he continued, to have 60 per cent of available manpower on the first shift, 30 on the second, and 10 on the third. The delivery and availability of materials was involved in working out this problem, however, he said.

Nelson Is Expected To Hold Chief Power In New Defense Setup

Wallace, Co-Members To Pass on Acts of Board Secretary

WASHINGTON—Sept 2

By the Associated Press.

Well-informed congressional sources disclosed today that Donald M. Nelson, former Chicago merchandise executive, would wield the chief power in the revised defense organization established last week by President Roosevelt.

Although Vice President Wallace was designated as chairman of the new Supply Priorities and Allocation Board, these sources said even Mr. Wallace conceded that Mr. Nelson was the man who would do the work.

Public confirmation of this was expected later today when Mr. Wallace and Mr. Nelson, who is the new board's executive secretary, hold their first press conference as officials of the new agency.

Mr. Nelson, a tall, heavy-set businessman of 52, has been directing purchases for the Office of Production Management. He was borrowed for the multi-million dollar defense program because of his experience as one of the world's largest merchandise buyers while serving as vice president of Sears, Roebuck & Co.

Friends of Vice President Wallace said his position in the new defense setup would be similar to that of chairman of the board of a large corporation. Mr. Nelson will operate the program, and the Vice President and other members of the seven-man group will pass on Mr. Nelson's actions.

Priorities Policy Outlined

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2 (AP).—Following is the text of a statement issued today by the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board after its first meeting:

The President established the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board to speed all-out defense. The board realizes the magnitude of its task. It recognizes as well that success requires a vigorous, united effort on its part together with unstinted co-operation from the public in accepting certain responsibilities necessary in the defense of our democratic institutions.

To hasten direct action along lines where action is needed, the board today charted a general policy designed to broaden and accelerate the defense program and to make it more immediately effective.

Specific actions will be announced promptly and full explanation given that there may be no doubt or confusion in the public mind concerning the board's direction and destination.

Our general policy is simple. Production shall be stimulated and organized to the limit of the nation's resources. Every available man and machine must be employed either on direct defense requirements or at work essential to the civilian economy. Along this road lies protection of our freedom and of the basic economy necessary to maintenance of that freedom.

We must forego the less essential that we may have an abundance of the more essential. By less essential industry is meant those industrial activities involving use of materials and production facilities which sap supplies and machinery resources necessary to a realistic all-out defense program. In some cases this may involve only a part of an industry; in other cases it may involve several parts. Wherever possible to convert the less-essential to military or essential civilian production this will be done. Every means will be employed to expedite this process with a minimum loss of time for men and machines. But the less-essential must go. This means cutting off the fat and hardening the muscles.

The board holds that defense comes first and while recognizing that the civilian economy must be stripped of less essentials, it must be kept in good running order and in more than stand-by condition.

To achieve this purpose the board will devise promptly appropriate controls to assure equitable distribution of materials under a constructive system of priorities, the basic purpose of which is to assure the wisest use of all our resources for the task at hand.

Those materials, which may be hoarded in the cellars and attics of certain industries and traders, will be routed out and put to use where most needed in military and essential civilian production. In its allocations, the board will consider existing supplies which have been bought in anticipation of future requirements. This means, of course, that the board will assemble complete, detailed and accurate statements of requirements as to military and essential civilian needs to guide its application and enforcement of priorities. It should be emphasized that the demands of military and essential civilian requirements of this hemisphere must be equally recognized and adequately provided for in allocating materials.

Scare buying against imaginary requirements of the future will be discouraged effectively. Real requirements are too immediate and urgent for us to tolerate the slightest diversion by speculators or others whose actions would destroy our policy of share and share alike the burdens and responsibilities which confront us.

The board hopes to be able to announce by next week the means adopted to carry out this purpose. There also will be announced shortly a plan for conservation on a national scope of all scarce materials needed in defense production.

The goal our country must reach to perpetuate our freedom and to assure victory for all who share our democratic philosophy means sacrifice. But we must make certain that sacrifices are not imposed because we are wasteful; because we fail to look ahead, or because proper use is not made of all available materials, men and machines. For this reason it is the board's intention to state publicly the basis of each important step taken, in so far as that may be done without affecting our military security adversely.

The board believes that if the public knows why it must forgo certain comforts; why it must give rather than get; why, in substance, the fat must go and the muscles be strengthened, the cooperation vital to success will be had in full measure.

Thus, in an hour when free men must unite to defend their freedom, we shall move forward in that spirit which holds that none but the free is strong and none but the strong can be free.

15 PER CENT CUT IN "GAS" USE FOR PLEASURE ASKED

SEP 3 1941

Overall Reduction of 10 Per Cent in Deliveries to Be Continued

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2 (AP)—Automobile operators in the eastern states who use their cars for pleasure were called upon by the Government today to get along in September with 15 per cent less gasoline than they burned in July.

Announces 10 Per Cent Cut

Announcing the gas curtailment program for September, the Office of Petroleum Co-ordinator said that the 10 per cent overall reduction in gasoline deliveries to retail outlets, enforced during the last two weeks in August, would be continued.

Ralph K. Davies, acting co-ordinator, said, however, that commercial, agricultural and emergency vehicles, would get their full needs so that spreading of the remaining supplies would amount to a 15 per cent curtailment for private motorists.

"We must protect our reserve supply of gasoline," Davies said, "so that we will have a supply on hand when winter approaches and fuel oil shipments to the east coast must be decreased."

Urges Lower Rail Rates

Meanwhile, Davies endorsed a move to obtain reduced rail rates on oil movements from producing areas to the East. He said in a statement that the railroads, in conjunction with the oil industry transportation committee for the Atlantic seaboard, "can render a real service by obtaining rate adjustments and faster car handling which will make the use of tank cars economical."

"Achievement of lower tank car rates," he said, "should alleviate to a considerable extent increased cost to consumers because of using the higher cost tank car transportation during the emergency, a subject in which the Office of Price Administration is vitally interested, as well as this office."

One source close to the defense petroleum office said tank car rates from the Southwest to the East amounted to almost six cents a gallon, against one-half cent a gallon for ship tanker movements.

It was understood an emergency rate of two or three cents a gallon might be sought.

Smaller Than Expected

The September curtailment was smaller than the public had anticipated, since petroleum office sources had indicated the cut for nonessential automobile operations might be as high as one-third.

Davies estimated the overall cut of 10 per cent would provide during this month an amount of gasoline equal to the east coast consumption last September, but he said the demand in the area from Maine to Florida had increased approximately 11 per cent since last year.

Stocks of gasoline on the Atlantic seaboard dropped 50,568,000 gallons during the two weeks ending Aug. 23, which included one week of the rationing program, the acting co-ordinator said. He added that the stocks now were 50,862,000 gallons below last year's level of the corresponding date.

Suppliers have been directed to advise each filling station immediately of its total quota for September.

Wants Sales Spaced

Deliveries to service stations are to be spread proportionately throughout the month, and the civilian allocation program requires that stations price their sales so that each will have gasoline to sell every day.

Meanwhile, Chairman Maloney (D.-Conn.) of the special Senate committee investigating petroleum supplies asked J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, to testify before that group at a resumption of public hearings tomorrow. Maloney and Pelley have suggested that use of railroad tank cars would greatly relieve the shortage of gasoline and fuel oil on the eastern seaboard.

Freight Rates on Oil Are Reduced

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 2 (AP)—Amid increased chafing by dealers over gasoline rationing along the eastern seaboard, it was disclosed today that eastern and western railroads have joined in a voluntary 50 per cent crude oil freight rate reduction to speed up shipments from the Texas and Oklahoma oil fields.

Would Relieve Shortage

Samuel B. Eckert, vice-president in charge of sales of the Sun Oil Co., said the reduction will be helpful in relieving the shortage although he estimated that not more than 5 per cent of the total oil and gas consumed in the East could be transported by this means.

Commenting on the reduction, the Pennsylvania Railroad announced that it already is delivering to eastern refineries about 850,000 gallons of crude oil daily—enough to yield 420,000 gallons of gasoline and equal quantity of other petroleum products. This is sufficient to meet the daily requirements of about 280,000 motorists.

The shipments are being made from pipe line terminals in Ohio and Illinois, the railroad said, adding that efforts are being made to increase the movements of crude oil from other midwestern points and more distant southwestern shipping centers.

The freight rate is now five cents per gallon. Even after the reduction becomes effective, the cost of shipping by tank car will be one and one-half cents a gallon above the steamship tanker rate of one cent. Eckert said the rail rate reduction would have little effect on retail prices because they are based on the tanker price.

Quota 15 Per Cent Lower

Meantime, gasoline dealers from 17 eastern seaboard states began arriving here for a mass meeting tomorrow night at which they are expected to take steps to meet the shortage and quota allowances set up by the Government. Beginning yesterday stations from Maine to Florida were put on a quota 15 per cent under July sales.

Declaring this deprives dealers of 25 per cent of their business, Benjamin L. Jacoby, head of the Associated Gasoline Retailers of Philadelphia and vicinity, said many of the 100,000 stations along the Atlantic seaboard may close down temporarily as a protest action.

"If the Government doesn't do something soon," he said, "there's no question but that the dealers will be forced to close in a body for a solid week to emphasize the situation both to the Government and the public. Dealers don't want to close. But they will do it if they must."

Among proposals under consideration by the dealers are gasless Sundays throughout the area and another for a government subsidy for the industry to make up for losses resulting from conservation regulations.

Auto Makers Expect Slash of Close to 65 Per Cent

Big Production Cut Foreseen by End Of 1942 Season

SEP 3 1941

By DAVID J. WILKIE.
Associated Press Automotive Editor.

DETROIT, Sept. 2.—While an initial curtailment of only 26½ per cent in passenger car production has been ordered by the governmental defense agencies, many of the automobile makers believe that when the 1942-model period is ended the aggregate output may represent a slash of close to 65 per cent.

None of the car producers expects a complete cessation of passenger vehicle assemblies during the next 12 or 15 months; they do know, however, that serious consideration has been given to the practicability of more than a 50 per cent reduction, announced a few weeks ago as the objective of the Office of Production Management and that of Price Control and Civilian Supply.

Dealer Troubles Feared.

The car makers probably are not as much perturbed about the curtailment of passenger car production itself as they are over the indicated effect of the limitation upon their dealer organizations. Most trade authorities are agreed that a fairly high rate of dealer mortality is in prospect for the 1942-model period if there is to be a progressively deeper cut in the volume of passenger vehicle output.

They have the hope right now that an increased volume of truck output may make up for some of the loss in passenger car assemblies. According to the O. P. M. and the O. P. A. C. S., the aggregate of truck production for the 1942-model year, figured on the basis of actual requirements, will be 1,189,000 units. This total includes a considerable number of vehicles rated at less than 1½-ton carrying capacity, production of which the governmental defense agencies are understood to be planning to restrict.

Against the proposal to put a ceiling on light commercial vehicle output the car makers probably will suggest that the smaller trucks are needed in large numbers by farmers currently being urged to increase production of certain foodstuffs.

If the total truck output reaches the indicated requirement figure for the new-model period and the production of passenger vehicles does not fall below 50 per cent of the 1941-model volume there would be a combined output of approximately 3,334,000 cars and trucks in the 1942-model period.

Car Shortage Faced.

The passenger-car production included in that total still will be considerably less than the indicated replacement requirements. Adding to this the transportation requirements for an increased number of defense workers heretofore without automobiles there probably will be a shortage of about 800,000 passenger vehicles at the end of the 1942-model year.

It is because of this outlook that the car manufacturers are urging their retailers to promote car-service programs. Some of the plans sponsored by the manufacturers call for periodical inspection regardless of the age of the vehicle. The objective, as expressed by representatives of the O. P. M., is to keep rolling approximately 32,000,000 vehicles now used in the United States.

BYRD SAYS PLANE OUTPUT IS LAGGING

Declares U. S. Speedup Would Shorten War.

SEP 3 1941

Washington, Sept. 2 (A. P.).—America, in the opinion of Senator Byrd, Democrat, of Virginia, has the choice of a shorter European war "providing we speed up our defense production."

Speaking on the Washington Star radio forum over NBC last night, the Virginian called for an end of strikes in defense industries, appointment of an executive head for the program, and abandonment of the business-as-usual doctrine.

At the same time he repeated his charges that the production of military material was behind schedule.

"The job of spending billions for defense is an executive one," Senator Byrd said. "One man, the ablest citizen in America, can do a better job in executive management than a seven-man board superimposed on other boards."

He made it clear that he referred to the recently created supply priorities and allocations board, of which Donald M. Nelson is executive director.

Senator Byrd called the production of military planes the No. 1 failure of the defense program.

"Little more than 700 combat planes were produced in July, sixteen less than in the previous month of June, and the total production was 200 less than the schedule," he declared.

The Senator added that only fourteen heavy four-motored bombers were produced in July, compared with twelve in June and twenty-one in April. That type of plane, he asserted, is the one most needed by Great Britain.

Few Complaints Heard On Instalment Curbs

Restriction On Credit Buying And Small Loans Fail, So Far, To Bring Protests

Washington, Sept. 2 (AP)—Americans began buying and borrowing under restricted installment rules today with what one official termed surprisingly few complaints.

Several officials agreed, however, that it was probably too early to gauge accurately the public's reaction to the regulations issued by the Federal Reserve Board and which became effective today.

In general, the regulations require minimum down payments and limit the period for payment of the balance to eighteen months. The rules apply also to loans under $1,000, with certain exceptions for farmers, students and emergency cases.

The regulations are designed to curtail consumer demands, thus keeping down prices and relieving the pressure for materials needed in the defense program.

What the board did was to fix minimum down payments and maximum time to pay the balance on a selected list of consumer articles. Improvement loans on real estate and cash loans under $1,000 also are limited.

18-Month Time Limit.

On each of the specified consumer articles and the small cash loans, the time limit on repayment will be 18 months.

The down payment minimums follow:

Thirty-three and one-third per cent on automobiles, airplanes, power boats, boat motors, motorcycles; 20 per cent on mechanical refrigerators, washing machines, ironers, suction cleaners, cooking stoves and ranges, heating stoves and space heaters, radios and musical instruments made principally of metal, room air-coolers, sewing machines and electric dishwashers; 15 per cent on furnaces (including oil burners, gas conversion burners and stokers to be installed in furnaces), water heaters, water pumps, plumbing and sanitary fixtures, home air-conditioning systems, attic ventilating fans; 10 per cent on furniture, pianos and electric organs.

Numerous exemptions were made for farmers, students and persons needing emergency loans for medical, dental, hospital or funeral expenses.

C. I. O. Magazine Protests.

Meanwhile a publication of the Congress of Industrial Organizations asserted that restrictions on instalment buying would "have the effect of rationing the products affected in favor of the people who have the most money."

The Economic Outlook, C. I. O. magazine, said these regulations "will make it more difficult for working people to get even their prewar percentage of automobiles, refrigerators, radios and the like."

At the same time the publication declared there had been a "conspicuous failure of the Federal Government to do an effective job of defense housing" and expressed opposition to the form of the pending tax bill as approved by the Senate Finance Committee.

Opposing proposals for lowered income tax exemptions and imposition of new excise taxes, the Outlook added:

"It seems perfectly clear that until every possible penny of tax income is taken from the upper brackets of income and from corporation profits, no penny should be withdrawn from families where it will mean less to eat or wear."

The Outlook estimated total unemployment at 6,305,000 for June, a reduction of 1.2 per cent from the May estimate.

ARMORED FORCE AWAITS TANKS

Current Production Going to the British.

With Army in Louisiana, Sept. 2 (A. P.).—The United States armored force is waiting for faster, better armored and better armed medium tanks, authoritative sources disclosed today, while all new twenty-eight-ton land destroyers are going to the British.

The first of the new tanks, believed to be among the most formidable in the world because of their new armor plate and armament of 75mm guns and other weapons, began coming off the production lines about two months ago but the army has not yet put any into field service, high officers said.

Two Reasons Given.

Both the First Armored Division from Fort Knox, Ky., and the Second from Fort Benning, Ga., will go into unprecedented field problems, with the Second Field Army pitted against the Third in Louisiana this month, without any of the new type tanks.

There are two reasons:

1. Changes in design were necessary because tests showed that the initial tanks were underpowered.

2. With changes necessary to make this and other mechanical readjustments for performance to meet American armored division demands, armament and armor changes were made.

Although production has slowed, army sources said, virtually all produced have been sent abroad under lease-lend provisions because even original specifications produced better tanks than any the British Empire forces have, and the American Army can wait.

The principal changes in the medium tank—heaviest that will be produced for a long time—is switching the 75 mm. gun from a fixed position on the side to a power turret, doing away with rivets that shells might drive through a direct hit which the armor plate itself might withstand and adding more power to almost double the speed. In addition to the 75 mm. gun, the tank has a 27 mm. rifle and many machine guns.

The First Armored Corps, made up of the First and Second Divisions, will operate as a field unit for the first time in the Louisiana maneuvers. In all it has more than 700 tanks, light ones and a few old-type mediums, thousands of armored cars and other vehicles and about 25,000 men. It is the nation's first full armored force ready for the field. Two other divisions are in training.

SPEEDY AID IN WAR URGED BY CIO UNION

Electrical Workers Vote, 382-5, For All Possible Help To Resist Hitler

No Mention Of Lewis' Isolationist Utterances In Action On Resolution

SEP 3 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Camden, N. J., Sept. 2—Without mention of recent isolationist utterances by John L. Lewis, a major unit of the Congress of Industrial Organizations today formally resolved that the United States must give quick help to all nations resisting Hitlerism.

By a vote of 382 to 5, the convention of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America passed a resolution declaring that:

"This union approves the policy of the Government in declaring that the defense of this country requires that all possible aid be given to Great Britain, the Soviet Union, China and other nations resisting Hitlerism, and urges the Government to put this policy into effect with all possible speed and energy."

New York Opposition

The convention here is the first of a major CIO branch since Lewis, former CIO chieftain, joined in an isolationist statement with fourteen prominent Republicans.

Most of the opposition to the resolution came from New York repersentatives among the nearly 500 delegates attending the convention. The union claims to represent 316,000 skilled defense workers in 583 plants of the United States and Canada.

The resolution was introduced by Albert J. Fitzgerald, of Lynn, Mass., prominently mentioned as a candidate for the presidency of the union in elections scheduled for tomorrow.

Fight Shaping Up

A three-way fight for the presidency was shaping up, with Fitzgerald, President James B. Carey, of Gloucester, N. J., and James McLeish, of New York city, as the likely contenders.

McLeish is backed by a group disgruntled over Carey's handling of a strike at the Phelps-Dodge copper manufacturing plant at Newark, N. J., last spring.

In a telegram to the convention Phillip Murray, Lewis' successor as CIO head, said:

"I know your convention will draft a program which will do credit to your organization."

FISHING-BOAT CAPTAIN SEIZED ON SPY CHARGE

SEP 3 1941

F. B. I. Takes Miami Man Accused Of Conspiracy By U. S. Attorney

Four Members Of Alleged Ring Nabbed 2 Months Ago Plead Guilty

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 2—A complaint alleging a conspiracy to use the mails for espionage activities was filed today against Karl Herman Schoetter, captain of a Miami (Fla.) fishing boat, by Mathias Correa, United States Attorney.

Schoetter, alias John Charles Post, was accused along with Kurt Frederick Ludwig, a sailor under arrest in Spokane, Wash., and Frederick Edward Sachlosser, 19, and Hans Pagel, 20, both Brooklyn youths.

Arrested At Miami

Schoetter was arrested today at Miami by the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Arraigned before Roger E. Davis, United States Commissioner, he denied the charge and was placed under $25,000 bond. He waived extradition to New York.

In testimony before Davis, Schoetter said he met Ludwig in Miami recently and that Ludwig, fearing arrest at that time, proposed that Schoetter smuggle him out of the country.

The F. B. I. said Schoetter was a 48-year-old native of Zurich, Switzerland, who was naturalized in 1930.

Former Bund Members

Last Saturday Pagel and Sachlosser, former members of the German-American youth movement, which was part of the German-American Bund, were arraigned on a similar complaint and held in default of $25,000 bond each by Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey. Ludwig had been indicted previously on a similar charge.

The four men were charged with conspiring to violate the United States code barring the use of American mails for the transmission of "non-mailable matter," including information to foreign powers concerning the strength of the United States Army.

Correa said the complaint alleged that Ludwig maintained a postoffice box "against the peace and dignity of the United States."

At a hearing today in Spokane Ludwig was bound over to District Court for removal to New York and his bond continued at $50,000.

Lyle D. Keith, District Attorney, said Ludwig would be taken before Federal Judge Lewis Schwellenbach for the removal hearing "within a few days."

Today's hearing was advanced from the previously set September 11 date at Ludwig's consent. The prisoner refused, however, to waive preliminary hearing.

Four Plead Guilty

Four more members of an alleged espionage ring rounded up by the F. B. I. two months ago entered guilty pleas today before Federal Judg Marcus B. Campbell in Brooklyn.

Of the thirty-three persons indicted, fourteen now have entered guilty pleas to one or both of the two counts of the indictment. The nineteen remaining are scheduled to go on trial tomorrow.

Those pleading today were:

Everett Minster Roeder, 47, who was employed by the Sperry Gyroscope Company where army bomb sights are made, guilty to conspiracy to transmit defense information to Germany and innocent to a charge of conspiracy to act as a foreign agent without registering with the State Department.

Admits Conspiracy

Max Albrecht Blank, 38, a German citizen formerly employed by the German library of information, guilty to conspiracy to act as an agent without registering and innocent to the charge of transmitting defense information.

Gustav Wilhelm Kaercher, 35, who worked in a New Jersey power plant, and George Gottlob Schuh, 54, a United States citizen born in Germany who was employed at a German-American Bund camp in New Jersey, guilty to the charge of being unregistered agents of a foreign power.

Fortune Hauled Over Europe In 15 Old Vans

SEP 3 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Jersey City, N. J., Sept. 2—A bizarre tale of fifteen nondescript trucks which wandered through Europe for nearly six weeks carrying $75,000,000 in gold—virtually all of Poland's gold reserve—was told today by Ignacy Matuczewski, former Polish Minister of Finance.

Matuczewski, who arrived on the liner Excambion, said he decided to try to save the gold when the German armies were literally battering the gates of Warsaw in September, 1939.

Delivered To Angers

About seventy-five tons in bullion and coins finally was turned over to the Polish Government-in-exile, then situated at Angers, France, but not before anxious days and nights had passed as the strange caravan followed the refugee trail south.

Matuczewski and Henryk-Floyar-Tagchman, the Minister of Industry and Commerce—who also was aboard the Excambion—loaded the gold into fifteen old trucks and with a group of followers started out of Warsaw with the flood of refugees from the Polish capital. That was September 7, 1939.

Through Many Lands

Avoiding German troops as much as possible and mingling with ordinary refugees Matuczewski and his trucks made their way down through Rumania into Turkey and Syria, thence to France and Spain and finally back into France again, arriving there October 14.

Matuczewski said he did not know what happened to the gold after he turned it over to officials of the government-in-exile.

The Excambion brought only 117 passengers from Lisbon, one of the smallest lists since the line started operations to Portugal in July, 1940.

Mrs. Margaret Dyer and her daughter, Jane, 21 years old, of Los Angeles, returned after a year and a half in Rome, where the daughter studied voice.

"A large group of our Italian friends gathered at our house just before we left Rome," Mrs. Dyer said. "They begged me to take this message to President Roosevelt and the American people: 'Enter the war on the side of England and save Italy'."

Mrs. Dyer said that the Italians feel that they were dragged into the war on the side of Germany, and now wish they were on England's side. Their one hope is that the United States will enter the conflict and save Italy. Domineering German officials and soldiers, she said, have crushed the pride of the Italian people, and Italian soldiers now cross to the opposite side of the street to avoid saluting German officers. While Italian officers, including colonels and even generals, ride around on bicycles, ordinary German soldiers have automobiles for both business and pleasure, according to Mrs. Dyer.

She added that two months ago the German soldiers took down lamp posts in the streets and sent the metal to Germany. At that time, she said, the Vatican issued orders forbidding churches to surrender metal for such use.

every church in the nation will be closed up like that," Dr. Norris declared with a snap of his fingers.

Pastor of the First Baptist Church of Fort Worth and the Temple Baptist Church of Detroit, he said he hopes, through sermons and broadcasts on his return, to "arouse the American people to the Nazi dangers."

Others Aboard Clipper

Also aboard were four aircraft engineers: George F. Lewson, representative of the Pratt-Whitney engine division of the United Aircraft Corp East Hartford, Conn.; Byron Anderson of the Wright Aeronautical Corporation, of Patterson, N. J., and Marvin K. Woods and Clement O'Connor of the Bell Aircraft Corporation, Buffalo, New York.

William H. Stevens, of the English subsidiary of the Monsanto Chemical Company, of St. Louis, Mo., returned to England after a ten-week visit on business for the British Ministry of Air Corps Production.

Pastor Off To England For Anti-Nazi Material

SEP 3 1941

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 2—The Rev. Dr. J. Frank Norris, Baptist minister who alternates twice a month in preaching in Detroit and Fort Worth (Texas) pulpits, left for England today to gather information for fall sermons about the German Government.

One of eleven transatlantic passengers aboard Pan American Airways' Atlantic Clipper, Dr. Norris said that he carried letters of introduction to Prime Minister Winston Churchill from Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Wendell L. Willkie.

Hope To Arouse America

New York, Sept. 2 (AP)—Louis Katz, 67, a former New York clothes cutter, returned today after twenty-seven years in order—he said—to get a good night's sleep.

Katz, who arrived on the Portuguese liner Mouzinho after twenty-seven years in his native Germany, whence he retired to spend his old age, said sleep was something he couldn't get in Berlin because the R. A. F. planes came over too often.

NAZIS HALT BJOERLING

Refuse Swedish Operatic Tenor Transit Through Germany

New York, Sept. 2 (AP)—The American-Swedish news exchange today reported Jussi Bjoerling, Swedish operatic tenor, and his accompanist, Harry Ebert, have been refused transit through Germany.

Therefore, they have been forced to cancel a concert tour covering forty cities in the United States and Cuba to begin September 24 and to last until opening of the Metropolitan Opera, for which Bjoerling was engaged.

HENDERSON UNFIT FOR JOB, DIES SAYS

Texan Asserts Facts To Be Released Today Will Justify Dismissal

SEP 3 1941

Some Of Administrator's Appointees Oppose U. S. System, He Avers

[By the Associated Press]

Orange, Texas, Sept. 2—Representative Martin Dies (Dem., Texas) said today he would release from Washington tomorrow or within a few days facts which would prove Leon Henderson "is unfit to administer the price control efforts of the Government and will justify his dismissal."

"I shall give the record of some of his chief assistants and my statement will be supported by a number of photostatic copies of a number of documents in my possession," stated the chairman of the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities.

Oppose U. S. System, Claim

"Some of his appointees have gone on record in opposition to the American form of government and our system of free enterprise," Dies continued.

"Since all of these appointees, as well as Mr. Henderson, will be called upon to perform the most important function of the Government, affecting every business in America, I feel that it is imperative to give the people the facts about the type of men, their background and political views who will exercise their far-reaching power."

Dies added he would submit "all this documentary proof to the President."

Affects Morale, He Says

"I do not believe that this country can efficiently and economically prepare and carry out our foreign policy until men like Leon Henderson and some of his appointees whom I shall expose are discharged from the Federal Government.

"With such men holding key positions, it is impossible to build up that high degree of morale in the army and civilian population and to achieve that spirit of unity and cooperation which are absolutely essential to national defense."

Scrap And Aluminum Dealers Asked To Confer

Washington, Sept. 2 (AP)—Leon Henderson, Price Administrator, today called dealers in scrap and secondary aluminum to meet here Wednesday and confer on a possible downward revision of the ceiling prices on the scrap.

Henderson said the advisability of lowering the maximum prices was being studied because of the forthcoming reduction of 2 cents a pound in the price of primary aluminum.

The Aluminum Company of America announced recently that primary aluminum ingots would be lowered from 17 to 15 cents a pound on September 30.

MRS. ROOSEVELT GIVES IDEAS ON TRAINING GIRLS

SEP 3 — 1941

Offers Explanation to Clear Up Misunderstanding on Earlier Suggestion

NEW YORK, Sept. 2 (AP)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt today offered a further explanation and defense of her widely-discussed suggestion that it might be of value to conscript girls between the ages of 18 and 24 for a year of training and service.

Writing in the current Liberty magazine, Mrs. Roosevelt said "there seems to be a slight misunderstanding" and declared that she never suggested that all women be conscripted, nor that girls be placed under military discipline in camps as are boys.

Mrs. Roosevelt said she believed the girls of the country might be divided into these three groups:

"The first, or the extremely privileged group which have all the education and training that it desires and may or may not be going to use it either to earn a living or to volunteer in some active form of service.

"The second group, which may have both education and a fairly comfortable home, but which of necessity must prepare for future economic independence and must plan their training with the thought of earning a living in the future.

"The third group of girls, who, through economic difficulties or geographical location, are lacking in educational opportunities and are apt to grow up facing a dearth of jobs or dead-end jobs because they can not fit themselves for any skilled work.

"It is obvious that for this last group a year of training, paid for by the Government on the same basis as the draftees in the Army are paid, would be helpful."

Mrs. Roosevelt said that for the first group, as for the second, there was comparatively little advantage to be obtained from the angle of better training.

"It is however," she adds, "an opportunity to develop a sense of responsibility for democratic citizenship through the willing gift of a year in some useful capacity in the community, which I think is an experience of great value in a democracy.

"We have had it abundantly proved to us that many of us accept the benefits of democracy without feeling very much the weight of responsibility of what is owed to that form of government by every individual citizen.

"For the third group of girls this last consideration is equally important, and for all these groups it would provide a period of self-discipline which they might not obtain in any other way.

"All of these groups would greatly benefit by the opportunity to make wider contacts on a footing of equality and to discover that most of us are made of the same clay and are likeable or not, dependable or not, because of traits of character and not because of background, or privilege, or educational opportunity.

"This experience has been found valuable for boys for many years. Why should it not be equally valuable for girls?"

Methodist Youths Asked To Oppose U. S. In War

Church Organization Wants 2,000,000 To Hold Peace Demonstration On Armistice Day

Baldwin, Kan., Sept. 2 (AP)—The national conference of the Methodist Youth Fellowship adopted a program calling for the uniting of 2,000,000 Methodist youths in a movement to keep the nation out of war and to hold a peace demonstration next Armistice Day.

Repeal of the Selective Service Act, protection of civil liberties for draftees, complete exemption for absolute conscientious objectors, and a campaign against anti-Semitism were among other points approved in a report of the youth projects committee.

J. Kempton Jones, of Salisbury, N. C., was elected first president of the newly formed Youth Fellowship.

ALIEN SHIP SEIZURE POWER IS EXTENDED

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2 (AP)—President Roosevelt, by executive order, today extended the time in which the Maritime Commission may take over foreign vessels in American waters.

In its original form on June 6 the President's executive order provided that the Maritime Commission could acquire foreign ships "now lying idle" in ports of the United States, including the Canal Zone and the Philippines. As amended, the order gives the commission the same authority over ships which might become idle in American waters between June 6 of this year and June 30, 1942.

LAGUARDIA TO KEEP POST

Civilian Defense Director Says He Will Not Quit To Campaign

New York, Sept. 2 (AP)—Mayor F. H. LaGuardia said today he would not resign his post as national director of civilian defense. His remark was prompted by recent reports that he would resign to further his campaign for reelection as Mayor.

"As I said when I took this office (civilian defense), the effort and extra labor comes out of me and not out of the city," the Mayor said. "And, so far, everything is normal and I shall continue to function."

BRITISH WINE STORY

Tobey Asks President About Restaurant Bills.

Washington, Sept. 2 (A. P.).—Senator Tobey, Republican, of New Hampshire, made public today a letter to President Roosevelt asking for details, if any, of charges for whiskies, wines and entertainment under the lease-lend program.

The Senator said that a Washington newspaper had reported that the "British mission has charged over $30,000 worth of meals and rare wines in one Washington restaurant alone to the lease-lend bill (meaning to the American taxpayers) and that the commission has contracted other bills to be charged to the lease-lend bill and to the anticipated new lease-lend appropriation which you are to ask for."

President Roosevelt was asked about the restaurant bill story last week at his Tuesday press conference and he replied by saying that certainly never was charged to lease-lend. He remarked that this instance probably was a very good example of what he said was a campaign organized to spread rumors, distortions, half truths and falsehoods in an effort to sabotage the program of aid to opponents of Hitlerism.

Senator Tobey wrote: "The American people are willing to pay 'on the nose' for legitimate defense expenditures, but it is apparent that they revolt against unnecessary and lavish expenditures, whether such expenditures be for the United States or for the British or for any other country anywhere in the world."

Japan's Talk About War

SEP 3 1941

Desire to Make Terms With U. S. Seen Despite Officials' Fiery Speeches

By DEWITT MACKENZIE.

We ought to hear a bit more from the Tokio government before attaching too much finality to the rather fiery declaration by a spokesman of the Japanese Army that Nippon will if necessary use force to fight her way out of what she terms encirclement by America, Britain, Russia and other nations.

This statement was broadcast by Col. Mabuchi, chief of the army press section of Imperial Headquarters, who asserted that Japan was determined to carry out her Asiatic program even if it meant "a long-term war against Britain and America." Now that is very blunt language and it would be a mistake to underestimate Japan's determination in this crisis.

Still, one suspects that the colonel was blowing his trumpet not so much with the idea that the walls of Jerico would fall as that he might strengthen Japan's hand in the projected negotiations in Washington.

Economic Plight Worst.

Had the colonel and his military superiors been better advised as to the present temper of the American Government toward the Japanese maneuvers in the Orient, probably the fighting speech would have been left undelivered. However, it perhaps will do no harm. Indeed, some observers thought President Roosevelt may have avoided reference to the Far Eastern situation in his Labor Day broadcast in order to give diplomacy a chance to achieve an agreement.

The weakness of the Mabuchi statement, to my mind, is that if the United States, Britain and Russia were trying to encircle Japan, she would have small chance of fighting her way out by force. The encirclement which Japan fears is quite as much economic as military.

You may destroy an enemy warship with a 16-inch gun. But a shell won't demolish the fact that if Japan gets herself involved in a war with the United States, Britain and Russia she will cut herself off from essential supplies and from trade upon which her very life depends.

Few would doubt the bravery of the Japanese in battle, or their ability to absorb punishment. The cold truth is, however, that no matter how great Nippon's determination might be, she couldn't fight her way out of encirclement, because forsooth there's no place to which she could fight her way. The countries whose co-operation she vitally needs right now are, first, America, and after that Britain.

In Serious Straits.

Of course, if Japan could establish military supremacy throughout the Far East she ultimately might repair her economic fortunes and make herself more or less self-sustaining through absorption of such rich territories as the Dutch East Indies and development of China. However, Japan's position now is critical and must be remedied immediately. She hasn't time to carry out such an extensive program because she hasn't the resources.

Delay in repairing her fortunes may spell disaster for the island empire. Already she is in serious straits because of the trade restrictions applied by Washington, and to a less extent by London. Relief from that must come by agreement and not by gunfire.

There is no doubt that Tokio recognizes this fully, and the indications are that the Japanese government wants to make terms with America in the forthcoming negotiations, despite the talk of war. So long as this attitude continues, there is hope of a peaceful adjustment.

Russian

Moscow, Sept. 2 (AP)—The Soviet Bureau of Information said in its mid-day communique today:

During the night of September 1-2 our troops waged battles along the entire front.

In the last three days bombers of the Black Sea fleet air force effected several raids on enemy ports and land troops. One enemy warship was disabled by a direct bomb hit. A naval flier also destroyed eighty-three tanks, more than fifty armored cars and many tank cars.

In the Smolensk direction our troops routed an infantry regiment of the One Hundred and Sixty-first German Division. Eight to ten men remained in each company of the regiment. A company commander, First Lieut. Ludwig Roberg, who was taken prisoner, stated that his unit "arrived at the Eastern Front ten days ago from the French town of Toul. Only ten men of the company survived and these, too, were taken prisoner."

He also testified that, in view of the tremendous losses at the Eastern Front, the German command was compelled to withdraw German garrisons from towns in the occupied countries —France, Belgium, Holland and others.

"The whole garrison of Toul," said the lieutenant, "has been sent to the Russian front. At the beginning of the war the regular army contingents were replaced by reservists. Now reservists too are being dispatched to the Eastern Front and replaced by wounded soldiers who, as yet, have not completed treatment. Many of them still wear bandages."

Senior Lieutenant Sterzhnev's company was defending "K" railway station and a workers' settlement. All day long German artillery was shelling the station building, watertower and dwelling houses.

Nazi tanks followed by infantry appeared in the evening. Tank destroyers — Red Army Men Egorov, Nevzorov and Artiukhin—courageously met the enemy. Two enemy tanks were isabled and the rest turned back. At night the Nazis managed to surround our company, but the Red Army men took it coolly, showered the enemy with hand grenades and broke the encirclement. For two days the Red Army men were fighting their way back to their unit. In the enemy rear they blew up two bridges and three tank cars with fuel, destroyed two trucks with twenty-three Nazis soldiers and burned a Junkers-88 bomber which made a forced landing.

Guerrilla detachments operating in Bessarabian districts occupied by German-Rumanian troops give the enemy no respite, night or day. By daring raids, explosions and incendiarism guerrillas destroy ammunition, fuel and provisions. Especially successful is a guerrilla party commanded by "I." In August it destroyed fourteen enemy tanks and armored cars, thirty-two ammunition trucks, forty-four provision carts and over forty fuel tank cars.

In the course of these operations the guerjllas killed about 400 Rumanian officers and men. Especially successful was their raid on a Fascist truck column which was moving along a highway between the towns of "K" and "F." Approximately half way between these places guerillas dug several pit traps, carefully camouflaged them and laid an ambush near the road. The first three cars fell into traps and blocked the way for the rest. Then, from shrubs and ditches, the trucks were showered with hand grenades and fuel bottles. Guerilla machine-gunners opened a heavy fire at the Rumanian solddiers. Four trucks attempted to get off the road but capsized and stuck in a deep roadside ditch. In all, sixteen enemy trucks were disabled and eighty men were killed in this engagement.

In fighting on the southern front our troops captured a number of documents from the headquarters of the Thirty-ninth Rumanian Infantry Regiment. These documents prove that many Rumanian soldiers do not want to fight the Soviet Union. This is corroborated by order of the day No. 85 of a regiment command by Col. Konstantin, who writes:

"Some soldiers, instead of taking part in the fighting, are skirking it and hide and return to their units only when the fighting is over."

The colonel makes some unflattering remarks about his officers too: "I was pained to find out that in operations which took place there were many instances of neglect of duty on the part of all my subordinate officers." The colonel goes on to state that the officers displayed "insufficient valor in the face of the enemy."

"Some officers cry and beg for shelter; are afraid of the Soviet air force and artillery fire. Others hide and evade the fighting, displaying their valor only before women and children."

The colonel sets the Red army as an example to his officers: "The enemy may assert with full justification that his men are fighting remarkably well."

Water-transport workers in the front-line areas display daring and fearlessness in execution of their duties.

Captain Frolov's steamer, carrying a military cargo, tied up for the night near a bank. Four hours remained until daybreak. The crew and guard went to sleep, leaving sentries on board and on the bank. In less than half an hour sentries on the bank gave warning of the approach of the enemy.

The defense of the steamer was immediately organized. The assailant was met with machine-gun fire. The skirmish lasted until morning. At daybreak about a hundred German soldiers attempted to attack the steamer crew, but they were driven off. The attempt to capture our steamer cost the Germans twenty lives.

A barge commanded by Skipper Elkin was hit by an enemy shell. Water began filling the hold. Elkin was badly wounded, but he remained at his post. Under his direction the crew swiftly stopped up the holes and safely reached a river harbor.

Incendiary bombs fell on the deck of a tanker barge during bombardment of the harbor of "K." Seaman Gulin and Cherkassov heroically forestalled the conflagration. Gulin tossed three bombs overboard and extinguished a fourth with his greatcoat. Two bombs fell down hatchways. Cherkassov rushed downstairs .and .extinguished them with sand. Notwithstanding severe burns, Cherkassov did not abandon his watch.

Wharf sailors Golubev, Emoin, Vostryakov, Likheradov and Yaknenko brought down by rifle fire a Fascist bomber which dived on a steamer.

MOSCOW, Wednesday, Sept. 3 (AP)—The Soviet Information Bureau today issued the following:

On Sept. 2 our troops continued to fight stubbornly against the enemy along the whole front.

After fierce fighting our troops evacuated the town of Tallinn [in Estonia].

According to precise data now available seventy-five German planes were destroyed during Aug. 30 and not 31 as previously reported.

Twenty-three German planes were brought down in combat Aug. 31. We lost twenty-two planes.

BERLIN, Sept. 2 (AP)—The German High Command issued this communiqué:

Operations on the Eastern Front proceed according to plan. Attacks of the German air force were effectively directed against railroad tracks in the Kharkov area and southwest of Moscow.

Dive-bombers sank one Soviet gunboat and set three others afire on the Dnieper River.

In the fight against Britain the air force last night bombed the supply harbor of Newcastle Upon Tyne. Bomb hits brought four big fires and heavy explosions. Other combat planes successfully attacked airports in the Midlands.

A small number of British planes last night flew into Northwestern and Western Germany. Anti-aircraft artillery shot down one enemy plane.

LONDON, Sept. 2 (AP)—The Air Ministry issued this communiqué today:

Objectives at Cologne again were attacked by aircraft of the Bomber Command last night.

Though the attack was not on a heavy scale, good results were observed. One of our aircraft is missing.

The Air Ministry issued the following tonight:

Beaufort aircraft of the coastal command this afternoon attacked an enemy convoy off the Norwegian coast. The largest vessel was hit with two torpedoes and probably destroyed. An escort vessel also was hit.

Fortress aircraft of the bomber command on reconnaissance this afternoon bombed the port of Bremen.

R. A. F. fighters carried out several further sweeps over the Channel and Northern France since this morning but no enemy fighters were encountered.

From all these operations one of our aircraft, a Beaufort, is missing.

A joint communiqué of the Air and Home Security Ministries said today:

Enemy activity last night was on a small scale and mainly directed against one district in Northeast England, where some damage was done and there was a number of casualties, some of which were fatal.

SEP 3 1941

Elsewhere little damage was done and the number of casualties reported was not large. Two enemy aircraft were destroyed during the night.

CAIRO, Egypt, Sept. 2 (AP)—The R. A. F. Middle East Command issued the following:

Libya—Heavy bomber aircraft of the R. A. F. carried out another raid on the harbor and shipping at Tripoli during the night of Aug. 31-Sept. 1. A merchant vessel was hit and believed sunk, while another ship was left ablaze from stem to stern. Our aircraft also machine-gunned the road and railway west of Tripoli and the airdrome buildings at Mellaha. A number of fires broke out near the railway station.

Other bombers of the R. A. F. and South African Air Force attacked shipping in Bengazi harbor, which was again raided by heavy bombers later in the night. Part of the attacking formation flew through the harbor defenses at low levels and bombs were observed to fall close to shipping.

The landing ground at Ras el-Tin, the harbor at Bardia and store dumps at Gambut were bombed by aircraft of the fleet air arm taking part in these operations.

Italy and Sicily—Aircraft of the fleet air arm bombed and machine-gunned aircraft on the ground at Gherbini and Comiso during the night of Aug. 31-Sept. 1. Fires visible many miles from the target were started among aircraft at Comiso.

Yesterday fighter and bomber aircraft of the R. A. F. attacked Pozzallo [in Sicily] and Crotone [in Italy]. At Pozzallo our fighters machine-gunned a train whose engine was last seen emitting volumes of flames and steam.

At Crotone shipping, munition factories and a railway were bombed. Direct hits on three buildings caused violent explosions, a sheet of yellow flame and clouds of blue-black smoke. A merchantman was hit by three bombs and developed a fire toward the stern. Quays and a seaplane flying in the vicinity also were attacked.

From these operations two of our aircraft are missing.

The British Middle East Command issued the following communiqué today:

Libya—At Tobruk during the night our patrols were active. In addition to inflicting casualties on the enemy in several sectors they captured and occupied an enemy post.

During the morning there were heavy dive-bombing and high level attacks. Despite the weight of the attack, in which about 100 aircraft were employed, damage and casualties were negligible.

. In the frontier area there was considerable enemy shelling.

Italian

ROME, Sept. 2 (AP)—The Italian High Command issued the following communiqué today:

In North Africa artillery fire and clashes between advanced units were reported on various sectors of the Tobruk front. The enemy was repulsed everywhere.

The British air force bombed Tripoli and Bengazi, causing one death and several injuries among the population. Damage was unimportant. Four enemy bombers were shot down over Bengazi in this action.

Following further verifications it was ascertained by the anti-aircraft defense that the enemy lost four planes in recent days from anti-aircraft fire at Bengazi in addition to those already reported in a previous bulletin.

Large formations of Italian and German air detachments made a mass attack on objectives of the fortified town of Tobruk, subjecting them to a fierce bombardment. They hit numerous deposits of gasoline, munitions and concentrations of vehicles with visibly effective results. Notwithstanding an intense reaction, all our planes returned to their bases.

Enemy planes made a raid on Crotone [in Italy] dropping bombs and machine-gunning. Twelve were killed and twenty-four injured among the civilian population, with slight damage. Near Pozzallo, near Ragusa [in Sicily] enemy planes machine-gunned a train. Several passengers were injured.

In East Africa artillery actions were reported in the Uolchefit and Culquabert sectors. Our shelling scored hits on enemy troops, inflicting losses.

Shipping Lanes Enter Third Year As Routes Of Death And Tragedy

29 Nations Involved In Sea Warfare In Which 7,000,000 Tons Of Merchant And Naval Vessels Were Sent To Bottom

15,688 Are Known To Be Dead

SEP 3 1941

By CHARLES FRANCIS

New York, Sept. 2 (AP)—The world's great shipping lanes tomorrow enter their third year as routes of death and destruction that have involved 29 nations and sent more than 7,000,000 tons of merchant and naval vessels to the bottom with a large toll of human life.

Censorship, claims and counterclaims preclude any exact summing up of the huge price exacted by sea warfare, but records compiled by the Associated Press reveal that 1,880 ships aggregating 7,041,898 gross tons, have been sunk, while 15,688 persons have lost their lives and 9,253 are missing, probably thousands of them dead.

The records show that British Merchant Marine, leading tonnage loser, has shrunk by 2,908,767 gross tons. (This figure, representing about nine per cent of her prewar tonnage, is lower than the British admitted in July for 21 months of war, but it includes only verified sinkings, and the Admiralty has not disclosed the names of many destroyed vessels).

And in these disastrous statistics—they average 2½ naval and merchant ships and more than 21 lives lost daily for two years' conflict—the aeroplane has had an ever-present influence although its supremacy over the warship is still debated among students of warfare.

From a minor adjunct of naval combat the plane has risen in a quarter-centry to such importance that it can send a mighty 35,000-ton battleship limping from a major sea engagement as torpedo planes did last spring to the Italian Vittorio Veneto in the Mediterranean battle of Cape Matapan. Or it can spread a rain of ruin on land forces evacuating by sea, as screaming Stuka dive-bombers did at Dunkerque in June, 1940, and again last May at Greece and Crete.

Perhaps the plane's most spectacular success was achieved in the four-day battle and chase last May that began with the blowing up of Britain's greatest warship, the Hood, by a fortuitous shot at 14 miles from the Nazi 35,000-ton Bismarck and ended with the sinking of the Bismarck under a hail of shells and torpedoes from a posse estimated at as high as 100 revengeful British ships.

A torpedo plane from the new aircraft carrier Victorious was credited with a damaging blow to the Bismarck's steering gear that slowed her down. Perhaps she might have made good her escape if an American-made Catalina plane, sweeping out of the clouds, had not spotted her and passed the word along to the pursuing fleets.

Despite this, no battleships have been sunk by planes during the war, although German bombers sent the aircraft carrier Illustrious to port, a badly-crippled ship. In addition, while the British Navy paid the price of two cruisers and four destroyers at the hands of German bombers during the bloody Crete days, it smashed three big Nazi attempts to land sea-borne forces on the island.

The plane and its cohorts of destruction, the submarine, the raider and the warship have sunk 999 vessels of all nations, and mines have claimed 247. Other causes sank 634, Associated Press records show.

The two years have seen Britain lose 120 naval vessels and Germany more than 30, including two of her most potent units, the Graf Spee Scharnhorst and Gneisenau have been out of combat in French ports under frequent British bombing since March.

Italy has lost 35 naval ships in her 15 months at war, and the only verified Soviet sinkings are a merchant ship and a destroyer.

The Germans, however, claimed that in the capture of Tallinn last week they sank 10 Soviet warships, 22 transports and damaged the Soviet cruiser Kirov and five other warships. The Nazis also claimed that the capture of Nikolaev put a 35,000-ton battleship, a 10,000-ton cruiser, four destroyers and two submarines, all under construction, in their hands.

A Washington estimate last December places British naval power built and building, at 415 units; German, 370; Italian, 292 and Soviet, 276. The estimate conceded that actual Nazi and Soviet totals were unknown.

Advices reaching New York recently reported that a shortage of materials had caused cessation of building of two 35,000-ton Italian capital ships, the Roma and the Impero.

Germany's merchant losses total 112 vessels of 562,458 tons, including five ships seized by Western Hemisphere governments. The seizures also cost the Danes 43 merchant vessels, the Italians 42 and Rumania one.

Initiating the confiscations was the United States. She is repairing the many sabotaged Axis vessels acquired and with the Danish ships is putting them into services vital to her defense efforts and the British aid program.

Uncle Sam has made other helpful gestures toward Britain's fight. A year ago he provided her with 50 destroyers, one of which has been sunk, in return for strategic bases; he has initiated a 62-ship construction schedule for Britain (the first of these new vessels slid down the ways recently in California), and his shipyards have been opened to damaged British battlecraft.

Despite passage of some American vessels into war-infested seas, this country has lost only two vessels, while Sweden, a neutral with safe passage "guaranteed" through both German and British blockades, has lost more than 100 ships of 275,065 gross tons.

The American ships lost were the City of Rayville, sunk by a mine off Australia last November with one death, and the Robin Moor, torpedoed in May between Brazil and Africa. All occupants of the Robin Moor were picked up after spending several days in lifeboats.

In addition, seven of a group of eight ships formerly operated by the United States lines and sold to Belgian interests have been sunk.

Mystery for a time hid the whereabouts of the Egyptian liner Zam Zam bound from New York to Egypt with 322 passengers, including 140 Americans. At the height of excitement, it was learned that the 32-year-old vessel, named for a sacred Mohammedan well, was sunk by a raider on Apr. 17 between Recife, Brazil, and Cape Town, and her survivors landed in German - occupied France. Two of the Americans, wounded during the shelling of the vessel, are believed to be still aboard the raider that sank the Zam Zam. The others, including missionaries and volunteer ambulance drivers, were released.

America's expanding merchant marine was called on to make sacrifices for the defense effort, and more than 90 merchant vessels in service or not yet out of shipyards were requisitioned by the government.

Heading the list of requisitions was the pride of the merchant marine, the 26,000-ton United States liner America, which was converted into the Navy Auxiliary West Point. Other large ships taken for transport duty were the Washington, the Manhattan and the Oriente.

Above all, the war has set afoot the most ambitious shipbuilding program in the country's history. With a two-ocean Navy expansion including six 35,000-ton battleships and four 45,000-towners, plus about 300 lesser craft and submarines, and with an increase of about 700 merchant ships under long-range plans, the United States should become the leading maritime nation.

D27 ADD-BERLIN-ECONOMIC xxx GIL

WHEN THE EXPIRATION DATE OF THE FORMER GERMANO-SWISS TREATY WAS APPROACHING IN JUNE, SWISS FOREIGN TRADE, EXCLUDING CHEESE EXPORTS, HAD BEEN VIRTUALLY CANCELLED EXCEPT WITH THE AXIS COUNTRIES AND THEIR SATELLITES.

THE SWISS STILL WERE ALLOWED TO SEND PARCEL POST PACKAGES WEIGHING UP TO TWO KILOGRAMS--ABOUT FOUR AND A HALF POUNDS--WITHOUT EXPORT PERMITS. SUCH IMPORTANT SWISS EXPORTS AS WATCHES, WATCH MOVEMENTS, SYNTHETIC WATCH JEWELS AND HAIRSPRINGS COULD BE DELIVERED BY MAIL.

IN JUNE, HOWEVER, THE SWISS GOVERNMENT AT THE REQUEST OF THE AXIS STOPPED GRANTING EXPORT LICENSES FOR PARCEL POST PACKAGES. MEANWHILE, WITHOUT EXPLANATION, GERMANY AND ITALY CUT OFF VIRTUALLY ALL TRANSIT PERMITS, BRINGING SWISS FOREIGN TRADE ALMOST TO NOGHING. STRANGELY, THE LAST PERMITS GRANTED WERE FOR EXPORTS TO RUSSIA, WITH WHICH SWITZERLAND HAD RECENTLY CONCLUDED ITS FIRST TRADE PACT SINCE THE SOVIET REGIME WAS ESTABLISHED.

THE SERIOUSNESS OF THIS TRADE STOPPAGE CAN BE JUDGED BY COMPARING SWITZERLAND'S PREWAR EXPORTS IN 1938 TO THE AXIS COUNTRIES AND TO OTHERS. GERMANY, AUSTRIA AND ITALY TOOK 297,300,000 FRANCS WORTH AGAINST 361,800,000 FOR FRANCE, ENGLAND AND THE UNITED STATES ALONE.

RESTRICTION OF EXPORTS HAD TWO SECONDARY EFFECTS: (A) IT DIVERTED GOODS FROM OTHER COUNTRIES TO THE AXIS. (B) IT PREVENTED SWITZERLAND FROM ACQUIRING FOREIGN EXCHANGE TO PURCHASE HER IMPORT NEEDS ABROAD.

WHEREAS GERMANY AND ITALY TOOK 35 PERCENT OF SWISS EXPORTS IN 1938, THE FIRST FULL YEAR OF PEACE, THEY WERE REPORTED RECENTLY TO BE TAKING 50 TO 60, WITH AN ADDITIONAL 10 TO 20 GOING TO BELGIUM, HOLLAND AND NORWAY, WHICH OPERATE IN THE BERLIN-ROME CLEARING SYSTEM.

EXPORTS EVEN TO THE CLEARING COUNTRIES, WITH THE EXCEPTION OF ITALY AND GERMANY, HAVE BEEN REDUCED BECAUSE THOSE COUNTRIES NO LONGER HAVE THE GOODS TO GIVE SWITZERLAND IN PAYMENT.

UNDER THE NEW TREATY WITH GERMANY, SAID A GOVERNMENT COMMUNIQUE, "SWITZERLAND WAS ABLE TO OBTAIN GREAT FACILITIES FOR THE EXPORT OF HER PRODUCTS TO THIRD COUNTRIES." FINE WATCH MOVEMENTS, ELECTRIC MACHINERY AND OTHER PRODUCTS--MOSTLY LUXURY ITEMS, USELESS IN WARFARE--WERE EXEMPTED FROM TRANSIT CONTROL.

SWITZERLAND CONTINUES TO RECEIVE TEXTILE FIBRES, RUBBER, TIMBER, FODDER, COFFEE, SILK, CHEMICALS, BANANAS, METALS, ET CETERA, THROUGH THE BRITISH BLOCKADE. QUANTITITES ARE LIMITED WITH A VIEW TO PREVENTING THEIR LEAKING INTO GERMANY AND ITALY EITHER IN RAW OR FINISHED FORM.

WHERE DOMESTIC CONSUMPTION BEGINS AND ENDS IS A HAIRLINE QUESTION. SWITZERLAND WILL SEND 12,000 HEAD OF CATTLE TO GERMANY THIS YEAR. THE POINT IS: COULD SHE SEND ANY CATTLE AT ALL IF SHE DID NOT RECEIVE FODDER FROM OVERSEAS?

SEP 3 1941

BRITISH OFFICIALS SAY THEY HAVE RELEASED TO THE SWISS MORE GOODS THAN THEY CAN TRANSPORT UNDER PRESENT SHIPPING CONDITIONS, ALTHOUGH THE GENERAL RULE IS THAT NO SWISS FIRM IS ALLOWED TO HAVE MORE THAN TWO MONTHS' SUPPLY OF VITAL RAW MATERIALS.

D28

THAT MARGIN IS SO NARROW THAT BEFORE THE WINTER IS FINISHED SOME SMALL FIRMS WHICH WERE UNABLE TO ACCUMULATE LARGE PREWAR STOCKS MAY BE THREATENED WITH CLOSING UNLESS THE GOVERNMENT UNDERTAKES THE SHARPLY CONTROVERSIAL MEASURE OF REQUISITIONING ALL PRIVATE RESERVES AND RE-DISTRIBUTING THEM SO AS TO KEEP THE SMALL FACTORIES RUNNING AS AN EMPLOYMENT MEASURE.

THREE OF SWITZERLAND'S PRINCIPAL RAW MATERIAL NEEDS ARE SUPPLIED BY GERMANY: COAL FOR HOME AND FACTORY FURNACES, IRON FOR THE NUMEROUS METAL INDUSTRIES AND OIL FOR MACHINES, AUTOMOBILES AND TRAINS.

IN THE GOVERNMENT COMMUNIQUES ON THE GERMAN AGREEMENT, THERE WAS A NOTICEABLE RETICENCE ABOUT WHAT SWITZERLAND WOULD FURNISH GERMANY IN EXCHANGE FOR COAL, IRON AND OIL. CATTLE, FRUIT AND MILK PRODUCTS WERE MENTIONED BUT NO MANUFACTURES, WHICH ARE THE SWISS SPECIALTY.

IT IS SUSPECTED IN ALLIED QUARTERS THAT THE SWISS ARE SUPPLYING THE GERMAN ARMY WITH SUCH MUNITIONS AS CANNON PARTS, TRACER BULLETS, TIME FUSES AND ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS, IN ADDITION TO SEMI-MILITARY SUPPLIES. THE RENOWNED MESSERSCHMITT FIGHTERS ARE REPUTEDLY ARMED WITH A CANNON OF SWISS DESIGN.

CERTAINLY NO SUCH MUNITIONS ARE ALLOWED TO PASS THROUGH THE AXIS COUNTER-BLOCKADE TO ENGLAND, AND ALLIED ECONOMISTS NOTED, THAT THE NEW TRADE TREATY GAVE GERMANY THE RIGHT TO PURCHASE MERCHANDISE IN SWITZERLAND "ACCORDING TO ITS OWN CHOICE AND WITHIN CERTAIN LIMITS," AS THE COMMUNIQUE SAID.

GERMANY AND ITALY AND THE COUNTRIES IN ITS CLEARING SYSTEM DO NOT PAY SWITZERLAND IN CASH. THEY PAY IN GOODS.

WHEN A SWISS EXPORTER SELLS AN ORDER TO A GERMAN FIRM, HE TURNS OVER HIS BILL TO THE CLEARING BUREAU IN ZURICH AND IT IS CREDITED TO HIM THERE. GERMAN EXPORTERS DO THE SAME IN BERLIN.

THESE CREDITS ARE THEN CHECKED OFF AGAINST EACH OTHER, THE SWISS FIRM RECEIVING PAYMENT IN FRANCS AND THE GERMANS IN MARKS, EACH FROM HIS OWN CLEARING BUREAU. NO MONEY CHANGES HANDS--ONLY GOODS.

WHEN GERMAN PAYMENTS LAG, AS THEY ADMITTEDLY HAVE BEEN LAGGING, SWISS FIRMS CANNOT BE PAID AND CONSEQUENTLY ARE THREATENED WITH WORK STOPPAGES FOR LACK OF OPERATING CAPITAL AND GERMANY IS THREATENED WITH STOPPAGE OF DELIVERIES FROM SWITZERLAND.

THEREFORE, TO AVOID UNEMPLOYMENT IN SWISS INDUSTRY, IT WAS SAID, THE SWISS FEDERAL COUNCIL AGREED TO ADVANCE 400,000,000 FRANCS (ABOUT $93,000,000) FOR THE REMAINDER OF THIS YEAR AND PROBABLY AS MUCH OR MORE IN 1942 TO FINANCE FIRMS PRODUCING FOR GERMANY.

SWISS EXPORTERS WHO SELL TO GERMANY CAN GET THEIR MONEY FROM THE SWISS NATIONAL BANK WITHING THREE MONTHS, UNDER THIS PLAN.

AT THE END OF THE FIRST SIX MONTHS OF 1941, GERMANY ALREADY WAS REPORTED TO BE 120,000,000 FRANCS BEHIND SWITZERLAND IN ITS PAYMENTS INTO THE CLEARING.

SEP 3 1941

THERE IS NO INTENTION ON THE PART OF THE SWISS GOVERNMENT THAT THE 400,000,000 FRANCS SHALL BE WNYTHING BUT WHAT IT CALLS "TEMPORARY ADVANCES" OR THAT THE FULL AMOUNT SHALL BE PAID OUT UNLESS POSTIVELY NEEDED.

IT IS NOTEWORTHY THAT THIS 400,000,000 FRANCS ALONE AMOUNTS TO ONE-THIRD MORE THAN GERMANY AND AUSTRIA'S TOTAL PURCHASES IN SWITZERLAND IN 1938. ECONOMIC QUARTERS INTERPRET IT AS BEING, IN EFFECT, AN EXTENSION OF CREDIT TO GERMANY, WHICH IS ALREADY REPORTED TO OWE POSSIBLY 500,000,000 REICHSMARKS TO ITS NEIGHBORS, MAYBE MORE.

NEWEST U.S. BATTLESHIP
A FLOATING CITY, FIRES
SALVO OF 19 GUNS

SEP 3 1941

TARS LIVE BETTER
THAN LANDLUBBERS (1,100)

(EDITOR'S NOTE: THE NEWEST UNITED STATES BATTLESHIP, THE NORTH CAROLINA, HAS RETURNED FROM A GUNNERY TEST AT SEA. JOHN A.MOROSO 3RD, SHIP NEWS REPORTER FOR THE ASSOCIATED PRESS, WENT ALONG ON THE VOYAGE, AND WROTE THIS ACCOUNT OF CREW LIFE AT SEA FOR THE (NAME OF YOUR PAPER) SPECIAL NEWS SERVICE.)

BY JOHN A.MOROSO, 3RD

...(ADVANCE) ABOARD THE BATTLESHIP NORTH CAROLINA, (CORRESPONDENCE OF THE SPECIAL NEWS SERVICE)--THE EDITOR ASKED ME TO WRITE A STORY ON LIFE ABOARD THIS BATTLESHIP, THE $70,000,000 PRIDE OF THE U.S.FLEET.

AFTER FIVE DAYS OF CRUISING THE BOUNDING MAIN, FIRING THE GUNS AND TALKING TO THE MEN I CAN TRUTHFULLY SAY THAT THINGS ARE PRETTY SWELL--ALL THE WAY FROM THE SKIPPER IN HIS CABIN-SUITE DOWN TO THE ENLISTED MEN IN THEIR ULTRA-MODERN STAINLESS-STEEL BUNKROOMS.

THE TARS OF THE 35,000-TON NORTH CAROLINA ACTUALLY LIVE BETTER THAN THE AVERAGE LANDLUBBER COOPED UP IN TOWNS THROUGHOUT THE NATION IF YOU BASE THE COMPARISON ON COMFORT, CLEANLINESS, MODERN EQUIPMENT AND HEALTH.

THEY LIVE IN A FLOATING FORTRESS EQUIPPED WITH THE MOST MODERN SURROUNDINGS. THEIR IMMACULATE HOSPITAL IS RANKED ABOVE MANY SHORESIDE HOSPITALS BECAUSE IT CONTAINS THE BEST MEDICAL EQUIPMENT AVAILABLE AND A DENTAL OFFICE THAT SET US ALL GAPING WITH ITS ALUMINUM AND STEEL FURNISHINGS.

THE GALLEYS, DOMINATED BY FAST-WORKING ELECTRIC STOVES AND OVENS AND GAUGED FOR MASS PRODUCTION, ARE A CHEF'S DELIGHT.

I AM WRITING THIS YARN IN THE LUXURIOUS WARDROOM, DINING PLACE OF THE OFFICERS AND THE PLACE THEY USE AT NIGHT FOR CHIN-FESTS AND GAMES. OFFICERS IN BLUE, WHITE AND KHAKI TALK OVER BATTLE

PROBLEMS ABOVE THE DIN OF WORK AND CHATTER.

OUTSIDE LAZY WHALES AND BLACKFISH SPOUT WATER FROM A SEA SO BLUE THAT IT LOOKS UNREAL, WHILE ON DECKS THE CREWMEN ARE BUSY WASHING DOWN AND REPAIRING MINOR DAMAGE CAUSED BY THE FIRING OF A TREMENDOUS SALVO OF 19 GUNS.

GONE IS THE STRAIN OF WAITING FOR THE RIFLES TO FIRE, AND THE ANXIETY OVER HOW THE SHIP WOULD STAND UP UNDER THE TEST.

THESE SALTS ARE PROUD OF THEIR SHIP--THEY KNOW THE LADY IS A LADY--THAT SHE CAN TAKE IT AND POUR IT BACK, SALVO FOR SALVO.

CAPT.OLAF M.HUSTVEDT, 55-YEAR-OLD NATIVE OF DECORAH, IOWA, AND A VETERAN OF 36 YEARS WITH THE NAVY, WAS PROUD AND THRILLED WITH THE PERFORMANCE OF HIS SHIP. IT WAS HIS DUTY TO PRESS THE TINY TRIGGER THAT SET OFF THE GUNS.

HE AGREED WITH BROTHER OFFICERS WHEN THEY SAID THAT GUNNERY HAS BECOME MORE OF A SCIENCE AND LESS OF AN ART WITH THE ADVANCE OF CENTURIES.

AS TO LIFE ABOARD SHIP, LET'S LOOK FIRST AT THE FOOD AND ITS GALLEYS.

LIEUT.COMMANDER A.B.CLARK, FROM CINCINNATI, O., THE SUPPLY OFFICER, CALLED IN HIS ACE, CHIEF COMMISSARY STEWARD ELZA R.FLOWERS, OF SHELBYVILLE, ILL., TO SHOW US THE EATERY.

THE JAUNTY FLOWERS, - 20-YEAR VETERAN, BEAMED AS HE TOOK US THROUGH SPOTLESS ROOMS. AT THE BAKERY WE FOUND THAT NINE MEN WORK AT BREAKNECK SPEED TO BAKE 680 LOAVES OF BREAD A DAY, MORE THAN 1,000 ROLLS AND 322 PIES. EACH MAN WORKS MORE THAN 12 HOURS A DAY, AND SEEMS TO LIKE IT.

D109 SEP 3 1941

THE DAY THAT CHICKEN WAS SERVED TO THE BLUEJACKETS, WE SAW 380 FOWLS GO INTO THE STAINLESS STEEL POTS. IT TOOK THESE OTHER QUANTITIES TO POLISH OFF A MEAL:

SEVENTY POUNDS OF FLOUR FOR GIBLET GRAVY, 1,200 POUNDS OF SWEET POTATOES, 85 ORANGES, 320 POUNDS OF CANNED ASPARAGUS, 25 GALLONS OF PICKLES, 20 GALLONS OF RIPE OLIVES, 400 POUNDS OF LETTUCE, 800 POUNDS OF TOMATOES AND SIX GALLONS OF MOLASSES FOR THE POTATOES.

WHEN IT'S HOG DOG DAY, THE TARS GOBBLE 550 POUNDS, ABOUT 4,800 DOGGIES, AND WITH THIS, 320 GALLONS OF COFFEE.

APPROXIMATELY 1,780 POUNDS OF BEEF GO INTO A SINGLE MEAL.

CAFETERIA STYLE EATING SAVES THE NAVY TIME AND CUTS DOWN THE COST OF FEEDING THE MEN. THIS SAVING IS PUT INTO MORE FOOD, AND A MAN CAN COME BACK FOR SECONDS AND THIRDS.

IN A RECENT TEST, THE ENORMOUS CREW ATE A COMPLETE MEAL IN 33 MINUTES.

DISH WASHING HAS DEPARTED WITH THE BIRTY OF THIS "NEW NAVY." THE MEN EAT FROM TRAYS DIVIDED INTO COMPARTMENTS. THESE TRAYS ARE PUT THROUGH WASHING MACHINES, AS IS THE ONLY CROCKERY USED--CUPS AND SOUP BOWLS.

THE AVERAGE COST OF FEEDING A MAN IS RATED AT .4139 CENTS A DAY, BUT THIS OFTEN RUNS TO 49 CENTS.

MOTHERS NEED HAVE NO FEAR FOR THEIR SONS' HEALTH ON THE NORTH CAROLINA, FOR THREE DOCTORS AND TWO DENTISTS OPERATE A COMPACTLY-BUILT 18-ROOM HOSPITAL UNDER THE SUPERVISION OF DR. J.K.GORDON, OF SPARTA, ILL.

THIS SICK BAY INCLUDES A MODERNISTIC FOUR-ROOM OPERATING SUITE, A LABORATORY, AN ISOLATION WARD, X-RAY ROOMS AND DISPENSARY.

COMMON AILMENTS AMONG SAILORS ARE COLDS AND MINOR HURTS FROM FALLS AND CUTS. PNEUMONIA AND INFLUENZA SOMETIMES CREEP UP. STATING THAT COMBATTING OF VENEREAL DISEASES HAS IMPROVED 70 PERCENT OVER WORLD WAR DAYS, DR.GORDON SAID THAT THE PERCENTAGE OF CASES ABOARD WAS AMAZINGLY LOW.

NO ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES ARE ALLOWED ON BOARD.

THE SHIP'S SLOP CHEST IS AS COMPLETE AS ANY UNIFORM STORE ON LAND. THE NAVY GIVES SAILORS $112.85 WORTH OF CLOTHING WHEN THEY ENLIST. THEY PAY FOR IT AFTERWARDS.

THE RISING COST OF LIVING HAS STRUCK THE NAVY, HOWEVER. ON JULY 1, PRICES WENT UP ON 26 ITEMS OF CLOTHING AND TOILET ARTICLES. UNDERSHIRTS ROSE FIVE CENTS TO 25 CENTS APIECE. THE GOODS ARE SOLD AT COST.

THE RECRUITS START WITH A BASE PAY OF $21 A MONTH AND RISE TO HIGHER RATE AND SALARY ACCORDING TO THEIR ABILITY, AMBITION AND SENIORITY.

LIFE ABOARD SHIP IS A CEASELESS ROUND OF ACTIVITY.

THERE ARE COUNTLESS THINGS TO BE DONE. MEN WASH DOWN THE DECKS, REPAIR GEAR, PAINT, SCRAPE AND SQUEEGEE (CORRECT) AND PRACTISE BATTLE MANEUVERS. DOWN BELOW, THE BLACK GANG KEEPS THE SHIP RUNNING AND THE ENGINES CLEANED AND REPAIRED. SEP 3 1941

IN PEACE TIME, THE CREW WOULD ENJOY MOVIES ON THE AFTER MAIN DECK EACH NIGHT, BUT THE WAR HAS STOPPED THAT AT SEA. THE SHIP SAILS BLACKED OUT AT NIGHT--AND WOE BETIDE A MAN WHO LIGHTS A CIGARET OR OPENS THE DOOR OF A LIGHTED ROOM.

OFFICERS POINT PROUDLY TO THE FACT THAT MEN SEEK OUT THE NAVY MOSTLY BECAUSE OF A LOVE OF ADVENTURE.

THE 35,000 TONS SHIP WITH ITS MORE THAN 1,000 ROOMS IS COMPARABLE TO A FLOATING CITY, FOR IT HAS EVERYTHING TO MAKE IT LIVABLE.

CONFRONTED WITH THAT ARGUMENT ABOUT PLANES BEING BETTER THAN BATTLESHIPS, OFFICERS CITE AN OLD THEORY:

"TO SINK A SHIP, YOU MUST HIT HER SOMEWHERE BETWEEN WIND AND WATER."

IT SEEMS THAT PLANES CANNOT DO THAT EXCEPT WITH AERIAL TORPEDOES, AND THE RISK IS MIGHTY GREAT.

HITLER RULES NEARLY ALL OF EUROPE AS WARFARE
ENTERS THIRD YEAR

BUT RUSSIAN SOIL MAY PROVE TO BE QUICKSAND FOR HIM

A REVIEW (1200)

SEP 3 1941

BY JOHN H.MARTIN X

(ADVANCE)-NEW YORK AUG.31-(THE SPECIAL NEWS SERVICE)-ADOLF HITLER AT THE BEGINNING OF THE THIRD YEAR OF WAR RULES NEARLY ALL OF EUROPE, INCLUDING A PIECE OF RUSSIA BIGGER THAN PRE-WAR GERMANY--BUT THE RUSSIAN SOIL MAY PROVE TO BE QUICKSAND.

IN THE SECOND YEAR OF WARFARE THE GERMAN LUFTWAFFE FAILED TO SMASH ENGLAND OR THE ROYAL AIR FORCE IN STEADY BOMBINGS THAT LEVELED WHOLE SECTIONS OF CITIES AND BURIED THOUSANDS OF VICTIMS. BUT NAZI TROOPS OVERRAN YUGOSLAVIA AND GREECE, OCCUPIED RUMANIA AND BULGARIA, STRUCK DEEP INTO RUSSIA.

THE GERMANS' ATTACK ON THEIR TREATY FRIEND, RUSSIA, ON JUNE 22, WAS SUDDEN AND WITHOUT THE USUAL GERMAN PRESS BUILDUPS. AFTER GERMAN TROOPS CRASHED ACROSS THE FRONTIER, THE WORLD WAS TOLD THE RUSSIANS HAD HARBORED AGGRESSIVE DESIGNS ON THE REICH.

THE POLITICAL PROPS UNDER COMMUNIST RUSSIA DID NOT COLLAPSE AS THE GERMANS HAD HOPED. NOR DID THE RED ARMY ORGANIZATION BREAK DOWN. NOW THE CAMPAIGN PROMISES TO EXTEND INTO THE WINTER, SINCE THE BRITISH AND RUSSIANS HAVE INVADED IRAN TO OPEN A JOINT FRONT AND SUPPLY LINE.

COUNTLESS THOUSANDS OF GERMAN AND RUSSIAN GRAVES AND THE SKELETONS OF BURNED AND BOMBED CITIES STRETCH EASTWARD FROM POLAND INTO THE RUSSIAN INTERIOR. THE SOVIETS CONTINUE TO MUSTER THEIR MILITARY AND CIVILIAN MILLIONS FOR A FIGHT TO THE DEATH.

RUMANIA, HUNGARY, ITALY, SLOVAKIA AND FINLAND QUICKLY JOINED THIS ANTI-COMMUNIST CRUSADE. SPAIN AND FRANCE HAVE CONTRIBUTED A FEW VOLUNTEERS. THEY--ESPECIALLY FRANCE--HAVE CONTRIBUTED SOMETHING ELSE, AN UPSURGE IN THE OPPOSITION TO THE CONQUEROR.

LATEST ACT IN THE DRAMA OF RESISTANCE TO GERMAN RULE WITHIN FRANCE WAS THE SHOOTING OF PIERRE LAVAL, (LONG THE LEADER OF THE FACTION FAVORING COMPLETE COLLABORATION WITH GERMANY) AND THREE OTHER COLLABORATIONISTS.

THE UNITED STATES, IN A UNIQUE NON-BELLIGERENT ROLE, ACTIVELY IS AIDING THE BRITISH EMPIRE, RUSSIA, CHINA AND A HOST OF REFUGEE GOVERNMENTS WHILE AT THE SAME TIME KEEPING A WATCHFUL EYE ON JAPAN.

THE UNITED STATES PLANS TO HOLD BOTH POLITICAL AND MILITARY STAFF TALKS IN MOSCOW AND CHUNGKING. BOTH THE UNITED STATES AND BRITAIN MADE IT CLEAR THAT THEIR AID TO RUSSIA DID NOT ACKNOWLEDGE THE COMMUNIST WAY OF LIFE, BUT WAS A REALISTIC MEANS OF COMBATTING NAZI GERMANY.

CONQUERED EUROPEAN NATIONS FORCED TO WORK FOR THE NAZI MACHINE ARE STIRRING WITH UNREST AND REBELLION. HUNGER AND HATRED ARE THE PRODS, SABOTAGE THE WEAPON. REPORTS OF FAMINE AND PESTILENCE INCREASE.

THE VICHY GOVERNMENT OF FRANCE IS PLEDGED TO HELP GERMANY RESHAPE THE WORLD. BRITAIN AND HER ALLIES BELIEVE FRANCE EVENTUALLY WILL THROW HER MILITARY RESOURCES INTO THE FIGHT ALTHOUGH THE AGED MARSHAL PETAIN HAS PLEDGED NEVER TO DO THIS.

THOUSANDS OF FRENCHMEN HAVE BEEN JAILED, SOME EXECUTED, FOR DEFYING VICHY AND BERLIN. HOSTAGES HAVE BEEN SEIZED FOR EXECUTION BY GERMAN FIRING SQUADS IN ANY NUMBER THE NAZIS CHOOSE SHOULD THE DISORDERS AND SABOTAGE CONTINUE.

IN ONE YEAR THE VICHY REGIME HAS KILLED THE FRENCH PARLIAMENT, BROKEN WITH BRITAIN, JAILED FORMER FRENCH LEADERS ON WAR GUILT CHARGES, AND INSTITUTED AN AUTHORITARIAN REGIME WITH BRITISH-HATING ADMIRAL JEDARLAN AS VICE-PREMIER IN FULL CHARGE OF EMPIRE POLICE AND MILITARY FORCES.

ITALY'S MUSSOLINI FIRST TRIED AND FAILED "TO BREAK GREECE'S BACK" IN AN INVASION LAST OCTOBER THAT BACKFIRED INTO ALBANIA. NOT UNTIL GERMANY SET HER TROOPS IN MOTION LAST APRIL DID THE LITTLE COUNTRY COLLAPSE.

SINCE ITALY ENTERED THE WAR ALONGSIDE GERMANY WHEN FRANCE WAS DOWN AND BLEEDING, SHE HAS LOST MORE THAN SHE HAS GAINED. HER EAST AFRICAN EMPIRE FELL TO BRITISH ARMS. HER PROJECTED INVASION OF EGYPT WAS ROUTED ACROSS THE STANDS OF LIBYA WITH HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS OF HER MEN CAPTURED OR KILLED. GERMAN AID PUT HER BACK AT THE WESTERN FRONTIER OF EGYPT ONCE MORE.

HER NAVY HAS BEEN RIPPED APART BY THE BRITISH. GERMAN TROOPS AND OFFICIALS ARE QUARTERED ON ITALIAN SOIL, AND THE COUNTRY LONG HAS BEEN REGARDED BY MANY AS MERELY ANOTHER NAZI CAPTIVE.

THE BRITISH TRIED AND FAILED TO HELP GREECE AND YUGOSLAVIA LAST APRIL. A PRO-BRITISH COUP D'ETAT IN YUGOSLAVIA SEIZED POWER FROM A GOVERNMENT THAT HAD AGREED TO JOIN THE AXIS. LITTLE GREECE HAD HER HANDS FULL HOLDING OFF A NUMERICALLY SUPERIOR ITALIAN ARMY. GERMANY CONQUERED BOTH YUGOSLAVIA AND GREECE IN LESS THAN A MONTH.

HITLER'S PARACHUTISTS NEXT SEIZED THE ISLAND OF CRETE FROM BRITISH AND GREEK TROOPS.

A PRO-AXIS GOVERNMENT SEIZED POWER IN OIL-RICH IRAQ, AND GERMAN PLANES UTILIZED FRENCH SYRIAN BASES TO SEND AID TO IRAQ. THE BRITISH AND FREE FRENCH TOOK OVER BOTH IRAQ AND THE SYRIAN MANDATES IN BRIEF CAMPAIGNS.

THE UNITED STATES HAS TAKEN LONG DEFENSE STRIDES IN THE LAST YEAR, ACQUIRING NAVAL AND AIR BASES IN ICELAND, GREENLAND, AND ON DOWN THE EASTERN COAST TO SOUTH AMERICA. ITS FIRST PEACETIME DRAFT ARMY HAS BEEN RAISED, IT HAS ENACTED THE HUGE BRITISH AID BILL AS DEMOCRACY'S ARSENAL, HAS FROZEN AXIS CREDITS, EXPELLED GERMAN AND ITALIAN CONSULS AND SEIZED REFUGEE AXIS SHIPS.

ONE OF ITS MAIN CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE BATTLE OF THE ATLANTIC HAS BEEN ESTABLISHMENT OF A U.S.NAVAL PATROL BETWEEN HERE AND ICELAND.

JAPAN'S ACTION IN TAKING OVER BASES IN SOUTHERN FRENCH INDO-CHINA BROUGHT SWIFT PARALLEL ECONOMIC ACTION BY THE UNITED STATES, THE DUTCH EAST INDIES AND THE BRITISH. THEY FROZE JAPANESE CREDITS, SEVERED NEARLY ALL TRADE RELATIONS AND WARNED JAPAN AGAINST FURTHER MILITARY PENETRATION.

THE JAPANESE HAD JOINED THE AXIS SEPT.27, 1940, AND JUST BEFORE THE GERMAN ATTACK ON RUSSIA HAD CONCLUDED A FRIENDSHIP PACT WITH THEIR OLD ENEMY, RUSSIA. NOW THEY ARE RESTIVE UNDER THESE OPPOSING COMMITMENTS, AND IRKED BY AMERICAN SHIPS CARRYING SUPPLIES TO THE RUSSIAN EASTERN SIBERIAN PORT OF VLADIVOSTOK--RIGHT ON JAPAN'S DOORSTEP.

THE JAPANESE WAR WITH CHINA IS BOGGED DOWN--NOW IN ITS FIFTH YEAR. CHINESE STRENGTH IS GROWING WITH AMERICAN AND BRITISH AID. PRIVE MINISTER CHURCHILL HAS PLEDGED BRITISH AID TO THE UNITED STATES IN CASE OF AN AMERICAN-JAPANESE CLASH.

SEP 3 1941

THE BRITISH HAVE POURED MEN AND EQUIPMENT INTO SINGAPORE; THE UNITED STATES HAS PUT THE PHILIPPINE ARMY UNDER U.S.COMMAND AND HAS DEPLOYED ITS NAVAL STRENGTH IN THE PACIFIC.

AMERICAN-BUILT PLANES FLY OVER MALAYAN JUNGLES, OVER AFRICAN WASTES, OVER BERLIN AND SOON NO DOUBT THEY WILL BE ON THE RUSSIAN FRONT.

THE BOMBERS FLY NON-STOP ACROSS THE NORTH ATLANTIC DIRECT TO THE BRITISH FIGHTING FRONT.

SUCH IS THE PICTURE TWO YEARS AFTER THE EUROPEAN WAR BEGAN IN POLAND. LIKE THE WORLD WAR OF 1914 TO 1918 IT STEADILY HAS SPREAD, BUT OTHERWISE THERE WERE MARKED DIFFERENCES AT THE CORRESPONDING STAGES OF THE TWO CONFLICTS.

THE TWO-YEAR MARK IN THE WORLD WAR FOUND THE ALLIES AND GERMANY LOCKED IN A DISASTROUS WAR OF POSITION AND ATTRITION ON THE SOMME RIVER IN FRANCE. ITALY AND JAPAN THEN WERE BRITISH ALLIES. PRESIDENT WOODROW WILSON STILL CLUNG TO NEUTRALITY. BRITAIN HAD JUST TESTED

THE FRONT HER NEW SECRET WEAPON, THE TANK. THE AIRPLANE WAS AN INFANT WAR INSTRUMENT.

THE MACHINE-GUN INVENTION OF AN AMERICAN, HIRAM MAXIM, HAD STALEMATED THE WAR INTO A MURDEROUS TRENCH FIGHT. THE BRITISH, INSPIRED BY ANOTHER AMERICAN'S INVENTION, BENJAMIN HOLT'S FARM TRACTOR, CONCEIVED THE TANK AS A MEANS OF BREAKING THE DEADLOCK.

IRONICALLY THE GERMANS WERE TO USE THE TANK HEAVILY 24 YEARS LATER TO DESTROY THE FRENCH AND BRITISH ARMIES IN FLANDERS.

THE ALLIES THEN SAW IN RUSSIA'S HUGE STEAMROLLER THEIR BIGGEST HOPE OF VICTORY. THE SAME BELIEF EXISTS TODAY ALTHOUGH BRITISH LEADERS SAY SUCH REASONING IS DANGEROUS.

Declare Attempts to Knock Off Leningrad Air Defenses Fails

[By the Associated Press]

London, Thursday, Sept. 4—The Finnish radio, in a broadcast heard here by Reuters today reported that German troops had captured Bryansk, a communications center about 220 miles southwest of Moscow.

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Thursday, Sept. 4—The Red army reported today that its fighter planes in great air battles had beaten off German attempts to knock out Soviet air defenses and gain command of the skies in the Leningrad area.

The report, contained in the early morning communique, was issued as military dispatches said German troops had been thrown back three miles from their advanced positions before Leningrad and more than thirty miles along the central front, by major Russian counter-offensives.

The communique itself gave no details of the land warfare beyond an announcement that stubborn fighting continued along the entire front.

11 Shot Down In One Raid

It said, however, that Soviet flyers "keep on smashing enemy aircraft" at the approaches to Leningrad, and told of one encounter in which eleven of seventy German planes raiding a large airdrome were shot down.

One pilot was credited with destruction of five Junkers 87 dive bombers and another with two dive bombers and a Messerschmitt.

Upon a great battle line erupting violently from the Baltic to the Black Sea, the charges of the Nazis and allied Rumanians trying to smash into besieged Odessa in the far south were declared to be breaking before a strong defense thrown up both by Red troops and by sailors from the Soviet Black Sea fleet landed to raid the invaders' rear positions.

Say Nazi Morale Weakens

These reports of vital Russian successes were accompanied by an official declaration that enormous Nazi losses, plus the approach of the cruel Russian winter, were visibly injuring the invaders' morale.

Yamelyan Yaroslavsky, a member of the central committee of the Communist party, asserted that in the whole course of the war, including the campaigns in the west, the Germans had lost 2,930,000 men dead, wounded and captured—more than 2,000,000 on the Russian front alone—and declared that from bases inaccessible to the Germans millions of Russians were now laboring to throw "forceful reserves into battle."

Before Leningrad, Marshal Klementi Voroshilov, commanding the Red armies of the northwest, personally led his troops and those of the city's "people's army," said the army organ Red Star, and with an artillery barrage and bayonet charges drove the Nazis from the not otherwise identified strategic town of "N."

Marshal In Front Lines

Standing in the front lines during the night, said this official account, he prepared his plan and launched it just at dawn, swearing his men to advance at whatever cost.

The Germans, it was added, suffered enormous losses. Russian casualties were not given. It was said that the German mortar and machine-gun fire weakened progressively as the Russians advanced.

At the center, Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's armies of the west, led by mountain fighters from the Urals, claimed the recapture of twenty-two Soviet villages in ten days of a continuing counter-offensive, which now is declared to have smashed a German salient and thus straightened out the Russian lines upon the approaches to Moscow.

In the latest of these operations, said dispatches to the Communist party organ Pravda, an entire German SS—elite blackshirt—infantry division was destroyed in the successful storming of heights commanding the river "D" (perhaps the upper reaches of the Dnieper).

Gather Crops Close To Front

The Germans, the Russians declared, now are completely on the defense in that area and houses, roads and bridges are being repaired and over-ripe crops gathered within a mile and a half of the front.

This counter-offensive at the center, which Soviet informants have pictured as rolling along uninterruptedly day after day, appeared to be reducing German pressure at both Russian flanks and to be steadily strengthening the Russian position for the approach of bad autumn weather.

As always in recent days the Soviet command itself was reticent about operations, merely reporting in its afternoon communique a continuation of heavy fighting everywhere.

However, it stressed a far-ranging and unending Red aerial offensive which was declared to have every arm of the invaders—mechanized forces, artillery, infantry—under running attack and to be giving the Germans trouble in maintaining airdromes.

Nazis Hurled Back, Losses Heavy: Reds

Today's Communiques on Page 8.

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Sept. 3—The Germans have been hurled back with heavy losses by Russian counter-offensives on the fronts before Mosco wand Leningrad and have been stopped at the gates of Odessa, Russian war dispatches reported today.

The Nazis' war-long losses were put at close to 3,000,000 men.

This twas the situation pictured in the Russian press along with indications that Nazi oensive power is wearing down and Russian resistance growing stronger:

BEFORE MOSCOW—German forces driven back at one point as far as thirty miles, and one Elite SS Infantry Division destroyed by a ten-day Russian counter-offensive.

Besiegers Pushed Back

BEFORE LENINGRAD—The German siege ring pushed back three miles, with heavy losses, under a counter-assault directed personally by Marshal Klementi Voroshilov.

BEFORE ODESSA—The Germans stubbornly resisted by the Red army in attempts to break into the Black Sea port with sailors from the Russian Black Sea fleet bolstering the army by carrying out raids behind the Nazi lines.

Yemelyan Yaroslavsky, a member of the Central party and a leading Communist publicist, declared in Pravada, that the Germans had lost 2,930,000 men—dead, wounded and prisoners—since the war began, including more than 2,000,000 on the Eastern Front alone, where the action is in its eleventh week.

Red Bases "Unreachable"

Yaraslavsky compared this estimate with German losses of 2,590,000 on the Eastern Front in the last war, emphasizing that Russia's male population is more than double Germany's, he said three five-year plans had created new bases "unreachable for the enemy" and "millions are working to throw these forceful reserves into the battle."

In the central sector entrusted to Marshal Semeon Timoshenko, Red Army troops have retaken twenty-two villages in ten days of battle, according to Pravda. Units commanded by Col. Boyeikov, it was stated, threw the Germans back after a flank attack by Russian mechanized forces had snipped off a German salient at its base. A height commanding the countryside was recaptured, Pravda said.

Marshal Inspires Forces.

Outside Leningrad, Marshal Voroshilov directed an attack which pushed the Germans from a strategically important town, declared Red Star, the army newspaper.

Charged by Joseph Stalin with holding the northern sector, the marshal went to the front approaches of Leningrad at night, worked out a plan of attack, and launched it the next dawn. Combined forces of the Red Army and the People's Army, which is sworn to die rather than yield their city, carried out the counter-offensive, Red Star said.

Red artillery laid down a heavy barrage, the account said, and then two Russian battalions went over the top, charging across a railroad embankment and a field toward the German positions in a forest.

The Germans were reported driven back to town "N," their mortar and machine-gun fire dwindling gradually as the Russians pushed forward.

Heavy losses were reported to have been inflicted on the Germans and some Russian casualties also were acknowledged.

Red Star said that Marshal Voroshilov's arrival at the front "inspired Soviet troops for heroic deeds and they took an oath to fulfill his order regardless of difficulty."

"Thus, day and night, our men heroically defend the approaches to Leningrad," added the newspaper.

Nazis on Defense in Center.

A dispatch to Pravda said that the Germans had been put completely on the defensive in the central sector and that the Russians had succeeded in ironing out their uneven line.

Houses, bridges and roads have been rebuilt to within two miles of the front line, it reported, and over-ripe crops are being harvested.

In the assault in which Red Army forces regained the height and destroyed the SS division, Pravda said, the attack was made under cover of night by soldiers from the Ural section. For the next three nights, it added, the Germans made counter-thrusts, but could not dislodge the Russians.

Meanwhile the Red air fleet and the Luftwaffe were reported testing strength anew as Nazi bombers took up the task of blasting defense positions. Claiming an edge in the fierce dogfights along the battlefront, Russian pilots said they shot down 198 German planes Saturday, Sunday and Monday, with a loss of less than a third that many aircraft of their own.

Air Forces Testing Strength.

The Red Air Fleet and the Luftwaffe were reported testing strength anew as Nazi bombers took up the task of blasting defense positions, where the Russians said the German advance virtually was stymied for the sixth day.

Claiming an edge in the fierce dogfights along the battlefront, Russian pilots said they shot down 198 German planes Saturday, Sunday and Monday, with a loss of less than a third of that many aircraft of their own.

Today's earliest communique said a large formation of German bombers was beaten off from an attempted raid on a heavily-fortified sector, pursued to their own airfield by Russian planes, and bombed there when they landed.

The communique acknowledged the loss of the Estonian capital and Baltic naval base, Tallinn, whose capture the Germans reported last Friday. The war bulletin indicated a stubborn fight was continuing in the same principal defense lines the Red Army had reported holding for almost a week.

A midday communique said, "Our troops continued to fight the enemy on the entire front."

Hitler Calls for Duce's Aid.

S. A. Lozovsky, Soviet spokesman and Vice Commissar for Foreign Affairs, declared last night Nazi losses on the Russian front had drained German man power so deeply Adolf Hitler had called on Premier Mussolini to fill the gaps in the ranks with Italian troops.

The Soviet spokesman at the same time denied foreign reports that negotiations had been started between Russia and Finland for peace.

Of Italy, Lozovsky said:

"It is quite clear that Germany, having lost more than 2,000,000 men on the eastern front, has decided it was time to make Italy pay her share of blood and cannon fodder * * *."

He said an Italian effort to send a volunteer army against Russia had failed, and added:

"When it comes to the actual sending of Italian armies to the eastern front, then Premier Mussolini will find out what the Italian people think of the German henchman, Benito Mussolini."

The Soviet spokesman told a press conference, "Now that the Germans have lost their game in Iran there is every possibility they will exert pressure on Turkey."

NAZIS CITE STRONG DEFENSE OF ODESSA

Also Declare Many Tanks Are Used In Central Front Battles

SEP 4 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 3—The desperate resistance of besieged Odessa in the south and use of many Russian tanks in the fierce fighting on the central front were emphasized in German war dispatches tonight from the Soviet front, where the high command said all operations continue successfully.

DNB said that the Red army had lost 178 tanks since Saturday in one salient in the center, and that 107 cannon were captured there, with heavy Russian losses in dead and wounded.

Military quarters, giving further details, said 2,500 prisoners were taken, and that in one segment of this front, a forty-ton amphibian tank was among forty destroyed. Two armored cars and numerous vehicles also were reported captured.

Says Retreat Was Barred

In fighting through a wooded section, the Germans captured or destroyed 250 Russian vehicles and captured three tanks and nine cannon, they said.

Retreat at one point was cut off and the Russians annihilated, while in another small sector seven Soviet artillery batteries were silenced, the commentators said.

Other dispatches drew attention to the southeast, where the Russians still are opposing German efforts to cross the Dnieper.

The Black Sea port of Odessa, west of the river, was described as without a normal water supply as a result of Rumanian air force operations, and the population of a half million was said to be suffering from hunger as German and Rumanian forces prosecuted the siege. But Odessa still stood up against the invaders.

Submarine Sunk In Black Sea

DNB announced tonight that a German plane bombed, machine-gunned and sank a Soviet submarine in the Black Sea.

The plane sighted the submarine about eighty miles west of the Crimean coast, the pilot reported.

"With several bombs and our machine guns we dive-attacked the Russian vessel," the pilot said. "The bombs tore open the ship's side. Moments later the Soviet submarine turned over on its side and sank. We flew toward it three more times with cannon and machine guns firing on the tower and hull, which were still above the water. Four minutes after the first attack the submarine disappeared under the surface."

Chalk Up 433 To Rumanians

The high command said the Rumanians had accounted for 433 Russian planes up to the end of August.

The German air force was particularly active between the lower Dnieper and the Crimean peninsula, where German press dispatches said attacks were concentrated on every effort the Russians were making to strengthen the Dnieper river defenses.

Railways and roads still were favorite Luftwaffe targets.

Another region of concentrated air activity was Bryansk, in the central zone about 220 miles southwest of Moscow. Marching Russian columns were machine-gunned there, while bombers blew up a munitions dump and hit numerous tanks, it was declared.

DNB said that on the northern front

Russian warships and shore guns tried to help Red army troops hold up German advances in the Estonian coastal area, but that Soviet resistance was broken.

The news agency also said German planes heavily damaged three Russian merchant ships totaling 11,000 tons in the Gulf of Finland yesterday and sank a 1,000-ton vessel.

A Soviet gunboat and two barges were declared sunk in the Neva river.

In the far northern sector, Soviet anti-aircraft, artillery positions and encampments on the Rybachi peninsula were bombed "with good success," DNB said.

Refuses To Feed Population

In response to a question as to how German-occupied areas of Russia are being provisioned, authorized German sources said today, "under no circumstances has Germany under international law any obligations to feed the population."

It is up to Britain and "a power having a great influence upon England" to permit grain ships for occupied areas to reach a Black Sea port, these sources declared, limiting German responsibility to maintenance of order.

On the air front at home, it was officially acknowledged that Tuesday night's British raid on Berlin was one of the sharpest in many months and that civilian casualties and non-military damage resulted.

The raid nevertheless was described by Germans as "largely ineffective" because of anti-aircraft fire of unprecedented vigor and strength.

With the nights lengthening, the Germans said they expected to be subjected to more air attacks, but remarked that the nights are getting longer in England, too, intimating that the German night-raiding season was getting under way.

Military commentators attached great significance to reports of a smashing victory at Luga, seventy miles south of Leningrad, declaring this success had eliminated one of the major obstacles in the path of German troops closing in on the former Russian capital.

Odessa "In Dire Straits"

Reports from the opposite end of the long battlefront pictured the Black Sea port of Odessa as cut off from its water supply and in dire straits, but the Germans acknowledged that their troops were encountering bitter resistance further east along the lower Dnieper river.

Rumanian troops were reported cooperating closely with German forces besieging Odessa and were said to have been responsible for cutting off the city's water supply. The population of approximately 500,000 and the large Russian garrison was described as already suffering severe hardships not only from lack of water but from lack of food.

Whether the Russians still were able to provision the city from the sea was not disclosed.

Soviet warships and shore batteries joined Russian troops in "trying to hold up a further German advance" in the Estonian coastal area yesterday, but Soviet resistance was broken, DNB reported tonight.

High Command Calls Reds Decisively Beaten On Isthmus

[By the Associated Press]

Helsinki, Thursday, Sept. 4—The Finnish high command reported early today that Russian troops fighting in the Karelian Isthmus had been "decisively beaten," and that Finland had regained all the soil lost to the Soviets in the 1939-40 war.

But there was no indication that Finland intended to stop her war machine. Finland holds older territorial aspirations against Russia.

Ten thousand Soviet prisoners have been taken in the fighting, and the number is increasing daily, the communique said. Nearly 2,000 horses, dozens of Red tanks, 300 guns and other booty was listed as captured.

More Than 100 Ships Sunk

"Mopping up of scattered detachments in the western isthmus continues," it was said.

More than one hundred Russian ships were sunk or damaged during the last days of August in the Gulf of Finland, the official information bureau said last night.

This was part of a coordinated German-Finnish naval and air offensive that wrested Viipuri, ceded to Russia in 1940, and Tallinn, Estonian capital, from Soviet defenders.

All this, it was said, was accomplished in a German-Finnish naval and air offensive—the offensive that wrested Viipuri and Tallinn in Estonia from the Soviet forces.

The text of the Finnish announcement:

"The magnitude of the tragedy which was enacted in the Gulf of Finland at the end of August probably will never be known in its entirety. The number of vessels sunk or damaged amounts to more than 100. For a whole week burning wrecks, derelicts, drifting boats, lighters and corpses furnished evidence of the unusual havoc inflicted on the Russian Navy and transports by German and Finnish naval and air forces and efficiently laid mine fields.

"In addition to this terrific destruction, enemy ships have been sunk or damaged in connection with the capture of the islands in Viipuri Bay and the Port of Koivisto. Among recent events are the torpedoing of a transport of 2,000 tons in Koivisto Sound, artillery hits on three tugs and the capture of a three-masted schooner and two big barges fully loaded with ammunition and war materials, including optical instruments, tools and machinery."

Claims 13 Planes In Day

A twenty-four-hour bag of thirteen Russian planes was claimed today in a Finnish air force communique, which said two were captured on the Karelian isthmus, eight shot down over the isthmus and three shot down by fighters.

SEP 4 1941

The communique said there were no Finnish losses.

It credited one anti-aircraft battery with destroying two Russian bunkers as well as five planes, and said Finnish aviation bombed transports in harbors used by the Russians in efforts to withdraw from the isthmus.

Mannerheim Thanks Hitler

Berlin, Sept. 3 (AP)—Finland's Field Marshal Baron Mannerheim sent a telegram of thanks today to Adolf Hitler for the Knight's Cross of the Iron Cross which Germany conferred as an honor to the entire Finnish army.

Latvian Regime Set Up.

Berlin, Sept. 3 (A. P.).—A civil administration has been established in Latvia, a DNB dispatch from Riga said tonight.

WON'T FEED RUSSIANS

Nazis Say Provisioning Is Up to British.

Berlin, Sept. 3 (A. P.).—Under no circumstances has Germany under international law any obligations to feed the population of occupied Russian areas, authorized German sources declared today in response to a question on how such areas are being provisioned.

These sources said it was up to Britain and "a Power having a certain influence upon England" to permit grain ships for occupied Russian areas to reach a Black Sea port.

The German occupying force must merely keep order and has no duty to release supplies of its own to an enemy population, they declared. In fact, it even has the right to feed its troops from supplies of occupied areas, they said.

The fundamental concept of freedom of the seas, they claimed, was the right of occupied areas to obtain provisions from overseas.

CHURCHILL MAY CALL UP TANNER

And Ask Moore-Brabazon About Charge.

London, Sept. 3 (A. P.).—Political correspondents predicted today that Prime Minister Churchill would ask his Minister for Aircraft Production, Col. J. T. C. Moore-Brabazon, to see him regarding the charge that he had expressed the hope that Germany and Russia would exterminate each other.

Jack Tanner, president of the important Amalgamated Engineering Union, made the charge before the Trades Union Congress at Edinburgh yesterday.

Mr. Tanner also may be asked to give a more detailed account of the material on which he based his statement. This material would be made available to the Prime Minister.

William Gallacher, the only communist member of the House of Commons, gave notice today that he would ask Mr. Churchill at the next session of the House what he intends to do about the Tanner accusation.

SEP 4 1941

Tanner Not Swayed.

Edinburgh, Sept. 3 A. P.).—Jack Tanner, president of the important Amalgamated Engineering Union, said today he had seen a letter from Col. J. T. C. Moore-Brabazon, Minister for Aircraft Production, expressing regret for a statement which Mr. Tanner has interpreted as hoping for the extermination of both Russia and Germany.

Mr. Tanner charged yesterday before the Trades Union Congress that the Minister had expressed such a sentiment, and indirectly suggested his ouster for it. Later Col. Moore-Brabazon's department issued a statement which said the charge apparently was based on an extemporaneous speech made by the Minister which "was open to misinterpretation."

The subsequent letter of regret, Mr. Tanner said, was addressed to a union official. However, the labor leader said "I will not withdraw a word" of the accusation.

Col. Moore-Brabazon's speech, Mr. Tanner explained, was made at a private meeting.

Would Cut Women's Hours.

A resolution introduced at a session of the Trades Union Congress today declared that the excessive hours of work for women in war industries was imposing a strain which ultimately would impair the nation's production.

The resolution recommended that employment of women be so arranged that they would be assured of one day's rest a week.

It also suggested reorganization of production machinery so that it may be kept in continuous operation and yet at the same time permit rest and recreation for the workers.

After discussion the resolution was referred to the executive council.

FRENCH VOLUNTEER UNIT GOES TO FIGHT RUSSIANS

VERSAILLES, Occupied France, Sept. 3 (AP)—Chancellor Hitler decided today that all relatives of the Legion of French Volunteers Against Bolshevism who are held in prison camps will be released, and the first contingent of the legion left tonight to fight against Russia.

News of Hitler's decision was handed to the legionnaires as the first group, commandered by Colonel Duvry who was wounded last Wednesday in the attack on Pierre Laval and Marcel Deat, started for the Versailles station from the barracks where the two collaborationists were shot.

They will go into training in Poland. Before they left, German Ambassador Otto Abetz and Vichy Representative Fernand de Brinon presided at a ceremony in which a French tri-color flag bearing the inscription "Honor and Fatherland" was presented to the volunteers.

In Poland the volunteers are to receive German uniforms and helmets and French cockades. The legion pay provides a family allowance of about $100 monthly for soldiers and $200 for officers.

NAZIS HINT TROOPS ARE NEAR TURKEY

SEP 4 1941

Say Counter-move Against Reds Is Understandable.

Berlin, Sept. 3 (A. P.).—Authorized German spokesmen today indirectly admitted the existence of German troop concentrations in Bulgaria, bordering Turkey.

Commenting on reports to this effect, they said: "It is perfectly understandable that a certain counter-proposal is now to be taken to the Russian closing of the Turkish-Iranian border." (Iran is now occupied by Russian and British troops.)

Dealing with the return to Germany of Franz von Papen, German Ambassador to Turkey, the same spokesman said, however, that he was coming mainly to consult a physician. Von Papen left Turkey yesterday.

NEW BLENDED FLAG FOR THE AXIS

Rome, Sept. 3 (A. P.).—Premier Mussolini's newspaper Popolo d'Italia, writing of Axis collaboration and so-called consolidation of Europe, says metaphorically that Il Duce and Fuehrer Hitler had given Europe a new blended flag.

"On the battlefield," said the paper, "Mussolini and Hitler have given Europe its new flag in which are blended the colors of all nations of the Continent, the glories and rights of all peoples of the Continent. . . .

"Now this flag is unfurled beside those of the Axis at the head of the armies and fleets of Europe in war."

Comrade!!!

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 3—Mrs. Winston Churchill, attending a London exhibition of Soviet life today as one manifestation of the new British-Russian friendship, today asked several questions of a doorman who looked like a Russian.

The doorman, obliging, but not recognizing the wife of the Prime Minister, addressed her as "Tovarich" (comrade).

The doorman was an Irishman named Shaughan.

Menace In Iran

SEP 4 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 3—Britain is insisting that "the menace represented by the large and potentially dangerous German community in Iran be effectively and fully eliminated in the shortest possible time," authorities said today.

Instructions to this effect have been sent to the British diplomats negotiating terms with the Iranian Government at Teheran. The broad principles of an agreement already are reported to have been reached among British, Russian and Iranian negotiators.

Finnish Official Held For Treason, Is Report

New York, Sept. 3 (AP)—Dr. Johan Helo, financial director of the Helsinki Municipal Government, has been arrested on suspicion of high treason, the German radio reported today.

The broadcast, heard here, said Dr. Helo's arrest was announced in the Finnish capital and asserted that "he stepped in the foreground of public discussion by his interviews to Communist papers of Sweden, which the Moscow radio always has exploited for its propaganda against Finland."

Six Communist deputies of the Finnish Parliament also were arrested recently, the broadcast said.

Premier Says Nation Faces Gravest Crisis

SEP 4 1941

Nation Called to Mobilize; Air Raid Instructions Given

TOKIO, Thursday, Sept. 4 (AP)—Premier Prince Konoye last night warned that Japan faced the gravest crisis in her history and today officials issued air raid instructions to householders.

The approach of a United States tanker with gasoline for Russia visibly increased the apparent tension as the press continued to charge that Britain and the United States sought to "tighten the encirclement of Japan" by aiding Russia.

The Cabinet information board's "weekly report" devoted most of its 45 pages to stressing the methods of fighting incendiary bombs.

The report sought to assure the people, however, that as long as the Imperial Army and Navy remained it was unlikely that Japanese cities could be subjected to continued large scale assaults such as those on London and Chungking.

Meanwhile it was learned Japanese stores were breaking away from century-old traditions by demanding cash payments for all purchases.

Extreme nationalist groups added their support to proposals for establishment of an ocean safety belt around Japan—a device whereby American shipments to Vladivostok, Russia, might be halted.

SEP 4 1941

Calls for Total Mobilization

The Premier coupled his warning with a call for total mobilization of the nation's power. His statement was made to a round-table conference of representatives of government and war industries, assembled to develop economic resources to the highest degree.

Approve Ocean Safety Zone

It was the first public statement of the Premier since July 30 and came as leaders of Tohokai, extreme Nationalist political group, threw their support to proposals for establishment of an ocean safety zone around Japan.

As advocated by extremists such a safety zone could shut off Vladivostok from American shipments. Konoye is said to be considering the p[illegible]

Point To Russian Flight

Th Japan Times and Advertiser, English-language organ of the Foreign Office, said the flight of two Soviet planes across the Bering Sea to Alaska with forty-seven Russian airmen on a mission to the United States showed the possibility of future dangers in the North.

"Any attempt to establish a system of warplane service between the American and Asiatic continents will be viewed by authorities charged with defense of Japan as a question of state and international importance," the newspaper said.

"Such demonstrations as back-and-forth flights of Soviet or United States planes will merely serve to call Japan's attention to the urgency of this question. . . .

"Japan cannot stand idly by while a scheme of northern encirclement is in the making."

Japanese Confronted With Gravest Crisis, Premier Konoye Says

Total Mobilization Held Necessary to Overcome Present Emergency

SEP 4 1941

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Sept. 3.—Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye told government and war industries representatives today that Japan was facing the gravest crisis in her history, Domei, Japanese news agency, said, and that total mobilization was necessary to overcome the emergency.

It was Prince Konoye's first public statement since July 30 and came as the proposed movement of United States war supplies to Soviet Russia through waters adjacent to Japan was a subject of discussion in Tokio, Washington and Moscow.

The Premier spoke before a round-table conference of government executives and leaders of Japanese business concerns, one of a series of meetings instituted by the National Service Association to develop Japan's economic power.

Leaders of Tohokai, extreme nationalist political group headed by Seigo Nakano, threw their support to proposals for establishment of an ocean safety zone around Japan, a plan which Prince Konoye was said yesterday to have put under consideration.

Soviet Mission Cited.

Flight of two Soviet planes across the Bering Sea to Alaska (bearing 47 Russian airmen on what was described in Washington as a purely technical mission) was cited by the Japan Times and Advertiser as indicating a possibility of future dangers in the North.

"Any effort to establish a system of warplane service between the American and Asiatic continents," it said, "will be viewed by authorities charged with the defense of Japan as a question of state and international importance."

Declaring that encirclement had been demonstrated in the south and west (the directions of China and Pacific interests of Britain, the Netherlands and the United States, the newspaper said Japan "cannot stand idly by while a scheme for northern encirclement is in the making."

Interview With U. S. Admiral.

Meanwhile, the newspaper Yomiur carried a front-page interview in which United States Rear Admiral Richmond K. Turner was quoted as saying Japan should make an expression of good will if she expected the United States to do likewise.

Admiral Turner was said to have told Jiji Kasai, member of the Japanese Diet, in an interview at Washington, that belicose views attributed to some State Department and naval young-bloods did not reflect the general American attitude.

He was quoted further as saying the United States Government and Navy wanted to avoid war with Japan, but that there had been a hardening of public opinion against Japan, especially since her move into French Indo-China.

The newspaper account said Kasai commented that United States supply shipments to Vladivostok and the freezing of Japanese funds in the United States stimulated Japanese feeling and suggested a reconsideration.

"Give and Take" Necessary.

Admiral Turner was quoted as replying: "It seems to me that Japan always demands that only the American side show good will, but all matters must be based on the principle of give and take."

Shoju Kovama, Speaker of the Japanese House of Representatives for the last four years, and Kazutami Tago, deputy speaker, resigned today simultaneously with the formation of a new House of Representatives national service federation among the Diet, replacing the recently disbanded Diet Members Club.

Presumably the Speaker and deputy had opposed formation of the federation as a trend toward decreasing the prestige of the Diet.

Domei quoted a commentator as saying the approach of winter would not affect the German-Russian war, but warned of the strength of Russia's spirit.

"The Russians have a radical, fatalistic view of life and that counts most . . ." the commentator was quoted as saying.

"It is this fatalistic view of life which produces strong resistance and power. This is a grave question for Germany."

The Finance Ministry announced, meanwhile, that effective tomorrow permits would not be required for payments of dividends, interest on loans, patent royalties and insurance premiums to designated foreigners abroad. Such payments are to be deposited with the Yokohama Specie Bank.

The Privy Council approved establishment of an air defense bureau as part of the Home Ministry to supervise air-raid protection throughout Japan.

Motorized Indian Force Bolsters Malayan Units

By C. YATES McDANIEL

Singapore, Sept. 3 (AP)—A fully motorized and equipped Indian army contingent arrived at Singapore today to bolster British Malayan forces on an alert basis under a warning by Gov. Sir Shenton Thomas that a crisis was coming.

Rushed from India on several transports, the contingent included seasoned Moslem riflemen, veterans of the northwest frontier campaigns, Indian signalmen and a British artillery unit equipped with tractor-drawn guns.

Air Chief Marshal Sir Robert Brooke-Popham, commander of British Far Eastern forces, saw the troops debark ready to go into action. They added to the Singapore army already swollen by frequent arrivals of Australian troops.

Warns Of Japan's Moves

Sir Shenton warned that "Japan is coming steadily nearer" and said British officials did not know how much longer the war could be kept from the Far East.

"Japan's troops are in Indo-China on the borders of Thailand," the Governor pointed out. "These are facts it is useless to ignore."

He compared Japan's adventures to those of Germany and said:

"Only when Poland was attacked did we say this must stop. So it is now with Japan."

Indians Arrive At Singapore

SEP 4 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Singapore, Sept. 3—Britain's imperial army in Malaya received new, strong reinforcements today with arrival of Indian army units, fully motorized and bringing all their fighting equipment with them.

The contingent included seasoned Indian infantrymen, veterans of recent campaigns on India's northwest frontier, Indian signalmen and a British artillery contingent equipped with the very latest tractor-drawn guns.

Repeatedly Strengthened

Air Chief Marshal Sir Robert Brooke-Popham, imperial commander in chief of Far Eastern forces, met the transports.

British forces in Malaya have been repeatedly strengthened recently. When a large contingent of Australians arrived August 15 in a convoy, officially described as the largest ever to reach Malaya since the war began, a spokesman said that Brooke-Popham already had an army powerful enough to make any potential invader think ten times before striking at this Far Eastern bulwark of empire.

Warning Broadcast

Sir Shenton Thomas, Governor and commander in chief of the Straits Settlement, broadcast a warning to the people of British Malaya that "this third year of the war is likely to be critical for us."

Commemorating the second anniversary of Britain's war against Germany, Thomas said Malaya should be thankful that the war to date has been fought far from its shores, but he added, "we don't know how much longer it will be so."

"Japan is coming steadily nearer," he said. "Her troops are in Indo-China, on the borders of Thailand. She has proclaimed herself a member of the Axis. These are facts it is useless to ignore."

WAVELL SEES AXIS GROWING WEAKER

Says 'Lies' of Enemy Show This to Be True.

SEP 4 1941

Simla, Sept. 3 (A. P.).—The Axis is showing by lies that it is weaker and more anxious, Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell, British Commander-in-Chief in India, declared in a broadcast today on the second anniversary of the outbreak of war with Germany.

"There are many signs that the enemy is growing weaker," said Gen. Wavell, "and that from arrogant confidence he has passed into a restless anxiety which will turn to despair as he sees his ruin approach. There is a sign by which you may judge an enemy's growing fear—the growing recklessness of his lies."

Gen. Wavell asserted that well over 100,000 Indian troops are serving overseas and that India's fighting forces were approaching one million.

Thailand In Peace Plea Cites Buddhist Doctrine

Bangkok, Sept. 3 (AP)—Thailand has appealed to world powers to cease hostilities, officially citing as the motives the teachings of Buddha, love for fellow-beings and a desire to promote happiness.

A little Oriental nation of 15,000,000 people, she explained in publishing the appeal yesterday that the conflict tends to spread further.

"As all major powers are involved in war, directly or indirectly," a Government statement said, "it devolves on small nations to sponsor peace."

At the same time Thailand disclaimed the role or mediator or formulator of peace terms.

In releasing the appeal, Luang Vichitar Vadakarn, Minister of State, declared the anti-war campaign would be pursued through press and radio channels.

The statement concluded with the remark that Thailand is aware of the fact that it is doubtful whether this peace appeal will have any positive action, but she nevertheless considered it her duty.

R.A.F. Shatters Berlin With Explosions

Nazi Capital Aflame After Nightlong Raids By Giant Bombers British Contend

(By ASSOCIATED PRESS)

LONDON, Sept. 3 — Berlin was authoritatively reported today to have been shaken by enormous explosions and lighted by the glare of fires in a long attack delivered overnight by strong royal air force units.

Giant 4-motored craft participated in the foray.

"Some of the heaviest bombs"—probably in the 1-ton class—were dropped on the German capital, the air ministry news service said, in raids from Frankfurt to the Norwegian coast.

"There were enormous explosions when some of the heaviest bombs were dropped," the service said in describing the thrust at Berlin, "and a very large fire was seen near one of the main railway stations."

A returning pilot said the raiders encountered thick clouds over the North sea, the Netherlands and northern Germany and "we thought we were going to be disappointed," but then they flew into a clearing area.

"We dropped our bombs," he said, "saw them burst among industrial buildings and left with fires burning."

The captain of a 4-motored bomber which was partly disabled even before it reached Berlin but went on to unload its destructive cargo and returned to its base safely said the bombs dropped by his crew created "a very good fire" in the center of the city.

"The rear gunner could see it for 15 minutes afterward," the captain said. "Somebody else must have bombed our fire (a device to spread the flames), because we saw more explosions in it.

"Then, after a time, we saw a hell of a great explosion and another fire started."

The captain said anti-aircraft fire "thrown at us not long after we'd crossed the Dutch frontier" caused trouble with the inner port engine, but the plane kept going.

"Oil poured out of it," he said. "You could see it running over the cowling. We carried on like that until we got to Berlin, where we saw other bombers being engaged by searchlights and guns. The guns were shooting into the main cones of the searchlights.

"We slipped in while others were being engaged and got very little opposition except when we were coming out."

The smoking engine was cut off when its oil pressure fell, he said, and "we came the rest of the way home with three engines."

Sir Archibald Sinclair, the air minister, said the bombers had "hit the city of Berlin hard."

Railways, communications and industries were described as objectives struck in force at Frankfurt and other waves of raiders which droned from British fields soon after dusk battered at Mannheim, the German-occupied ports of Ostend and Dunkerque and other towns.

The air ministry said nine British planes were lost in the night operations. Minor German activity over England was noted. A few Nazi planes flew over coastal areas and bombs fell at several points in East Anglia and northeast England, a communique said. No casualties were reported.

The German high command acknowledged "a small loss in dead and injured among the civilian population, with bombs falling on residential sections" of Berlin, but declared that "only a few planes reached the inner city."

"The attack of one bomber unit on the reich's capital," said a communique, "failed to reach full effectiveness because of the strong anti-aircraft defense."

"Insignificant damage" was reported in various other British attacks of the night and the high command said that six British bombers and a dozen other planes of unspecified types had been shot down by land, air and sea defense forces.

Ports on the British east coast and airports in the midlands were said to have been raided by German fighter planes.

In the two years of war, an authorized German spokesman said, "approximately complete figures" indicate 3,853 German civilians have been killed and 9,455 injured in air raids. For comparison it was stated that, in the year before the war 7,636 Germans were killed in traffic accidents.

In the 2-year period, the German spokesman said, "competent English sources" have disclosed that 41,900 British have been killed in air raids and 52,678 injured" and this despite the fact that German raiders try to avoid causing civilian casualties."

(Up to March 1, the British had officially acknowledged civilian casualties of 28,859 killed and 40,166 wounded.)

FLAMES ROAR IN CITY NEAR RAILWAY DEPOT

SEP 4 1941

London Reports Raiders Caused Enormous Explosions—Germans Admit Attack Was Liveliest in Some Months.

London, Sept. 3 (A. P.).—British bombers which blasted Berlin last night caused enormous explosions in the capital and started a very large fire near one of the main Berlin railway stations, the Air Ministry news service said tonight.

The service said that the attacking planes bombarded the capital with some of the heaviest bombs.

Four-motored bombers participated in the raid on Berlin, which was one of the heaviest yet made on the German capital.

The captain of one of these big craft which reached home safely, though disabled, told this story:

"We ran right across the city from the southwest to the northeast and dropped our bombs. Fire sprang up almost immediately, and a very good fire, too, in the center of the city.

"The rear gunner could see it for fifteen minutes afterward. Somebody else must have bombed our fire, because we saw more explosions in it. Then after a time we saw a hell of a great explosion and another fire started."

The news service's announcement of the raid on the German capital expanded the statement made at a luncheon meeting by Sir Archibald Sinclair, Air Minister, that British bombers had "hit the city of Berlin hard."

Frankfort Another Target.

Earlier the Air Ministry had stated that Berlin and Frankfort were the main objectives of a round-the-clock attack which also was carried to other western German cities and also to ports of German-held Belgium and France.

At Frankfurt, British reports said, a heavy attack was made on railway communications and industrial targets.

The force which bombed Berlin was not so large, they said, but included a high proportion of the heaviest bombers. Large fires were left burning in the capital and bombs were seen to burst on industrial buildings, returning pilots reported.

[Dispatches from Berlin said the German capital had experienced the liveliest air raid in months.]

The British also attacked other towns in western Germany, including Mannheim, and the German-occupied channel ports of Ostend and Dunkirk, the Air Ministry announced.

British Lose Nine Craft.

A total of nine British planes were lost during the night operations, the Ministry said.

The first wave of R. A. F. night raiders droned eastward a short time after dark, and violent anti-aircraft fire lighting the sky over Boulogne and Calais indicated that the French coast—which was hammered all day yesterday—was taking another pounding.

Succeeding waves of long-range bombers, flying at higher altitudes carried the attack to the Reich itself.

The German Air Force was comparatively inactive during the night, the Government said. A few Nazi planes flew over coastal areas and bombs fell at several points in East Anglia and northeast England, doing some damage at one place, a communique declared. No casualties were reported, however.

Guns Heard In London.

Anti-aircraft fire was heard in London after dawn, but there was no alarm and guns appeared to be firing at scouts.

The R. A. F.'s daylight offensive yesterday extended from northern France to Norway and as far inland as Bremen, which was bombed by a high-flying American-built fortress plane, the Air Ministry said. The far-flung assaults were said to have cost only one plane.

A squadron of torpedo-carrying Beaufort planes which attacked a German convoy off the Norwegian coast was credited with damaging one large merchant vessel and an escort ship. The merchant ship was crippled so badly it probably sank later, the Air Ministry declared.

Airdromes and other military targets were attacked in numerous sweeps over northern France, the British said. Bombs were reported dropped squarely on the dock area at Bremen. The crew of the fortress plane, which flew in the sub-stratosphere to press home the assault, said no Nazi planes were encountered, but that ground defenses threw up a heavy barrage.

Fortress Wins in Fight.

It was disclosed, meanwhile, that the first brush between one of these American-made giants and German-warplanes took place on August 16, when seven Nazi planes attacked a fortress bomber after it had carried out a single-handed raid on the battleships Gneisenau and Scharnhorst at Brest. After a running fight of twenty minutes, the pilot ducked into a cloud and managed to elude the Germans, an official account said.

By that time, one of the crew said, one of the engines was belching smoke, a gasoline tank was punctured and "there seemed to be no part of the bomber not hit."

The pilot, however, finally brought the plane safely down on an English airdrome, the account said. Some of the crew were dead, but the number was not given.

Berlin Admits Raids

SEP 4 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 3 — British bombers struck in force at Berlin with explosives and incendiaries overnight in one of the German capital's sharpest air raids in many months and civilian casualties and residential damage were officially acknowledged.

Various places in northern and central Germany and the Rhineland were under attack at the same time, an announcement said, although the result there was termed "insignificant damage."

Strong Defense Cited

"The attack of one bomber unit on the Reich's capital," the German high command said, "failed to reach full effectiveness because of the strong anti-aircraft defense."

Six bombers were said to have been shot down by ground gunners, and to this toll were added twelve British craft declared to have been destroyed by naval forces, marine artillery and Luftwaffe pursuit airmen over the English Channel and the Dutch and Norwegian coasts.

Deaths, Injuries Admitted

"Only a few planes reached the inner city," the high command said. "There was a small loss in dead and injured among the civilian population, with bombs falling on residential sections."

Offensively, German forces were reported to have bombed ports on the British east coast and airports in the Midlands.

POCKET WARSHIP LUETZOW STRUCK BY BRITISH PLANE

But English Air Minister Is Silent on Details —Reports on War.

SEP 4 1941

London, Sept. 3 (A. P.).—A British torpedo plane hit the 10,000-ton pocket battleship Luetzow a few weeks ago, Sir Archibald Sinclair, Air Minister, told a national defense luncheon meeting today without announcing details of the engagement.

Great Britain announced on June 13, however, that her torpedo planes had attacked an escorted pocket battleship—either the Luetzow or the Admiral Scheer—off the southern coast of Norway and left her probably heavily damaged.

[Of the three pocket battleships with which Germany entered the war, she has now only the Luetzow, formerly the Deutschland, and the Admiral Scheer, for the Admiral Graf von Spee was scuttled at Montevideo on December 17, 1939, after a running battle with the British off Uruguay. The pocket battleships are the equivalent of exceptionally powerful armored cruisers.]

King George VI, responding to an expression of loyalty from the National Defense Committee, sent a message that "the two hard years that lie behind us have left us all unshaken in our determination to see justice and freedom re-established throughout the world."

Sir Archibald told the gathering that the Battle of the Atlantic "is not going too badly for us," but warned that it would probably require for some time "an immense concentration of attention and effort."

Shipping Losses Fall Off.

"Sinkings of British ships in the month of July," he said, "were the lowest for any month for more than a year. During the last ten weeks the average weekly rate of merchandise arriving from overseas exceeded 1,350,000 tons."

SEP 4 1941

He declared that the "spell of German invincibility which paralyzed half the world a year ago has now been finally broken," and predicted a growing "and more fruitful" co-operation between the Royal Air Force and the army.

He reported that Coastal Command planes had attacked 136 U-boats in the last year and shot down more than thirty German aircraft in protecting convoys.

"The Coastal Command," he said, "is transforming the Battle of the Atlantic from a German attack on British shipping into a British attack on German shipping and victory in this battle will be the turning point toward victory in the war."

He said that German bomber crews would "pay dearly for the destruction of British homes next winter, and the German people will pay more dearly still."

"From February 1, 1941, up to today," he said, "we have lost 382 fighters, mostly over enemy territory, together with 310 pilots, and our fighters have destroyed 537 enemy planes in offensive operations."

The Air Minister appealed to American workmen for more bombers. Addressing them, he said:

"We want all the heavy bombers you can send us, and the sooner you send them the quicker you will end the war."

Britain this winter must expect air attacks "of greater intensity than any we have yet suffered," Sir Archibald said, echoing earlier warnings of Prime Minister Churchill.

The new British daylight offensive has forced the Germans "to keep on the Western Front large forces of fighters which otherwise they would have been able to throw against the Russians," Sinclair declared.

In the first three weeks of August, he said, more than three times as many tons of bombs were dropped by the bomber command than in the first three weeks of August of last year.

Malta, British island base in the Mediterranean south of Italy, has "passed from defense to attack and has widened into a formidable center of offensive air operations," Sinclair said.

BRITISH TABULATE AIRPLANE LOSSES

London, Sept. 3 (A. P.).—An Air Ministry tabulation today, on the second anniversary of the declaration of war on Germany by Britain and France, placed Axis losses for the first two years of war at 8,020 planes and British losses at 3,089 planes.

An incomplete list of losses in various theaters of war were given as:

Over and Around Great Britain—Axis 3,629, Britain 884.

Over Germany and Occupied Territory—Axis 690, Britain 1,334.

Middle East—Axis 2,087, Britain 383.

Western Front in 1939-40—Axis 957, Britain 379.

These figures, representing only losses sustained by fighting with Britain, do not include Axis losses on the Russian front.

3,853 GERMANS KILLED IN RAIDS

Berlin, Sept. 3 (A. P.).—Air raids in two years of war have killed 3,853 German civilians and injured 9,455, an authorized spokesman said today in announcing "approximately complete figures."

In the two year period, the spokesman said, the British reported 41,900 British killed in raids and 52,678 injured.

Sir Sinclair Declares Battle Of Atlantic Transformed Into British Attack On German Shipping—30 Nazi Warplanes Destroyed

(By The Associated Press)

London, Sept. 3—Britons were told authoritatively today that the battle of the Atlantic "is not going too badly" for them and that Germany's campaign against Soviet Russia had closed the largest gap in the British blockade of the continent.

"The coastal command," said Air Minister Sir Archibald Sinclair, "is transforming the battle of the Atlantic from a German attack on British shipping into a British attack on German shipping and victory in this battle will be the turning point toward victory in the war."

Speaking before a national defense luncheon meeting, the minister offered figures to prove his point, at the same time warning that the fight over sea supply lanes probably would require "immense concentration of attention and effort" for some time.

July sinkings of British ships were declared to have been the lowest for any month for more than a year.

"During the last ten weeks," Sir Archibald said, "the average weekly rate of merchandise arriving from overseas exceeded 850,000 tons."

Coastal command planes were said to have attacked 136 U-boats in the past year and shot down more than 30 German aircraft in protecting convoys.

"In July we damaged or destroyed 92 Axis ships in the North Sea, Adriatic and Mediterranean amounting to 468,000 tons and 52 ships in addition of unknown tonnage."

The minister announced without elaboration that a British torpedo plane hit the 10,000-ton Nazi pocket battleship Luetzow a few weeks ago. The London government had reported June 13 that British airmen torpedoed one of Germany's two remaining vessels of that class—the Luetzow or the Admiral Scheer—off the Southern Coast of Norway and left her probably heavily damaged.

The Ministry of Economic Warfare said the German attack upon Russia was of inestimable economic value to Britain. Germany was said to be dificient in oil, rubber, textiles, some metals and vegetable oils.

"The Germans, for the first time, are now embarked on a reckless expenditure of accumulated material which will be hard to replace," the ministry said in a statement.

"Wholesale destruction of crops and machinery carried out by the retreating Russians insures that the Germans' immediate gains in the economic field are small."

The "Marseille leak" was described as the "remaining most important gap in the blockade."

"It is difficult," the ministry said, "in view of the many calls on our Navy, to stop the traffic entirely" through the French Mediterranean port.

In navicert and ship warrant systems, blacklisting policy, freezing of German funds and pre-emptive buying of goods wanted by the Reich, the ministry reported, Britain has been "greatly helped" by the United States.

Since the outbreak of the war, Britain was said to have seized 800,000 tons of contraband goods.

BRITISH CLAIM 2 SHIPS

Say Submarines Sunk Big Schooners at Bengasi.

London, Sept. 3 (A. P.).—British submarines, harrying Axis supply lines in the Mediterranean, were reported today to have sunk two large schooners off the African coast, damaged a large merchant vessel northwest of Sicily and attacked shipping in the Harbor of Bengasi, Libya.

The two schooners, an Admiralty communique said, were in a convoy, en route to Bengasi, which was stalked by a submarine and attacked within sight of the shore.

"Enemy supply shipping also was attacked northwest of Sicily and it is possible one ship was sunk," the bulletin said. Results of attacks reported on shipping in the approaches to Bengasi Harbor were not specified.

London, Sept. 3 (A. P.).—The third transatlantic ferry plane to crash in four weeks was found yesterday in an isolated mountain country of the West Coast with its ten passengers and crew members killed.

This brought to fifty-four, including twenty Americans, the number of persons killed in three transatlantic ferry accidents in Britain. Two of the accidents occurred at the start of westbound flights.

The third plane, which had successfully flown the Atlantic, only to be wrecked in Britain, carried Capt. Sherwood Picking, en route to become assistant naval attache in the United States Embassy in London; Charles Alvan Spence of Little Neck, N. Y., flight engineer of the plane; and Count Guy de Baillet-Latour of Belgium. The other passengers were British technicians and experts.

Bader's Jump Covered By Spiraling Spitfires

Squadron Saw Legless Leader Safely to Enemy Ground

LONDON, Sept. 4 (Thursday) (AP).—Calling the episode the "most dramatic five minutes of the war," "The Daily Express" told today how the Spitfire planes of the legless Royal Air Force winger commander, Douglas R. Bader's squadron, covered his 20,000-foot parachute jump over German territory last month.

Bader told his squadron he must leave his plane, and his second in command promptly gave the order to "see him safely to the ground—nothing else matters."

"So as he floated down, the Spitfires spiraled around him in a protective coil, their circles ever shifting as he drifted with the wind lower and lower until he had only a few hundred feet to go," the paper said. "They watched him come to earth. They could do no more."

By agreement with the Germans, who captured Bader, the R. A. F. dropped another artificial leg to replace one he damaged in the parachute landing.

Italians In Ethiopia Declared Pledged To Fight To Last Crust

SEP 4 1941

Rome, Sept. 3 (AP)—Isolated Italian garrisons in Ethiopia have rejected British demands for surrender and pledged themselves to fight "to the last piece of bread," Italian reports said today.

One of these garrisons was said to be that commanded by Colonel Cornella, who received the following message from British Major Ringrose:

"The moment comes when prolonged resistance, causing usless killing and sufferings, changes admiration into pain and disillusion and a reputation for bravery into a reputation for cruelty. I, therefore, ask you very sincerely, as the outcome of this Ethiopian campaign must now be clear to you, to surrender honorably."

The Italians were said to be holding out under orders instructing them to "tighten your belts, bite your teeth, hold out till the last piece of bread."

Air Blows Exchanged

Rome, Sept. 3 (AP)—The Italian high command reported an exchange of air blows in the Mediterranean war theater today and said Fascist forces in East Africa had made a successful attack on British lines in Ethiopia.

SEP 4 1941

[By The Associated Press]

Vichy, Sept. 3—Three leading French businessmen, Maurice Foucault, Isidore Courciol and Leon Ayrisvie, were ordered interned today by Pierre Pucheu, Interior Minister.

They were described, respectively, as the manager of the Percy works at Montpellier, the chairman of the Government dairy syndicate, also at Montpellier, and the owner of harbor facilities at Beziers.

It was understood that they were at the Chateau Clement in Vals-les-Bains, reserved for important figures interned without hearing for "motives of order and home security."

Others Detained There

Paul Reynaud, former Premier, and Georges Mandel, former Colonial Minister, were the only persons held there until June when the number began mounting and space became a problem.

Others detained there include:

Jean Louis Tixier-Vignacour, rightist deputy and former information bureau head.

Senator Leon Perrier, former Colonial Minister in French cabinets from 1925 to 1928.

Jacques Mercier, publicist.

Aviation Generals Cochet and Pierre Baston.

Jacques Cazaux, colonial inspector once in charge of Indo-Chinese finances.

Jean Jauberna, former cabinet chief of the Governor of Gabon.

Richard George, former treasury official in Togoland.

Colonel Groussard, former head of the "protection groups" who took over the guards created by Marcel Peyrouton, former Interior Minister, at the time Pierre Laval was ousted from the Vice-Premiership.

3 ALIENISTS NAMED

Will Examine Man Who Wounded Laval.

Vichy, Sept. 3 (A. P.).—Three alienists were appointed today to examine Paul Colette, held in Paris for shooting Pierre Laval and Marcel Deat, exponents of French collaboration with Germany. With Colette insisting he was a supporter of the De Gaulle movement but was a foe of Communism, it was not decided whether to try him before one of the new anti-communist summary courts.

At a hearing in St. Pierre Prison, Colette repeated his story that he left his home in Caen to join the French anti-Soviet legion in the hope of shooting "a personage favoring collaboration," but that chance alone singled out Laval.

Both M. Deat and M. Laval were reported recovering at a Versailles hospital.

The Paris Anti-Communist Court today sentenced a school teacher, Marguerite Kroef, to ten years hard labor for Communist propaganda activity.

New Unrest In Nazi-Occupied Countries Seen

UNDATE OCCUPIED EUROPE

(By The Associated Press)

Despite the clamp of the Nazi censor, unrest in German-conquered countries of Europe continued Wednesday to make itself manifest to the world outside.

One odd item concerned the appointment of three alienists in Paris to judge the sanity of Paul Colette, the young Frenchman who wounded Pierre Laval and Marcel Deat.

Many persons had expected Colette to pay with his life for the attempted assassinations of the pro-German collaborationists almost immediately. Instead, the French authorities seemed loath to dispose of him, apparently for fear of making him a martyr whose name would become a rallying cry for all dissident elements.

Should Colette conveniently be found insane, the authorities might have an out.

He insisted at an examination in prison that he was not a Communist, as had been alleged, but was a supporter of the Free French movement of General Charles De Gaulle. Laval and Deat meanwhile continued to improve in a Versailles hospital.

The Paris prosecutor couldn't even make up his mind as to whether to consign Colette's case to one of the new anti-Communist death courts.

One of these courts yesterday sentenced a women school teacher to 10 years at hard labor for distributing Communist propaganda.

Unoccupied France kept a glum silence on the second anniversary of France's entry into the disastrous war, but the press of German-occupied Paris observed the occasion with wry comment.

"This occupation, of which we feel all the bitterness, we sought deliberately," grumbled the Nouveaux Temps.

Indicating unrest in Denmark, the lower house of the Danish parliament cancelled legislative immunity of its three Communist members in order to legalize their imprisonment by the justice ministry. The dispatch, necessarily routed via Berlin, did not give details.

Another story coming through Berlin originated in Sofia, capital of Bulgaria, one of Germany's little "partners." It told of proposed penalties in parliament ranging from 10 years in prison to death for distribution of illegal literature, writing of slogans on walls, or dissemination of rumors. Death was proposed for any Bulgarian speaking over "enemy" radio stations.

Whether any Bulgarians are so speaking was not mentioned, but the Germans still have not located the mysterious voice in the night that heckles the Nazi news broadcasts on their own wave-length.

NEW ACCUSATIONS AIMED AT MEILY

Croats Said to Press Charge Against U. S. Consul.

Rome, Sept. 3 (A. P.).—The Stefani news agency reported today that Croat Foreign Minister Lorkovic has made public four more documents purporting to show that the former United States Consul at Zagreb, John J. Meily, had engaged in illegal activity in support of Axis enemies.

One paper proved, Stefani said, that Mr. Meily tried to help a shipowner of Spalato, Yugoslavia, who wanted to send four of his vessels to United States ports to prevent their falling into Italian hands. The other papers were a note and two telegrams containing political information, Stefani said.

The news agency said "Meily was interested not only in gathering and transmitting political and military information, but even in weaving intrgues in Croatiia."

To that end Mr. Meily sent a report on the ships to the United States Department of State on June 13 and included a letter in which a sea captain, representing the shipowner, asked the captains of the four vessels to disregard orders from their employer, Stefani said. Orders from the shipowner might be given under pressure of Italia nauthorities at Spalato, Stefani quoted the letter as saying.

SAYS FRANCE HAS HERSELF TO BLAME

Vichy, Sept. 3 (A. P.).—The second anniversary of France's entry into the current European war was ignored today by newspapers in the unoccupied zone, but the press in the occupied area seized the opportunity to preach a sermon.

The Nouveaux Temps declared that France herself had made the choice between war and peace in September, 1939, and was responsible for her present position.

"This occupation, of which we feel all the bitterness," said the paper, "we sought deliberately."

GERMANY CAN'T MEET CALL FOR STRAW SHOES

Berlin, Sept. 3. (AP) — German fashion dictators went to great pains to create a demand for straw shoes this year — and now have suddenly discovered that manufacturers can not meet the demand.

Since rationing limits each person to two pairs of leather shoes a year, the shot stylists' campaign won instant popularity.

Women and children favored straw shoes during the summer and have begun asking for winter models. Men too were to be supplied.

But the Reich's 30 manufacturers of straw footwear are able to produce only 2,500 to 3,000 pairs monthly — which the newspaper Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung says is not enough to go around. The soles, too, wear out in four to six weeks.

Penal institutions, which have been doing some of the work, have produced only one shoe a convict each day.

The shoes, which cost 16.50 marks (nominally $6.60) and are resoled for 2.50 marks, cost an estimated eight marks to produce.

Summer shoes are made from braids of three strands and winter versions of six strands. Uppers are of rolled braids while braids for the soles are left in the natural form. Rolled bands of straws are sewed together, forming a sheet of straw from which the shoe uppers are cut like leather for the same purpose.

A special straw cream was developed for polishing.

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 3 (AP).—Proposals for support of the Roosevelt-Churchill eight points and for acceptance of the Peruvian plan for a common front of American parliaments in defense of democracy were sent to the Foreign Affairs Committee of the Chamber of Deputies today.

They were attacked as "unnecessary legislation" by a Conservative Deputy, Uberto Vignart, who asserted that Argentina "only needs to be neutral" and was "wasting time with measures which do not concern Argentine problems." Vignart is a member of the same party

But Otazo reorted that after he left the duelling field and was walking on a residential street here four men beat him with their fists until he drew his pistol and fired, causing them to flee.

In the chamber today another deputy, Alfredo Arratia, declared he was not convinced of the government's evidence that a Nazi plot had existed and asked that the state of siege proclaimed several weeks ago be lifted.

Argentina Asks Complete Report On Arrests of Nationals by Reich

Buenos Aires, Argentina, Sept. 3.—(AP.)—A Foreign Office statement said today that 11 Argentina citizens had been detained by German authorities in Occupied France.

(The Argentine Embassy at Vichy had heard rumors for two days that as many as 20 Argentines had been arrested in Paris for various offenses during the campaign against anti-German demonstrations.)

The Foreign Ministry said it had ordered the Argentine Embassy in Berlin to request a full report on the arrests. Foreign Minister Enrique Ruiz Guinazu also asked German Ambassador Edmund von Thermann to request details from his government.

Beyond the fact that the arrests had been made no information was obtainable in Buenos Aires. Some sources recalled that the Reich had detained Bolivians and Cubans in occupied Europe in reprisal for anti-Nazi activity of the Bolivian and Cuban governments.

Roberto Gache, Foreign Affairs undersecretary, said his government was unable to determine the importance of the detentions. "It may be a simple restriction against infractions or it may be a bigger matter," he said.

Raul Damonte Taborda, chairman of a congressional committee which has been investigating anti-Argentine activities expressed hope the government would act swiftly in the matter.

"No reports have come of anti-Nazi activity by Argentines in Germany," he said, "but we all know of anti-Argentine activity by Nazi Germans and even by members of the Third Reich's Embassy staff here."

Berlin, Sept. 3.—(AP.)—The German government tonight ordered Guatemala to withdraw all its consulates from the Reich.

Canadian Officials Believe Explosions And Fire "Purely Accidental"

Chemical Plant Will Produce On Schedule, Authorities Report

[By the Associated Press]

Niagara Falls, Ont., Sept. 3—Explosions and fire of apparently "purely accidental" origin suddenly swept and destroyed a wartime production building of the huge Welland Chemical Company plant today, killing three men and injuring seven or eight others seriously.

The Munitions and Supply Department of Ottawa immediately came forth with a statement stressing the belief that the destruction was accidental and that production would go ahead on schedule.

Two of the victims, tentatively identified as Angus McDonald, of Port Robinson, and Lloyd Cahill, of Niagara Falls, were killed instantly. James Martin Desjardines, of Niagara Falls, died later in Niagara Falls General Hospital.

Official Statement

The official statement from the Munitions and Supply Department in Ottawa said:

SEP 4 1941

"In the early afternoon today an accident occurred in one of the smaller manufacturing buildings of the Welland chemical works at Niagara Falls.

"The cause has not yet been fully established, but it is believed a pressure vessel failed, causing damage to the building and some of the machinery and also setting fire to some of the materials in the building.

"The fire was completely out within a half hour. The occurrence appears to be purely of accidental nature and will not interfere with production.

14 Reported Injured

"So far as is known at the present time two workmen were killed, one dangerously burned (who later died) and in addition to eight receiving hospital treatment six men were treated for minor injuries."

Construction of the plant started in August, 1940, and production began last December. About 2,000 are employed by the company, a war-supplies industry.

Police and plant guards refused to permit anyone to enter the premises, covering several acres. Members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police referred all queries to the Allied War Supply Corporation in Montreal.

CADADA ORDERS ADJUSTMENT TO U. S. PRIORITY

Ottawa, Sept. 3. (AP) — Canadian manufacturers of war materials were under orders today to adjust their operations to the United States priority rating system regulating supplies of equipment and materials.

R. C. Berkinshaw, chairman of the Wartime Industries Control Board and chief priorities officer for the Department of Munitions and Supplies, issued the rating orders last night.

"United States factories are being loaded up with orders for material and equipment which are covered . . preference ratings," he said. "The point now has been reached where many of these firms will not even put orders into their production schedules without receiving a preference rating."

Berkinshaw said each applicant for rating would be required to supply the following information:

Legal name and address of prime contractor, contract number, description of materials ordered, the store for which they are intended, unit quantities of materials required, total valuue of the contract, delivery schedule and quantity delivered to date or application.

FIVE-MAN MISSION TO GO TO MOSCOW

SEP 4 1941

Harriman Heads Group To Confer With British, Red Officials on Help From U. S.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3 (AP)—To set the program of American help to Russia moving, President Roosevelt appointed today a five-man mission to confer with a similar British delegation and with Soviet officials at Moscow.

At its head, he placed W. Averell Harriman, who has been working on the lend-lease program at London, and its membership he named Maj.-Gen. James H. Burns, Maj.-Gen. George H. Brett, Admiral William H. Standley, retired, and William L. Batt, the chief of the materials division of the Office of Production Management.

Meanwhile, on another defense front, Admiral Emory S. Lund, the chairman of the Maritime Commission, asserted that the shipbuilding program was ahead of schedule, not behind, as some have claimed. From July, 1941, to the end of 1943, a total of at least 1,153 vessels of 12,410,000 deadweight tonnage will slide off the ways, he said.

213 Ships Completed

In another shipping progress report, the Navy Department announced that 213 vessels of all classes had been completed since Jan. 1 and that keels had been laid for 436 others. Only finishing touches are needed, the navy added, to make 249 more craft ready for the two ocean fleet.

Two battleships, nine submarines, 12 destroyers and 42 patrol vessels are among the ships launched since the first of the year.

The Treasury, at the same time, released figures for August, showing $1,124,000,000 had been expended for defense in that month, and $2,084,000,000 for July and August, a sum more than five times what was spent in the same two months a year ago.

The projected meeting in Moscow was one product of the recent meeting of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Winston Churchill off the Atlantic coast.

To Join British Group

"The mission," a White House statement said, "will join with a similarly constituted British mission under the chairmanship of Lord Beaverbrook for a conference in Moscow with the Russian government regarding the supplying to Russia by the United States and Great Britain of munitions, raw materials and other supplies needed by Russia for her defense against German aggression."

"The holding of this conference was agreed to between the President and the Prime Minister at their recent meeting at sea."

Harriman, at present in this country, has been serving as a co-ordinator and "expediter" of Lease-Lend assistance to Great Britain.

General Burns has held the post of executive officer of the defense and reports division, Office of Emergency Management. He will act as a sort of "general manager" of the mission, the White House said.

General Brett is chief of the Army Air Corps and was recently ordered to Great Britain and the Middle East on a special mission having to do with the delivery of American aircraft.

Admiral Standley was chief of naval operations, the highest post in the Navy, before his retirement. He is a member of the Production Planning Board of OPM.

Batt has been serving as director of the materials division of OPM.

It was said that the mission would finish its work in about six weeks, including the time it would take to travel to Moscow and back. There was no intimation as to the form of transportation to be used. Nine technicians will accompany the mission.

Admiral Reports 700,000 Tons Added to Hemisphere Total by Taking Axis Craft.

Washington, Sept. 3 (A. P.).—Asserting that the Maritime Commission's construction program is not behind but is ahead, Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the commission, predicted today that 1,153 new ships of approximately 12,410,000 deadweight tons would be placed in operation between July 1, 1941, and the end of 1943.

These figures, he told a press conference, do not include 105 vessels in the commission's long-range program which were delivered up to September 3, or additional small vessels and craft for which the commission is contracting.

Admiral Land issued a formal statement which he called a progress report "in view of the critical importance of ship construction to the national defense program, particularly since questions have been raised both in Congress and in the press as to the adequacy of the commission's building and the speed and lack of speed in producing the new ships."

"Between 130 and 134 new vessels will be completed this year on the basis of current reports from the yards," he said.

If stoppages due to priorities or other factors do not hold back construction, Admiral Land added, ninety vessels totaling 1,000,000 deadweight tons will be delivered the first three months of 1942; 146 vessels of 1,400,000 deadweight tons will be delivered in the second three months of that year; 154 vessels of 1,646,000 deadweight tons will be delivered in the third quarter and 184 vessels of 2,000,000 deadweight tons will be delivered in the fourth quarter.

Predicts Record Tonnage.

In the first quarter of 1943, 220 ships averaging 2,270,000 deadweight tons will be placed in operation, he said.

"Thus, in the first quarter of 1942," Admiral Land declared, "American shipbuilding will deliver more new ships than were produced by the United States during any previous year since the first world war with the exception of 1941 and more ships than were delivered in the whole of 1917, when we were at war."

"In the first quarter of 1943, if we are able to carry out the schedule we have set for ourselves," he continued, "we will deliver more shipping than was produced in the United States in the whole of 1918 when America produced 1,830,000 deadweight tons of ships."

For the present, and for the rest of this year, he said, "the British and ourselves can get along on existing ships and the new ships which are being currently delivered at the rate of three a week, if conditions do not get much worse."

"It is expected, however, that in 1942 our national defense and lease-lend programs will be in full swing, and shipping requirements will be very heavy," he added. "With this in mind, the effort has been made to reach a high level of production during the first quarter of 1942 and to maintain that level until the end of 1943."

213 Navy Ships Completed.

The Navy Department also issued a report of progress in its two-ocean fleet construction program, announcing that 213 vessels of all classes had been completed since the first of this year and the keels laid for 436 others.

An additional 249 craft of various categories launched between January 1 and September 1 need only the finishing touches, the department said, to make them part of the United States fleet.

Vessel completed since January 1 include two battleships, the North Carolina and Washington, nine submarines, twelve destroyers and forty-two patrol craft.

Admiral Land estimated that between 600,000 and 700,000 deadweight tons were added to merchant marines of the Western Hemisphere when the twenty-one American republics agreed last Thursday to place in operation refugee ships of Axis and Axis-dominated countries.

26 of Ships Tankers.

He added that the ships were principally German, Italian and Danish and that the figure would rise if French vessels were placed in service. Approximately 400,000 tons were in Central and South American ports.

Twenty-six of the vessels were tankers, the chairman said, and these will be used to ameliorate the oil shortage situation in the Western Hemisphere.

"We are not going to use these ships exclusively to alleviate the Atlantic Seaboard oil shortage," he said. "There are some who want us to get tankers from Brazil or Chile and place them in service here. We are going to do everything possible to make equitable distribution of shipping where it is needed—throughout all the Americas."

Admiral Land said he did not know what Latin American nations would apply for Maritime Commission assistance in operating the refugee vessels. Under terms of the agreement signed by the twenty-one republics the United States will operate ships of those nations which do not have sufficient personnel.

The maritime chief said that Brazil and the United States had been discussing the possibility of Brazil building her own merchant vessels, with United States shipbuilding experts acting as advisers. He indicated no definite plans had been formulated.

DEFENSE GETS FIRST CALL ON ALL RESOURCES

SEP 4 1941

Consumers Face Pinch Soon as Roosevelt Orders Production to Limit.

MORE BILLIONS FOR ARMS

Plants Are to Be Retooled for Munitions or Work Needed in Civilian Economy.

Washington, Sept. 3 (A. P.).—The administration gave defense absolutely first call on all the nation's industrial resources today, and consumers were told they could expect to feel the pinch soon.

Keynoting a fresh drive for a manifold increase in arms production, the new Supply Priorities and Allocation Board stated:

"Every available man and machine must be employed either on direct defense requirements or at work essential to the civilian economy. Defense comes first."

For most citizens, the pinch will come with the discontinuance of non-essential wares—the frills and the extras of everyday American life.

For a part of the population—manufacturers of non-essential goods and their employees—this may entail added hardship—either temporary suspension of production until the plants are tooled for defense orders, or a complete shut-down in the event such a change-over cannot be effected.

SEP 4 1941

Future Course Made Clear.

The future course of the defense effort—and its impact on the consumer—was made clear yesterday by twin announcements—one by President Roosevelt to his press conference, and one by the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board he set up last week.

This super-board—now the supreme agency in the whole defense production effort—held its first meeting, with Vice-President Wallace presiding, and took up its task of accelerating the output of military supplies.

Mr. Roosevelt announced that still more money would be expended for defense orders—the program already tops $50,000,000,000—with the objective of producing still more supplies and of getting two and three shifts to work in the plants.

What was inferential in Mr. Roosevelt's statement, the new super-board stated in so many words.

"Our general policy is simple," the board announced, outlining its plan of operations. "Production shall be stimulated and organized to the limit of the nation's resources.

Non-essentials Must Go.

"We must forgo the less essential that we may have an abundance of the essential. By less essential industry is meant those industrial activities involving use of materials and production facilities which sap supply and machinery resources necessary to a realistic all-out defense program.

"In some cases this may involve only a part of an industry; in other cases it may involve several parts. Wherever possible to convert the non-essential to military or essential civilian production this will be done. Every means will be employed to expedite this process with a minimum loss of time for men and machines.

"But the non-essential must go.

"This means cutting off the fat and hardening the muscles."

To accomplish this purpose, the board said a code of regulations would be worked out with the idea of making the most effective use of available raw materials and production facilities for military and essential civilian needs.

There was no immediate indication what industries would be hit by the projected suspension of non-essential production.

The board also promised action to obtain vital materials which it said were being hoarded by certain industries and traders. It likewise served notice that it would not tolerate speculation in such necessary supplies.

In discussing the projected increase in arms expenditures at his press conference, Mr. Roosevelt said that the additional funds would be largely in general appropriations, rather than as a special lease-lend allotment. The President did not indicate the amount he had in mind or when the request would go to Congress. The only clew he gave was that a message on the subject would go to Capitol Hill some time before January 1.

Mr. Roosevelt did disclose, however, that he hoped to have a new lease-lend program ready for Congress in a week or so. The original lease-lend appropriation was $7,000,000,000 and congressional informants said that they expected the forthcoming requests to be in the vicinity of $5,000,000,000.

Apropos of the original fund, Mr. Roosevelt told reporters that all of it already had been allocated. Orders covering half the amount have been placed, he said, and the remainder will be covered in sixty to ninety days.

SAYS JAPANESE FEAR AMERICAN NAVY IN PACIFIC

Representative Maas Sure Fleet Can Keep Open Supply Routes.

SEP 4 1941

HE SERVED SIX WEEKS THERI

Flying Congressman Holds U. S Should Take Steps to Obtain Use of Singapore.

Washington, Sept. 3 (A. P.).—A congressman just returned from six weeks of sea duty as a Marine Corps Reserve air officer, declared today that Japan was deathly afraid of the United States fleet when it was in the Pacific.

The marine colonel, Representative Melvin J. Maas, Republican, of Minnesota, remarked in an interview that some of the fleet had been withdrawn to the Atlantic, but he expressed the opinion nevertheless that United States forces in the Pacific remain strong enough to fend off any attack against this nation and at the same time keep open supply routes for vital shipments of rubber and tin.

Further, he said he believed that the Western Hemisphere is in no danger from Japanese aggression.

"The Hawaiian Islands are more powerful than Gibraltar ever was because their defenses are geared to modern warfare," he said. "No navy could get to Panama without passing Hawaii and no navy could get past Hawaii.

"Japan is deathly afraid of the American fleet when it is intact. It is significant that they did not move into Indo-China until the fleet in the Pacific had been have started in Denver.
split and part of it had been transferred to the Atlantic.

Navy Was Split.

"In spite of all the secrecy of the navy, the first information that the American public had that the fleet had been split was a news broadcast from Tokio giving the dates the ships went through the canal and their names."

Mr. Maas, ranking Republican member of the House Naval Affairs Committee, began active training in July when h piloted a four-eengine patrol bomber from San Diego to Honolulul in what he said was record time of 14 hours 25 minutes. For the next six weeks he flew 18,000 miles, one making a seven-day inspection trip of "all our island bases" which he declined to enumerate. The development of these sites, he said, is ahead of schedule and soon the United States "will have forged a chain across the Pacific to supplies which are vital to us in the Dutch East Indies."

The flying lawmaker said that if Japan should make further moves toward those Dutch posssessions, he believed the United States should take steps to obtain the use of Singapore from the British as a base for counter operations.

Holds Signapore Important.

"All our islands and fleet out there are not as modernly equipped as I would like to see them," he said, "but we would still be in a position to defend successfully our interests in the Pacific against any combination of forces that might challenge us.

"In my opinion, the most immediate pressing problem is to see that Singapore is kept available for the American fleet in the event circumstances should compel us to operate in the far Pacific. If Singapore should be captured, the United States to all practical purposes would be driven out of the Pacific."

Mr. Maas participated in recent Pacific maneuvers as marine air officer on the staff of Vice-Admiral W. H. Halsey, commander of the fleet's aircraft battle force.

Meanwhile the question of Japanese-American relations continued to hold the highest interest in diplomatic circles here. Secretary of State Hull and Admiral Kichisaburno Nomura, the Japanese Ambassador, are continuing the exploratory talks begun after President Roosevelt received a personal communication from Prince Fumimaro Konoye, Japanese Premier.

Contents of the Konoye message were not made public, but it was believed intended to lay the groundwork for a candid discussion of means for bridging the gap between divergent policies of the two powers.

HENRY-HAYE PLANS PROTEST TO HULL

SEP 4 1941

Objects to Articles in Herald Tribune.

Washington, Sept. 3 (A. P.).—Gaston Henry-Haye, the French Ambassador, said yesterday that he would protest personally to Secretary of State Hull against a series of stories relating to the Vichy embassy here which have been published by the New York Herald-Tribune.

In making this announcement at a press conference, the Ambassador said his protest would be based on his assertion that the stories were not true. He said he believed that the motive behind the stories was a desire of certain Americans and certain Frenchmen to bring about a break or deterioration of relations between the French Government and the United States.

The stories described what the Herald-Tribune said were the activities of the Ambassador, two members of his staff and others in attempting to create sentiment for the Nazi "new order" in Europe.

M. Henry-Haye said that he was very sad, since it was just a year ago today that he had come to the United States to represent a defeated nation, yet one still proud, and that now he had to answer charges which he said in no sense were justified.

M. Henry-Haye said he realized the meaning of freedom of the press, but added that never in his country had the representatives of a country on its knees been subjected to such treatment.

In a recent call on Mr. Hull, the Ambassador showed the secretary a number of newspaper cartoons of Marshal Petain, French Chief of State, which tended to stress the Nazi-domination of the Vichy Government.

At that time M. Henry-Haye emphasized to reporters that he was not protesting, but merely calling the cartoons to Mr. Hull's attention. The Ambassador then said that he understood the American press was free, but added that because it was free he thought it should show restraint in making attacks on the chief of a friendly State.

NO KONOYE PARLEY

White House Denies Plan for Roosevelt Trip.

Washington, Sept. 3.—Stephen Early, White House Secretary, after discussing with President Roosevelt a report that Prince Fumimaro Konoye, the Japanese Premier, had proposed a personal conference aboard a Japanese warship in the Pacific, told reporters today:

1.—The President has no such invitation.

2.—If the reporter had seen fit to check with the White House before he wrote the story he would have been told just that.

3.—The only trip the President plans to make on the water soon will be on the yacht Potomac from Annapolis to Washington.

4 MORE INDICTED ON SPY CHARGES

SEP 4 1941

Trial of 16 Others Starts After Three, Including Girl, Pleads Guilty to Accusation

NEW YORK, Sept. 3 (AP)—The federal government, moving on two fronts to smash German spy activities in this country, indicted four more persons today on charges of conspiring to send vital defense information to Germany, and immediately obtained guilty pleas from three of them, including an 18-year-old girl.

Simultaneously, 16 persons arrested in June in the government's nationwide roundup of spy suspects, went on trial in Brooklyn federal court after three others pleaded guilty to being unregistered agents of a foreign power. There was no connection, authorities said, between the quartet indicted today and those who went to trial in Brooklyn.

Shortly after their indictment, Lucy Boehmler of New York City, 18, blonde, blue-eyed and well dressed; Hans Pagel, 20, a Brooklyn brewery employe who came here in 1931 from his native Wunstorf, Germany, and Frederick Edward Schlosser, 19, a native New Yorker, pleaded guilty.

High Bond Set

Miss Boehmler, a native of Stuttgart, Germany, who came to this country in 1929, was held in $10,000 bond and Pagel and Schlosser in $25,000 bond each by Federal Judge John Bright, who set Sept. 24 for sentence. The maximum penalty is 20 years' imprisonment.

They were charged with conspiracy to violate the federal code by secretly transmitting to the German government through unidentified colleagues in Spain, Portugal and Germany information deemed vital to this country's physical safety.

The government accused them of divulging movements and disposition of American troops and of smuggling abroad pictures and sketches of strategic eastern seaboard points.

Named as Ringleader

Named in the new indictment as the ringleader in the United States was Kurt Frederick Ludwig, about 40, Ohio-born of German parentage, Ludwig was arrested about 10 days ago and is being held in Spokane, Wash. The indictment described him as a paid German agent who conspired to obtain American national defense secrets and information on the shipment of airplanes and other war supplies to Great Britain.

Ludwig, who was pictured as a touring espionage agent who picked up hitchhiking soldiers in an effort to obtain information, was accused in the indictment of maintaining short wave radio receiving sets in his automobile or wherever he was living.

The sets, the indictment said, were "of the kind and type customarily used as a part of radio communications systems and capable of receiving communications by radio from Germany."

Toured Atlantic Coast

He also was charged with touring the Atlantic coast "directly observing military establishments, naval establishments, air fields, munitions plants and other manufacturing plants and making notes on the nature, size, equipment, location and other features of such establishments."

It was charged that he was supplied with money directly and indirectly by his reputed German co-conspirators.

Before the indictment was handed up, federal agents had announced the arrest in Miami, Fla., of a Miami fishing boat captain whom they accused of cooperating with Ludwig and the two youths in assembling defense information.

He is Karl Herman Schoetter, a native of Switzerland and an American citizen. He denied the charge.

Admit One Count

Immediately before the Brooklyn espionage trial started, three more defendants pleaded guilty to one of two counts in the indictment, thus reducing to 16 the number standing trial. Of the 33 arrested in a nationwide roundup last June, 17 have now pleaded guilty to one or both counts and are awaiting sentence.

The three, all German-born, are Richard Zichlenaub, 35, cafe owner; Paul Bante, 50, iron worker; and Felix Jahnke, 48, soda clerk. They pleaded guilty to a count accusing them of being unregistered agents of a foreign power but pleaded innocent to one charging them with transmitting vital information

Trailing Of Suspect By F. B. I. Described

Spokane, Wash., Sept. 3 (AP)—Kurt Frederick Ludwig, 38-year-old German-American who was charged in a New York indictment today with being the head of an international spy ring, tried desperately to escape before his arrest near here two weeks ago, Lyle Keith, United States Attorney, said today.

"Ludwig headed West by automobile," Keith said. "He was trailed constantly by F. B. I. agents. When he arrived at Butte, Mont., he became suspicious that he was being 'tailed.'

"He stored his car in a garage there, stopped at a hotel, and the next morning abandoned his car to take a bus. He had purchased a bus ticket to Cle Elum, Wash. But he failed to 'shake' the F. B. I. officers, one of whom was on the bus with him.

"He arrived in Spokane by bus and tried to shake the officers who were trailing him. He was followed all over town before he registered in an obscure hotel."

SEP 4 1941

Resumes Trip

The next morning he resumed his Westward trip by bus and was arrested as he stepped off at Cle Elum.

"Code messages used by Ludwig were written in secret solution on the backs of what appeared to be innocent typewritten letters," Keith continued. "These letters were mailed to places in Spain and Portugal, among others, where the messages were deciphered.

"He sent out an amazing detail on the disbursement of our armed forces, on the departure of vessels loaded with planes bound for various parts of the world, and on the departure of other vessels loaded with munitions.

"He had a camera and took many pictures.

"He has had no legitimate occupation in this country and received money from somewhat mysterious sources in accounts ranging from a few hundred dollars to as much as $2,000."

Says Tank Cars Can Alleviate Oil Shortage

Railroads Ass'n Head Avers 200,000 Barrels Could Be Moved Daily Into Eastern Areas

SEP 4 1941

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3 (AP).—An assertion that ample supplies of gasoline and fuel oil could be moved to the eastern seaboard within two weeks by utilizing 20,000 surplus railroad tank cars was made today to the special Senate committee investigating the petroleum situation.

J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, told senators that use of the cars would increase Atlantic seaboard supplies by more than 200,000 barrels daily, some 25,000 more than the daily shortage estimated by government officials.

Representatives of the railroads and the petroleum industry are scheduled to discuss transportation problems here tomorrow and Pelley said they should agree upon methods for using the railroad tank cars.

In Philadelphia, meanwhile, a conference of eastern gasoline dealers, was told that there was no gasoline shortage and that "somebody is just pulling the wool over the eyes of officials in Washington." The speaker was Benjamin L. Jacoby, president of the Associated Gasoline Retailers of Philadelphia and vicinity.

Another speaker, H. A. Innis Brown, urged the conference to ask President Roosevelt to direct Secretary of the Interior Ickes, defense petroleum co-ordinator, to establish a retail oil division to handle their problems.

Brown, editor of the magazine Gasoline Retailer, said he was "sick and tired of seeing all these government officials regarding the retail dealer as unimportant, as grease-balls.'"

Chairman Maloney (D-Conn) of the Senate investigating group told Pelly that "you have led me to believe this shortage could be corrected within two weeks."

"Within a week we could have solid trains of oil moving from Louisiana and Texas to the Atlantic seaboard," the railroads' spokesman said, adding that within two weeks more than 200,000 barrels should be arriving daily.

"This all could have been worked out by now, if there's a real shortage," Pelley testified. "We've had the surplus cars for more than a year."

He said he had informed Ralph K. Davies, acting petroleum coordinator, that a surplusage of tank cars existed when Davies came here in June to aid Ickes.

"I have never had any request from Mr. Davies for information," Pelley told senators. He expressed astonishment at earlier testimony by Davies before the committee that government officials had difficulty in finding idle railroad tank cars.

Pelly said there were 153,655 railroad tank cars in the country, 125,000 of which could haul petroleum products.

The witness was asked why the tank cars had not been used and what had caused delays in attempts to solve the alleged shortages.

Pelley replied that rail charges for moving gasoline and petroleum products from the southwest to the east were considerably higher than for movement by tankers, pipelines, barges and trucks. He said that a proposed reduction in rail rates would bring the transportation cost about 3.5 cents a gallon on gasoline compared with less than 0.5 cents a gallon by tanker.

He also said that many refineries and other oil industry plants were not equipped with loading facilities for railroad tank cars, but that these difficulties could be speedily overcome if an agreement were reached between the oil industry and railroads on transportation costs.

Senators Burton (R-Ohio) and O'Daniel (D-Texas) asked Pelley about the proposal of some administration officials to construct a huge pipeline from the oil fields to the eastern coast.

Conceding that pipelines and railroads were natural competitors, Pelley said that such a line would require 500,000 or 750,00 tons of steel at a time when the defense effort was demanding all steel and when railroads had difficulty getting it.

STOCKS GAIN SHOWN

NEW YORK, Sept. 3 (AP).—A gain of 287,000 barrels in gasoline stocks on the eastern seaboard last week was reported today by the American Petroleum Institute.

The figures covered the week ended August 30, and showed stocks of finished and unfinished gasoline at that date on the east coast totaling 20,261,000 barrels and in the Appalachian region totaling 3,070,000 barrels.

These totals compared with 20,094,000 barrels on the east coast and 2,950,000 in the Appalachian area on August 23.

The gain was the first in eastern seaboard stocks since the week ending July 16.

LABOR URGED TO UNITE FOR PEAK EFFORT

4 Of Nation's Top Defense Officials Appeal For More Production

SEP 4 1941

Hillman, LaGuardia, Patterson And McNutt Issue Pleas

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 3—Four of the nation's top defense officials joined today in a plea to American labor to unite for achieving peak production of munitions of war as the chief guarantee of this country's safety.

Their statements, which also called for complete cooperation between labor and all community groups in advancing the defense program, appeared in an eighty-eight-page handbook entitled "Labor Defends America," written by Herman Wolf and planned for distribution by labor unions and other labor units throughout the country.

Hillman Issues Call

"Peak production alone will guarantee our own national safety and bring about the victory of democracy," wrote Sidney Hillman, associate director general of the Office of Production Management. "The success of our defense effort requires the complete cooperation of workers and employers in the workshop of democracy."

Robert P. Patterson, Under Secretary of War, said organized labor's "assistance toward the realization of our (defense) objectives has been notable" and that "in an hour of crisis, responsible trade unions are essential if we are to obtain labor's full assistance."

LaGuardia On Union

Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, as Civilian Defense Director, declared "the unions in this country, united for the purpose of keeping the principles guaranteed to all of us in our Constitution intact, will make the United States so strong that a united people, through our united unions, will guarantee us the trength to surmount all obstacles. . . ."

Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, said "American labor unions with their millions of members have a great opportunity to help protect and advance national health in this time of emergency."

Willkie Speaker As Sale Of Defense Bonds Opens

New York, Sept. 3 (AP)—Wendell L. Willkie said today "I would rather own a United States bond which is part of a national indebtedness of $150,000,000,000, with Hitler out of the world, than a bond which is part of a $50,000,000,000 debt with Hitler still in the world."

Willkie spoke at the opening of a glass-enclosed booth in Rockefeller Center Plaza, where bonds and stamps will be on sale throughout September.

All For Strong Defense

In his address, Willkie said, "We have talked much of the necessity of united action and sacrifice and all Americans, isolationists and nationalists, interventionists and internationalists, have pledged to the building of a strong defense."

"This is the first sacrifice, the first offering we have been asked to make," he added, "and what an insignificant sacrifice it is, to buy the best security that can be bought to crush totalitarianism."

Willkie noted that many persons, while expressing the wish for defeat of totalitarianism in the world, hold back with the explanation "I don't like the Administration."

Refers To French

"It doesn't do any good now for the French to look back on the help that some of them did not give because they didn't like their administration," he said.

Some say, Willkie said, that they don't want to help because of the fiscal expense, and added, "I don't like it either, but is that going to save America?"

PRESIDENT GREETS URUGUAY'S ENVOY

Says 2 Democracies Have Common Purpose.

Washington, Sept. 3 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt said today that both Uruguay and the United States "are determined to defend that essential right of free men to govern the national life through freely chosen representatives."

The President's declaration was made as Dr. Juan Carlos Blanco, Uruguay's first Ambassador to the United States, presented his credentials.

Decision of Uruguay and the United States to raise the rank of their representatives to Ambassador "is a recognition of the still greater significance which has been given to those close relations by the mutual efforts of our two governments for the defense of the American continent and its peaceful economic development," the President told Dr. Blanco.

The Uruguayan Ambassador informed Mr. Roosevelt that his government "wishes to bind even closes its political and commercial ties with the United States as well as to contribute with faith and decision to the collective defense of our continents."

Office of Defense Health Is Created

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3 (AP)—President Roosevelt today established the Office of Defense Health and Welfare services with Paul V. McNutt, federal security administrator, as director. McNutt was given extensive powers to co-ordinate the health and welfare activities.

The new office will serve as the center for the co-ordination of health and welfare services—federal, state and private—to meet the needs of state and local communities arising from the defense program.

Machine Tools To Russia

SEP 4 1941

New York, Sept. 3 (AP)—The trade journal, American Machinist, predicted today $10,000,000 worth of United States machine tools would be sent to Russia to help that country make war materiel.

The magazine said also that Federal authorities were planning to furnish more machine tools to China, and Netherlands East Indies representatives also were trying to obtain American machine tools.

The nation's machine tool output is continuing to expand, the magazine said, predicting "the goal of $750,000,000 of machine tools for the 1941 calendar year is almost certain of attainment."

Commenting on the aircraft program, the publication said the shift to heavier types of military craft, bombers, would tend to keep the number of planes produced this year below the schedule.

Roosevelt's Special Representative Is Well Again

New York, Sept. 3 (AP)—Myron Taylor, President Roosevelt's special representative to the Vatican, will leave for Rome tomorrow by transatlantic clipper, to resume his duties. Mrs. Taylor will accompany him.

Norwegian Ida Knudsen Torpedoed July 22, New York Hears

New York, Sept. 3 (AP)—The torpedoing of the 8,913-ton Norwegian motorship tanker Ida Knudsen was reported today in maritime circles.

U. S. Materials Found Part of Hess' Plane

By the Associated Press.

BURBANK, Calif., Sept. 3.—American-made products were part of the equipment of the Messerschmitt 110 plane that former Nazi Leader Rudolph Hess used on his historic flight from Germany to the British Isles, Donald Dunning said on his return home after 15 months in England.

He served as maintenance instructor to Royal Air Force members assigned to Lockheed bombers sent from this country.

Mr. Dunning said he examined Hess' plane and was amazed to find that the tires bore the stamp of a United States manufacturer.

"The fuel tank called for 100 octane, an American designation, and a popular United States brand of aviation oil was specified above the intake valve," said Mr. Dunning. "The tires were new, live rubber too."

Mr. Dunning said he spent 13 of his 15 months abroad on heavy duty at British airdromes.

PHILIPPINES MAY SUPPLY PERFUME OIL

SEP 4 1941

Washington, Sept. 3. (AP)—Forests of the Philippines may supply essential oils in the production of perfumes lost to manufacturers by the European war, the Department of Commerce said today.

It declared the Philippine woodlands contained "numerous plant growths yielding oils which in odor are markedly similar to those produced in Europe."

Two plants, the department said, grow in profusion in the Philippines and yielded oils resembling bergamot and jasmine, "items which are probably the most extensively employed of all essential oils in the manufacture of perfumes." Bergamot also is used in eau do cologne and in scenting toilet soaps.

END OF TYPHUS HELD IN SIGHT

New Vaccine Gets Severe Test in Bolivia.

SEP 4 1941

Washington, Sept. 3 (A. P.).—High in the Andes Mountains, three eminent scientists and thousands of Bolivian miners are participating in a mass medical experiment that may save millions of lives when the present European war ends.

During the coming year, the scientists, using Indian miners in isolated villages as patients, will determine whether a new, cheaply produced vaccine for typus fever is the long-sought cure for the dread disease that usually follows wars.

The importance of the Bolivian experiment is evidenced by the fact that during the four years following the world war more people died of typhus than were killed or wounded during the actual conflict. In Russia alone, medical statistics show, between 2,000,000 and 10,000,000 persons died of typhus fever between 1919 and 1923.

Successful on Animals.

The Sanitary Bureau of the Pan-American Union, acting as intermediary between the Bolivian and United States Governments, disclosed today details of the two-nation experiment.

The vaccine, which already has been used successfully on animals, was developed by Dr. Harold R. Cox at the United States Public Health Service laboratory, Hamilton, Mont.

Dr. Hugh S. Cumming, former Surgeon General who is now director of the Pan-American Bureau, believes the Cox serum will accomplish the two medical imperatives: control the disease and lend itself to cheap mass production. Its development is as important to the medical world as the discovery of smallpox vaccine, Dr. Cumming declared.

If the vaccine is successful on humans the great pestilence which follows wars, famines and major catastrophies may virtually be eradicated.

"The vaccine has produced a high degree of immunity in laboratory tests on animals," Dr. Cumming said, "but its final evaluation requires carefully planned and controlled study of its effects on the human population where a louse-born typhus is prevalent."

That's where Bolivia comes into the experiment. The highest typhus rate in the Western Hemisphere is in Bolivia. The disease is most prevalent in crowded one-street villages where the Indian miners live.

10,000 to Be Treated.

The Pan American Bureau said that between 10,000 and 20,000 Bolivians would be included in the mass treatment. Half of them will be given vaccine; the other half a sterile salt solution. At the end of a year the scientists will know how successful the vaccine is on humans.

Two typhus experts—Dr. Rolla E. Dyer, assistant director of the National Institute of Health, and Dr. Norman H. Topping—flew to Bolivia two weeks ago to start the experiment. At La Paz they are working with Dr. Felix Viantemillas, director of Bolivia's national health laboratory, and a typhus expert. They will conduct the experiment in areas within 100 miles of the Bolivian capital.

MacKenzie's Views On War Today

BY DEWITT MacKENZIE

The London press today blazed with reports of the accusation made in the Trade Union Congress at Edinburgh that Colonel J. T. C. Moore-Brabazon, British minister of aircraft production, had expressed the hope that the German and Russian armies would "exterminate each other" and leave Britain the dominating power in Europe.

This high-explosive was tossed onto the floor of the labor conference by Jack Tanner, president of the great Amalgamated Engineering Union, who said he could prove his accusation. Later an authoritative quarter in London said Tanner "evidently refers to a passage in a recent extempore speech which was open to misinterpretation." It also was pointed out that the minister recently said Britain must give the Soviet full war support.

Whatever may be the final explanation of what the colonel did say, we of course know that the thought which he is alleged to have advanced doesn't represent the avowed policy of the British Government. Britain has announced that she is Russia's ally and will cooperate with Moscow in all ways to win the war.

Anyway, the importance of this incident lies in the fact that the idea of domination of Europe is still knocking about, and apparently isn't confined to the tea-tables of any individual country. We are given a cogent reminder that the roots of the present war—and the last one—were watered by this self-same spring.

When Herr Hitler inaugurated his program of expansion by force he made it evident that one of his main objectives was to destroy what he claimed was England's overlordship of the continent. That's where the war began—with the Fuehrer's desire to deprive John Bull of his title as policeman of Europe. And, in passing, it may be said that there were few knights in shining armor riding white chargers about in search of maidens in distress at the time that little Czecho-Slovakia was led to the sacrificial altar.

Like most wars, however, after it got rolling it grew and changed its complexion. Hitler's program expanded with success, until there is no doubt that the very lives of England and other countries are now at stake. It is a life or death struggle.

It is notable that because of these changes it was almost two years before the Allies felt able to lay down their peace terms. When it was done in the joint announcement of President Roosevelt and Premier Churchill it was set down that there would be equal rights in the new post-war world. This was essential, because the peoples of the Axis countries had been taught that an imperialistic England was bent on destroying them so as to dominate Europe.

It would be interesting to know how the inscrutable sphinx of Moscow, Comrade Stalin, regards the expression attributed to Colonel Moore-Brabazon. Likely he will merely grin and remark to himself that the idea isn't copyrighted.

The question of who is going to bleed whom is still to be determined. The Red chief himself pushed the button to set the war in motion when he signed the non-aggression pact with Hitler. And we mustn't forget that the Muscovites at the same time were preparing for the war they knew they would have to fight with Germany ultimately—and hoped that it would come after Hitler had exhausted himself in fighting the Allies.

Somebody is likely to dominate Europe when this war is done, but it certainly isn't clear now who that somebody is. There is this to remember:

Russia is interested in the expansion of Communism rather than in territorial gains. That always has been the great aim of the Bolshevists — to extend Communism throughout the world. A Europe shattered by war and hunger and disease, as it now bids fair to be, would provide the sort of soil Moscow seeks for the planting of the seeds of Communism.

German

BERLIN, Sept. 3 (AP)—The German High Command communiqué, issued from "the Fuehrer's Headquarters," said today:

On the entire Eastern Front successful fighting actions are in progress.

The Rumanian air force had a considerable share in big successes on the southeastern front. Up to the end of August it had destroyed 433 Soviet airplanes and had excellently supported operations of the army.

Fighter planes bombed on the British Isle last night port establishments on the east coast and airports in the Midlands.

Light naval forces and anti-aircraft on the Channel and the Dutch and Norwegian coasts shot down seven British planes, pursuit airmen four, and marine artillery one.

German and Italian dive-bombers in North Africa, in an attack on Tobruk Sept. 1, scored direct hits with bombs of the heaviest caliber on British artillery positions, encampments and troops.

The enemy flew into North Central Germany last night as well as the Rhineland region. The attack of one bomber unit on the Reich's capital failed to reach full effectiveness because of the strong anti-aircraft defense.

Only a few planes reached the inner city. There was a small loss in dead and injured among the civilian population, with bombs falling on residential sections. Anti-aircraft shot down six British bombers.

Finnish

HELSINKI, Finland, Thursday, Sept. 4 (AP)—The Finnish High Command today issued the following communiqué:

In the Isthmus the stubbornly fighting enemy was decisively beaten.

The old frontier was reached everywhere.

Considerable war material, including several hundred automobiles, nearly 2,000 horses, dozens of tanks, about 300 guns, an immeasurable quantity of light and heavy infantry arms, was listed as captured.

The number of prisoners grows daily and already exceeds 10,000.

British

LONDON, Sept. 3 (AP)—The Air Ministry issued the following communiqué today:

Frankfurt and Berlin were the main objectives of our bombers last night. At Frankfurt a heavy attack was made on railway communication and industrial targets.

In Berlin, which was attacked by smaller force, industrial buildings were hit and large fires were left burning.

Other towns in Western Germany, including Mannheim, were also attacked, as well as the ports of Ostend and Dunkerque.

Nine of our aircraft are missing from these operations.

The Ministries of Air and Home Security issued this communiqué today:

There was slight enemy activity last night when a very small number of aircraft flew over coastal areas of Eastern England.

Bombs were dropped at one or two places in East Anglia and in Northeast England, and at one of these some damage was done.

The Admiralty issued this communiqué today:

An enemy convoy has been followed and successfully attacked by one of our submarines in the Mediterranean. This convoy was proceeding down the Libyan coast to Bengazi and was close in shore. Two large schooners were sunk out of the convoy.

Enemy supply shipping also was attacked northwest of Sicily, and it is possible one ship was sunk.

Shipping also has been attacked by our submarines in the approaches to the harbor of Bengazi.

CAIRO, Egypt, Sept. 3 (AP)—R. A. F. Middle East Headquarters issued this communiqué today:

Heavy bombers of the R. A. F. attacked Tripoli during the night of Sept. 1-2. Bombs were dropped on the power station and a number of fires started. Subsequently there was a violent explosion and a large fire with clouds of black smoke broke out. Two anti-aircraft guns were hit and put out of action.

Other heavy bombers raided Bengazi, where shipping in the harbor was bombed. Several bombs fell near vessels, and a column of black smoke was seen rising from one of the ships. Motor transport near Barce was machine-gunned.

Aircraft of the South African Air Force and Fleet Air Arm bombed a southern landing ground at El Gazala, causing fires which were visible many miles from the target.

A number of explosions occurred when aircraft of the Fleet Air Arm dropped bombs among aircraft on the Sicilian airdromes of Gerbini and Comiso.

From these operations one of our aircraft is missing.

Photographs of the munitions factories at Licata, in Sicily, which were raided by aircraft on Aug. 13, reveal a number of direct hits and considerable damage.

The British Middle East Command issued the following communiqué today:

Libya: At Tobruk the enemy shelled the harbor area, but no damage resulted. Our fighting patrols continue to harass the enemy and inflict casualties.

In the frontier area a dust storm restricted activity.

MALTA, Sept. 3 (Reuter)—An official communiqué issued here says:

Last night enemy aircraft dropped a few bombs and incendiaries in widely scattered areas of Malta, causing negligible damage and injuring three persons who failed to take cover. Anti-aircraft guns put up a severe barrage.

This morning enemy aircraft reported in the vicinity were presumed to be on reconnaissance. Nothing eventuated.

SEP 4 1941

Italian

ROME, Sept. 3 (AP)—The Italian High Command communiqué said today:

Activity of the Air Force against British bases and positions has registered further successes. During a mass action against Tobruk, reported in yesterday's bulletin, direct hits were scored on anti-aircraft and field artillery emplacements as well as tent encampments. Numerous fires and explosions were observed.

In the Jarabub zone our planes dropped shrapnel bombs on enemy motorized columns transporting troops and machine-gunned it. Last night air bases on the island of Malta were bombed.

At Tobruk our artillery batteries hit groups of enemy armored cars and tanks which were attempting to approach our positions.

Enemy aircraft dropped bombs on Bengazi and machine-gunned colonists in a village in Cirenaica without any results. Other air raids were carried out in places near Catania and Regusa [Sicily] with insignificant damage.

In East Africa our troops continue to hold the enemy in check, causing him considerable losses. One of our battalions which went out from the outpost of Celga carried out a brilliant thrust deep into enemy lines, engaging a large enemy formation. The combat battalion routed it. Numerous enemy dead remained on the ground.

Russian

MOSCOW, Thursday, Sept. 4 (AP)—The Soviet Information Bureau today issued the following communiqué:

During Sept. 3 our troops stubbornly fought the enemy along the whole front.

Thirty-nine enemy aircraft were brought down in air combats and destroyed on airdromes on Sept. 1. We lost seventeen planes.

At the approaches to Leningrad Soviet fliers keep on successfully smashing enemy aircraft. About seventy enemy planes taking cover in the clouds raided a large airdrome. A group of our fighters met the enemy. In the course of the air combat which ensued eleven Fascist planes were brought down.

Senior Lieutenant Lazareff showed especially high skill and courage in this combat. Boldly attacking a group of enemy planes, he destroyed five Junkers 87's. Junior Lieutenant Novikoff brought down two Junkers and one Messerschmitt.

Next day our fliers attacked enemy land troops from a height of between 150 and 300 feet and destroyed two German tanks, twenty trucks and many wagons.

Russian

Moscow, Sept. 3 (AP)—The Soviet Information Bureau's midday communique said today:

During the night of September 2-3 our troops continued to fight the enemy on the entire front.

Our air force continued to deal blows on motorized and mechanized forces of the enemy and his infantry and artillery, and attacked his aircraft on their airdromes.

In the course of the last few days Commander Zhmachenko's unit, holding an important position, repulsed several fierce attacks of the One Hundred and Thirty-fifth German Infantry Regiment. At night Zhmachenko counter-attacked, and under cover of darkness his men closely approached the enemy trenches.

A unit commanded by Merkulov overwhelmed the German vanguards, forced its way to the enemy lines and began to press the enemy. The retreating Germans were intercepted by Second Lieutenant Ozhogin's unit, which was lying in ambush. The Fascists were encircled by machine-gun and rifle fire and a bayonet charge by Zhmachenko's men routed the enemy. They captured two mine-throwers, an anti-tank gun, machine guns, automatics and a large quantity of mines and ammunition. Remnants of the One Hundred and Thirty-fifth Regiment were dispersed.

Red Army truck drivers courageously deliver to the front ammunition and other war material under enemy fire.

Driver Dmitrichenko's truck was set afire by German mines. Amid the mine explosions the dauntless driver promptly extinguished the fire, drove the truck to its destination and started carrying shells to the guns. Although Dmitrichenko frequently has come under enemy gunfire and air bombing he always has brought his cargoes to their destination in time. Since the outbreak of the war his truck has not had a single breakdown.

Thanks to the skillful work of car drivers of the unit of Political Instructor Yudin, the unit has had no losses since the beginning of the war. In one air raid on one of our truck columns with ammunition, one of the trucks was set afire. Driver Levkin, risking his life, drove the burning truck out of the column, extinguished the fire and prevented an explosion.

The other day a truck column with ammunition came under Fascist artillery fire. Drivers Podurshin and Andriyevsky rapidly unloaded the trucks and, crawling to the trenches, brought boxes of ammunition to the front on time.

Byelo-Russian (White Russian) guerrillas are wreaking merciless vengeance on Hitler's hordes. Guerrilla detachments are gaining strength and hardiness in fighting the Fascist invaders and are acquiring experience and skill.

Guerrillas commanded by Forester "M" attacked a German garrison in Surazh consisting of about 300 men of the routed One Hundred and Thirty-seventh German Infantry Division.

At night the guerrillas penetrated into the town, surrounded the houses where the Germans were quartered and showered them with hand grenades.

The survivors scurried helter-skelter through the windows and doors, but bullets greeted them everywhere. Before quitting the town, the guerrillas wrecked the garrison headquarters and took away all rifles, together with ten trucks, twenty motor cycles, twelve machine guns, about fifty automatics and a large quantity of ammunition.

Recently a guerrilla party commanded by an Osoaviakhim worker attacked a German supply company moving from Rechitsa to Gomel. The guerrillas laid an ambush. First, machine-gun bursts killed or wounded more than twenty German soldiers. The enemy attempted to offer resistance, but the guerrillas firmly held the initiative. The issue was decided by a bayonet charge of the guerrilla group. The guerrillas captured a large number of rifles and automatics. In the morning, five German trucks hauled away the corpses of the Fascists.

Many guerrilla bands have special sniper groups. They lie in ambush near roads, in forests and dales and annihilate the Fascists.

Enormous losses sustained by German Fascist troops and the proximity of the severe Russian winter are troubling many soldiers and officers of the German army.

In the southwestern direction of the front, seventy-three men of the Two Hundred and Eightieth Infantry Regiment of the Ninety-fifth German Division surrendered to our troops. Before doing so they killed their company commander, Oberleutenant Wilhelm Schmidt, who drove the company into attack at pistol point.

German Private Willi Werner, who surrendered, said "we are tired of this accursed war started by Hitler. Lust for power and world domination have intoxicated the scoundrel and his bloodthirsty clique who have enslaved not only several European nations but also their own people."

Corporal Joseph Kerschensteiner, taken prisoner in the Ukraine, relates, "last week two men in our regiment were executed for expressing discontent with the war against Russia. This war is the most unpopular Germany ever waged."

In a letter to his comrades in the regiment, Kerschensteiner writes, "Dear comrades: Today I was taken prisoner by the Russians. Comrades, you want peace just as I do. Stop. Quit fighting. Come over to the Red army. After the war we shall return home to our parents, wives, brothers and sisters."

IN THE SKIRMISH WHICH ENSUED THE GERMANS LOST 36 MEN, 17 MOTORCYCLES AND THREE TRUCKS WITH AMMUNITION.

IN THE LATTER PART OF AUGUST UNITS OF THE 30TH GERMAN MOTORIZED DIVISION WERE MOVING EASTWARD. A GUERRILLA DETACHMENT COMMANDED BY "P" ALLOWED ENEMY SCOUTS AND ADVANCE GUARDS TO PASS AHEAD AND THEN SUDDENLY OPENED FIRE AT THE COLUMN. NEARLY 100 GERMANS WERE KILLED.

ENEMY ALARM IN CONNECTION WITH INTENSIFICATION OF GUERRILLA ACTIVITIES IS VIVIDLY REFLECTED IN ONE ORDER OF THE HEADQUARTERS OF A GERMAN NORTHERN ARMY GROUP THAT SAID:

"INTENSIFIED ACTIVITIES OF GUERRILLAS FORBID THE MOVEMENT OF SOLDIERS SINGLY OR IN SMALL GROUPS IN RURAL LOCALITIES. IN ALL THEIR MOVEMENTS THEY MUST USE ROADS WITH BUSY TRAFFIC, FOR INSTANCE SUPPLY ROADS. INDIVIDUAL SOLDIERS AND SMALL DETACHMENTS MAY VISIT VILLAGES REMOVED FROM SUCH ROADS ONLY IF PRIOR TO THIS THE NEAREST MINISTRY AUTHORITY ESTABLISHES THAT A GIVEN VILLAGE IS SAFE.

Fuehrer Pledged Germany Its Greatest Triumph in Year of 1941

CONFIDENCE NOT BORNE OUT

Review of War Raises Doubt Whether He Meant Russia or Great Britain.

NIY-SEPT 2 (NEWS) BY JOHN H. MARTIN

Adolf Hitler, in a confident New Year's Eve speech, promised the German people "the greatest victory in our history" in 1941. Nearly every one thought he referred to invasion of Britain, but many now believe he had the Soviet Union in mind.

In any case, now that the war is two years old, it seems appropriate to review the situation on which Hitler looked, and to see how his campaign has progressed.

As Hitler uttered those words, he alone of the "four men of Munich" stood supreme. His armies had smashed Poland, France, Belgium, Holland, Luxemburg, Norway and Denmark. His airmen were taking a fearful toll in the British Isles, his submarines were gnawing at British Atlantic shipping.

Duce Asked Nazi Aid.

Neville Chamberlain had died in 1940 amid the wreckage of appeasement; Edouard Daladier, Paul Reynaud and other French officials were imprisoned on "war guilt" charges by a Vichy regime collaborating with Germany.

British armies were smashing Italy's forces in Libya, and Benito Mussolini had to ask the aid of German planes in Albania against the Greeks.

Hungary, Rumania and Slovakia had joined the Axis. Japan had signed a full military alliance with Germany, designed to block United States intervention.

The British had not sued for peace after the disastrous defeat in Flanders. A Free French leader, Gen. Charles de Gaulle, had arisen.

President Roosevelt in September, 1940, had traded fifty old destroyers to Britain for bases screening all the Eastern American coast. He had pledged all possible supplies to Britain, and America had elected this outspoken foe of Nazism as its first third-term President. A vast American rearmament program had begun, a peacetime draft army had been raised. Germans dismissed American plans as "too late," and Hitler declared that any ships bearing aid to Britain would be torpedoed.

Darlan Succeeds Laval.

Britain received the jolt of learning, on February 9, that Admiral Jean Darlan had succeeded Pierre Laval as Vice-Premier at Vichy. Laval, ousted by Marshal Petain, was openly pro-Axis, but Darlan was bitterly anti-British as well.

King Carol of Rumania abdicated in favor of his son, Michael, and fled. On February 10 Britain broke off relations with Rumania because of the entry of German troops into that kingdom. A few days later German staff officers in civilian clothes were seen in Sofia, the capital of Bulgaria. Turks and Greeks hastened frontier fortifications, Russia voiced to Bulgaria her disapproval. On March 5 the British broke with Bulgaria.

The next day Hitler told an uneasy Turkey that Germany wished to protect the "interest and well-being" of that State, which has a mutual assistance pact, never put into force, with Britain. Nazi diplomats were working on Yugoslavia also, and the worried Yugoslavs were ringed by Germany and Italy on all sides except the Greek frontier.

Lease-Lend Bill Signed.

President Roosevelt, on March 11, signed the British lease-lend bill promising billions in equipment, and a few days later called on the American people for all-out aid to Britain, Greece, China and nations resisting aggression.

Russia on March 24 gave Turkey a pledge of helpful neutrality should the Turks be attacked. The Yugoslavs also were well aware that the Soviets hoped they would resist Axis encroachment. But on March 25 Yugoslav leaders joined the Axis. The Germans hailed the action as "an answer to Churchill and Roosevelt." Yosuke Matsuoka, then Japanese Foreign Minister, arrived in Berlin on an inspection tour and joined the rejoicing.

The Germans shouted too early. On March 27 a Serbian military coup d'etat turned out the Axis-committed government, and enthroned 17-year-old King Peter.

The United States and Britain pledged all possible aid to the Yugoslavs should they decide to fight.

The German hammer fell at 5:30 A. M., April 6, not only on Yugoslavia, but on Greece, where British troops had landed several weeks before. It was all over in less than a month. The Yugoslav army, cut to pieces, capitulated. Guerrillas, however, still are fighting the conquerors. In three days German tanks smashed through Grecian Thrace to the Ægean. The small British army fled to Crete and Egypt. A surprise German stroke in Libya hurled the British back to the Egyptian frontier, except for a small garrison still holding out at Tobruk.

Italy Gets Her Share.

Italy received parts of Yugoslavia and Greece as her share of the Axis loot; Croatia was set up as a separate kingdom, with the Italian Duke of Spoleto as King. Germans and Italians occupied Greek islands off the Turkish coast. The Nazis struck suddenly at Crete on May 20 with a parachute invasion that routed the British from the island ten days later.

In Iraq, pro-Axis Rashid Ali Al-Gailani seized power. The British sent an army and quickly restored the ousted pro-British government. German planes landed in Syria en route to Iraq to aid the brief fight against the British. The British accused Vichy also of allowing infiltration of "German tourists," a familiar Nazi Trojan horse pattern. The British and Free French invaded Syria.

They were bringing the Syrian campaign to a laborious conclusion when Germany—strangely aloof—suddenly attacked Russia. Perhaps this was Hitler's attempt to make good on his "greatest victory in our history" promise.

Britain quickly allied herself with Russia, and the United States pledged aid. Turkey, which had signed a ten-year friendship treaty with Germany four days before, remained neutral. Rumania, Hungary, Italy, Slovakia and Finland allied themselves with Germany. The Nazis pictured themselves as champions of religious freedom, crusading against a godless Russia.

Japan Put on the Spot.

Japan was in an embarrassing position. She was allied to the Axis, and in Moscow on April 13 had signed a five-year neutrality pact with the arch-enemy, Russia. A few weeks later the Japanese Cabinet of Premier Konoye resigned, then re-formed with Matsuoka out.

German hopes of a quick Russian victory soon were dashed. The Nazis never have acknowledged their casualties in this stupendous campaign. They undoubtedly are heavy.

Meanwhile the Japanese gained additional bases in French Indo-China from Vichy, and heard from Churchill that Britain was ready to join the United States in event of an American-Japanese clash.

The year has brought other developments bearing on the war picture.

The United States occupied Iceland, with Iceland's permission, joining the British already there, and our navy was ordered to take all necessary measures to keep open sea lanes to Iceland.

U. S. Seizes Axis Ships.

The United States has seized Axis shipping, severed nearly all trade with Japan and warned her against further Pacific expansion.

President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill, at a historic sea conference, agreed on an eight-point declaration of aims which envisage destruction of "Nazi tyranny" and broad post-war reconstruction.

As the war enters its third year, Russian resistance is expected to extend into the winter, especially since British and Russian troops have invaded Iran to open a communication line between the Persian Gulf and the Russian Caucasus.

If that occurs, the Russians say, Hitler not only will fail in his New Year's eve promise, but eventually will be beaten, like Napoleon, on the vast Russian plains.

Already Russian resistance has encouraged opposition to the conquerors in German-occupied lands, especially in France, where the latest act of resistance was the shooting of Pierre Laval.

British Position Improves as War Goes Into 3rd Year

Ultimate Course of Japan, Hitler's Success in Russian Adventure Comprise Chief Strategic Worries of Allies

By CARL C. CRANMER AUG 31/41

NEW YORK—(Special)—The end of the second year of the war that began Sept. 1, 1939—a war in which casualties in killed, wounded and captured must be close to 7,000,000—finds Britain in a better position than seemed possible a year ago, but with the decisive battles yet to be fought.

A year ago the battle of Britain was in full progress. It seemed probable, from a reading of German communiques, that the luftwaffe would pave the way before many weeks for an invasion by land, sea and air.

Through the first year and most of the second the British faced the possibility that not only Germany and Italy but also Soviet Russia would be among her foes and that a general attack against India and the Middle East might be organized.

What Britain Went to War to Prevent—a Hitlerized Europe—Virtually Exists Now.

By JAMES P. HACKETT (Combined War Summary)

By the Associated Press.

The very thing Great Britain and France went to war in an attempt to prevent two years ago today—a Hitlerized Europe—virtually is in existence. By the sword and the pen the men of Berlin have bent to their will the peoples of seventeen European nations and at this moment are directing invasion of the continent's largest country.

Only three countries which were neutral in the world war remain out of the present conflict — Spain, Switzerland and Sweden. Others not embroiled in this war, but which took part in the last, are Portugal, Turkey and Eire.

Some authorities have estimated that four-fifths of humanity—about 1,700,000,000 persons—already have had their everyday lives conditioned to participation in the fighting.

Just as this war has raged over almost the same European territory that felt the tramp of soldiers' feet during the first two years of the world war, so have Africa and the Middle East figured in the fighting.

Between them the British empire and Soviet Russia have thrown more than 626,000,000 persons into their war efforts, probably 30,000,000 as actual combatants or men under training.

Russia in all likelihood has equaled if not surpassed the 12,000,000-man army mobilized by the Czar in 1914-17. The British, from latest reports, have close to 6,000,000 men—including home guards—ready to defend the British Isles, and at least another 2,000,000 men in Africa, and the Middle and Far East. During the world war the British empire mobilized 8,410,000 men.

Germany was reported at the outbreak of the war to have had available 6,000,000 men in her armed forces.

Premier Mussolini boasted of 9,000,000 "bayonets." How many men Axis junior partners like Rumania and Hungary have added to the fighting forces has not been determined.

Including Finnish troops, the Hitler-Mussolini camp probably held more than 20,000,000 fighters when Russia was invaded. Not all these men, of course, were thrown into that conflict. Hitler's headquarters announced early in the struggle that 9,000,000 were fighting on the eastern front on both sides.

During the world war Germany mobilized 11,000,000 men and her allies—Austria-Hungary, Turkey and Bulgaria—a like number. Against them were pitted more than 42,000,000 men from Russia, France, the British Empire, Italy, Japan, Rumania, Serbia, Belgium, Greece, Portugal, Montenegro and the United States in four years of war.

Two years of this war have involved Russia, France the British Empire, Yugoslavia, Greece, Poland, Belgium, the Netherlands, Norway, Denmark and Luxemburg on one side, and Germany, Italy, Rumania, Hungary, Bulgaria and Finland on the other, plus the territories once Czecho-Slovakia, Austria, Albania, Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, and Lebanon, Syria, Iraq and Iran.

It was two years ago today, too, that the liner Athenia went down in the Atlantic with the loss of 113 lives.

Since then more than 7,000,000 tons of merchant and naval vessels have gone to the bottom. Records compiled by the Associated Press show at least 16,000 persons have been killed or drowned and 9,253 are missing.

By the end of the first year of uninterrupted disasters the British had lost their continental ally, France, had been pushed out of Norway and were confronted by a semi-circle of German air and naval bases from Norway to Spain.

The British had their reverses in the second year, too, but none as severe as those. The year has seen these developments favorable to their cause:

1 She acquired a powerful ally in Soviet Russia when Germany invaded the east. The quality of that ally is attested by the stubborn resistance of the Red army.

2 Lease-lend legislation of the United States.

3 The battle of Britain, in retrospect, appears to have been the very first setback suffered in the war by Hitler.

4 The conquest of East Africa, the mauling given the Italian fleet, and the destruction of an army in Libya adds up to this—the reduction of Mussolini to a secondary factor.

5 The emergence of the RAF as a growing offensive weapon.

6 An incipient German threat in the Middle East was squelched in Iraq.

7 The British further consolidated their Middle East position by occupying Syria against French resistance.

Reverses suffered by the British included these:

1. Most serious, the British lost their last foothold on the continent with the brief, disastrous campaign in Yugoslavia and Greece.

SEP 4 1941

2. On top of that they lost Crete, an air and naval base from which they could have continued to hamper Axis strategy in the Eastern Mediterranean, the Balkans and the Middle East.

3. Together with the unresisted German occupation of Rumania and Bulgaria, the British thus lost to the Nazis the control of the entire Balkan peninsula.

4. The battle of the Atlantic became even more grim and serious. But at the close of the war year British shipping losses were declining remarkably.

5. The loss of Libya after the march to Bengasi.

6. The Japanese threat to Singapore through occupation of French Indo-China.

As the third year opened Britain had these two chief strategic worries:

1—What will be the ultimate course of Japan?

2—Can Hitler defeat Russia, and if so will it be a victory so complete that he can control the whole country? And will he be able to organize the resources and the principal strategic positions of the Soviet so that he can move on to new conquests?

IT IS IN THE RUSSIAN THEATER THAT THE BLOODIEST LOSSES OF THE WAR ARE TAKING PLACE.

German claims of having captured 1,250,000 Russians and inflicted 3,750,000 casualties, and Russian estimates of 2,000,000 German dead and wounded may be safely written down as exaggerations, in the opinion of nearly all observers.

Neither Russian nor Germans have estimated that more than 9,000,000 men were engaged on the entire front. The capture, killing and wounding of 7,000,000 Russians and Germans would leave but 2,000,000 men to continue the war.

Military experiences does not teach that the Germans could suffer such casualties and go on attacking, and it is probable if the Russians had so suffered the resulting lapse in morale would be showing up on the war maps.

SEP 4 1941

Soviet Russia, therefore, may not have been straying too far from the truth when on Aug. 8 she admitted total casualties of 600,000.

Her casualties therefore may be mounting close to 1,000,000 by now.

If Germany has lost 500,000 men, she has lost heavily—probably about one man in six. With her officially admitted losses in all fighting prior to the Russian invasion, her own casualties too may be approaching 1,000,000.

Casualties may be totaled up as follows, with the proviso the necessary information for accurate estimates is lacking and even official figures in some cases are open to question:

RUSSIA—1,000,000 (in war with Germany.) 208,000 (in Finland, official, prisoners not included).

GERMANY—500,000 (in Russia). 217,440 (all campaigns before Russia, official).

ITALY—365,000 (official Italian figure is 257,708). 365,000 (official British figure is 582,000).

BRITAIN—140,000 (official figures, plus arbitrary addition of 13,000 to account for wounded not included in official Greece and Crete figures).

YUGOSLAVIA—No official figures, no reliable estimates.

GREECE—No official figures, no reliable estimates.

SYRIA—1,300 (Free French, official). 1,682 (Australians, official). 3,000 (French, no official figures, but may be assumed to have suffered as heavily as foes at least).

RUMANIA—(In Russia, no official figures or estimates.)

HUNGARIAN—(In Russia, no official figures or estimates.)

FINLAND—(In second war with Russia, no figures.) 65,000 (in first war with Russia, official).

FRANCE — 2,280,000 (1,900,000 prisoners, German official; 80,000 killed, 300,000 wounded, Red Cross aand De Gaulle estimates).

POLAND—1,840,000 (German figures of 840,000 prisoners, 1,000,000 "unaccounted for").

BELGIUM—(No figures.)

NETHERLANDS—9,808 (official German figure).

NORWAY—(No figures.)

IRAQ—(No figures.)

TOTAL—6,631,230.

With some allowances for possible German understatement of their own casualties in previous campaigns, and the addition of Greek, Yugoslav, Belgian and other losses it seems probable the total would stand at 7,000,000 or more.

Furthermore, the Japanese have announced their own losses in the four-year-old Chinese war at 109,250 killed and that the Chinese have suffered 2,015,000 fatalities.

The war also has resulted in material losses of shipping of around 7,000,000 tons of all nations, and thousands of planes and tanks.

The Germans have claimed the destruction of 14,000 Russian tanks, and the Russians say they have destroyed 6,000 Nazi tanks.

The Germans declare they have shot down 11,250 Russian planes, and the Russians say they have disposed of 6,000 German planes.

British tabulations place total losses of German planes for all fronts except the Russian at 8,000.

There is no way of arriving at an independent estimate of these claims, nor are there figures for material losses in Germany's other campaigns.

First "Incident" In No Atlantic Sea War Zone

BERLIN DENIES PART IN AFFRAY

SEP 5 1941

Congress Leaders Apprehensive Over Consequences

Washington, Sept. 4—(AP)—A submarine and a United States destroyer engaged in an actual shooting exchange in the North Atlantic today—marking the first hostile action against an American warship since the war began.

The submarine fired a burst of torpedoes at the destroyer Greer, carrying mail to Iceland. The Greer, unhit, counter-attacked with depth bombs.

With the exchange, the first "incident" consequent to the activities of the navy's Atlantic patrol and occupation of Iceland had occurred, with its results at sea uncertain and in the broader field of international relations a matter of conjecture.

The navy, announcing the skirmish, said only:

"The U. S. S. Greer, en route to Iceland with mail, reported this morning that submarine attacked her by firing torpedoes which missed their mark. The Greer immediately counter-attacked with depth charges.

"Results unknown."

Quickly, the long awaited news of any occurrence tending to draw the United States closer to the war spread to the far corners of the world.

Berlin disclaimed any knowledge of the affray.

London was excited, but not surprised.

Tension Apparent

Cool heads in Washington urged that the country not be excited, but their apprehension was nevertheless apparent.

Senator George, the ranking member and former chairman of the foreign relations committee, said that on the surface the incident did not appear to be of such proportions as would plunge the country into war.

But he added that additional facts would have to be divulged before a real opinion could be formed. George has been a consistent supporter of the Roosevelt foreign policy.

From another member of the foreign relations committee, Senator Van Nuys (D-Ind), came this statement:

"I would not think this single incident would draw us into the war, but if we keep sticking our neck out, as we did very much in going into Iceland, something is bound to happen. It is that kind of thing that will get us in. If the Administration keeps making possible incidents like this, then they will convince the people they are trying to maneuver us into the conflict.

Senator Austin, Republican, Vermont, a supporter of the Administration foreign policy said it was "amazing that any submarine would attack an American destroyer. He added he would like to reserve judgment, saying:

"This is not a thing for hasty opinion."

The Navy rested on its three sentence statement and closed its information offices for the night, leaving the details of the attack on the Greer to speculation, and investigation elsewhere.

Like Swapped Destroyer.

The latter revealed first of all that the Greer was an old destroyer. She was built in 1918 and her silhouette is the same as those of the 50 destroyers which were transferred to the British Navy a year ago. Under the circumstances, it was suggested, a German U-boat commander could have mistaken her for a British fighting vessel.

The exact time of the short-lived battle was not made known, but a veteran submarine officer was of the opinion that it came after daylight.

"You can't see a torpedo track at night," he commented.

Location Not Known.

Even the approximate position of the encounter was unknown, too. But in the light of what is known of the range of submarines and the activities of the Navy, it was assumed that it probably occurred somewhere in the vicinity of Greenland or Iceland.

Vividly, the incident recalled the statements that have been made in official quarters that if a destroyer on the Atlantic patrol or plying beween the United States and its Icelandic outpost were attacked it would reply with shooting.

Announcing the occupation of Iceland, President Roosevelt said on July 7:

"I have issued orders to the Navy that all necessary steps be taken to insure the safety of communications in the approaches between Iceland and the United States, as well as on the seas between the United States and all other strategic outposts."

America's police in the Atlantic has a fleet of destroyers and small aircraft carriers patrolling a broad area on the lookout for Axis submarines or surface raiders. Their function technically has been to guard against the approach of such vessels to the United States.

But in addition, in apprising American officials of the presence of such craft, they have also advised the British navy and all friendly shipping.

Under these circumstances, London dispatches said, there has been a disposition in England to feel that Germany had to make a decision between leaving the sea-lanes open to vessels carrying supplies to England or engage the United States in a real shooting war.

London Not Surprised.

For that reason there was little surprise in London at today's incident, and principally curiosity and excited conjecture as to what its aftermath may be.

The incident of the Greer was preceded by one outstanding occurrence, the sinking of the American steamship Robin Moor in the South Atlantic several months ago. In that case the United States made strong representations to Germany, which so far as is known have, to date, received no reply.

The Greer is a vessel of 1200 tons, launched in August 1918 at the Cramp shipyards in Philadelphia. Normally it carries a crew of 113 men and nine officers, a complement possibly enlarged for her present service.

Frost in Command.

Lieutenant Commander Lawrence Hugh Frost of Washington, D. C. has been in command of the ship since August 4. He is 39 years old and a native of Fayetteville, Ark. He was graduated from the Naval Academy at Annapolis in 1926.

The Greer is armed with four four-inch naval rifles, an unspecified number of three-inch anti-aircraft guns, 12 21-inch torpedo tubes and depth-charge apparatus, the Navy said.

There would be nothing to distinguish the Greer from the destroyers swapped to Great Britain except the United States flag, the Navy said, and neither nation any longer places large identification numbers on destroyers.

The Navy had no information, it said, on whether or not the sound apparatus of the Greer indicated a hit or miss with the depth charges. The charges are thrown off only a short distance from the destroyer, barely sufficient to clear the rudder and propeller.

Navy men said they assumed that the destroyer immediately upon noting the torpedo track turned toward the bubble, which rises to the surface from the point of ejection of a torpedo at the rate of 12 feet a second. They admitted it was largely a matter of chance whether the depth charge damaged the sub, as it no doubt sheered away from its course as soon as it fired and the destroyer had to turn.

The Greer has a rated speed of 35 knots but was probably cruising at 18 or 20, Navy men theorized, and even though it can turn around in less than three times its length, it would be a game of hide and seek with the sub.

Depth charges are rated as having an effective range of 50-yards radius.

It was presumed that if the attack took place at night the Greer was not showing any running lights as it was recently revealed that all vessels of the neutrality patrol operate at night without running lights, and in readiness for action at any minute. The Greer is 314 feet long with a 30-foot beam.

Whether any other units of the United States forces at Iceland, such as Navy patrol planes, took part in a hunt for the submarine was not disclosed by the Navy. It was assumed, however, that if the attack occurred within flying range of Iceland some of the big flying boats took to the air to look for the attacker.

While the attack was the first hostile action against an American warship since the war began, a destroyer has dropped depth bombs in a protective action on at least one other occasion.

Another Incident.

Secretary of the Navy Knox told the Senate Naval Affairs Committee on July 11 of this incident. His account, as published by the committee, said:

"One United States destroyer operating off Greenland heard the S O S of a steamer and proceeded to the location and picked up 60 of the survivors of the steamer.

"While engaged in this act of mercy, the operator of the listening equipment reported to the captain that he thought he heard a submerged submarine. The captain immediately turned toward the direction indicated and dropped three depth charges.

"In doing this, he very prudently exercised the right of self-preservation, for had there been a submarine there his destroyer might have been sunk.

"There was not other evidence that a submarine was there, and it is quite possible that no submarine was there. The listening equipment echo might have been received from a whale or a large fish, or a cold current, instead of a submarine—something which is frequently experienced."

BERLIN DENIES KNOWING ABOUT "SUB" ATTACK

London Is Excited, but Not Surprised; Pointedly Awaits U. S. Reaction

BERLIN, Friday, Sept. 5 (AP) — The German Navy Department and other Berlin authorities available early today said they had no knowledge of a reported submarine attack on an American destroyer as announced by the U. S. Navy in Washington.

Attack Causes Little Surprise In England

London, Friday, Sept. 5 (AP)—Informed British quarters today received with apparent excitement but scant surprise the announcement that a United States destroyer was attacked by a submarine while en route to Iceland.

However, these sources declined to ce[illegible] and there appeared to be [illegible]elihood that any comment wou[illegible] forthcoming at least until United States officials had an opportunity to air their views.

The British were pointedly awaiting the first United States public and official reaction.

Attacks Held Inevitable

Despite the reticence of authoritative quarters, there has long been widespread belief among Britons that attacks on United States warships were inevitable since the occupation of Iceland by American forces.

When the occupation was announced in July, newspapers jubilantly observed that Hitler was confronted with the choice of leaving the North Atlantic sea lanes open or of forcing the United States into a shooting war.

It was recalled that Prime Minister Churchill remarked in his broadcast August 23 that Hitler had "murdered half a dozen countries for far less" than what the United States was doing to help Axis foes.

Morning papers made over their front pages and gave the attack on the Greer top position in late editions.

The news came too late for editorial comment.

Churchill Backs Mackenzie King's Plea For Pledge To Preserve Britain

Bracken Invites Congressmen Over To Probe Lease-Lend Operations

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 4—United States support of Great Britain against Germany in every field was urged pointedly by Prime Ministers Churchill of Britain and Mackenzie King of Canada today in companion speeches picturing world chaos as the alternative.

"Britain without aid far greater than any yet in sight cannot win the war for freedom the world over," declared King in calling for a United States pledge of support against Germany similar to that which Churchill has made to the United States regarding Japan.

This, he said, would carry still further the declarations begun by President Roosevelt's pledge to oppose any threat by another empire to dominate Canada.

A Momentous Declaration

Churchill, following King as speaker at a Lord Mayor's luncheon in the visiting Canadian's honor, called King's plea "a memorable and momentous declaration" and thanked him for putting it in terms stronger than Churchill himself, as a British Minister, might have chosen.

"He has spoken of the immense burden we have to bear," said Churchill, "of our unflinching resolve to persevere, to carry forward our standard in common, and he also has struck that note, never absent from our minds, that no lasting or perfect solution of the difficulties with which we are now confronted — with which the whole world is confronted—no diversion of that sad fate by which the whole world is menaced, can be achieved without full cooperation in every field of all nations which as yet lie outside the range of the conqueror's power."

Invites Congressmen

Following quickly on these linked assertions, Brendan Bracken, Minister of Information, who until recently was Churchill's secretary, invited members of the United States Congress to come to England to investigate operation of the American lease-lend program of aid to Britain.

In thus taking up a suggestion made yesterday by Federal Appeals Judge William Clark, of Philadelphia, who is visiting here, Bracken said, "We are anxious to find independent witnesses and critics, but not peace mongers."

Addressing the British Cabinet and some 300 British notables, Prime Minister King described the seas between Scotland and Iceland, Iceland and Greenland, and Greenland and Newfoundland as a bridge over which men and supplies moved to Britain, but a bridge which would prove an avenue of Nazi invasion were it not for Britain's guardianship of its eastern end.

Quotes Roosevelt

"That the United States was to share in keeping this northern bridge was the best of news," he said. "I find further encouragement in the word of President Roosevelt last Monday when he said, 'I know I speak for the conscience and determination of the American people when I say we shall do everything in our power to crush Hitler and his Nazi forces.' . . .

"We in Canada were greatly heartened when, three years ago, the President after referring to the Dominion of Canada as part of the sisterhood of the British Empire, declared the people of the United States would not stand idly by if the domination of Canadian soil were threatened by any other empire.

"In the name of our Government, I reciprocated at once by recognizing Canada's responsibilities to do what lay within her power to prevent attacks through our territory upon the United States.

"These declarations were the starting point of our agreement for joint defense.

"Today, fortunately, we are witnessing the birth of still wider arrangements for joint defense between the British Empire and the United States.

"Your declaration, Mr. Prime Minister, that in the Far East Britain would stand at the side of the United States is a sure sign of the deepening interdependence of the free world."

(Describing Japanese military factions as seeking to emulate the Hitler method, and menacing Singapore and the Philippines, Churchill on Aug. 24 said the United States was laboring patiently to secure a fair and amicable settlement, "but if these hopes should fail, we shall, of course, range ourselves unhesistatingly at the side of the United States.")

"A similar declaration on the part of the United States as respects Nazi Germany would, I believe, serve to shorten this perilous conflict," said King.

"Such a declaration would be full of meaning for the German people. At the same time it would constitute a realistic recognition that Britain is the one obstacle in the way of Nazi attack upon the New World."

King told the glittering assemblage that "It daily becomes clearer that resistance alone will not bring victory. Unless the whole resources, the total energy of the free world, are thrown into the struggle, the war may drag on for years, carrying in its train famine, pestilence and horrors still undreamed of."

He warned that "Hitlerism has found its most useful allies among those who believed they could save themselves by isolation and neutrality while others fought the battles of freedom."

Aid of All Nations Outside Nazi Realm Urged in Appeal

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 4.—Prime Minister Churchill of Britain and Premier W. L. Mackenzie King of Canada both called today in diplomatic, but strong, terms for full United States backing in the struggle against Nazi Germany.

Addressing a Lord Mayor's luncheon in honor of Mr. Mackenzie King, Mr. Churchill declared that "no lasting or permanent solution of the difficulties with which we are now confronted—with which the whole world is confronted—no diversion of that sad fate by which the whole world is menaced can be achieved without the full co-operation in every field of all nations which as yet lie outside the range of the conqueror's power."

Mr. Churchill linked his statement with that of Mr. Mackenzie King, who had preceded him and who, after recalling President Roosevelt's pledge to defend Canada, stated:

"Your declaration, Mr. Prime Minister, that in the Far East Britain would stand at the side of the United States is a sure sign of the deepening interdependence of the free world."

Urges Similar Declaration.

"A similar declaration on the part of the United States as respects Nazi Germany would, I believe, serve to shorten this perilous conflict. Such a declaration would be full of meaning for the German people. At the same time it would constitute a realistic recognition that Britain is the one obstacle in the way of a Nazi attack upon the New World."

Before he made the reference to Mr. Churchill's Far Eastern pledge and called for a similar United States declaration concerning Germany, Mr. Mackenzie King said it was the best of news when the United States took a share in keeping open the "northern bridge" across the Atlantic to Britain, and added:

"We in Canada were greatly heartened when three years ago the President, after referring to the Dominion of Canada as part of the sisterhood of the British Empire, declared the people of the United States would not stand idly by if domination of Canadian soil were threatened by any other empire.

Starting Point of Agreement.

"In the name of our government, I reciprocated at once by recognizing Canada's responsibility to do what lay within her power to prevent attacks through our territory upon the United States. These declarations were the starting point of our agreement for joint defense.

"Today, fortunately, we are witnessing the birth of still wider arrangements for defense between the British Empire and the United States."

Following Mr. Mackenzie King as a speaker, Mr. Churchill lauded Canada as "the linchpin of the English-speaking world," and stated:

"Today you have listened to a memorable and momentous declaration, made here amid our ruins of London, but it resounds throughout the empire and is carried to all parts of the world by the marvelous mechanism of modern life and modern war."

Mr. Churchill continued: "I am grateful to Mr. Mackenzie King today for having put in terms perhaps more pointed than I as a British minister would that overpowering sense which we have with him that the struggle is dire and that all free men must stand together in one line if humanity is to be spared a deepening, darkening and widening tragedy which can lead only, as Mr. King has said, to something in the nature of immediate world chaos."

Praises Canadian Troops.

In general applauding and echoing Mr. Mackenzie King's assertions, Mr. Churchill praised Canadian troops in Britain, saying while they had not yet had a chance to come to close quarters with the enemy, they stood "at the very point where they would be the first to be hurled into a counter-stroke against an invader."

(Boos and hisses mingled with the cheers wren Mr. Mackenzie King addressed Canadian troops in Britain a week ago Saturday and it was suggested then that the men were discontent because they had not seen action.)

Concluding, Mr. Churchill declared:

"Canada, with those relations of friendly and affectionate intimacy with the United States on the one hand and with her unswerving fidelity to the British Commonwealth and the motherland on the other, is the link which joins together these two great branches of the human family, a link which, spanning the oceans, brings the continents into their true relations and will prevent in future generations a division rope between the proud and happy nations of Europe and the great countries which have come into existence in the new world."

Sees Great Aid Necessary.

Mr. King said that "Britain without aid far greater than any yet in sight cannot win the war for freedom the world over. * * *"

In every country, he said, "Hitlerism has found its most useful allies among those who believe they could save themselves by isolation and neutrality while others fought the battles of freedom."

The new world order, if it is to come after this war, "can only be effected through the leadership of the British commonwealth of nations and the United States of America working in whole-hearted co-operation toward this great end," he added.

The Canadian Prime Minister also said that an armored division would be sent from Canada to join the two operational divisions already in England.

Churchill's Tribute to Mackenzie King

London, Sept. 4.—(AP.)—The text of Prime Minister Churchill's speech today at a Lord Mayor's luncheon in honor of Prime Minister Mackenzie King of Canada:

I have known him (Mackenzie King) for a great many years. I remember him as an Undersecretary for the Colonies and negotiating with him details of some Canadian legislation about which there was some hitch in the days when he was here at the side of that great Canadian statesman, Sir Wilfred Laurier, and that is now, I think, 35 or 36 years ago.

Ever since then I have enjoyed the honor and pleasure of his friendship and have followed with close attention the long and consistent political message which he has delivered to his country, to the Empire and to the time in which we live.

Today you have listened to a memorable and momentous declaration made here amid our ruins of London, but it resounds throughout the Empire and is carried to all parts of the world by the marvelous mechanism of modern life and modern war.

You have listened to a speech which, I think all those who have heard it will feel, explains the long continued authority which Mr. Mackenzie King has wielded when, during more than 15 years, he has been Prime Minister of Canada.

He has spoken of great issues of the war, of the duty which lies ahead of all free men in all parts of the world to bank together lest their heritage be wasted.

Resolve to Persevere.

He has spoken of the immense burden we have to bear, of our unflinching resolve to persevere, to carry forward our standard in common and he also has struck that note, never absent from our minds, that no lasting or perfect solution of difficulties with which we are now confronted, with which the whole world is confronted, no diversion of that sad fate by which the whole world is menaced, can be achieved without a full co-operation in every field of all nations which as yet lie outside the range of the conquerer's power.

In Mr. Mackenzie King we have a Canadian statesman who always has preserved the most intimate relations with the great republic of the United States and whose name and voice are honored there as they are on this side of the Atlantic.

I had an opportunity of meeting the President of the United tSates a few weeks ago and I know from him of the great esteem in which Mr. Mackenzie King is held and how much he has contributed to joining together in close sympathetic action, the republic of the United States and the Dominion of Canada.

I am grateful to Mr. Mackenzie King today for having put in terms perhaps more pointed than I, as a British minister, would, that overpowering sense we have with him that the struggle is dire and that all free men of the world must stand together in one line if humanity is to be spared a deepening, darkening and widening tragedy which can lead only, as Mr. Mackenzie King had said, to something in the nature of immediate world chaos.

I hope, Mr. Mackenzie King, during your all-too-brief visit here, the visit which in a few weeks must draw to a close, you have found yourself able to see with your own eyes what we have gone through and also to feel that unconquerable uplift of energy and of resolve which will carry this old island through the storm and carry with it also much that is precious to mankind.

Troops Stand Ready.

You have taken your place at our councils, you have discussed and examined with our professional experts questions of strategy and war which are pending. You have seen your own gallant Canadian Corps and other troops who are here that have not yet had a chance of coming to close quarters with the enemy—it isn't their fault and it isn't our fault but there they stand there they have stod through the whole of the critical period of the last 15 months at the very point where they would be first to be hurled into a couter-stroke against the invader.

No greater service can be rendered to this country, no more important military duty can be performed by any troops in all the Allies, it seems to me, although they may have felt envious that Australian, New Zeland and South African troops have been in action.

The part they have played in bringing about the final result is second to none.

You have a great knowledge of the flexible organization, a system ever changing and expanding, yet ever growing into a greater harmony, by which the British Commonwealth of Nations is conducted.

You have also knowledge of your own people, and your association with them is so long and so intimate it has enabled you to realize and express in these hours of trouble a more complete unity of Canada than has ever before then achieved.

The war effort of Canada during this war, happily, has not so far required the effusion of blood upon a large scale but that effort, immense in ships, aircraft, air training, in finance and in food, constitutes an element in the resistance of the British Empire without which that resistance could not be successfully maintained.

'Canada Is Linchpin.'

Canada is the linchpin of the English-speaking world. Canada, with those relations of friendly, affectionate intimacy with the United States on the one hand and with her unswerving fidelity to the British commonwealth and motherland on the other, is the link which joins together these great branches of the human family, a link which, spanning the oceans, brings the continents into their true relation and will prevent, in future generations, a division rope between the proud and happy nations of Europe and the great countries which have come into existence in the new world.

London Press Hails King's Plea To U. S.

London, Friday, Sept. 5—(AP)—Under the headline "Mackenzie King Plea Sensation," the Daily Express said today that the Canadian prime minister's luncheon speech yesterday contained the "most directly worded appeal yet voiced by a British empire statesman for direct intervention in the war by the United States."

The newspaper added the King's frank statement that the United States government should make an open declaration against the Nazi policy of aggression had caused a sensation among London politicians.

Editorially the Express commented: "Whatever the opinion may be in the United States, this is the sort of bold talk which reaches straight from heart to heart."

LENINGRAD'S ARMY STANDS FAST, REDS SAY

SEP 5 1941

Repulse Of New Nazi Attempt To Cross Dnieper Also Reported

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Friday, Sept. 5—The Red army before Leningrad is standing fast and hurling back assault by masses of fresh German troops, while other Soviet troops to the south are beating back new German attempts to cross the Dnieper, the Russians reported today.

The early morning communique told of the Dnieper battles and said fighting raged along the entire front.

It also said Russian planes and torpedo boats sank one German transport and two torpedo boats in the Baltic, Leningrad's sea front, but did not disclose whether the transports were attempting any new Baltic landings.

The account of the Leningrad fighting was given by S. A. Lozovsky, the Russian spokesman.

"Fighting Very Well"

Lozovsky said the northern army of Marshal Klementi Voroshilov was "fighting very well on the quite distant approaches to Leningrad." Fierce battles raged day and night between the city and Novgorod, one hundred miles to the south, Lozovsky reported.

The spokesman's announcement came as Soviet military dispatches reported that German forces beating at Kiev, the Ukraine capital, were being driven back by Russian counter-attacks of tremendous violence. At a single point these attacks cost the Germans 15,000 men in killed and wounded, the Russians said.

Heavy Bombing Blocked

Lozovsky declared that Leningrad's strong anti-aircraft defenses had prevented heavy bombing.

"Not only are the Germans stranded at one place and unable to move forward but they are forced to throw in new forces to remain at the points they have reached," Lozovsky continued.

He branded as "German propaganda in the realm of fantasy" Axis reports that Leningrad was encircled, cut off and on the verge of falling. On the contrary, he said, Leningrad is maintaining regular rail communication with other parts of the Soviet Union by several railways.

"Another" Radio Victory

The spokesman also called reports that the Germans had taken Bryansk, railway junction 220 miles southwest of Moscow, "another radio victory—not one by the Reichswehr."

The situation around Odessa has improved recently, Lozovsky reported, because constant Soviet counter-attacks have made the siege a costly to the Germans and Rumanians. He said the Germans were using the Rumanians to lead the assault and added that "in no war has Rumania suffered such great losses."

On the front as a whole, Lozovsky said, "there is incessant fierce fighting, day and night, from the Arctic to the Black Sea. Everyone coming from the front is absolutely confident that the German army will be routed."

Nazi Drive Broken

In the struggle about Kiev on the upper Ukraine the Russians claimed to be breaking what was begun as a major Nazi offensive. They announced the recapture of several Soviet villages.

Advices from the front said this success was accompanied by a continued advance for Red counter-offensives in the center. Soviet informants asserted the Germans were giving up point after point to the Red wave rolling through heavy and concentrated fire from Nazi artillery and mortars and over fields sown with mines.

Rumanians Mowed Down

An Izvestia account of fighting on the river "D" (Dnieper) said a battle was still under way for an island which the Germans had occupied as a springboard for an assault on the Russians on the east side.

At the southern end of the front Red Star, the army newspaper, reported defenders of Odessa mowed down Rumanians with mortar fire.

The Moscow City Soviet announced plans for winter air-raid shelters in subway stations, basements and buildings. Food reserves, including 400,000 tons of potatoes and 214,000 tons of other vegetables, were being brought into the capital and 9,000 houses were ordered repaired for winter shelters.

"Psychological Charge"

Russians exhibited captured German documents to show that the Germans also were preparing winter campaign. One was a purported secret order of the command of the German Sixteenth Army for soldiers to "use any means of getting fur clothing of every kind."

The invaders were pictured as resorting to fevered and bloody stratagems in their desperate effort to reach decisions before the approach of bad weather.

For example, the Russians said that in the district of "K"—not otherwise identified but possibly Kiev—two picked German companies were sent forward on a strange and hopeless "psychological charge," marching forward in close ranks to certain death behind a band thumping out martial music with its kettle drums rolling and its bass drums thundering. Shortly it was over; both German companies were cut to pieces by a storm of machine-gun fire.

SEP 5 1941

High Command Reticent

The Soviet command itself continued its policy of reticence, reporting in its midday communique only that there was stubborn fighting everywhere.

Red aerial action was again reported heavy in every theater, particularly in the Black Sea areas, where efforts were being made to relieve the Soviet southern armies.

In two days of attack in that sector, the Soviet communique said, Red bombers of the Black Sea fleet destroyed more than fifty German tanks and trucks, four German planes "and large numbers of Nazi infantry, cavalry and artillery."

Tass Asserts Planes Fired At No Peaceful Residents At Any Time In Iran

Moscow, Sept. 4 (AP)—The report of a traveler reaching Teheran from Meshid, northeastern Iran, that he saw Soviet planes machine-gunning Moslem pilgrims on roads last Thursday some hours after Iranian resistance had ceased evoked a denial today from Tass, the official Soviet news agency.

The report was carried in an Associated Press dispatch, from Teheran September 2. Tass said:

"Neither during the advance nor after military operations were discontinued did Soviet planes fire at any Moslem pilgrims or other peaceful resident."

Bar Fugitives From Refuge in Teheran Embassy.

Ankara, Sept. 3 (delayed) (A. P.).—Turkey has refused to take the responsibility of getting several hundred German men out of Iran, well-informed spokesmen said today, and they now face interment in British or Russian camps.

The Turkish embassy at Teheran has been instructed to refuse to receive Germans seeking admittance to its compound, the spokesman said. They assumed the British would permit German women and children to leave Teheran for Turkey, however.

Afghans Next?

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 4—The Tokyo radio tonight quoted the newspaper Hochi as saying editorially that Britain has turned her attention to Afghanistan after taking Iran in cooperation with Russia, and "has already started political operations there on the pretext that the German residents in that country are threatening the Afghan people."

The newspaper was quoted as saying further that there can be no doubt that the British "in their intrigue to get Afghanistan . . . are in a secret understanding with the United States."

The broadcast was heard by CBS.

Former Poznan Policemen Sentenced by Nazis.

Berlin, Sept. 4 (A. P.).—Eighteen former members of the Polish police force at Poznan were sentenced to death by a special court today on charges of murdering German nationals.

The court heard evidence bearing on the alleged death of 672 Germans who were said to have been abducted from their homes in Poland and slain as the German Army moved across the Polish border in the fall of 1939. A captain and a sergeant of police, among those condemned to death, were convicted of 133 killings. Sixteen others were convicted of one or two each and ten were acquitted.

Invaders Are Fought to Sharp Standstill With Heavy Losses.

KIEV UNDER DIRECT ASSAULT

Moscow Reports Several German Regiments Broken in Push on Ukrainian Capital.

Moscow, Sept. 4 (A. P.).—The German Army threw in re-enforcements before Leningrad today, but was held to a standstill with heavy losses, the Soviet spokesman, S. A. Lozovsky, told a press conference.

Earlier the Russians announced that a vast battle had begun for industrial Kiev, capital of the Ukraine, long under siege, with terrific fighting at the approaches to the city. The Reds asserted that they were beating back the Germans with stiff counter-attacks and that, at one point, the village "N," Red Army detachments have destroyed several German regiments, killing and wounding more than 15,000 men.

Ringing of Leningrad Denied.

In describing the struggle around Leningrad, Lozovsky said that fierce fighting had been going on, day and night, between Novgorod and Leningrad, and that Marshal Klementi Voroshilov's northern army now was "fighting very well on the quite distant approaches to Leningrad."

"Not only are the Germans stranded in one place and cannot move forward, but they also are forced to throw in new forces to remain at the points they have reached," he said.

He added that Axis reports that Leningrad was encircled and on the verge of falling were "propaganda, which belongs in the realm of fantasy."

Leningrad has maintained regular communications with other parts of the Soviet Union on several railways, he added.

Rumanian Losses Heavy.

In the south, Lozovsky said, the Germans are using Rumanians to lead their assaults.

"In no war has Rumania suffered such great losses," he stated, quoting a Rome radio prediction of a long struggle for Odessa in emphasizing his point.

He asserted that farther north in the Ukraine the Germans had attempted to put pontoon bridges across the Dnieper, but that each time they had been blown up.

In general, he said, the front was characterized by "incessant fierce fighting, day and night, from the Arctic to the Black Sea." He added that "every one coming from the front is absolutely confident the German Army will be routed."

As the Germans apparently opened a concerted assault on Kiev, long under virtual siege, large-scale fighting continued to rage at the approaches to Leningrad and along the central sector on the front before Moscow.

The battle before Leningrad, like that opening up at Kiev, was being fought at the approaches to this second largest Russian city.

Report German Retreat.

Dispatches from the long front in general told a story of abandonment of locality after locality by the German forces, retreating, though fighting hard, in the face of an aggressively pushed Russian counteroffensive.

The dispatches gave no precise indication of the sector of the front, but they apparently referred to the center of the line where the Red Army has claimed its deepest inroads into the Nazi front.

The Russians derisively reported a German "psychic attack" Tuesday, intended to check the Soviet advance, and said it ended with two Nazi companies annihilated.

"At 6 o'clock in the evening in the vicinity of 'K' the enemy moved over two companies of picked troops against a unit commanded by Mikhailov," the dispatch reported. "They were preceded by a band as on parade, kettle drums rolling and base drums thundering.

Russian Bayonet Charge.

"The Nazis, advancing in close order, were met by terrific fire from our machine-guns followed by a bayonet charge.

"The psychic attack ended in fiasco. Both Nazi companies were annihilated."

Pravda, the Communist party organ, reported from Leningrad that although "the beastly, treacherous enemy is breaking through on the approaches to the city," its inhabitants are building a deep, continuous defense line.

With the German land offensive against Leningrad reported checked, the Nazi and Russian air forces apparently were locked in a bitter struggle for control of the air over the threatened city.

The early morning communique of the Soviet Information Bureau painted a picture of great aerial combats in which Russian fighter pilots were said to be beating off repeated thrusts by the Luftwaffe.

Formation Intercepted.

At one point, the communique said, Soviet flyers intercepted a formation of 70 German planes attempting to attack a big airdrome and brought down 11 raiders in a furious dogfight.

One Russian lieutenant was credited with destroying five German bombers and another with bringing down two bombers and a fighter escort.

Soviet bombers were reported, meanwhile, to be blasting away at German ground forces, which were said yesterday to have been driven back three miles from advance positions before Leningrad.

These air attacks, carried out at low altitude, are raising havoc with German supply lines and disrupting preparations for a new push, the Russians declared.

Twenty German trucks and many supply wagons were reported destroyed in one attack. At another point a Russian bombing squadron was said to have swooped down on a Nazi column 3 or 4 miles long, wrecking at least 80 trucks, 12 artillery pieces, six anti-aircraft guns and a number of tanks and killing or wounding 700 soldiers.

German fighter planes which came to the aid of the column were beaten off, the Russians asserted.

On land operations, the early communique said merely that Russian troops "stubbornly fought the enemy along the entire front" yesterday—a repetition of the stock phrase which has appeared in Soviet war bulletins for several days.

The midday communique simply repeated the phrase in referring to operations last night.

A supplement to the later communique related, however, how Russian troops had mined a bridge over an unidentified river and had destroyed it after allowing a German mechanized unit to cross.

The Russians then sprang from concealment, the bulletin said, and fell on the column, destroying it.

As the result of the mining of another bridge, the communique stated, 15 Nazi tanks were destroyed.

Air Force Active.

The Soviet air force was reported active not only on the Leningrad front but also in the Ukraine, where 50 German tanks, 4 fighter planes and large numbers of cavalry and infantry were said to have been destroyed.

(Dispatches from London quoted the Finnish radio as saying German troops had captured the Russian communications center of Bryansk on the central front—about 220 miles southwest of Moscow and about 150 miles northeast of Gomel, which fell to the Germans more than a week ago.

(The Finnish high command also announced today that Finnish troops had regained all the territory on the Karelian Isthmus which Finland lost to Russia in their 1939-40 war. This would put them about 20 miles from Leningrad. A communique said the Red Army had been "decisively beaten" on this front, and reported capture of 10,000 Russians and destruction of large quantities of equipment.)

The Russians reiterated assertions that the Germans have suffered "enormous losses of man power" in recent fighting.

Leningrad Termed Composed.

"It is necessary to merge temporarily several units into one pending arrival of reinforcements which can hardly be expected before mid-September."

Tass reported from Leningrad that Soviet Russia's second largest city was exhibiting "a spirit of firm composure" and its industries were operating normally, supplying the Red army with materials necessary to defense.

The news agency said that students had begun their fall semester in Leningrad's universities, theaters were staging new performances and newsreels of fighting at the front drew packed houses.

Numerous detachments of the city guard have joined the Red army, which is determined to make the approaches to Leningrad the graveyards of the Germans and Finns, said the dispatch.

Colonel Says Foe Lost Heavily in 45 Days of Battle

MOSCOW, Sept. 4 (AP).—A Russian unit encircled on the Finnish front was reported today to have withdrawn successfully across Lake "N" (Ladoga) after inflicting heavy casualties on the Finns.

Colonel Bondarev, its commander, gave this account of the action in the government newspaper "Izvestia":

"After forty-five days of fighting in which the enemy lost no less than 18,000 killed and wounded, Finnish headquarters broadcast that our forces had been driven into Lake 'N' and annihilated.

"In fact, our forces, together with artillery and other arms, had crossed the lake and were preparing to inflict fresh blows on the enemy. Meanwhile, not daring to venture into territory we had just vacated, the enemy for hours on end kept raking it with artillery and mine-thrower fire and aerial bombs."

Two Soviet Divisions On Central Front Declared Smashed

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 4—The Germans reported today they had thwarted a landing attempt on the Black Sea coast and had smashed two divisions in the central sector, but both official and unofficial sources were silent on developments about Leningrad.

Berlin reports have said that Leningrad was virtually surrounded. An authorized spokesman explained, however, that this "does not necessarily mean a tight ring around the city proper—it may include a large territory."

The DNB report that 229 Russian planes and 17 German were shot down during the first three days of September indicated air battles were extensive.

High Command Reticent.

The high command confined itself to a statement that operations on the Eastern front continued successfully. Other reports said the Germans had repulsed persistent Soviet counter-attacks on the lower Dnieper and were shelling massed Red troops on the eastern shore.

DNB said five boatloads of Russians who approached a German-held section of the Black Sea coast, apparently to cut in behind the southern flank in the Ukraine, were driven off under machine-gun fire.

In the northern sector a German division was said to have broken into well-fortified Russian positions September 3. Fighting was still going on in the area, it was stated.

In the central sector, DNB said, the One Hundred and Eighth Russian Tank Division was encircled and, after several days' fighting, "despite many attempts to break out, the division, with the exception of a few remnants, was destroyed."

The Two Hundred and Ninety-third Russian Infantry Division, which the Germans claimed tried to hold up the advance of German armored units by a flank attack in the central sector yesterday, was "taken in a pincers," DNB said. It added that at least 5,000 Russian prisoners were captured in the battle.

The 293d Russian infantry division, which the Germans claimed tried to hold up the advance of German armored units by a flank attack in the central sector yesterday, was "taken in a pincers," D. N. B. said. It added that at least 5000 Russian prisoners were captured in the battle.

In other furious clashes in the central area yesterday the Germans reported the capture or destruction of 95 Soviet tanks and seizure of 1100 prisoners. One German division was credited with capturing 1000 motor vehicles in the day's skirmishes.

German press dispatches reported that the air force had forced suspension of rail service between Kiev and Gonotov by attacks in which troop trains were bombed.

Bombers were also said to have sunk two Russian transports near Oesel Island in the Baltic and several in Lake Ladoga. On the Arctic front German fliers bombarded barracks and artillery emplacements on the Fisher peninsula, dispatches reported.

3 Red Divisions Reported Lost

Nazis Claim to Have Smashed Them Along Central and Black Sea Fronts.

Berlin, Sept. 4 (A. P.).—Three Soviet divisions have been smashed, with crippling losses of men and equipment, in the last three days by German forces which have repulsed a landing attempt on the Black Sea coast and an armored counter-attack on the central front, DNB, the official German news agency, reported today.

At least 5,000 Russian prisoners were claimed in one fierce engagement in the central sector and 1,000 more in another. Yesterday alone, said DNB, ninety-five Russian tanks had been seized or destroyed. One German division was credited with having captured 1,000 Red Army motor vehicles.

The Germans contended that they were stopping persistent Russian counter-attacks along the lower Dnieper River and that there were indications that German lines were closing in on Leningrad, although authorized sources acknowledged that this "does not necessarily mean a tight ring around the city proper."

High Command Is Terse.

The news agency's reports gave the only details of the land fighting, the High Command bulletin reporting only that operations "continue successfully."

DNB also tabulated air losses for the first three days of September at 229 Russian planes and seventeen German.

In the center of the eastern front, where the Germans have acknowledged substantial, tank-led Red Army counter-attacks, the agency said that the 108th Russian tank division had been encircled and virtually destroyed.

German armored units were credited also with having destroyed the bulk of the Russian 293d Infantry Division in an unspecified area of the central sector.

Another Russian division was dislodged from a well-fortified position after sharp fighting at close quarters yesterday on the northern front, DNB reported. It said that mopping up now has been completed around Tallinn, captured capital of Estonia.

A Russian attempt to put a landing force ashore from the Black Sea was said to have collapsed under fire from German shore defenses two days ago.

D.N.B. said five boatloads of Russians approached the Red Sea coast Tuesday along a German-held section, apparently trying to cut in behind the southern flank of the Ukraine, but were driven off by machine-gun fire.

It said another Russian attempt to cross the lower Dnieper River to the German-occupied western bank also was frustrated and German artillery was shelling Red Army forces massed on the eastern shore.

(Supplementing the high command's reticence, the German radio appealed to the people "to forego a complete and detailed description of military operations."

(The broadcast, as heard by C. B. S. in New York, said: "The people know only too well why this lack of information is necessary. But they also are aware of the fact that each time a campaign has been concluded, a detailed report was given."

(Coinciding with Russian reports of German reverses, the Nazi high command's generalized communiques of the last several days recall a similar period a month ago. The German high command broke its silence then on August 6 by reporting tremendous Russian casualties, including nearly 1,000,000 prisoners, but giving no new military positions captured. The Germans then prefaced their claims by explaining that "wrong conceptions" of the progress of the campaign had arisen among the German people during the period of official reticence.)

Air Blows Stressed.

Luftwaffe blows on vital Russian communications far back from the battle front were stressed in German dispatches.

Especially heavy aerial activity was reported from the Leningrad sector, where the Luftwaffe was said to have dumped load after load of bombs on railway lines, artillery and anti-aircraft positions.

German Stukas also were reported ranging over the Gulf of Finland and Lake Ladoga north of Leningrad, ferreting out Soviet supply vessels. At least three ships were severely damaged in these operations, said D.N.B.

In the Black Sea, at the other end of the line, a Nazi plane bombed and sank a Russian submarine off the Crimean coast, D.N.B. declared.

Entire Karelian Strip Retaken From Reds, Finland Reports

Helsinki Announces Decisive Victory Over Soviet Forces

SEP 5 1941

By the Associated Press

HELSINKI, Finland, Sept. 4.—Announcing a decisive victory over the Red Army, the Finnish high command reported today recapture of the entire 60-mile strip of territory on the Karelian Isthmus which Finland lost to Russia in their 1939-40 war.

"The old frontier was reached everywhere," a communique declared, triumphantly.

(The old Finnish-Russian frontier on the isthmus, a neck of land 40 to 70 miles wide between Lake Ladoga and the Gulf of Finland, is only 20 miles from Leningrad, big Soviet industrial center, toward which the Germans are driving from the south. Reports from Berlin put Nazi advance units 20 miles from the city.)

Field Marshal Baron Carl Gustaf Mannerheim, leading Finland's armed forces into battle against Russia for the third time in less than 25 years, immediately issued an order of the day congratulating his troops.

Endurance Still Demanded.

At the same time he said:

"Endurance is still demanded of us. The time has not yet come to exchange the rifle for the sword." (In modern armies the sword is a dress weapon carried in times of peace.)

The high command's communique said Finnish troops already had captured 10,000 Russians in the drive down the isthmus and declared the number was mounting daily.

In addition, the bulletin said, large quantities of Russian war material have been captured, including several hundred automobiles, nearly 2,000 horses, dozens of tanks, about 300 guns and an immeasurable amount of infantry arms.

100 Ships Declared Sunk.

An earlier announcement declared that more than 100 Russian vessels had been sunk in the Gulf of Finland last week in the joint Finnish-German naval and air offensive which wrested Viipuri and Estonia from the Red forces.

"The magnitude of the tragedy which was enacted in the Gulf of Finland at the end of August probably will never be known in its entirety," the announcement said. "For a whole week burning wrecks, derelicts, drifting boats, lighters and corpses furnished evidence of the unusual havoc inflicted on the Russian navy and transports." * * *

British Put Nazi Loss At 1,750,000, Reds' At 2 to 3 Million

Fighting Described as Bloodiest in History; Russian Stand Praised

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 4.—An authoritative British source said today German losses in the war with Russia this far are believed to total about 1,750,000 and that the Russian losses have been "from 2,000,000 to 3,000,000" in the bloodiest fighting in history.

This source, in the highest quarters, said:

"None can overpraise the Russians' conduct of the war. They are magnificent and proved the sincerity of their scorched earth promises by blowing up the Lenin (Dnieper River) Dam."

He asserted that the British already are sending the Russians "all the airplanes we can spare and all the rubber they can use"—two of their most important needs.

The planes are being accompanied by ground crews and skilled aircraft engineers, this source said, but the Russians prefer to fly the planes themselves.

The Russians already are discussing the campaigns of "next spring and August," and said the British are confident the Soviet will hold out through the winter with devastating effect on German troops and morale.

The Russians now have 2,000,000 troops in action and soon will be ready to put in 4,000,000 more and have no need for British or American troops.

The Russian Army still is the largest in the world, this source said.

Reds Planning Campaigns Of Next Year, British Say

London Source Confident Russia Will Hold Out Through the Winter

LONDON, Sept. 4 (AP)—The Russians already are discussing the campaigns of "next spring and August," an authoritative British source reported today in expressing Britain's confidence that the Soviet Union could and would hold out through the winter with enormous ill effect on German morale.

Bloodiest in History

The fighting already was the bloodiest in history, he said, estimating Russian losses at from 2,000,000 to 3,000,000 men and German casualties at 1,750,000.

But, he added, the Russians now have 3,000,000 troops in action—still the biggest army in the world—and soon will be ready to put into action 4,000,000 more. Thus, he remarked, Moscow had no need of British or American troops.

Britain, this source explained, already is sending to the Russians "all the airplanes we can spare and all the rubber they can use."

British aircraft is being accompanied by ground crews and aircraft engineers, he said, but not by pilots as the Russians prefer to do their own flying.

Can't Be Over-Praised

Summing up, he declared:

"No one can over praise the Russians' conduct of the war. They are magnificent, and proved the sincerity of their scorched earth promises by blowing up the Lenin (Dnieper River) dam."

Germans to leave the compound after the Allies received reports that they planned to take refuge in the Turkish Legation to prevent internment in Russia or India.

Turkish quarters denied they had consented to the use of the legation, saying explicit instructions from Ankara were to avoid any controversy which might harm Turkey's foreign relations.

The British-Russian information, however, said the Germans were packed for moving.

The report that the Nazis planned resistance came from diplomats who were in contact with the German legation and said the hundreds of men of military age there were fully armed with rifles and pistols.

Foreign observers were inclined to discount the likelihood of resistance, however, recalling the panic among the Germans as recently as Saturday, when Russian occupation of Teheran was believed imminent.

The German minister, seeking through the United States legation to assure the safety of 100 German women and children, was described as resigned to the prospect of Siberian internment for all men not of diplomatic status.

Unofficial reports said that Turkey would look after German interests in Russian-occupied Iranian territory.

The British and Russian Legations were awaiting discussion of possible exchanges to free British correspondents and their families who have been in German hands since the occupation of Denmark and Yugoslavia.

700 Well-Armed Nazis in Iran Threaten to Resist Seizure

Group Inside Compound of Legation Forbidden by Police to Leave

By the Associated Press.

TEHERAN, Iran, Sept. 3 (Delayed).—More than 700 well-armed Germans inside the thick-walled compound of the German Legation at suburban Shemgan threatened bitter resistance today against any attempt to seize them "contrary to international law."

Iranian police, acting at British-Russian suggestion, forbade the Germans to leave the compound after the Allies received reports that they planned to take refuge in the Turkish Legation to prevent internment in Russia or India.

Turkish quarters denied they had consented to the use of the legation, saying explicit instructions from Ankara were to avoid any controversy which might harm Turkey's foreign relations.

The British-Russian information, however, said the Germans were packed for moving.

The report that the Nazis planned resistance came from diplomats who were in contact with the German legation and said the hundreds of men of military age there were fully armed with rifles and pistols.

Foreign observers were inclined to discount the likelihood of resistance, however, recalling the panic among the Germans as recently as Saturday, when Russian occupation of Teheran was believed imminent.

The German minister, seeking through the United States legation to assure the safety of 100 German women and children, was described as resigned to the prospect of Siberian internment for all men not of diplomatic status.

Premier Ali Furanghi was stricken with a heart attack yesterday. The 64-year-old scholar took office a week ago and sued for the armistice that saved Iranian independence. His personal prestige was credited with staving off disorder at the peak of the crisis Saturday. Friends said that his condition was improved today, but that the strain of the crisis had gravely depleted his strength.

Iran was understood to have qualified acceptance of British-Russian terms with a request that the Russians withdraw from Kazvin, Semnan and Sharud and that the British straighten out a few small salients in their occupation zone.

There was no word whether Britain and Russia were inclined to accede, but the Government continued with demobilization of the army and planned to abandon the 9 p. m. Teheran curfew tomorrow.

As a friendly gesture, a Russian source said Iranian postage, bearing the national emblem, the Lion and the Sun, would be used in north Iran. 6

FORTRESS BOMBER RAIDS ROTTERDAM

Blasts Docks at Netherland Port—Other British Planes on Big Daylight Sweeps

THEY BAG 11 NAZI CRAFT

Factory Near Bethune Pounded During Offensive—Brest Is Attacked Again at Night

LONDON, Friday, Sept. 5 (AP)—An American-built Flying Fortress bombed Rotterdam docks late yesterday while other Royal Air Force units scored hits on an industrial plant near Bethune and the Cherbourg docks, the Air Ministry reported at midnight.

Eleven German planes were destroyed in the fighting over France and the British lost eight, a Blenheim bomber and seven fighters.

[The Germans claimed the shooting down of twenty-one British planes in the Channel areas during the day.]

Docks at Brest were reported attacked by the R. A. F. during Wednesday night but bad weather crippled other operations.

In scattered German raids on Britain Wednesday night high explosives were dropped in Northeastern England and in East Scotland, with neither damage nor casualties reported.

British Line Athwart Iran.

Simla, India, Sept. 4 (A. P.).—British and Indian troops established in the interior of Iran are now holding strategic centers and lines of communication which should thwart any Axis designs in the country, a British statement issued at this headquarters of the British operations in Iran said today.

In western Iran British forces have advanced 400 miles across a difficult mountainous terrain, and in the southwest have covered nearly 200 miles over desolate sandy wastes and rocky land, according to the statement.

"We now hold the important spheres of influence," it was stated, "including the main oil producing zones and the main roads leading from Iran and the Caucasus."

FORTRESS PLANES RAID ROTTERDAM

Holland Now Gets Taste of U. S.-built Craft.

London, Sept. 4 (A. P.).—American-built fortress planes bombed Rotterdam docks in occupied Holland this afternoon, it was stated authoritatively today. This attack followed one last night on the French port of Brest.

Rotterdam, scene of the Germans' first great air blitz in the West, thus took its place among the cities raided by the big four-motored American planes, now being used by the British. Previously they have been used to bomb Brest, Hamburg and other important German ports and naval bases.

During today's action over the young South African pilot shot down two Messerschmitt 109's within half a minute of each other.

Brest Docks Bombed

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 4—Royal Air Force bombers attacked docks at Brest, German-occupied French port and naval base, during the night, British authorities said today.

German air activity over Britain meanwhile, was on a small scale. Bombs fell at points in northeast England, a Government communique said, but there were no casualties and only very slight damage was acknowledged.

Scores of R. A. F. planes headed out over the sea this afternoon. The drone of their motors was heard for twenty minutes.

SUBMARINE CUT IN TWO

British Cruiser Rams and Sinks Italian Craft.

London, Sept. 4 (A. P.).—A British cruiser has rammed and sunk an Italian submarine in the Mediterranean, the Admiralty announced today.

The 5,450-ton cruiser Hermione sighted the submarine on the surface and cut it in half while plowing ahead full speed, the Admiralty said, carrying a part of the wreckage away on her prow. There were no survivors, it was announced.

The attack was described as so sudden that the submarine's attempt to crash dive was prevented.

British Raid Convoy

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Sept. 4—The air arm of the British fleet successfully attacked a convoy of five merchantmen escorted by seven destroyers off the Sardinian coast Tuesday night, a British communique said today.

One large ship hit amidships by a torpedo blew up, a column of smoke rising 9,000 feet in the air, the statement said. Another large ship was reported hit by a torpedo and two smaller vessels damaged.

"Complete Surprise"

"The attack achieved complete surprise and caused much disorder in the convoy," the communique said. "The destroyers apparently fired their own ships, some of which narrowly avoided colliding with themselves."

The attack occurred east of Cape Spartivento, which is at the southern tip of Sardinia.

One person was killed and twenty-one injured in an air raid on the Cairo and Suez Canal areas last night, it was reported today.

30 Killed In Berlin

Berlin, Sept. 4 (AP)—Thirty persons were killed and seventy-two were injured in the R. A. F. night raid on Berlin Tuesday, DNB announced today.

The British lost six planes over the channel area today, DNB said tonight.

U-boat Skipper Bares Hazards

Admits British Have Extended Air Patrol Over Atlantic, Forcing Many Dives.

Berlin, Sept. 4 (A. P.).—A U-boat commander disclosed today that widespread patrol of the Atlantic by airplanes and British submarine chasers was making successful German undersea operations difficult.

The officer, Lieut.-Commander Kell, said in today's Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung that the British were exerting the greatest efforts to bring convoys safely to their home ports.

Kell participated in a recent U-boat attack on a British convoy off Portugal.

U-boats Forced to Dive.

Protection of convoys by airplanes has "been extensively developed" and "extends virtually over the entire Atlantic and forces U-boats frequently to dive," he said.

"They send convoys over the northernmost route where there is hardly any darkness because of the short summer nights, or the protection is so strong that often several days of tenacious pursuit are necessary in order finally to get into shooting position," Kell continued.

Kell said that the attack on August 25 on a British convoy traveling toward Gibraltar, out of which the Germans claimed to have sunk 150,000 tons, was the longest in U-boat history.

In the course of several days the U-boats repeatedly were forced off, but closed in again until finally the defensive energy of the British began to lag, Kell declared. Then the Germans were able to send their torpedoes home.

Figures Are Significant.

"The importance of this success is all the greater because a long time had passed since U-boats had been heard from on the Atlantic," Kell said.

Recently, he explained, shipping on the high seas "has become a little more lively" after months "in which the Atlantic became empty and the U-boats did not sight a mast for weeks."

The English have learned considerable about fighting submarines in two years of "misfortune" on the Atlantic, Kell admitted, but he said that the Germans at the same time had been putting their experiences to constant use in improving U-boat equipment.

In the light of Kell's remarks, the trend of German figures for enemy shipping sunk by U-boats appeared significant.

The U-boat toll reached its high point in September, 1940, when the German torpedoes were reported to have sent 639,000 gross tons to the bottom.

After February of this year the U-boat average was between 300,000 and 400,000 gross tons monthly. Then in July the figure dropped to 241,000. The High Command did not specify what percentage of its August total was sunk by U-boats.

Nazis Claim Sinking Of 13,088,283 Tons Of Ships Thus Far

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 4.—D.N.B., official news agency, declared today that 13,088,283 tons of British shipping and shipping in British service were lost during the first two years of the war.

The news agency's review credited the German Navy with sinking 9,532,700 tons and the airforce 3,555,583 tons.

Plan Cleanup in Ethiopia

LONDON, Sept. 4 (AP).—British offensive to drive the last 12,000 to 15,000 Italian troops out of Ethiopia may be expected after the rainy season ends this month.

Nazi Ship Claims

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 4—Germany's air force and navy sent 537,200 tons of British shipping to the bottom in August, the German high command said today.

A communique covering Luftwaffe operations last night told of sinking two British freighters totaling 10,000 tons in attacks off the English east coast, the bombing of an east coast port, a new raid on the Suez Canal and a foray against a British North African airport that destroyed runways and shelters and set a munition dump afire.

No British planes flew over Reich territory during the night, the communique said.

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Friday, Sept. 5—The German air force sank an 8,000-ton merchant ship, the City of Oakland, in a raid Wednesday night on the Gulf of Suez, DNB announced today.

[Lloyd's register of shipping lists no City of Oakland, but describes a City of Auckland of British registry with a tonnage of 8,336, built in 1914 and with Liverpool as its home port.]

In addition, the agency claimed, a 3,000-ton ship was sunk and another freighter was severely damaged in the same raid.

6 Italians Claimed By Malta

Valletta, Malta, Sept. 4 (AP)—Six Italian planes were shot down in flames over Malta today and three others so badly damaged that they probably did not reach home, the British command announced.

The attack on this island base followed incendiary bombings by single planes last night.

Rome Claims Air Victory

Rome, Sept. 4 (AP)—Violent air fighting at Sidi Barrani, British supply base in Egypt, in which Italian battle planes shot down eighteen British planes was reported today in an Italian war bulletin.

Italian fighter craft were busy machine gunning army trucks and supply dumps when they were attacked by the British, the high command said. Other British planes were reported damaged on the ground at Sidi Barrani.

SEP 5 1941

Italian planes also bombed harbor works and defense works at Tobruk, Libya, and made a bombing attack on Malta where an 8,000-ton ship was reported sunk.

British planes bombed Derna, Libya, it was said.

Berlin Raid (1) Cuts Off Bern, (2) Clears Air For Red Heckler

Swiss Communications Severed, Reich Radio Quits And Anti-Nazi "Ghost" Has Ether To Self

SEP 5 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Bern, Friday, Sept. 5—Communications with Berlin were restored early today after being cut for several hours because of an air-raid alarm in the German capital.

The communications were cut about 11 P. M. Swiss time, and were restored around 2 A. M., today.

During the period it was impossible to reach Berlin by telephone or telegraph from Bern.

[Editor's Note—Tass, in a broadcast from Moscow heard in New York, carried a Geneva dispatch stating that Germany had suspended indefinitely the granting of visas for travel from Switzerland to the Reich.]

Air Cleared For Heckler

New York, Sept. 4 (AP)—Sudden suspension of Germany's domestic broadcasts over the Deutschlandsender was reported tonight by the British radio, which said the interruption came "apparently because enemy bombers were above."

The BBC reported also that the suspension cleared the air for the now familiar heckler on the Deutschlandsender wave length, permitting him to tell the German people without interruption that Nazi losses in Russia amounted to 2,000,000 men and that the Bleitzkrieg had failed.

The circumstances gave a new twist to the battle of the German air waves waged nightly between the Nazi announcers and the ghost voice which breaks in on the pauses in their broadcasts with anti-Nazi remarks.

It usually is a duel of words, but when the Deutschlandsender shut down the heckler had the German air to himself and said, as transcribed by BBC:

"The German losses in Russia amount to 2,000,000 men. . . . The Blitzkrieg has failed. . . . The German army is bleeding to death. . . . Hitler must be got rid of. . . . Germany must lose to Britain, Russia and the United States."

Britain Plans to Call Up Millions, Paper Reports

SEP 5 1941

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 4—The Laborite Daily Herald said today that "sweeping new plans for calling up millions of men for military service will be announced soon by the government." No authority was quoted.

"This is the first indication that vital new decisions on war strategy have recently been taken by the government arising out of developments on the Russian front," The Daily Herald said.

The paper asserted that those principally affected would be men under 40 now in reserved occupations. Britain has approximately 4,000,000 men under arms.

Congress Members Invited To Britain on Lease-Lend Tour

SEP 5 1941

Information Minister Says Group Would Be Allowed to See Plants

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 4.—Brendan Bracken, Minister of Information, today invited members of the United States Congress to visit Britain to investigate use of lease-lend materials.

"I gladly accept the suggestion that members of the United States Congress come to Britain to make their own inquiries on the use of lease-lend materials, and they would be under no obligation," Mr. Bracken said.

"We are anxious," he said, "to find independent witnesses and critics but not peace mongers."

This remark was made when newsmen asked the minister if his invitation would hold good if the same members of Congress went on to Germany.

Mr. Bracken said the Americans would be allowed to visit British factories, but would not be shown war secrets.

"We do not allow members of Parliament to see them," he said.

Turning to the topic of the forthcoming Moscow conference on British and American aid to Russia, he said the British were anxious that it take place as soon as possible.

The United States delegation would come through Britain and probably confer here before leaving for Moscow, he said.

The invitation by Mr. Bracken was interpreted here as almost like an open invitation by Prime Minister Churchill himself.

Mr. Bracken, who made the statement from [illegible] text of a statement prepared before the conference, formerly was Mr. Churchill's private secretary.

Capital Cool to Idea

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4 (AP).—Brendan Bracken's invitation to members of Congress to visit Britain to investigate the use of lease-lend materials was received with little enthusiasm in the Senate today.

Senator Tom Connally, Democrat, of Texas, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, said: "The expenditure of lease-lend funds is an executive function and I assume the President has made a proper check on such expenditures in Great Britain. Under the law the President must report to Congress on such lease-lend expenditures, and when that report is filed, the Congress will have an opportunity to criticize or attack the methods of spending. Little could be accomplished by Congressmen visiting Britain as an independent investigating body."

Senator Robert A. Taft, Republican, of Ohio, strong opponent of the Administration's foreign policy, said: "I plead guilty to being a peace-monger, so the invitation doesn't apply to me."

Senator Bennett Champ Clark, Democrat, of Missouri, said: "I've always been in favor of the whole American people staying at home and minding their own business. We should investigate the lease-lend program right here."

Senator Allen J. Ellender, Democrat, of Louisiana, said: "I'd volunteer to go," but added that "I don't see what could be gained by such a visit."

Senator Charles W. Tobey (Rep., N. H.): "I think we can and should investigate the lease-lend program right here, for there is plenty of evidence. I am a little apprehensive of the social blandishments upon an American delegation in Britain. The flesh might be weak."

Many House members also flatly rejected Bracken's invitation, but one, Representative Melvin J. Maas, Republican, of Minnesota, said he thought such an inspection trip would be "a fine idea."

"It would be a good thing to do, especially in view of reports going around about England getting priorities over our own armed forces," Maas said. "We're investigating everything about our own program and might well look into the lend-lease supplies. It would be reassuring to the country to find out that the money is not being wasted."

Member of Commons, Facing 13 Charges, Pleads Innocent

Latham Is Accused of Improper Conduct Involving 4 Others

SEP 5 1941

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 4.—Capt. Sir Herbert Paul Latham, 36, graduate of Eton and Oxford and Conservative member of the House of Commons from Yorkshire, pleaded innocent before a court-martial in Chelsea today to 13 charges of improper conduct involving three gunners and a Cambridge student and a final charge of attempting suicide.

Sir Herbert, a wavy-haired blond with an artificial leg, appeared in court in his captain's uniform.

Prosecutor L. R. Miller said two officers had seen a letter from a gunner to Sir Herbert last June and reported it to the commander of their Sussex searchlight force.

When told of the matter next day, he said, the baronet replied, "Well, there's only one answer—a motorbike."

Later he obtained a motorcycle and crashed it into a tree, seriously injuring himself.

In addition to Sir Herbert's defense counsel, an attorney for his former wife was present as an official onlooker.

London's smart set was startled when Sir Herbert's arrest was announced July 31.

Out of respect to the immunity granted to members of Parliament by civil law, King George VI commanded that the House be informed of the arrest. With traditional formality, the House thanked the King "for his most gracious message and for his tender regard for the privileges of the House." Members are not exempt from arrest under military law.

Sir Herbert lived in the modernized wing of a "haunted castle" in Sussex built in the time of Henry V and once deemed capable of quartering an army. He and his wife, who was the former Lady Patricia Moore, daughter of the 10th Earl of Drogheda, were divorced at Miami, Fla., last May.

Sir Herbert was in the searchlight service.

The canteens were given by citizens of Rye, N. Y.; the St. Andrews Society, Baltimore; Forest Hills Farm, Winston-Salem, N. C., and the order of the Daughters of St. George of the United States.

Italy Bans Gem Sales

Rome, Sept. 4 (AP)—A royal decree today prohibited the purchase or sale of jewelry, thus closing that field to Italian investors who have been putting their money in precious stones in fear of inflation or in preference to buying Government bonds.

Many Italians have been buying heavily of jewelry and others have been investing in real estate, although the Government acted some time ago to discourage the latter by imposing a sixty per cent. tax on profits from real property sales.

Exceptions To Be Made

The new decree gave the Government authority to introduce exceptions because "the rules are not so absolute as not to take into consideration certain industries and other special situations." The export of precious metals or stones is subject to license.

Persons possessing these materials for use in commerce or industry were ordered to present an exact inventory to the police within five days.

Laval and Deat Ask For Papers to Learn Of Their Conditions

Doctors Have Difficulty Keeping News From Two Wounded Leaders

Concern of German authorities over the shooting of the two leading French "collaborationists," Pierre Laval and Marcel Deat, and interesting details of the hospital convalescence of the two men are told in the following dispatch by an Associated Press staff correspondent in Paris who has just arrived in Vichy from the German-occupied zone.

By ROY P. PORTER,
Associated Press Staff Correspondent.

VICHY, Unoccupied France, Sept. 4.—When I left the occupied zone yesterday Pierre Laval and Marcel Deat were both much better, although their doctors were having difficulty in keeping them from learning too much about their respective conditions.

Both men were demanding to have the newspaper delivered regularly so they could read bulletins on their conditions. This led the physicians to discontinue issuing such details as the patients' temperatures.

But, even if patients in the civilian hospital at Versailles were not ill when they entered, they probably would be by the time they left.

The small, rambling institution has elevators which creak and groan. The noise is terrific, since there is a children's clinic on the floor above the rooms of Laval and Deat.

One workman I saw puttering around tapping water pipes with a wrench.

SEP 5 1941

Hospital Guarded

A small force of French policemen guarded the hospital, but they were easily persuaded to let visitors enter.

When I last visited the hospital I met Otto Abetz, the German Ambassador, and his wife in the corridor outside Laval's room. The Ambassador had come to bring a special message from Fuehrer Hitler and Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop wishing a speedy recovery. Both men had sent telegraphic instructions from Berlin to Abetz to convoy their personal greetings.

A short time later Fernand de Brinon, the Vichy Ambassador to the occupied zone, arrived.

Visitors all register in a special book, and the list of names looks like the official roll call of the French and German authorities of Paris.

I had a brief glance at Laval when one of his assistants let me look inside his room. The former vice premier was lying comfortably in bed reading a newspaper.

He looked up and said "How are you?"

I said "How are you?" and he replied in French slang, "Damaged good!" and waved good-by.

His personal secretary told me "he's okay for the time being even if he is full of lead."

Laval's principal trouble is a slug under his left breast which is lodged inside an artery leading to the heart. If surgeons should decide to take it out there would be a possibility of severe hemorrhage.

Laval has two other bullets inside him. Deat's one bullet, which passed through his right arm and into his stomach, already has been removed.

Colette Still in Jail

Paul Colette, the man who shot Laval and Deat, remained in jail at Versailles pending a decision whether he should be tried in regular criminal court or in the new special anti-Communist tribunal.

One thing the attempted assassination did was to introduce Mme. Laval to the French public. She previously was almost unknown, but she has been a daily visitor to the hospital along with her daughter Josie and Josie's husband, Count Rene de Chambrun.

Mme. Deat, who went two nights without sleep after the shooting, watches every one who comes to call on her husband. She said Monday "I am so tired I could drop, but Marcel is getting well and that's all that matters."

Laval and Deat already had started a new "collaborationist" movement before the shooting.

GERMAN SERGEANT IS SHOT IN PARIS

Another Incident Added To Growing List Of Hostile Acts Against Nazis

SEP 5 1941

Occupying Authorities Immediately Take Case Out Of French Hands

[By the Associated Press]

Vichy, Sept. 4 — A German army sergeant was shot last night in Paris it was disclosed today, adding one more incident to the growing list of hostile acts against German authority in the occupied zone and bringing to a head the German military administration's warning that arrested French hostages would pay for such assaults.

Official circles believed tonight that reprisals would be forthcoming, particularly since the Germans had given public warning of their intention.

The German, it was said, was not seriously wounded, but Nazi officials immediately took the case out of the hands of the French police and began a manhunt for the assailant.

Nazi Shot In Shoulder

The sergeant received one bullet under the left shoulder. He was shot in the street as he was nearing his hotel residence in the Rue de Strassbourg, accompanied by his fiancee. He was rushed to La Riboisiere Hospital.

The sergeant was the second victim of unidentified assailants. The first incident occurred August 21, when a German colonel was fatally stabbed in a Paris subway. Two days later the commanding general of German forces in France threatened to shoot French hostages in reprisal, the number depending on the seriousness of the offense.

SEP 5 1941

Later the Vichy Ambassador to Paris, Fernand de Brinon, said the reprisals threat had had a bad popular reaction and that the Germans had backed down to allow the French themselves to deal with such acts as those of Communists.

French Officials Withdrawn

The Germans announced simply today, however, that "the French authorities have been withdrawn from the affair, and the German administration will finish the investigation."

Meantime, French authorities continued to prosecute Communists, in accordance with de Brinon's announcement. The special anti-Communist court in Paris handed down sentences on eight persons varying from three to twelve years' imprisonment. Some were fined in addition.

Ten others received from a military court at Lyon sentences ranging from three to ten years plus fines. Two more were arrested in Paris for possession of Communist pamphlets.

Since the public warning of German reprisals thousands of foreign and French Jews have been arrested and taken to prison and concentration camps where they are held as hostages.

Four French Officers Die in Plane Crash

Vichy, Sept. 4 (A. P.).—Four French officers were killed yesterday in an airplane crash near Lyons, it was disclosed today.

A member of the Italian Armistice Commission, M. Petroinu, died today, bringing to fourteen the death toll of a Marseilles-Toulouse air line crash Monday.

German Officers Seek Assailant

VICHY, Unoccupied France—(AP)—One German non-commissioned officer was reported here today to have been shot last night on a Paris street.

German authorities took the case out of the hands of French police and began a hunt for the assailant.

An unidentified man was said to have opened fire on the German, an army sergeant, with a revolver in the busy east station section.

The victim was rushed to La Riboisiere hospital where his wound was considered not serious.

The bullet hit him in a fleshy part under the left shoulder. The sergeant accompanied by his German fiancee, was nearing his quarters at the Terminus hotel in the Rue de Strassbourg when he was hit.

The commanding general of German forces in France threatened on Aug. 23 to shoot French hostages in a number corresponding to the seriousness of the offenses against German authorities hereafter.

The threat was made after a colonel had been stabbed in a Paris subway.

Fernand de Brinon, Vichy ambassador to Paris, admitted later however, that German reprisals were causing a bad popular reaction and said the Germans for that reason had withdrawn from their previous position and would allow the French to deal with Communists.

Jews Eliminated

Paris, German-Occupied France, Sept. 4 (AP)—Xavier Vallat, general commissioner in charge of all Jewish problems, announced today that eighty per cent. of all Jewish activity in France had been stopped by the transfer of 1,500 businesses to non-Jews.

"This elimination of the Jews from French economic life will continue methodically," he said.

Exceptions will be made for some Jewish war veterans, all of whom were to present proof of military service to Paris police.

Vichy Regime Suspends Two Newspapers

By the Associated Press.

VICHY, Unoccupied France, Sept. 4.—The government issued an order today forbidding establishment of any publication without preliminary approval and suspended two newspapers for their anti-collaboration attitude.

To save paper, all Sunday newspapers were suspended.

The decree appeared aimed particularly at new newspapers which would have to obtain approval of Vice Premier Admiral Jean Darlan and Pierre Puchou, Minister of the Interior.

The daily Jour-Echo de Paris was suspended for 10 days and the weekly Temps Nouveaux was suspended indefinitely, charged with being De Gaullist.

VICHY VOTES FUND FOR DAKAR ROADS

Seeks to Link Base With the Mediterranean.

Vichy, Sept. 4 (A. P.).—The Government appropriated 128,000,000 francs today for work on the French West African naval base at Dakar and its overland communications with the Mediterranean.

Besides port installations, one of the chief uses of the money will be to help make communications between Europe and Africa independent of naval control in the Atlantic, by improving the Dakar-Niger railway and completing a trans-Saharan highway system.

Work already is in progress on a standard-gauge railroad to the Saharan railhead at Colomb-Bechar, Algeria, which now is connected with the Mediterranean by a narrow gauge line.

Parties' Similar Views

Vichy, Unoccupied France, Sept. 4 (AP)—The collaboration-minded "Paris group," in a counter-move to Marshal Petain's conversion of the French Veterans' Legion into an official party, today made over its Anti-Soviet Volunteers' Legion into an aggressive political organization allied to the rightest party of Jacques Doriot.

A joint committee was set up in Paris and a joint declaration issued by the two movements underscoring the similarity of their views.

It announced the Anti-Soviet legion and the French Popular Party would consult "on all political and technical problems" and undertake mutual aid "whether for defense against the opponents of the national revolution or to attack them."

Strange Poster Issued

Possibly to forestall an opposition move, the veterans' legion in the unoccupied zone recently issued a strange poster simply saying: "Against Bolshevism—the Legion." The full name of the Paris anti-Soviet outfit is "the French Legion Against Bolshevism."

The last time Vichy tried to create an official mass movement by forming a "national group," a "national popular group" was formed in opposition to it in Paris.

The new pact between the Doriot party and the Paris legion was signed by their respective heads, Doriot and Pierre Constantine, both of whom became members of a joint steering committee.

HARVEST MENACED

Bad Weather Threatening French Wheat With Rot.

Vichy, Sept. 4 (A. P.).—The wheat harvest of blockaded France is menaced by rot, it was announced today, because of bad weather. Freak rains soaked sheaves all summer and farmers were forced to curtail the harvests for lack of binding hemp.

The Vichy Government gave farmers instructions for minimizing the danger and in Paris Government officials from the occupied zone met to examine the food situation.

Leahy and Taylor Plan To Confer in Barcelona

By the Associated Press.

VICHY, Unoccupied France, Sept. 4.—Admiral William D. Leahy, United States Ambassador, disclosed today he would make a quick week end trip to Spain for conferences with Myron C. Taylor, who is returning to Rome as President Roosevelt's personal representative at the Vatican.

The conferences, at which Admiral Leahy is expected to receive the latest advices from Washington on the international situation, will be held at Barcelona. The Ambassador plans to leave here tomorrow morning by train.

Mr. Taylor, completely recovered from an illness which interrupted his mission to the Vatican, planned to leave New York for Europe today aboard a trans-Atlantic clipper.

Myron Taylor On Way To Resume His Duties In Vatican City Post

New York, Sept. 4 (AP)—Wearing a blue tie figured with white V's, Myron Taylor today departed by Pan American Airways' Yankee Clipper for Lisbon to resume his duties as President Roosevelt's personal representative to the Vatican.

He returned to the United States several months ago to convalesce from a severe illness.

He issued a short statement, saying, "To be the instrument of contact between the Pope as a great spiritual leader and the President of the greatest of the liberty-loving nations, not engaged in war, necessitates a reserve in expression which is no great innovation to me.

"In the final unfolding of the mysteries which the present-day questions contain, there can be no fair or permanent justice in the world, unless these two symbols of civilization at its best operate in harmony."

London women are buying kilts and converting them into dresses, skirts and coats, says a department store official. He blames clothes rationing. U. S. and Britain Seek World Rule, Tokio Paper Says

TOKIO, Sept. 4 (AP).—The Japanese were told by one government-supported publication today that the United States and Great Britain were pushing rapidly toward a goal of world domination and another gave them a comprehensive set of air-raid rules.

The Foreign Office-backed Diplomatic Review said British-American intention to dominate the world became clear after the Atlantic meeting of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill.

"The intention of the British and Americans is to burn up and exhaust Japan's natural resources and to threaten Japan by both economic and military pressure," the Review's editorial said. "The United States and Great Britain are strengthening aid to the Soviet, are putting pressure on Thailand and are urging the Netherlands East Indies and Australia to tighten the encirclement of Japan."

Attention to the use of Vladivostok as an entry port for material aid to Russia continued to be emphasized.

Freighters Reported Sighted.

The newspaper Tomiuri said Japanese fishermen returning from the Siberian Kamchatka Peninsula reported seeing two large Soviet freighters leaving for Vladivostok, presumably loaded with arms and ammunition.

The Cabinet Information Board's weekly report told home owners today not to pay attention to wild rumors concerning possible air raids on Japan. The report asserted that so long as the imperial navy and army functioned it was unthinkable that Japanese cities could be subjected to air assaults similar to those delivered against Chungking and London.

Nevertheless, the report gave its readers advice on methods to combat incendiary bombs.

The newspaper Nichi Nichi, discussing the privy council's approval yesterday of an air defense bureau within the Home Ministry, said refense against air raids should be based on fire prevention.

"We should make a point in protecting our individual house," the paper said. "Never should we take refuge in air defense shelters or other safer zones. Instead, we should be prepared to meet any situation squarely, put incendiaries out of action and prevent fires."

In the midst of the public disturbance over possible air raids, it was learned that Japanese stores are breaking away from a centuries-old tradition by demanding cash for all purchases. It has been customary for householders to sign slips and settle for them at the end of each month or even at the end of six months. One proprietor said he could no longer afford to give his customers credit because of air raid dangers.

Asahi reported from Yokohama that termination of leases held by foreign countries was expected next year.

Lease Termination Foreseen

The United States, Great Britain, Portugal, the Netherlands, France, Denmark, Switzerland, China, Germany, Italy and Soviet Russia hold tax-free approximately 3,200,000 square feet of ground in Yokohama, the paper said.

Promulgation of an imperial ordinance terminating the leases in April, 1942, was expected shortly, Asahi reported.

The Education Ministry announced expansion of the military training program in schools and colleges.

War On China Pressed

The Times and Advertiser, English-language paper controlled by the Japanese Foreign Office, declared "the conflict in China is certainly not on a passive plane. . . . Vast operations in China tell a story of Japanese confidence in being able to sustain the old front with even greater vigor while facing in all new directions, fortified by knowledge of great strength in reserve."

It said: "News is pouring in daily of action with great victories and almost daily air raids on Chungking."

Toyoda Sees Emperor.

Official and diplomatic activity continued to occupy a large part of the Japanese scene. Foreign Minister Teijiro Toyoda was received in audience by the Emperor, while Lt. Gen. Heisuke Yanagawa, minister without portfolio and prominent in the Imperial Rule Assistance Association, held an important conference with Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye at the latter's residence.

Eiji Amau, Vice Minister of Foreign Affairs, and Lt. Gen. Heitaro Kimura gave detailed reports on the current situation to a regular conference of Vice Ministers.

Kiyoshi Ikeda, reported by Domei as "holding a post closely connected with the Japanese Navy," conferred with Cabinet Secretary Kenji Tomita at the Premier's residence.

Japan Warns Of Bombing

[By the Associated Press]

Los Angeles, Sept. 4—The National Broadcasting Company said its listening post here heard a Tokyo broadcast tonight in which the speaker declared bombing of Chungking would continue with increasing force because of aid from America, Britain and the Netherlands to the Chinese Government.

The broadcaster declared that Japan would demonstrate that such aid to the Chungking Government was useless.

He said the Japanese have a good idea of where new air bases around Chungking are located and that it is known such bases have been supplied with new planes by the three governments.

Fliers Reported Going to China

TOKYO, Sept. 4 (AP)—The Domei News Agency broadcast today a dispatch, dated Batavia, saying that 175 air pilots from the United States had recently passed through Batavia en route to Rangoon and Chungking.

Making Economic Study in Far East

Grady Visits Philippines, Will Go to Dutch Indies

MANILA, P. I., Sept. 4 (AP)—Henry F. Grady of the United States Federal Loan Agency today completed an economic survey of the Philippines designed to increase the flow of essential defense raw materials from the islands to America.

He plans to fly Sunday to the Dutch East Indies to continue his two months survey of the movement of needed materials from southeastern Asia and near-by islands. Later he will visit British Malaya, Thailand, Burma, India, Ceylon, Singapore and Hong Kong before flying back to the United States Oct. 24.

While here, Grady held daily conferences with businessmen interested in the production and shipment of Philippine raw materials essential to the defense program—particularly chrome, manganese ore and the better grades of hemp.

President Manuel Quezon approved a report by Commonwealth Secretary Manuel Roxas for submission to Grady. This was understood to ask for American financial aid to help the Philippines over the economic bumps caused by war conditions, freezing and export control. It also seeks suspension of exports taxes and quotas, and assignment of sufficient vessels to the Pacific to maintain an even flow of trade between the islands and the United States.

Buenos Aires, Sept. 4 (A. P.).—Argentina awaited today a report from its Berlin embassy to explain the arrest of eleven Argentine citizens by the Germans in occupied France.

Roberto Gache, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, said that until the report is received it can not be determined whether the Argentines were arrested for some relatively unimportant infraction of regulations "or for a bigger matter."

The German Ambassador here, Edmund Thermann, who has been under fire of the congressional committee investigating anti-Argentine activities, was also asked for an explanation. Paul Damonte Taborda, chairman of the congressional committee, said he hoped the Government would act quickly, and commented that he had heard no reports of anti-Nazi activity by Argentines in Germany.

Gen. Brett also will study maintenance of air lanes over the Atlantic and the Mediterranean, it was said.

Appointment of Gen. Brett to a five-man mission to go to Moscow in connection with American aid to Russia was announced by President Roosevelt yesterday.

Quebec Legislature 'Captured'

QUEBEC, Sept. 4 (AP)—A Canadian Army motorized unit "seized" the Quebec Provincial Legislature today in a mock attack designed to acquaint the public with invasion tactics. The crowd thinned, however, after a "gas" bombardment bathed the area with clouds of thick vapor.

U. S. Tanker Arrives At Vladivostok

Plans Pushed to Speed Other Shipments by Same Route; No Formal Jap Protests

Washington, Sept. 4.— (AP.) — With safe arrival of an American tanker at Vladivostok with the first of promised war supplies for Russia, plans were pushed today to expedite other shipments of materials needed by the embattled Soviet army.

Secretary of State Hull declined any comment on the fact that the vessel, carrying 95,000 barrels of gasoline, had reached its destination without incident despite Japanese displeasure over dispatch of war supplies to the Soviet Pacific port.

SEP 5 1941

In fact, the only official recognition of completion of the vessel's trip was an informal announcement from the maritime commission that she made port at Vladivostok yesterday.

Informed quarters indicated, however, that further supplies would be rushed by the same route.

Soon after the tanker sailed from Los Angeles August 14 a Japanese spokesman said the Tokyo government had made representations to the United States and Soviet Russia against the shipments. The Soviet promptly replied that any attempt by Japan to interfere with such trade would be considered an unfriendly act.

No Formal Protest.

Secretary Hull has never confirmed that representations were received by the United States, leading to the belief that the question had been raised by Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura, the Japanese ambassador, in talks with the secretary, but that no formal protest had been lodged.

Officials here indicated in mid-August—when Secretary Ickes announced that one tanker had sailed for Vladivostok and that others would soon follow—that they did not believe Japan would assume the initiative in creating a crisis in Far Eastern affairs by forcibly stopping the American ships.

Secretary Hull's only official comment on the question of oil shipments was the recent statement, in reply to a question, that the United States maintained the traditional American policy of freedom of the seas in the Pacific as well as in other oceans.

Chinese Envoy Calls.

Among callers at the State Department today was Dr. Hu Shih, the Chinese ambassador, who conferred for 45 minutes with Hull. Their conversation was described as an exchange of general information on subjects of interest to the two nations. Hull has indicated that the United States is keeping Great Britain, China, and other interested powers informed on the progress of discussions between President Roosevelt, Ambassador Nomura and himself on Japanese-American relations.

The talks resulted from a note from Prince Fumimaro Konoye to the President in which the Japanese premier is understood to have requested a sympathetic reexamination of conflicting American and Japanese policies in the Pacific in the hope of achieving a peaceful solution of Far Eastern problems.

Secretary Hull sai dtoday there was nothing new on the conversations or on the Far Eastern situation.

SEP 5 1941

The Chinese ambassador made no comment on developments in the Far East or the Japanese-American talks except to observe that "the Chinese government has always had complete confidence in the American government's interest and sympathy in China's cause, and it still has such confidence."

Oumansky Is Caller.

Another State Department caller was Constantine Oumansky, the Soviet Ambassador, who was closeted with Hull for about fifteen minutes. The Ambassador declined to discuss the purpose of his visit and would make no comment on American oil shipments to the Soviets.

At the Capitol a brief Senate debate on aid to Russia was touched off when Senator Clark (Dem., Mo.) asserted he had opposed an "alliance with bloody Joe Stalin" by voting against the lend-lease bill.

Senator McCarran (Dem., Nev.) called Stalin "one of the bloodiest tyrants in all the world."

Would Call On The Devil

Senator Bailey (Dem., N. C.), in reply, said, "Hitler must be crushed at any cost."

"I hope Russia can turn on him and destroy him," Bailey continued. "I'm not a friend of the devil, but if I could turn Satan on Hitler, I'd do it. That does not mean I espouse hell."

Senator Lee (Dem., Okla.) interrupted to suggest Bailey might be willing "to lend the devil a little brimstone, if he'd use it on Hitler."

"Yes," Bailey agreed, "if I could get some from the Senator from Oklahoma."

FDR Creates New Division On Contracts

OPM Bureau, Headed by Odlum, to Aid Small Business, Baruch Assails Defense Setup

SEP 5 1941

Washington, Sept. 4. — (AP.) — President Roosevelt created a division of contract distribution in the office of Production Management tonight to spread defense contracts among smaller plants.

Floyd B. Odlum of New York, president of Atlas Corporation, large investment firm, was appointed director of the new division.

Mr. Roosevelt issued an order creating the division after a conference with Robert Patterson, Undersecretary of War; James V. Forrestal, Undersecretary of the Navy; William S. Knudsen, and Sidney Hillman, co-directors of the OPM, and Chairman Emory S. Land of the Maritime Commission.

To Aid Small Business.

A White House statement said the order was issued "in furtherance of a determined move on the part of the Administration to help the smaller business units of the country obtain a fair share of the defense orders, and to prevent, so far as possible, dislocation of industry and unemployment of workers in plants where production has been curtailed by priorities and material shortages."

The program, the statement added, has the full support of the Army, Navy, Maritime Commission and OPM.

As the President acted, his whole defense program came under fire of Bernard M. Baruch, one of his chief consultants and head of industrial mobilization in the World War.

Baruch, after detailing his views to the President at a luncheon conference, told reporters that what the defense set-up needed was a single administrator and in addition a blanket ceiling over all prices.

The New York financier was severely critical of the Administration's reorganized defense priorities and allocations system under a seven-man board headed by Vice-President Wallace and of the pending piece-meal price control legislation.

Says Executive Needed.

Emphasizing that he was not criticizing any personalities, he termed the seven-man board a "faltering step forward." He expressed the hope it would work, but added "the one thing this picture needs is one-man authority."

Baruch said he would appear before the House Banking Committee in two weeks and "kick the everlasting life" out of the pending price-control [illegible] believe a universal ceiling should have been put over all prices as soon as they began talking about priorities."

Meantime, there were these developments elsewhere bearing on the defense program.

Th OPM disclosed that 1854 military aircraft were delivered in August, an increase of 394 over July and the highest monthly total in history. The number of each type and how many were sent to Britain were kept secret.

The War Department announced it would ask Congress for $1,000,000,000 for more tanks, anti-tank weapons and anti-aircraft equipment. It also said that about 5000 Regular Army, National Guard and Reserve officers would be removed from active duty with troops because of age in a program of improving the general level of fitness of officers.

In still another announcement, the War Department said the Douglas Aircraft Company of Santa Monica, Calif., had developed two new types of airplanes suitable for transporting parachute troops and cargo. These will be given Army tests shortly.

The White House said the new OPM division headed by Odlum would greatly expand the machinery already put in motion by the defense contract service and labor division of OPM to subcontract production orders and to obtain reemployment for discharged workers.

State Branches.

The statement said the new division would have branches in the various states and would become one of the "most important" OPM branches.

"Through this division," it continued, "the OPM will be enable more effectively to adjust the dislocations and alleviate unemployment resulting from priorities and material shortages, and bring about maximum use of the nation's factories and industrial plants, especially the smaller ones throughout the nation. This will be done in four major steps:

"(1) The breaking down of large orders of supplies into smaller units, and spreading the purchases among more firms and in all localities possible.

"(2) Providing assistance through the labor division in OPM in retraining and obtaining employment for workers who are unemployed as a result of the shutting down of some plants or reduction of their output.

"(3) The effective distribution of defense contracts to the smaller business enterprises, as yet largely unused, through an expanded use of subcontracting, contract distribution, and the pooling of plant facilities.

"(4) By providing a staff of industrial and production engineers to formulate and execute specific plans for the conversion of non-defense industries and plants to defense production."

SEP 5 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 4—The Office of Production Management announced today that military aircraft manufacturers delivered 1,854 airplanes during August.

Officials did not disclose how many of the planes went to Great Britain and how many to the United States Army and Navy, nor how many of each type was delivered.

The total was the highest production in any month this year and the increase over July was the greatest increase shown in any one month.

[Editor's Note—Plane production in July was 1,460; in June, 1,476; in May, 1,036.]

Anti-Aircraft Gun Production

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 4—Robert P. Patterson, Under Secretary of War, said today that production of 90-millimeter anti-aircraft guns, the army's best, would average sixty-one a month during the next four months and that 1942 production would be much higher.

Patterson made this statement at a press conference when asked about a recent assertion by Senator Byrd (Dem., Va.) that only four guns monthly would be turned out in the next four months.

In response to questions, Patterson also said there would be some of the ne wmedium 28-ton tanks available for the current maneuvers in Louisiana and that the production schedule for both light and medium tanks was "good."

Oil Industry Would Move 'Gas' By Rail

SEP 5 1941

Companies Say Retail Price Rise Waits Developments, Budd Before Maloney Group

Washington, Sept. 4.—(AP.)—The oil industry agreed tonight to use every available railroad tank car to haul petroleum to the East.

An official said the industry was, in effect, calling on the American railroads to make good on a statement that tank cars could "cure" the threatened oil shortage on the Atlantic Seaboard within two weeks.

11 Companies Sign.

Ralph K. Davies, Acting Defense Petroleum Coordinator, announced that 11 principal East Coast oil companies, after an all-day meeting here, signed pledges "to ask for and utilize in petroleum transportation all available railroad tank cars" for the purpose of alleviating the East Coast emergency.

Railroad officials told a Senate committee earlier this week that 20,000 tank cars were available and could haul about 200,000 barrels of oil a day from producing fields to Eastern population centers. The daily shortage is estimated by Government officials at 174,000 barrels.

Rail Rates Higher.

The cars have not been brought into use heretofore because freight costs run about 3 cents a gallon compared with half-a-cent for water transportation.

At conferences today, railroad representatives are understood to have offered to reduce their rates about one-half, but the oil men asked a still greater reduction.

On the question of retail gasoline price increases due to the higher transportation cost, the oil industry's statement said "the companies will not ask for the sanction of any price increase on account of increased transportation costs until apropriate showing has been made in justification thereof."

Expects Fair Consideration.

"It is our expectation," the statement added, "that when required to make some price adjustment as a reasonable offset to the added and abnormal expense, that our application will have fair consideration by the Office of Price Administration."

Davies announced the offer to use all available tank cars was signed by officials of the Gulf Oil Corporation, Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, the Texas Company, Atlantic Refining Company, Socony-Vacuum Oil Company, Tidewater Associated Oil Company, Cities Service Company, Consolidated Oil Company, Sun Oil Company, American Oil Company and the Shell Oil Company.

During the day, the suggestion was advanced at the Capitol that the shortage had been planned in order to hasten the laying of an oil pipe line.

Senator O'Daniel (D-Tex.), member of the special committee investigating the oil situation, suggested during testimony of Ralph Budd, defense transportation adviser, that the shortage might have been artificially created.

"I wonder," the Texan asked, "if this shortage or emergency would have been planned in order to bring about authority to build this pipe line?"

"I wouldn't think anyone would do that," replied Budd, who previously had expressed his opposition to the projected pipe line from Texas and Louisiana to the East Coast on the ground that the steel it would require was needed for defense purposes.

O'Daniel said the Senate committee hearings had "proved there is no shortage of petroleum or transportation" and urged his group to "try to develop what's back of this alleged shortage."

Ralph K. Davies, acting coordinator, is 174,000 barrels.

From J. Howard Marshall, chief counsel for the coordinator, the senate group received an opinion that defense officials have ample power "to enforce a program of consumer rationing of gasoline in the Atlantic coast area should such a program become necessary."

Last week Marshall said the coordinator had no legal power to ration fuel, but today said such a program could be made effective by action of the OPM or OPACS.

While the senate committee continued its inquiry, Davies announced appointment of an eight-member committee to study the whole fuel oil situation on the east coast.

"Because of the present shortage in tanker transportation," he said, "every effort must be made to assure an adequate supply of heating oils during the coming winter, both for defense and other industries and for the heating of apartment buildings and homes."

The special group, all representatives of the industry, will seek to coordinate available information on fuel oils.

DAVIES SETS UP FUEL OIL BOARD

Also Names Committees on Advertising and Asphalt.

SEP 5 1941

Washington, Sept. 4 (A. P.).—The appointment of an eight-member committee to make a special study of the fuel oil situation in the East Coast area was announced today by acting Petroleum Co-ordinator Ralph K. Davies.

"Because of the present shortage in tanker transportation," Mr. Davies said, "every effort must be made to assure an adequate supply of heating oils during the coming winter, both for defense and other industries, and for the heating of apartment buildings and homes."

The immediate work of the group, made up entirely of petroleum industry representatives, will be to co-ordinate all available information on fuel oils.

Mr. Davies announced also the appointment of asphalt and advertising committees and said other similar groups would be formed later to study various phases of petroleum in the East. All such committees, he indicated, would operate under the District No. 1 Marketing Committee (Atlantic seaboard) of the petroleum industry.

Members of Three Committees.

The personnel of the committees announced today follows:

Fuel oil—J. W. Scott, Buckley & Scott Utilities, Inc., Watertown, Mass.; J. C. Connolly, Standard Oil of New Jersey, New York city; L. B. Fox, Socony-Vacuum Oil Company, New York; J. J. Mulvey, Atlantic Refining Company, Philadelphia; H. B. Van Cleve, New York; H. H. Fuller, Consolidated Oil Corporation, New York; R. Bartlett, Gulf Refining Company, Pittsburgh, and Gene Collis, Petroleum Corporation, Philadelphia.

U. S. Studies Supply Of Oil for Americas

Washington, Sept. 4 (A. P.).—The State Department said today it was discussing with virtually all Latin-American countries proposals to insure meeting the petroleum requirements of the Western Hemisphere.

A shortage of petroleum, especially on the Atlantic Seabord of the United States and in Chile, has resulted from the diversion of tankers to British runs. Asked to comment on Uruguay's prohibition of gasoline export, State Department officials said the Uruguayan decree had no connection with the inter-American petroleum discussions.

U. S. OIL STILL GOING TO SPAIN

Some Sent Also to Sweden and Switzerland.

Washington, Sept. 4 (A. P.).—A checkup showed today that licenses for the export of commercial grades of oil and gasoline have been granted to Spain, Sweden, Switzerland and French North African colonies since new regulations on petroleum exports went into effect on August 2.

No licenses have been issued, it was learned, for the export of any petroleum products to Japan.

State Department officials said that since August 1, eight or nine tankers have sailed from American ports for Spain carrying low grade oil and gasoline for that country's normal requirements.

They emphasized that in the shipments to Spain, as well as to other countries, exports were limited to the minimum requirements of the country and all possible precautions were taken to insure that the petroleum would not be utilized outside the country to which it was shipped.

The British Empire, Soviet Russia, China and the other American Republics have been receiving their usual, and in some cases considerably greater, quantities of oil and gasoline since licenses are granted freely to those countries.

Officials explained that the United States was attempting to maintain as nearly normal trade as possible under the licensing system and declined to comment on reports that the oil shipments to Spain had been made with a view toward assistance in keeping Spain neutral.

RED ARMY MISSION REACHES SEATTLE

Two Flying Boats With 47 Men Land At Naval Air Station

[By the Associated Press]

Seattle, Sept. 4—A Russian military mission arrived at the Sand Point Naval Air Station late today, flying from Moscow by way of Alaska.

The first of the PBY type flying boats, which flew today from Sitka, arrived at 4.25 P. M. (7.25 P. M. E.S.T.) and the second came down on Lake Washington about an hour later.

The forty-seven man mission left Moscow last Thursday and reached Nome Sunday.

The Russians were taken to a downtown hotel for the night. They were uncommunicative and appeared tired. Peter Ivanov, of the Russian consulate in San Francisco, took charge of arrangements for the men at the hotel.

The big flying boats landed smoothly on Lake Washington after circling the air station. Sailors waded out to pull the planes shoreward.

The War Department announced that the mission's purpose in the United States is purely technical, to study airplane production.

LEASE-LEND HELP OPENED TO POLES

President Authorizes Aid To Unit Undergoing Training In Canada

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 4—In line with the policy of helping all peoples resisting aggression, President Roosevelt opened the lend-lease money box today to give American aid to a Polish unit undergoing training in Canada for "action overseas."

He authorized the sending in the near future of machine guns, submachine guns, rifles, artillery equipment, trucks and other supplies needed by the contingent, made up mostly of Polish-American volunteers.

Out Of Lease-Lend

The Presidential statement said the supplies would come out of the $7,000,000,000 lend-lease fund, which heretofore has been used to aid only Great Britain, China and Greece before the latter fell victim to the Nazis.

The Chief Executive said his action demonstrated this Government's intention to give material support to the "fighting determination of the Polish people to establish once again the independence of which they were so ...humanly deprived."

He emphasized that this aid to the Polish Government in exile was a continuing expression of the American policy to "extend aid to all who resist aggression" and declared that "gallant resistance" of the Poles was vital to the defense of the United States.

Formed 3 Months Ago

Some Polish army, naval and air units have been fighting with the British ever since their country was conquered by Germany two years ago, and Polish Embassy officials said tha additional units have been in the process of formation.

The latest unit—that in Canada—began taking form three months ago and only recently started training at Owen Sound, near Windsor, Ont.

The embassy would not disclose how many men comprise this unit but said it was maae up largely of Polish-Americans and a few escaped prisoners of war. It is in charge of a Polish general, Bronislow Duch.

82,000 In France

The embassy said 82,000 Poles were in France at the height of the war in May, 1940, and that 40,000 of these were at the front. When France collapsed, hundreds of Poles escaped to England where they organized a large contingent of army, navy and air units.

A Polish division or so was said to be in Egypt, with another now being formed in Russia.

$150,000,000 Loans To Latin - American States Planned, Report

Washington, Sept. 4 (AP)—Informed financial sources said today loans totaling not less than $150,000,000 were being considered for four American republics—Brazil, Colombia, Ecuador and Mexico.

Adding weight to the reports, Secretary Morgenthau disclosed that the United States was negotiating with Mexico on a currency stabilization plan.

Questioned at his press conference, the Treasury Secretary declined to say what similar steps were being taken regarding loans to other Latin-American nations, observing that the Mexican agreement was "the only one on which we are really making progress."

Amount of the proposed Mexican loan was not disclosed. Estimates have varied from $30,000,000 to $100,000,000. The loan is reported to be part of a plan to strengthen the Mexican monetary system, pay off oil expropriation claims, make internal improvements and assist Mexico in strengthening hemispheric defense.

Money for the four loans, financial sources said, would be supplied by either the Treasury or the Export-Import Bank, depending on what the money is going to be used for.

Bids For Funds Face Scrutiny

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 4—Representative Clifton A. Woodrum (Dem., Va.) predicted today that Congressional committees would subject all future defense and lease-lend appropriation requests from President Roosevelt to a much closer scrutiny than in the past.

He said that with "definite experience to guide us," the committees would be in much better position to determine the actual need for new military facilities, equipment and materiel.

The President said Tuesday that additional funds would be sought to increase the nation's already huge armament program. In addition, he is reported to be studying a new lease-lend request of more than $5,000,000,000.

Must Pass Triple Test

"I am confident that Congress will be ready to provide whatever funds are needed to further round out the defense program," Woodrum said, "but we are going to inquire into the situation minutely, first on what has been done with funds appropriated and authorized; second, the needs for additional funds, and third, if such funds or appropriations will be able to secure the required raw materials and manufacturing facilities to produce equipment."

Woodrum is chairman of the House subcommittees which handle both lease-lend and supplemental defense appropriations.

Dr. D. A. Poling Arrives By Plane In England

Philadelphia Baptist Pastor To Study Wartime Morale And Religious Values

Philadelphia, Sept. 4 (AP)—Dr. Daniel A. Poling, pastor of Baptist Temple and president of the International Christian Endeavor, has arrived in Great Britain after a flight from Canada.

Offices of the Baptist Temple announced today the widely known church leader had flown to England to begin "an exhaustive study of moral and religious values and conditions."

The temple also released a message written by Dr. Poling before he left and addressed to members of the congregation, in which he said: "I have been called overseas on a special mission. It is a task no man would choose but that no man could, or would, refuse. I am glad to be called."

Mrs. Winant Gives Praise to British

NEW YORK, Sept. 4 (AP)—Mrs. John G. Winant, wife of the United States ambassador to London, arrived on the Dixie Clipper today from Europe with a bandage on her leg—which she hastily explained was not from shrapnel, but from a vaccination.

Mrs. Winant said she planned to leave as soon as possible for her home at Concord, N. H., to see her children, John Gilbert, Jr., 19, who will attend Princeton, and Rivington Russell, 15, who will attend St. Albans School in Washington.

"I have been through several of the severest air raids and I think the English people are taking it magnificently. I am sure the Americans would do the same under the same circumstances. I believe England is our first line of defense," she commented in a prepared statement which she wrote on the backs of postal cards while traveling from Lisbon.

Also on board the Clipper were Ben Lyon and his wife, Bebe Daniels, American actors who have been appearing in English musicals and radio programs for the last two years. They said they were here on business and to tell the American people what is needed for the war effort.

Pre-War Anti-Semitism In Netherlands Is Denied

Dutch Envoy To U. S. Says Jews Enjoyed Full Citizenship Prior To Nazi Conquest

Washington, Sept. 4 (AP)—Dr. A. Loudon, the Dutch Minister, said today that Jews enjoyed full citizenship in the Netherlands prior to the occupation by Nazi Germany.

Under the Dutch Constitution, the Minister said, there was no discrimination among any Dutch subjects and a number of Jews have held high civilian and military office in the Netherlands.

Consequently, Loudon said, it is incorrect, in reporting anti-Jewish measures taken by the Nazis since the occupation, to say that Jews never were accorded full Dutch citizenship.

GREEKS DECLARED STARVING BUT FIRM

Boston, Sept. 4.—(AP)—The people of Greece are "apprehensive of the future," although still loyal to the Allied cause, Dr. Minnie B. Mills, president of the Pierce College for Girls at Athens, declared today.

"Greece is starving but firm in her loyalty to the principles for which she fought," said Dr. Mills, who arrived here yesterday on the S. S. Excambion.

"The question," added the woman who remained in Athens until Aug. 4, "is how long this passive resistance can continue among a people hungry to the point of death."

The Greeks used three of the Pierce College buildings as hospitals during the Greek-Italian war and the German military took over the buildings a few weeks after entering Athens, the American Board of Foreign Missions said. Dr. Mills has worked under the board in the Near East for 43 years.

Official Holds Archduke Sped Without Cause.

Boston, Sept. 4 (A. P.).—Frank A. Goodwin, Massachusetts motor vehicle registrar, announced today that he was suspending the driving license of Archduke Otto of Austria for driving at sixty miles an hour.

"There was no necessity for the Archduke to drive at that rate of speed," he said, "because Hitler hasn't got over here yet and there was no reason to suspect that the paperhanger was chasing him."

Otto now resides in Royalston.

British Will Sail Seized Freighter

Repairs on Dino to Be Completed in Two Weeks

BOSTON, Sept. 4 (AP)—The Maritime Commission's Boston office said today the Italian freighter Dino, one of two Axis ships seized here last March, would be transferred into British service when repairs are completed in about two weeks.

The commission reported that, contrary to previous belief, the Dino would not be drafted into American service but instead would fly the British flag and carry war supplies after repairs are finished.

The ship was not sabotaged by its Italian crew, the Maritime Commission said. Repair work was undertaken to conform with regulations of the British Board of Trade.

The Dino had been in Boston harbor since June 5, 1940. It was seized last March along with the German tanker Pauline Friederich to prevent possible sabotage.

U.S. Army Plans Fight On Mosquito In Trinidad

Insect Which Transmits Malaria Is Identified—Methods Of Control Studied

Washington, Sept. 4 (AP)—The army is studying new methods of malaria control in Trinidad, following discovery by an American army sanitary group that a fresh-water, tree-dwelling mosquito found on the West Indies island is a transmitter of malaria.

Under Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson told his press conference today that the mosquito Anopheles Bellator, a small, delicate variety prevalent in the cocoa-raising districts of Trinidad, was a spreader of malaria germs.

Discovery of the malaria-carrier, he said, was the result of investigations by Col. Leon Fox, a Medical Corps officer sent to the island prior to establishment of a United States military base there; Dr. L. E. Rozeboom, Johns Hopkins University entomologist, and R. L. Laird, a graduate student.

5000 OFFICERS SLATED TO END DUTY IN FIELD

Guard, Reserve and Regular Men Affected by Army's Plans

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4 (AP)—The War Department announced plans today for removing approximately 5000 Regular Army, National Guard and reserve officers from duty with troops because of age.

Asks More Money

The announcement was made at a press conference at which Under-Secretary Robert P. Patterson also disclosed that the department intended to ask Congress for an appropriation of $1,000,000,000 with which to procure more tanks, antitank weapons and antiaircraft equipment.

The billion dollars would consist of what Patterson called a restoration of approximately $600,000,000 which Congress declined to approve in an appropriation bill passed last month and an additional $400,000,000 not heretofore requested.

The officer transfers because of age will take place over the next several months in order to avoid interference with Army efficiency, the department announced.

Schedule of Age Limits

The following schedule of maximum age limits for various ranks was set up:

Major generals who are division commanders, 62; brigadier generals, 60; colonels, 55; lieutenant colonels, 52; majors, 47; captains, 42; first lieutenants, 35; second lieutenants, 30.

Approximately 500 Regular Army officers will be affected, the department said, some 4400 guard officers and a few reservists making up the balance. The arrangement does not mean all will retire from service, since many will go to administrative or staff duty.

unmistakably clear that their return in happier times would be expected and welcomed."

The War Interpreted

By Dewitt MacKenzie

Fierce counter-attack by the Reds along the center of the Russo-Nazi battle-front in the strategic Smolensk-Gomel sector is a remarkable demonstration of reserve power, and provides further sensational evidence of the great military strength which the world failed to recognize until Hitler launched his conquest, expecting to be in Moscow in six weeks.

The magnitude of the operation, which extends over a sector of some 200 miles, gives to wonder whether its represents the major offensive which the Bolshevsits might be expected to launch at about this time, provided they had the stamina after the terrible hammering they have endured from the German war-machine.

A heavy attack in this center would be a logical development in any event, for the purpose of relieving pressure on the Russian right and left flanks, where the battles of Leningrad and Odessa respectively are raging Marshal Timoshenko's offensive, however, has been sustained at full steam for close to a fortnight, and this might bespeak bigger things. Moscow reports that the Red troops have retaken 22 villages in 10 days, and at one point threw the Germans back 30 miles.

NATURAL STRATEGY

The natural strategy of the Red command at the outset of the war would be to fight a defensive action until the German lines of communication were greatly extended and the attacking forces were tired and weakened by casualties and destruction of equipment. Then the Bolshevists would seize the initiative—if still strong—employing the great army of fresh troops which reportedly have been assembled.

It looks very much as though the Bolshevists have been going all-out in this offensive. Progress naturally will depend on circumstances, but the Muscovites may be expected to develop this great drive as far as possible.

Whether this is the appointed hour remains to be seen. The Russians have been claiming that the invaders were nearing the point of exhaustion, owing to terrific casualties and continuous fighting. That the German lines of communication are vastly extended needs no further demonstration than a glance at the map.

As previously remarked, one of the purposes of this blood-letting in the center of the line is to relieve pressure at Leningrad where the position is critical. The Finns today announced that they had recaptured all of the Karelian peninsula, bringing them to a point 20 miles from Leningrad. The Germans claim to be 20 miles south of the city. However, the Bolshevists asserted that the Nazi drive had bogged down and that the fight had developed into an aerial conflict.

GREAT BATTLE LOOMS

If the struggle for this second largest city of all the Russias does develop into a siege, we are likely to witness one of the greatest battles of its kind in history. In this connection I was much interested in the warning issued yesterday by a Japanese commentator about the strength of Russia's spirit.

This observer declared that the Russians have a fatalistic view of life which produces strong resistance and power, and that this is a grave question for Germany. That the resistance of the Russians is a grave problem for Herr Hitler there is no doubt, but personally I shouldn't put this spirit down to a belief in fatalism. Some Russians may think in terms of Kismet, but the average Muscovite does not.

I should say that the bravery and determination which are sustaining the Russians now aren't the result of any fatalistic belief but represent that quality which we Americans rather crudely but expressively sum up as "guts." We have an illustration of what I mean in the battle of Leningrad.

Yesterday Moscow told a story of how the combined forces of the Red army and the people's army which is sworn to die rather than surrender their city, made a counter-offensive which drove the Nazis back three miles and ousted them from a strategically important town. That spirit isn't inspired by fatalism. It's guts.

BERLIN, Sept. 4 (AP)—The German High Command communiqué, issued from "the Fuehrer's Headquarters," said today:

Operations in the east continue successfully.

The air force last night sank two British freighters totaling 10,000 tons in waters in the region of The Wash. Other combat planes bombed port facilities on the east coast of the isle.

A German bomb-raid last night on the airport of Abu Suwer on the Suez Canal was especially successful. Direct hits destroyed runways and set shelters and munition dumps afire.

There were no enemy operations over the Reich's territory day or night.

The navy and air force, in the fight against British supply shipping, sank 537,200 tons of enemy merchant shipping space in August.

LONDON, Friday, Sept. 5 (AP)—The Air Ministry late last night issued the following communiqué:

The R. A. F. renewed its offensive over Northern France today in more favorable weather. Blenheim bombers were strongly escorted by fighters in attacks on an industrial plant at Mazingarbe, near Bethune, and on docks at Cherbourg. At both places bombs were seen to hit the target.

Our fighters had many combats and destroyed nine enemy fighters. Two others were shot down by one of our aircraft on patrol, making a total of eleven enemy aircraft destroyed during the day.

A fortress aircraft bombed the docks at Rotterdam.

In these operations our losses were seven fighters and one Blenheim bomber.

LONDON, Sept. 4 (AP)—The Air Ministry issued the following communiqué today:

Aircraft of the Bomber Command last night attacked docks at Brest. None of our aircraft is missing.

A joint communiqué of the Air and Home Security Ministries said today:

During the night very few enemy aircraft flew over this country.

Bombs were dropped at points in Northeast England, causing no casualties and only very slight damage.

An Admiralty communiqué said today:

H. M. S. Hermione (Captain G. M. Oliver, R. N.) recently sighted an Italian U-boat on the surface shortly before dawn. While the cruiser altered its course and increased to full speed, the enemy attempted to crash dive, but H. M. S. Hermione cut the U-boat in half, carrying a portion of the wreckage away on her bow. There were no survivors from the U-boat.

VALLETTA, Malta, Sept. 4 (AP)—The Malta Command issued the following communiqué tonight:

A large formation of enemy fighters, Italian Macchi 200's, approached the island this morning, being engaged by our fighters.

In the course of the ensuing combats, six enemy fighters are definitely known to have been shot down in flames and into the sea. In addition, three others were so badly damaged it is unlikely they reached their base. We sustained no losses.

Last night enemy raiders operating solo dropped numerous incendiaries in widespread areas, causing slight damage but no casualties.

CAIRO, Egypt, Sept. 4 (AP)—The British Middle East Command issued this communiqué today:

Mediterranean—Aircraft of the Fleet Air Arm successfully attacked a convoy of five merchant ships with an escort of seven destroyers east of Cape Spartivento (Sardinia) during the night of Sept. 2-3.

A large merchant vessel was hit by a torpedo and blew up, a column of moke rising 9,000 feet into the air.

Another large ship was hit amidships by a torpedo and two smaller vessels in the convoy were damaged. The attack achieved complete surprise, causing great disorder in th convoy.

The destroyers apparently fired their own ships, some of which narrowly avoided collision with each other.

During the same night, aircraft of the Fleet Air Arm dropped a number of bombs on the Sicilian airdromes of Comiso and Gerbina.

One enemy aircraft going in to land was attacked from close range and hit, while an enemy four-engined aircraft was shot down in flames over Gerbina. Our aircraft machine-gunned both airdromes from low height.

Cyrenaica—Heavy bombers of the R. A. F. attacked Derna, El Gazala and Bardia during the night of Sept. 2-3. At Derna bombs fell near barracks and the post and telegraph, causing fire and an explosion. At Gazala fires were started on the south landing ground. At Bardia a direct hit was scored on officers' quarters.

Aircraft of the Fleet Air Arm attacked store dumps at Gambut, where a number of fires were seen to break out.

Yesterday in the frontier area fighter aircraft of the South African Air Force intercepted a number of enemy fighters which attempted to attack our forward landing grounds.

In air combats which developed five enemy fighters were shot down without loss to our own formation.

A British General Headquarters communiqué said today:

Libya: At Tobruk the enemy carried out two air bombings and one machine-gunning attack during the day. No damage was reported.

Several fires observed in the enemy positions are believed to have been caused by our own bombers.

In the frontier area attempted low-flying machine-gunning attacks resulted in loss to the enemy and no damage or casualties.

ROME, Sept. 4 (AP)—The Italian communiqué today follows:

The Italian air force continued its daring and effective action yesterday, causing considerable damage and losses to the enemy.

Bombing planes hit the port works of Tobruk with heavy bombs, as well as fortifications, motor trucks and batteries in the Matruh zone. Formations of fighter aircraft attacked strong concentrations of mechanized vehicles and depots from a low altitude near Sidi Barrani. They set fire to many motor vehicles of various types and caused several explosions.

Over Sidi Barrani airport our aircraft machine-gunned numerous British planes on the ground. Later our heroic airmen accepted battle with the enemy formations and shot down eighteen enemy planes. The fighter group commaded by Lieut. Col. Mario Bonzano particularly distinguished itself in this brilliant action.

Other air detachments, horizontal and dive bombing planes, acted last night against enemy bases at Malta. They hit important objectives. At Valletta (Malta) a steamer was squarely hit by heavy bombs and caught fire.

Three planes failed to return from the above-mentioned missions.

At Tobruk on the land front lively artillery activity is reported.

The enemy carried out an air raid on Derna with several victims among the Moslem population and some damage to private buildings.

In East Africa there is nothing outstanding to raport.

Russian

Moscow, Friday, Sept. 5 (AP)—The Soviet Information Bureau today issued the following communiqué:

On Sept. 4 our troops continued to fight the enemy along the entire front.

On Sept. 2 our air force destroyed fifty-two enemy planes in air combats and on airdromes. We lost twenty-eight planes.

In the Baltic Sea our planes and torpedo boats attacked enemy transports and a patrol boat. As a result of the attack one transport and one patrol boat were hit by torpedoes and sunk. Two transports were damaged heavily and ran ashore.

The Germans sustained heavy losses while attempting to cross the Dnieper River in one sector in a southwestern direction of the front.

Moscow, Sept. 4 (AP)—The Soviet Information Bureau issued the following communique today:

Theplyaev, a junior lieutenant of one sappers' unit on the western front, mined a bridge spanning river "N." Soon an enemy panzer column approached the bridge.

Theplyaev let five tanks and several motorcycles cross the bridge and then blew it up. One enemy tank and two motorcycles were blown up together with the bridge.

Gorodetsky's detachment destroyed five German tanks and thirteen motorcyclists which had crossed the bridge. The same day Theplyaev together with Junior Sergeant Smirnov mined another bridge and blew it up after fifteen Nazi tanks had crossed to our bank. Cut off from their infantry, the Nazi tanks were destroyed.

Within the past two days Black Sea fleet bombers in engagements with the enemy destroyed over fifty German tanks and trucks, four Messerschmitts and large numbers of Nazi infantry, cavalry and artillery. Crews of Senior Lieutenant Lobozov and Lieutenant Makarov distinguished themselves especially in these engagements. Within one day, a battalion of "X" regiment of Black Sea fleet marines destroyed four enemy tanks and took prisoner a whole squadron of Rumanian cavalry.

A large group of Germans stole between the flanks of two of our units and at night attempted to surround the headquarters of Captain Morozov's battalion. Red army men and commanders of the headquarters boldly attacked the Fascists. The Germans were unable to withstand the assault. Many of them surrendered and the rest fled, leaving behind scores of killed and wounded. The spoils include five sub-machine-guns, two automatics, dozens of rifles and a field wireless station.

A group of Red army men headed by Senior Lieutenant Wensky penetrated the enemy lines, destroyed two enemy machine guns, one anti-tank gun and killed nearly forty Fascists.

Seven Fascist bombers raided the village of Gorki Lyubnitsa, a rural district in the Leningrad region. Children were playing in the streets. The Germans swooped down and machine-gunned them. When mothers rushed out to the children, Fascist planes dived and dropped bombs. Six children and six women were killed. Several children were severely wounded.

For several days, guerrillas of a detachment commanded by Opkhov, operating in the enemy's rear in the western direction, saw German transport planes alighting on a large forest clearing near the village of Podvoritsa. Late at night, the guerrillas stole into the forest thicket and skillfully camouflaged themselves. In the morning they saw a Fascist plane alighting on the clearing. In the course of the day several more planes brought fuel. Late at night the scouts returned to their detachment and reported this information to the commander. Two days later the guerrillas covertly approached this airdrome and showered with hand grenades and fuel bottles one plane which stood there, fuel tank cars and a small underground fuel dump on the edge of the forest. The plane and the whole stock of aviation fuel were destroyed. In the skirmish, the Germans lost twenty-eight men killed and wounded. A bold raid on a larger provision cart-train was effected by guerrillas in the vicinity of Perevolovhnaya village in the Vitebsk region. Erecting a barricade on a road along which the cart-train was moving, the guerrillas opened fire.

Breaking from the cars, horses stampeded into the forest. The guerrillas captured many cases of tinned food, three sub-machine guns and five automatics. Near Toroshino station in the Leningrad region, a guerrilla detachment commanded by "N" engineered an accident with a German armored trolley which was carrying a group of German officers to Pskov. Five officers and four men were killed. A Fascist mounted patrol which arrived at the spot was also attacked. One out of seven escaped with his life. On the same day the detachment attacked enemy trucks near the station of Strugekrasnye, destroying seven trucks with cartridges and one tank car with fuel for tanks.

Poland Continues War Against Nazis By Aidng Axis Foes

Army Joins With British and Russians; Hopes for Own Rule

While in Warsaw as an Associated Press foreign correspondent, Lloyd Lehrbas saw the European War begin at daybreak two years ago yesterday and wrote dramatic accounts of the bombing of Warsaw and the Nazi blitzkrieg that destroyed Poland in a month. From authoritative sources he has developed a picture of what has happened to Poland in captivity.

"Poland will live again!"

Poles still are singing that line of their national anthem, and those who escaped the Nazi blitzkrieg of their native land two years ago still are fighting for the rebirth of the Polish republic.

The strong-hearted phrase, says Jan Ciechanowski, the Polish Ambassador to the United States, is singing also in the hearts of 35,000,000 Poles living under the conqueror's rule in their homeland.

"Despite two years of captivity," the Ambassador said yesterday, "the Poles are undaunted. Starved as they are, maltreated as they are, enslaved as they are—despoiled of everything by the most ruthless and brutal extermination in history—they have never lost hope and never faltered in their resistance. They never will!"

Fighting for Revival.

The Republic of Poland today consists of a Polish government-in-exile in London, Polish troops in action in Europe and the Near East, Polish pilots in the skies over Europe in American and British planes and Polish volunteers being organized and in training in Soviet Russia and Canada.

Poland's hope for the future lies in the Poles' fight—inside and outside Poland—and the pledges by Great Britain and Soviet Russia, after two dark years, that the Republic of Poland will live again when "Nazi tyranny" has been vanquished.

The actual land of Poland, divided by Nazi Germany and Soviet Russia after their conquest, is now all under German rule since the German armies, attacking Hitler's one-time Axis partner, have swept across the eastern half of Poland, which was occupied by the Red Army, and on into old Russia.

(The United States still recognizes the Poland-that-was as a sovereign and independent nation and maintains diplomatic relations with the exile government in England. The historic eight-point program of post-war aims, in which President Roosevelt joined with Prime Minister Churchill, included restoration of sovereign rights and self-government to all peoples deprived of them by force.)

London Serves as Capital.

While Poland's population of 35,000,000 are ruled by their German conquerors, the Polish government-in-exile, fighting to regain the nation's independence, has established the temporary capital in London.

The Polish government fled with the remnants of the army when the Germans and Russians swept through Poland. All of its former leaders have disappeared from the scene.

President Ignace Mosciki, elderly and ill, lives in quiet retirement in Switzerland where, for many years, he was a university professor.

Marshal Edward Smygly-Rydz, who was the commander in chief of the Polish Army and the nation's virtual dictator, was interned for many months in Rumania. Suddenly he disappeared, and it has since been established that he succeeded in fleeing from Rumania. He was last reported in Palestine, but Polish Embassy officials say his present whereabouts is unkonwn.

Joseph Beck, the foreign minister, still is interned in Rumania. After spending several months in hospital he was last reported living under guard of Rumanian and German secret police in the Bucharest villa of Mme. Lupescu—who fled to Cuba with King Carol.

New Government Formed.

To replace the government that led Poland to disaster, the Poles have established in London a government under the presidency of Wladyslaw Raczkiewicz, the former president of the Polish Senate, and Prime Minister Gen. Wladislaw Sikorski, a soldier who fought valiantly to the very end.

A council of 24 members confers on all questions effecting Poland's war effort and the future of Poland.

Poland has maintained diplomatic relations with the United States, Great Britain, Switzerland, Sweden, Spain, and, despite its Axis membership, with Japan. Friendly diplomatic relations were also reestablished with Soviet Russia in the July 30 agreement.

This Polish government's white papers, based on information smuggled out of the country by Polish agents, charge that the Nazis have made of Poland a land of hunger, stark fear, wrecked churches and schools, executions and cruel and methodical deportations.

The latest white paper (issued August 14) charges that at least 70,000 civilians have been executed, some in "massacres" that wiped out entire villages and towns.

Heroic Mayor Killed.

Among those who have been "assassinated," the white paper reported, was Stefan Starzynski, the heroic Mayor of Warsaw, who led soldiers and citizens of the besieged capital in a valiant defense that crumbled only when Warsaw was a mass of ruins from bombs and shells.

(The Germans have acknowledged that many Poles have been arrested, tried and executed since the German occupation, but allege they were all guilty of sniping, sabotage or other grave crimes against the German occupation forces).

Meanwhile, the Poles themselves are battling for the return of their homeland to its own governance.

From the remnants of the once-proud Polish Army, gathered in driblets from temporary refuges over most of Europe, Gen. Sikorski, the Polish Prime Minister and commander in chief, has forged a new army which is fighting anew for the freedom of Poland.

In England a Polish army of 50,000 well-trained men is prepared to help fight off any German invasion. Polish units fought with the British in Greece, Syria and Libya.

An air force of 10,000—including 2,000 pilots, flying American and British planes—is active in the skies over Europe. They have taken part, with particular eagerness, in a number of bombing raids over Germany. The Kosciusko Squadron of the R. A. F. has more than 300 aerial victories to its credit.

In Canada a Polish Legion is being organized. Many of the volunteers are Americans of Polish descent, but the Polish Ambassador remarked today that "many can't event speak English."

(Polish Embassy estimates are that between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000 Americans are of Polish extraction, of whom 1,500,00 were born in Poland. The greatest centers of Polish population are Chicago, with 500,000; Detroit, 200,000; Milwaukee, 125,000; Cleveland, 110,000; Buffalo, 100,000; Philadelphia, 75,000; Pittsburgh, 75,000; New York, 70,000, and Toledo, 40,000.)

Prisoners Form Army.

As the result of the recent agreement with the Soviet Union, the Polish government-in-exile is organizing, from the 200,000 to 300,000 Polish prisoners of war in Russia, a Polish army to fight alongside the Red Army under command of Gen. Andreas.

Available information is that two Polish divisions have already been organized and four more are in the process of organization. Ambassador Ciechanowski pledged that they would soon go into action.

Of the small Polish Navy, only three destroyers and a few submarines escaped. All were quickly added to the British Navy and have participated in a number of naval engagements and raids.

The Polish merchant marine—of which 14 ships escaped—has been enlarged, despite the fact that several have been torpedoed, and is now operating in close co-operation with the British in hauling munitions and supplies for the common cause.

Gold Taken to France.

Poland's gold reserve before the war was estimated to total $75,000,000. The swiftness of the German advance—coupled with the Russian flanking movement that cut off escape to the east or south—made saving the gold from the Germans an extremely difficult task.

By heroic means, however, most of the nation's gold hoard was transported into Rumania, to Palestine, and eventually to the vaults of the Bank of France for use by the government-in-exile then installed at Angers.

The fall of France made it necessary to ship the gold elsewhere, and it was entrusted to a French warship to be carried to the United States. The warship—according to Polish sources—put in at French-owned Dakar on the African coast.

Since that time, the Polish government has been unable to get the gold—or authoritative information of it—and fears that it may have been turned over to the Germans.

Aided by Great Britain.

Poland's fight has been financed by earnings of her merchant ships and what gold was saved, with liberal assistance from the British government.

Since passage of the Lease-Lend Act, the United States has been able to provide vitally needed assistance, chiefly through the British, enabling the Polish government to maintain its army in the field.

"Poland is fighting," declared Ambassador Ciechanowski, "and will continue to fight in the fullest sense of the word."

U. S. Interest Vital

The United States has a vital strategic interest in Brazil—situated on the hump where South America bulges out toward Africa—and Brazil has an equal desire for continued and increased military and naval co-operation from its northern neighbor. The two are key nations of the western hemisphere.

Until Illha de Cobras went into production of naval vessels, Brazil depended on other nations for her warships. Today she is striving for naval independence.

The six destroyers of 1,200-ton displacement now being built on the ways of Illha de Cobras will take the place of ships ordered

Brazil Shipyard Increasing Navy

U. S. Officers Assisting as New Plant Turns Out Destroyers

Times Special News Service

RIO DE JANEIRO, Sept. 3—Brazil is looking to the day when her navy will rival the United States fleet—and United States naval officers are helping her push toward that goal.

The goal is still far off—but already Brazil is building fighting ships of her own to take their part in hemisphere defense.

American naval officers, on missions to help Brazil prepare, see in a strengthened Brazilian navy a beneficial, friendly rival for the future.

The naval yard at Illha de Cobras, an island in the middle of Rio's picturesque harbor, is only six years old—but already it has built mine layers, destroyers and destroyer flotilla leaders.

Brazilian officers' look to the time when this yard will build light cruisers, then submarines, then heavy cruisers — and, eventually, battleships.

from England which could not be delivered because of the outbreak of war.

Illha de Cobras is partly a creation of United State naval skill. For it was planned by Brazilian visionaries during the '20's with the help of the first United States naval mission.

That mission, which went to Brazil in 1921, was withdrawn before construction of the new shipyard was started in 1930.

25 Vessels in Navy.

When an American naval mission returned to Brazil in 1935, the yard was in full operation.

Its aim is to augment the navy which now consists of 25 war vessels, including two battleships and two cruisers as well as submarines, destroyers and mine layers.

The new vessels will closely resemble United States destroyers, for plans were modified in accordance with U. S. naval views.

30.24 — 11609 30.24 — 11609

Lieut. Commanders M. R. Williams and Albert E. Jarrell of the United States naval mission are assigned to the Ilha de Cobras yards as naval construction and design experts. They work closely with Rear Admiral Julio Regis Bittencourt, the man credited with creation of the yard, and his brother, Lieut. Commander Raul Regis Bittencourt, who studied naval construction in the United States and now is in charge of all new construction at the yard.

"Today this yard ranks with any in the world for the production of warships up to light cruiser size," declared Lieut. Commander Jarrell.

Location Perfect

"The location is perfect, and the yard was laid out and planned for future expansion of facilities as equipment and practice permitted.

"This yard is of importance to Brazil, not only in building to establish her naval independence, but also in maintenance of her navy—a major requirement of successful fleet operation."

Also serving under Capt. Emory Eldredge, chief of the naval mission, is Commander J. J. Patterson, a United States gunnrey expert who sails with the Brazilian fleet on its war maneuvers.

Commander Patterson has high praise for the training and traditions of the Brazilian naval command.

Another United States adviser, Lieut. Commander H. B. Temple, is attached to the Brazilian fleet air unit which operates both land and sea planes.

North American experts on naval tactics—Lieut. Commanders K. R. Belch and W. L. Messner—work with Brazilian officers at the naval war college on problems of maneuvers, and defensive and offensive strategy.

And Lieut. A. E. Fitzwilliam is busy with the Brazilian experts planning early construction of additional submarines.

Meanwhile, Brazilian naval officers continue to go to North America to study naval practice. Chief engineers of the three destroyer flotilla leaders all have spent six months on United States destroyers. Nearly all the key technicians have spent some time studying in the United States during the past five years.

Thus, the Brazilians, descendants of a seagoing people living along one of the world's longest coastlines, are seeking to meet the challenge of the sea.

BRAZIL LABORING TO ARM ITSELF

SEP 5 1941

Country, Like U. S., Starting Defense Effort Almost From Scratch

American Military Mission Aiding On Arms And Troop Training

SNS ADV

[By the Associated Press]

Rio de Janeiro, Sept. 4—Brazil, the nation which sits on the strategic bulge of South America, is laboring to arm for defense.

Like the United States, Brazil started her defense effort almost from scratch.

But the job is even bigger here, for Brazil is a nation with a greater land area than the United States, and only about one-third the population.

Although bristling guns make the important harbors of Rio and Santos impregnable to sea attack, according to American military experts, the nation has a long seacoast to defend.

A strengthened air arm is one part of Brazil's answer to this problem.

Making Own Armaments

Brazil is not a nation of highly developed industries equal to those of the United States, but already she is manufacturing armaments of her own.

An American military mission of ten officers and three enlisted men is advising Brazilian officers both in the production of arms and in the training of troops.

Greying, youthful-looking Brig. Gen. Lehman Miller describes members of the mission which he heads as "merely consultants and advisers."

"Our most important problems concern plans for Brazilian cooperation in hemisphere defense," he said.

Pressed For Time

"Brazil today would put up a maximum resistance within her capabilities to an attempted foreign invasion. But there still is much to do and we are pressed for time."

Brazil's greatest handicap, he declared, is a lack of heavy industry and aviation manufacturing facilities. Hence, vital field and air equipment must be imported.

"Brazil is anxious to become independent in the sense of military production and military supply," he said, "and she is progressing rapidly toward that goal. But even the most industrialized of nations cannot arm itself overnight, as the United States discovered. That's our principal problem in Brazil."

Popular Figure

General Miller has become one of the most popular figures in Rio's foreign colony. In seven years' service he has won Brazilian hearts with his fluent command of the national language, Portuguese.

Pointing out that both President Roosevelt and his chief of staff, Gen. George Marshall, had stressed the importance of Brazil in any scheme of hemisphere defense, General Miller remarked:

"Brazilian army leaders are fully aware that their northeastern coastal area is the logical spot for any aggression from overseas. They understand the importance of this area, not only to defense of Brazil, but also to the defense of the Panama Canal and the entire Caribbean region."

Outlook Is Better

Although North America, busy aiding Great Britain and supplying an expanded United States Army, has not been able to meet all Brazilian needs for mechanized units, heavier field artillery and airplanes, the outlook for future delivery is considered somewhat more hopeful.

Meanwhile, Brazil's own skilled workmen are doing what they can toward outfitting their own army.

Nestling at the foot of famed Sugar Loaf, overlooking the entrance to Rio harbor, is Fort Sao Joao.

Curving beaches, tennis and basketball courts, waving palm trees and modern buildings give the place a summer-resort appearance, but its modern machine shops are turning out precision instruments for field equipment.

Produces Ammunition

Brazil also manufactures her own ammunition, from field artillery down to shells for rifles and small arms.

Major George Eardsley, ordnance expert of the United States Army, and Major Frederick Kane and Lieut. Col. L. A. Elliot, advisers on chemical warfare and light field arms, instruct Brazilian soldiers and also advise officers planning the ever-expanding defense program.

In concrete-covered Fort Copacabana, whose 12-inch guns sweep the sea approaches to Rio harbor, Major Lester D. Flory advises Brazilian officers dealing with coastal defense.

Slender, genial, Illinois-born Lieut. Col. Thomas D. White represents the United States military mission in the field of air defense. Working with him are three other officers and three enlisted men.

Flies To School

Always in a hurry these days, Colonel White often is seen taking off from the famous Santos Dumont Airport in the heart of Rio, flying one of the two United States Army planes at his disposal.

"There's a lot to do," he explains "and an awful big country to be covered."

White and his men fly daily to the Air Training School at Campo Dos Affonsos, arriving at 8 A. M. for a full morning's work. They fly back for a quick lunch on the Santos Dumont Terrace before undertaking the afternoon's conferences with Brazilian officers in the Ministry of Aviation.

The protection of warplanes is of special importance to Brazil because of the great distances which she must protect, her long, irregular coastline, limited communications and comparatively small navy.

Well-Trained Pilots

Brazil has well-trained pilots, in limited numbers, and an increasing force of competent mechanics and aviation maintenance men. Colonel White hopes for a rapid increase in Brazil's aviation personnel.

"These men are fine flyers," he commented. "But I am anxious that Brazil have available enough men to staff a sudden increase in her air forces, in case planes should be placed suddenly at her disposal to meet a crisis."

The Brazilians are working with the new, swift North American advanced trainers (capable of conversion into effective fighters), fast Vultee attack bombers and light Lockheed transport planes.

Preliminary training is done in Waco-type trainers manufactured in Brazil, and Brazil now is negotiating with North American for home manufacture of her advance trainers as well.

This is just another example of Brazil's effort during the past decade to establish her productive independence in military as well as in purely commercial fields.

AN ASSOCIATED PRESS TEHERAN CORRESPONDENT, REFERRING TO SOME MYTHICAL TRAVELER WHO RETURNED FROM MESHED, REPORTED THAT "SOVIET PLANES MACHINE-GUNNED MOSLEM PILGRIMS WALKING ALONG A ROAD AFTER IRAN ISSUED THE ORDER TO CEASE RESISTANCE." THIS STATEMENT BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS TEHERAN CORRESPONDENT IS ABSURD AND THE LEAST TO SAY, STRANGE.

SEP 5 1941

NEITHER DURING THE ADVANCE OF SOVIET TROOPS IN IRAN NOR AFTER MILITARY OPERATIONS WERE DISCONTINUED, DID SOVIET PLANES FIRE AT ANY MOSLEM PILGRIMS OR OTHER PEACEFUL RESIDENT.

SOVIET FLIERS, AS IS WELL KNOWN TO EVERYBODY, DO NOT FIGHT PEACEFUL POPULATIONS AS WAS DONE BY THE HITLERITEBANDITS. IT SHOULD BE REGRETTED THAT THE ASSOCIATED PRESS TEHERAN CORRESPONDENT BECAME A VICTIM OF PROVOCATION OF SOME "TRAVELER"--A MANIFEST HITLERITE AGENT AND SPY.

EFFECTIVES OF INFANTRY REGIMENTS OWING TO LOSSES IN PAST WEEKS, DECLINED TO SUCH AN EXTENT THAT MOST UNITS ARE TOO WEAK AND CANNOT BE EFFECTIVELY USED FOR MILITARY ACTIONS. LOSSES FELT ARE ESPECIALLY ACUTE.

IT IS NECESSARY TO MERGE TEMPORARILY SEVERAL UNITS INTO ONE PENDING ARRIVAL OF REINFORCEMENTS WHICH CAN HARDLY BE EXPECTED BEFORE MID-SEPTEMBER.

THE COMMANDER OF A GERMAN INFANTRY DIVISION ROUTED IN THE FIGHTING IN THE WESTERN DIRECTION REPORTED TO HIS FRONT HEADQUARTERS:

"NOT MORE THAN 80 OFFICERS REMAIN IN THE DIVISION."

THERE ARE COMPANIES WITHOUT A SINGLE OFFICER. IF REINFORCEMENT OFFICERS DO NOT ARRIVE WITHIN THE NEXT FEW DAYS DISCIPLINE WILL BE FINALLY WEAKENED AND THE MEN WILL CEASE TO OBEY. IN VIEW OF THE FATIGUE OF THE MEN AND THE NEED OF REINFORCEMENTS I REQUEST THAT THE DIVISION BE WITHDRAWN FROM THE FRONT TO THE REAR FOR REST AND RESTORATION OF ORDER."

SEP 5 1941

THE COMMANDER OF THE 253RD GERMAN INFANTRY DIVISION EXPRESSES DISSATISFACTION WITH THE RESERVISTS WHO ARRIVED AS UNITS OF HIS DIVISION. IN HIS WORDS THE MAJORITY OF THE RESERVISTS ARE "UNTRAINED, IMMOBILE AND INACTIVE SOLDIERS.

THEY HAVE LEARNED INSUFFICIENTLY THE PRINCIPLES OF MODERN WARFARE, DO NOT KNOW HOW TO HANDLE AUTOMATIC ARMS AND THINK MORE ABOUT THE PRESERVATION OF THEIR OWN LIVES THAN ABOUT THE OFFENSIVE. WITH 4,000 SUCH MEN I CANNOT CONSIDER THE DIVISION QUITE FIT FOR FIGHTING."

Leipzig, Germany, Sept. 4-(AP)-- The Leipzig fair closed today with indications that the domestic German market is to remain secondary as the Reich enters the third year of war, with industries devoting their energies to equipping the army and exports taking precedence over German orders.

Many exhibitors displayed the sign "For export" to save prospective German buyers from unnecessary disappointment.

Although figures of the turnover were NOT available sellers and buyers-- the latter coming chiefly from the Nordic and southeastern countries-- generally declared they did a good business.

Dr. Friedrich Lenfried, representative of Economics Minister Walther Funk at the fair, declared that "the PRINCIPLE OF THE new order and surely NOT the united states dollar" would be the basis of the reorganized Europe's economic life.

This new order, he said, would be based on the planned USE of the labor power of the individual countries whose joint effort would be to serve European "Grossraumwirtschaft," meaning a territorial widespread economy.

The fair management claimed that despite the war it had achieved a record of 6,525 exhibitors.

WITH STILL VIVID MEMORIES OF BATTLES IN GREECE AND CRETE, SHIPS SINKING BENEATH THEM IN THE MEDITERRANEAN, THE 397 MEN GAVE CHEER AFTER CHEER AND WERE ALL SMILES AS THE GRAY-PAINTED 16,909-TON EMPRESS OF ASIA BERTHED AT HER PIER IN LOWER MANHATTAN.

AMONG THEM WERE A CONTINGENT OF NORWEGIANS EN ROUTE TO ENGLAND BY WAY OF SWEDEN, RUSSIA, TURKEY AND EGYPT AND SOME FREE FRENCH.

ALL WERE MORE OR LESS RETICENT ABOUT THEIR EXPERIENCES AND MOST ASKED THAT THEIR IDENTITIES BE WITHHELD. ONE BEARDED, 19-YEAR OLD SUB LIEUTENANT TOLD OF FIVE STUKAS WHICH DIVE-BOMBED THE 10,000-TON CRUISER HE WAS ABOARD NEAR MALTA.

AMONG THE LINER'S PASSENGERS WERE SEVERAL AMERICANS. ONE WAS VICTOR HUGHES, 43, OF QUEENS, WHO TOOK UP A SUGGESTION HE SAID WAS MADE TO HIM THAT HE DO SOMETHING MORE FOR BRITAIN THAN TALK.

HE WENT TO ENGLAND LATE IN 1940 AND ON DEC.29 STARTED OUT AS A MEMBER OF THE CREW OF ONE OF 20 FERRIES BEING SAILED TO TURKEY WITH SUPPLIES VIA CAPE TOWN AND SUEZ. ONLY FIVE FERRIES REACHED THEIR DESTINATION SIX MONTHS LATER. THE FLEET WAS BOMBED THREE TIMES GOING DOWN THE SCOTTISH COAST.

New York, Sept. 5—A British destroyer, a sister ship of the United States destroyer Greer, has captured the 2,000-ton Vichy supply ship Azic, the British Press Service said it learned tonight from unofficial sources.

The British destroyer, one of fifty transferred to England by the United States, seized the ship off the French coast en route to Cassablanca from Bordeaux, the service reported.

Reykjavik, Iceland, Sept. 5—The men of the United States destroyer Greer, which was attacked by a submarine en route to Iceland, said on their arrival here today that the Greer's depth charges may well have sunk the undersea vessel.

The incident was described here as a German attack.

[Middleton's cable contained no amplification of the statement that the attack was by Germans. It was filed only a few hours after he arrived in Iceland from London following President Roosevelt's lifting of a ban against foreign correspondents there.

Middleton was not aboard the Greer, apparently obtaining his information through interviews. The dispatch was passed by the combination British-American censorship in Iceland and by the British censors in London.]

Think They At Least Caused Damage

The Greer's officers and crew expressed conviction that they had at least damaged the submarine, for their instruments indicated that they were directly above her when they dropped their bombs.

The destroyer, they added, was in very deep water at the time, and thus the submarine may have been sunk without trace.

The American warship, they said, was assisted in repelling the attack by British aircraft. Those in the vicinity cooperated in reconnaissance.

Reykjavik, Iceland, Sept. 5 (AP).—Officers and crewmen of the U. S. destroyer Greer said tonight that they may have sunk the submarine which attacked their vessel, and the incident was described here as a German attack.

...icers of the Greer also disclosed that British aircraft in the vicinity assisted in repelling the submarine and then co-operated in reconnaissance.

The Greer, attacked with several torpedoes while en route here with mail, arrived in Iceland this morning. She is commanded by Lieut. Comdr. Laurence Hugh Frost of Washington, D. C.

Sub in Path of Bombs.

The destroyer's instruments, officers said, indicated that the vessel was over the submarine when the depth charges were dropped. Many of the lethal depth bombs were rolled over in the attempt to get the attacker, they said.

The destroyer was in very deep water at the time, it was said, and consequently, they added, the submarine might well have been sunk without a trace.

Nazi Spokesman Quotes Reuters

BERLIN, Sept. 5 (AP)—A German spokesman took the view today that the submarine attack on the United States destroyer Greer was just what advocates of American intervention in the war had been wanting.

"What interested us particularly," he said, "was the Reuters (British news agency) report that 'the long-awaited incident had occurred.'

"Elaboration on that remark is hardly necessary."

[Reuters said in a Washington dispatch: "It is felt this probably is only the first of an inevitable series of such incidents. One man declared it was high time there was an incident to get the United States in the war." These were the only sentences in the Reuters report as distributed in London which compared with the German quotation of Reuters.]

Identity of Boat Questioned

The Nazi spokesman insisted there was no reason to believe that the unidentified submarine which made the unsuccessful attack in the Atlantic was a German U-boat.

Asked whether the Reich had any information on the incident, he replied:

"There have been a number of reports abroad, but none has been made to us."

Although there was a flurry of interest at the Wilhelmstrasse, more extensive comment was declined until more definite information could be obtained as to the time and place of the occurrence.

However, Dienst aus Deutschland, a commentary service with close Foreign Office connections, declared that some interventionists were pumping up the story to make it "the long-yearned-for incident in the Atlantic."

Nazis Declare Story Inflated

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 5—Authorized German sources asserted tonight that the Greer episode was being played up by American interventionists.

Dienst aus Deutschland, news commentary with close Foreign Office connections, commented that some interventionists were inflating the story to make it "the long yearned for incident in the Atlantic."

"No Reports Made To Us"

Asked whether the Reich had any information on a submarine launching a torpedo at the United States destroyer, a spokesman replied: "There are a number of reports abroad but none have been made to us."

Authoritative Germans said they were unable to comment on the submarine incident because from the wording of American navy's announcement the geographic position was unclear.

As a result, they said, they could not say whether a German submarine had been operating near the Greer.

At the same time, Washington wondered if the Navy had been given orders which amounted to a command to destroy on sight any Axis submarine which it might encounter. This, purely speculation, grew from the fact that a hunt for the submarine was on, and a suggestion that it would be impossible to distinguish the vessel from any other submarine that might be found.

Details of the incident accumulated with the arrival of the Greer at Reykjavik, Iceland, to which American defense outpost she was carrying mail.

Dispatches from there said the submarine was described in Iceland as German.

Officers and crew members disclosed that British aircraft helped them ward off the attack.

The Greer, they said, dropped many depth charges in an effort to destroy the submarine. At the time they were dropped, the destroyer's instruments indicated that the sub was directly below, in deep water.

For that reason, they believed that the submarine might have been sunk without a tell-tale trace.

This information was received by the Associated Press in a dispatch from Drew Middleton, a staff correspondent, and veteran of both the Battle of France and the Battle of Britain. He had just arrived in Reykjavik from England.

The fact that his dispatch was passed by the Anglo-American censorship in Iceland and, coming via England, by the British censorship as well, was considered highly significant.

President Roosevelt himself disclosed that a search for the submarine was on, with orders to "eliminate" it, if it should be found. He made this announcement at a press conference, while the capitals of the world wondered what the diplomatic aftermath of the incident would be.

The question universally asked, of course, was whether the occurrence would draw the United States into active participation in the war. Although apprehensive, officials here generally inclined to the view that the incident was not of sufficient magnitude to have that result.

Reporters gathering early in the day for the President's press conference were primed with questions on the encounter, but the President beat them to it and brought up the subject himself. He held a brief, whispered conference with his naval aide, Capt. John R. Beardall. Then, smiling, but in an earnest tone he said he knew the reporters would all be asking about it.

He revealed that more than one attack had been made on the Greer. All occurred after daylight. The identity of the destroyer was plainly indicated by a numeral and by the fact that it carried an American flag at the jackstaff. (All American destroyers carry their numerical designation in figures several feet high, on each bow.)

Presumably because the silhouette of the Greer is the same as that of the World War destroyers which were transferred to Britain a year ago, the President stressed the point that visibility was good and that the nationality of the ship unmistakable.

Mr. Roosevelt moreover made it plain that he approved the action of the Greer's commanding officer, in responding immediately with depth bombs. (The detonation of these missiles produces such a powerful underwater pressure that submarines have been destroyed when they were merely dropped in the immediate vicinity.)

The President said it was fortunate the Greer was not hit, and added that it was beyond his power to understand why the sub's aim was so poor. He declined to say whether the submarine's periscope was above water.

"As a landlubber to a sea expert," a reporter inquired, "is it possible for a submarine to make a mistake in broad daylight at torpedo distance?"

In reply, the chief executive said that if the sub had a periscope above the surface there was no excuse for mistaking the identity of the Greer. He added that sometimes torpedoes were aimed at a sound registered by listening devices.

Some of the things he had read in the papers or heard on the radio reminded him, he said, of the story of a father whose children were fired upon from the bushes while on their way to school. The father took the position, he said, that there was nothing to be done about it, no reason to search the bushes or take other action, because the children had not been hit.

"Is any search of the bushes being made?" he was asked.

Mr. Roosevelt replied with a short yes and added that the Administration did not agree with the father in his story. It might even be said, he added, that the schoolteacher (meaning himself) was looking into the matter.

He replied in the negative when asked whether the incident had resulted in any change of orders to the fleet, and a reporter reminded him that it once had been the practice to "go and tell papa" in case of such an attack. That was not being done any more, Mr. Roosevelt said.

(The allusion was to a statement made by the President at a press conference some months ago when asked what the procedure would be if an American naval patrol vessel sighted a submarine. He replied offhand that the ship would radio the position of the submarine and pass the word along to papa — meaning himself.)

When asked what would be done if the submarine which attacked the Greer were found, he said he supposed the Navy would "eliminate" it or attempt to do so. The word "eliminate" was a good one, he added, authorizing the newspapermen to quote him directly on it.

In a statement, Frederick J. Libby, executive secretary of National Council for Prevention of War, said: "The calmness of the members of Congress, including interventionists and non-interventionists alike, regarding this episode is unquestionably more in keeping with the attitude which the majority of our people would want our Government to take than the President's impetuous action."

"The American people," he added, "have shown repeatedly that they want no provocative action likely to involve us in the war."

In New York, Francis [illegible] Miller, vice-chairman of Fight for Freedom, Inc., issued a statement on the Greer incident in which he said:

"This is der tag in the eyes of the power-drunk gangsters who had struck their opening blow at the Western Hemisphere. . . ."

"The next time it is to be hoped that American vessels will shoot first. Indeed members of Fight for Freedom have advocated that they run down the Axis raiders and exterminate them on any of the seven seas."

Navy May Have Been Given Orders to Sink Any U-Boat on Sight

This Speculation Grows From Fact Roosevelt Says Hunt Is Being Made for Attacker, and Suggestion That All Submersibles Look Alike; Destroyer Men Say Their Devices Indicate Ship Was Directly Over Sub When Depth Bombs Were Dropped

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5 (AP)—Indications tonight were that the destroyer Greer sank or at least damaged the submarine which attacked her on the North Atlantic, and for the first time the underseas craft was described as of German nationality.

Sees U. S. Threatened.

London, Sept. 5 (A. P.).—The London Evening Press seized on the submarine attack on the U. S. S. Greer today to argue that the United States should put herself fully at the British side.

The Evening News called the submarine attack a pointed reminder that the United States' geographical isolation rapidly is being threatened.

The Evening Standard commented that "Canada, with the Atlantic dividing her from the battlefield, still realized the 'folly of waiting passively for our turn to come.'"

"We think the same logic applies to the United States," the newspaper added. "Today a German torpedo puts the case with inescapable force."

American and Norwegian soldiers, sailors and airmen is larger than the number of trained troops available to repel invasion in Britain in the summer of 1940.

Coastal aircraft of the R. A. F. and fighter commands fly wing and wing with planes of the United States Army Air Corps.

U. S. And British Troops Turn Island Into Mighty Fortress On Sea Lane To Great Britain

By DREW MIDDLETON
Associated Press Correspondent

Drew Middleton, of the London staff of the Associated Press, was in Iceland when the Greer arrived yesterday. He writes here of the work being done by the British and Americans to strengthen the Iceland fortifications. Middleton, a graduate of Syracuse University, covered the Battle of France and the Battle of Britain. He went to London from New York in 1939.

With Anglo-American Forces in Iceland, Sept. 5—Soldiers, sailors and airmen of the United States and Great Britain, laboring mightily in deep and abiding comradeship, have turned this bleak and windswept island into a Gibraltar of the North safeguarding a vital link in British-American communications.

So tightly has the North Atlantic gate been barred that only isolated submarines venture into the former happy hunting grounds and U-boat sinkings have dropped to a new low since British and American planes and ships began their unremitting patrol of these waters.

According to one report, not a single merchantman has been sunk on the northern route from the United States to Britain in seven weeks.

Iceland, bristling with guns, dotted with airfields and her waters combed by destroyers flying the Stars and Stripes and the white ensign, is the keystone of a communications arch over which arms and material of the New World pass to Britain.

The line runs from Britain to Iceland to Greenland to Newfoundland to ports of the northeastern United States. America helps garrison Iceland, Greenland and Newfoundland and has an increasingly large stake in the protection of this life line.

SEP 6 1941

Two factors impress observers after a tour of the island's defenses.

First is their strength. Gibraltar and Malta are no more strongly held than this barren land, which is half again the size of Ireland.

It is impossible to reveal numbers, but the Icelandic force of British,

Marines Important

Marines in olive-green uniforms occupy an important place in Iceland defense plans. Their anti-aircraft guns sweep the skies as do those of the Royal Artillery. Their tanks rumble across the volcanic plains and primitive roads in maneuvers.

There can be no doubt as to the importance of the United States in the defense of the northern gate to the Atlantic.

Iceland can be attacked in the twenty-hour nights of winter; a flotilla might creep down the coasts of Greenland, masked by mist and snow, and land on the north of Iceland.

Iceland is within range of aerial troop carriers.

Possibility Of Raid

There always is the possibility of a large-scale raid which would seek to destroy airfields and supplies on which soldiers and sailors rely in a land which has to import all its wheat, beef and fuel and most of its vegetables.

Iceland grows stronger in guns and men each week.

One factor impressing observers is the comradeship between the Americans and British. It is a common sight to see American and British privates sitting at the same table discussing war strategy and the postwar world. American officers are frequent guests at British messes. Kids from Yorkshire and kids from Montana chat on street corners.

The British have great respect for the marines, who settled in Iceland as though it was the most natural place in the world to be.

Huge Shells Start Fires; Russians Say They Gain Mile in Counter-Drive

Nazis Indicate City Is Entirely Cut Off

Reds Say Foe Is Trapped After Crossing Dnieper, Claim Advance in South

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, Sept. 5.—German siege guns are shelling Leningrad, the Germans said tonight, and a Finnish official announcement from Helsinki said that fires in the great Russian city were visible at the old Finnish border fifteen miles away. Nazi forces advancing under the artillery barrage were declared to be blasting closer to Russia's second city through fierce tank and artillery resistance.

Schluesselburg, twenty-five miles east of Leningrad on the shore of Lake Ladoga, and the railroad which connects it with Leningrad were said by a Nazi spokesman also to be undergoing a pounding by German long-range artillery. This indicated that Leningrad was cut off from road and rail communication with the rest of Russia.

Russians Counter-Attack

[Russian counter-attacks through artillery fire, which threw the Germans back almost a mile in the Leningrad area and resulted in the capture of four villages, were reported in dispatches to Moscow. German losses in the Leningrad sector were described as heavy. The defenses of Kiev and Odessa, on the southern fronts, were said to be gaining strength. A German force which crossed the lower Dnieper River was reported to have been encircled with Red tanks charging into the isolated Nazi troops. An unsuccessful air attack in the north, presumably near Leningrad, was said to have cost the Germans 100 planes.]

The announcement of fires raging in Leningrad was issued by the State Information Bureau at Helsinki. Its account was based on eyewitness reports from Finnish civilians fleeing from the Russian area between Leningrad and the Finnish border.

These Finns, called Ingrians, number 250,000, and have been longtime residents of that area and the strip of territory running along the Gulf of Finland into Estonia.

Finns Say Russians Flee

Official Finnish war correspondents were quoted as saying the Ingrians reported a large number of Russians have fled from the district immediately around Leningrad to the besieged city itself. All buildings have been put into use for billeting, and even then room has not been found for all, the Finnish announcement said.

"People who have been unable to find a roof over their heads wander through the streets. Innumerable persons spend the nights in parks under trees and bushes wrapped only in their own clothing. The suburbs of Leningrad are crowded with so many people that hundreds spend their times in fields," it added.

Every Russian capable of bearing arms is being enrolled in the city's defense forces, it was said.

Destruction Threatened

Although the spokesman asserted that only "military facilities" were being shelled, other sources have indicated that if Leningrad failed to yield it would be subject to the same crushing fire that gave Warsaw days and nights of terror two years ago.

There were no authentic reports on the exact location of the lines beyond recent statements that the Germans had fought to within twenty miles of Leningrad, which would be within artillery range.

Pressing down from the north, the Finns were said to be approaching Terijoki and Kuokkala, some eighteen miles northwest of Leningrad. Occupation of the towns would put them within artillery range of the Russian naval base and fortress on the island of Kronstadt, which defends the sea approach to Leningrad.

Encirclement "Progressing"

Adolf Hitler's headquarters announced the shelling with a communique which bore the headline "Successful Operations on the Eastern Front" and continued:

"The encirclement of Leningrad is progressing.

"The city itself already is under fire of heavy German artillery.

"Estonia has been freed of the enemy."

The following official account was given on fighting "in the northern sector of the front" without mention of how near it was to Leningrad:

"One German army corps, on September 4, succeeded in crushingly defeating Soviet rear guards and removing numerous road obstructions and mines. Their advance could not be interrupted by obstacles created by Soviet explosions.

Break Through Reported

"German troops reached and broke through a stubbornly defended line of the Soviets, who had the support of tanks and heavy artillery.

"In another sector of the northern front the Bolsheviks were ejected from their positions after a fierce fight, in the course of which 1,160 prisoners were taken.

"Finnish troops successfully continued their attacks. At several sectors of the front the Russians tried to arrest further advances of the Finnish troops by counter-attacks. They were, however, all repulsed in hand-to-hand fighting with severe losses for the Bolsheviks."

Estonia Units Freed

The high command statement that Estonia had been mopped up indicated that German forces in the north were now free to devote their whole attention to Leningrad, the main objective. The Estonian islands of Dagoe and Oesel, where Russians were still holding out, presented a problem to German air and naval units.

In the middle sector facing Moscow, where the Russians have made strong counter-attacks, DNB claimed that between August 25 and September 4 two German army corps took over 30,000 prisoners and captured or destroyed 160 tanks. The news agency gave no specific indication of the scene of these operations.

In addition, the Russians were said to have lost more than 200 guns and several hundred vehicles of all types.

Prisoners Claimed

Vague dispatches from other sections of the eastern front reported that an army corps in the middle sector had taken 17,300 prisoners and destroyed or captured 121 tanks, including 30 of the heaviest type.

Another army corps in the course of two weeks was credited with 13,700 prisoners, 26 tanks and 115 cannon.

"We don't need these Russian guns as weapons," said the official spokesman. "They are important only as an indication of destruction of Soviet forces and as an addition to our junk supply."

Germans Shelling Leningrad.

Berlin, Sept. 5 (A. P.).—Heavy German artillery is shelling Leningrad, the German High Command announced today.

[The Russians admitted that the Germans were shelling Leningrad, but said that the Red Army, re-enforced by troops withdrawn from Estonia, was counter-attacking, driving the Nazis back a mile at one point.]

Informed sources said that the German long-range guns were firing on bridges and rail facilities in and between Leningrad and Schluesselburg, twenty miles to the east of the city on Lake Ladoga.

"It is a mistake to assume that Leningrad is being shot up indiscriminately," they said. "Only military facilities are involved."

Germans have said, however, that the city will face Warsaw-like destruction if it resists.

Kronstadt Faces Shelling.

Without disclosing the whereabouts of the big guns, one informant said: "You can take a map and just about figure out where they would be."

Finnish troops, it was added, are approaching Kuokkala, fifteen miles northwest of Leningrad, and its occupation "will give the Finns the possibility of bringing long-range guns into play against the Kronstadt naval base."

Der Fuehrer's command war bulletin, indicating that the ring of steel which German and Finnish forces are tightening around Leningrad has been almost closed, described the situation in these four terse sentences:

"Successful operations on the east front.

"The encirclement of Leningrad is progressing.

"The city itself already is under fire of heavy German artillery.

"Estonia has been freed of the enemy."

Both the Finnish and the German arms of the huge besieging drive have been reported about twenty miles from Leningrad—well within the range of Germany's big guns such as those used in the west to blast ships and ports across the English channel.

Reds Claim Four Towns Retaken

(Red army units counter-attacking amid artillery fire on the approaches to Leningrad were reported by Pravda today to have advanced almost a mile at one point, retaking four villages.

(The defenses of Leningrad were said to have been bolstered by the arrival of troops from Tallinn, evacuated successfully before the Germans took the Estonian capital. These forces were reported already back in battle against the Nazis.)

36 Tanks Lost

Elsewhere on the Leningrad front, possibly in the mop-up of Estonia, DNB said German forces "destructively defeated" Soviet reinforcements yesterday and then took a tenaciously defended Russian position protected by tanks and heavy artillery.

In Red army counter-attacks in an undesignated sector of the Eastern Front, the agency added, the Red army lost thirty-six tanks.

(The Russians have given every indication that they will defend Leningrad—home of 3,000,000 people—whatever the cost.

(Marshal Klementi Voroshiloff, to whom Joseph Stalin has entrusted the city's defense, has acknowledged its "dread peril" and raised a civilian People's army to back the Red army. Both armies have taken oaths to die rather than yield.

(A large percentage of Russia's working masses are centered in Leningrad, whose busy factories help supply Russia's defenders and its port, Kronstadt, is the principal base of the Red army's Baltic fleet. Sentimentally Leningrad is a former capital, the birthplace of the Russian revolution and namesake of the idolized Nikolai Lenin.

(It never has been taken by a foe and Stalin himself defended it successfully against German armies in 1918.)

The Dienst Aus Deutschland news service said that, "despite the fact there are no authentic reports from Leningrad, the fate of the city is only a matter of time."

The same service admitted that in the central sector "the Russians evidently are carrying out extensive attacks," but belittled their effectiveness.

Authorized quarters said German tank units made successful attacks on Russian positions in that sector yesterday, capturing twelve cannon and a quantity of other weapons.

BIG FIRE RAGING IN LENINGRAD, FINNS REPORT

SEP 6 1941

Flames Declared Visible From Border—City Described As In Chaos

[By the Associated Press]

Helsinki, Sept. 5—A Finnish communique said tonight that big fires, which could be seen from the Finnish border, were raging in Leningrad.

Everyone capable of bearing arms was being enrolled in the city's defenses, it was stated.

The communique was issued by the Finnish State Information Bureau and was based on eyewitness reports of Ingrians fleeing from Russia. (Ingrian is the name given some 200,000 Finns living around Leningrad.)

Text Of Communique

The communique follows:

"Official war correspondents report that according to the account of Ingrian eyewitnesses a large number of people have fled from the district around Leningrad to the city itself.

"Those who have not gone there of their own free will have been forced to abandon their homes and proceed to the city. All public buildings and storehouses and in general all buildings have been put into use for billeting. Even then room has not been found for all.

"People who have been unable to find shelter walk through the streets. Innumerable persons spend nights in parks, under trees and bushes, wrapped only in their clothing. The suburbs of Leningrad, too, are crowded with so many people that hundreds spend their time in the fields.

Traffic In Confusion

"Traffic in the Leningrad area is in a state of confusion. An Ingrian locomotive engineer who left Leningrad September 1 related that railway traffic had ceased then, all railways leading out of the city being either in enemy hands or so badly damaged they could not be repaired for traffic.

"Motor traffic is entirely haphazard and unorganized. Thus for instance it no longer was possible to transport inhabitants from the suburbs and rural districts into the city even though they had been ordered to proceed there. They have been told to make their way through the woods as the roads are under aircraft attack and artillery fire.

"Attempts also are being made to keep the roads open for military transports.

Food Reported Short

"It is becoming wholly impossible to procure food. Bread is no longer on sale in the shops. People eat what they have stored at home, if anything. Those who arrived from the surrounding country have only the scanty parcels of food they may have brought with them. Sickness already is becoming rampant because of poor food and inadequate shelter.

"Children in particular are exposed to chills, being compelled to sleep out in the open in the present damp autumn weather. Stomach disease also has caused great havoc among children.

"For instance, in Tipuna suburb, through which refugees who have arrived in Finland had to pass, hundreds of children have died in the vicinity of the railway stations.

Proclamation Distributed

"Marshal Voroshilov's proclamation in which he declared that if Leningrad is compelled to surrender the city will be blown up has been distributed to the population.

"Everyone capable of bearing arms is being enrolled in forces defending the city, although there is no time to give them any training or even uniforms. There are not nearly enough arms to go around.

"A large number of buildings have been destroyed in the outskirts. There are also big fires in the city, the glow from which can be seen from the Finnish frontier. The big metropolis goes to its doom. The terrible Bolshevist leaders seem to desire this."

REDS REPORTED CHARGING AMID HAIL OF SHELLS

Leningrad Defenders Battling Under Orders To Save City Or Die

Fierce Fighting Also Declared Raging Before Kiev And Odessa

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Saturday, Sept. 6—The Red army and people's battalions are counter-attacking through a storm of artillery fire before Leningrad under Marshal Klementi Voroshilov's orders to save the city or die, Russian dispatches said today.

The early Saturday communique said fighting raged along the entire front. War dispatches reported pitched battles on the approaches of Leningrad, Kiev and Odessa, and claimed gradual destruction of a large German force which crossed to the east bank of the lower Dnieper river.

The Russians were reported in Red army dispatches to have thrown back the invaders almost a mile in the battle for Leningrad, retaking villages by charging through murderous artillery barrages.

Nazis Hammered

Red army tanks, planes and artillery were described as hammering to pieces the large German force which became stranded and isolated August 26 when it finally forced a crossing on the lower Dnieper, where Marshal Semeon Budyenny has established a line on the east bank to defend the rest of the Ukraine. This battle was said to be continuing after the crushing of two German battalions.

Marshal Voroshilov's forces, strengthened by Red troops evacuated to the west after the fall of Tallinn in Estonia, claimed the recapture of four Soviet villages in the continuing series of spectacular charges against strong German positions near Leningrad.

Nazi Losses Heavy

Incomplete reports assembled while the battle still roared described the German losses as heavy; an artillery battalion, a heavy battery, twenty-six anti-tank guns, a mine-throwing battery and much other equipment.

Two of the four villages claimed to have fallen again into Soviet hands had been fortified by the Nazis, said Russian accounts, and prepared as artillery bases.

Soviet big guns went into action to smash these heavier defenses, knocking out German mine throwers and an observation point equipped with a wireless station.

Big Red tanks, following up the barrage, then crushed and overran the Nazi machine-gun positions in the villages of "K," "U" and "Z" and Soviet infantrymen charged in to clean out the last German resistance.

Village "C" Retaken

Village "C" was said to have been retaken after an even more violent series of engagements which raised a thunder heard for miles around.

While the Soviet Command itself, in its afternoon communique, merely reported a continuation of heavy action on every front, more detailed Russian advices pictured Kiev, the Ukrainian capital, and Odessa on the Black Sea as being steadily strengthened to hold on to the end.

At Odessa, where the Red army garrison is supported by sailors from the Soviet Black Sea fleet and by a civilian population of half a million sworn to hold the city "to the last drop of blood," the Nazis' Rumanian allies were claimed to be falling by the thousands.

A fourth great battle was raging on the lower Dnieper, where the Germans were said to have crossed the broad stream and captured village "O," and then tried to push forward across another river to cut the Russians off in the rear.

Instead, the Germans were said to have been trapped by an encirclement maneuver. Artillery broke up attempts of the Nazis to reinforce their troops both by land and by air, and then Soviet tanks began charges into the isolated mass.

In the north, presumably about the Baltic naval base of Kronstadt near Leningrad, it was said that 100 German planes had been shot down in making an unsuccessful attack.

30.24-11625

Reds Counter-attack.

Moscow, Sept. 5 (A. P.).—Red Army units, counter-attacking amid German shelling of approaches to Leningrad, were reported today to have advanced almost a mile at one point, retaking four villages.

Pravda, Communist party organ, also declared that the defenses of Leningrad had been bolstered by the arrival of troops from Tallinn, evacuated successfully before the Germans took the Estonian capital. These forces were reported already back in battle against the Nazis.

Other dispatches said that both sides were bringing up their big guns for the battle of Leningrad, and the Russian communique announced night-long fighting on the whole front.

Two other beleaguered cities—Kiev, the Ukrainian capital under German attack, and Odessa, Black Sea port which the Rumanians are besieging—also were reported strengthening their resistance.

Red Army troops, Red Navy sailors and embattled civilians of Odessa, fulfilling an oath to defend the city to the last drop of blood, are mowing down Rumanian forces by the thousands, Pravda reported, and a mass meeting of Kiev's populace took a similar oath to fight to the death for that city.

At the same time Soviet dispatches disclosed that the Germans had succeeded in making a crossing of the Dnieper River in the Ukraine, but said that the German unit was stranded and that Soviet counter-attacks were pounding it to pieces.

Artillery Thwarts Plan.

The Germans, on capturing villages "K" and "U", "erected fortifications and artillery positions as a base for further advance on Leningrad," Red Army dispatches said.

"Our scouts reported that the Fascists were preparing to force a river," one Soviet dispatch said. "Our artillerymen thwarted this plan and sank boats attempting to carry soldiers across to the opposite bank."

"By accurate volleys," said the Russian dispatch, "our artillerymen smashed a German heavy gun battery, a mine-thrower battery and an observation point with a wireless station."

Villages Reoccupied.

After this preparation Russian units supported by tanks reoccupied villages "K," "U" and "Z."

"The Germans retreated, abandoning guns, machine-guns, equipment, trucks, motor cars and staff documents," the Russians said. "The battlefield was strewn with Fascist corpses."

Village "C" was retaken by the Russians in similar but apparently even more bitter fighting after a "brief but powerful artillery fire."

After heavy tanks smashed German machine-gun positions Red infantrymen rushed up, "capturing one position after another," the Leningrad dispatch said, adding that "the din of battle resounded for several kilometers around." By midnight village "C" was again in Russian hands.

Red Air Force Active.

"According to incomplete data, our troops destroyed or captured one German artillery battalion, a heavy battery, 26 anti-tank guns, 9 machine-guns, 7 trucks, 2 motor-cars, 80 carts, 150 artillery and draft horses and a large quantity of rifles, automatics and other equipment," the dispatch said. "The Germans suffered heavy casualties. The headquarters of two regiments were smashed and important documents captured."

Emphasizing Russian air operations, the Soviet Information Bureau said that two Nazi-held airdromes west of Lake Ilmen, on the front before Leningrad, had been destroyed.

Seventy-four grounded German planes belonging to the Richthofen Squadron were destroyed on those fields and when the Nazis attempted to fight off the Russian air attack one of their fighter planes was shot down and their anti-aircraft batteries silenced, it said.

Entire Front Active

The midday bulletin from the information bureau again reported night-long fighting on the entire front and said Soviet troops had routed the Two Hundred and Sixty-third German Infantry Division, taking a toll of 7,000 officers and men killed and wounded.

Where this action occurred was not disclosed.

In the south, where the Nzais have been trying to establish bridgeheads across the Dnieper from their foothold on the west bank, the communique said Russian planes destroyed a German mechanized column.

It estimated that 1,000 troops had been killed and wounded and said 600 motor vehicles and eighty tanks were destroyed.

Late dispatches disclose that the Germans had succeeded in crossing the Dnieper at one point in the Ukraine, but said that the German unit was stranded and that Soviet counter-attacks were pounding it to pieces.

On the northern flank, presumably at Kronstadt, the port of Leningrad and big naval base for the Russian Baltic fleet, it said one hundred German planes had been shot down in an attack.

One Red torpedo boat was credited also with destroying two German submarines.

Citing individual examples of heroism, the bulletin said one volunteer crept close to the German lines under heavy fire and destroyed a machine-gun nest. Members of another unit, surrounded by superior forces, destroyed five Nazi tanks with grenades and flaming bottles of gasoline and fought their way clear, the communique said.

Russian Raid On Berlin Ineffective, Nazis Say

Berlin, Sept. 5 (AP)—An overnight Russian air raid on Berlin during which one Soviet bomber was destroyed by anti-aircraft was characterized by the high command today as ineffective.

[The Russians said they set off explosions and fires in Berlin with explosive and incendiary bombs, and acknowledged loss of one plane.]

The plane was described as a twin-engined Martin (possibly a Russian copy of the American Martin bomber).

DNB reported that thirteen persons were killed and eighty-five injured in Rotterdam yesterday by a bombing from the substratosphere. A number of buildings were demolished, and some victims still may be buried in the ruins, it said.

[The British reported bombing Rotterdam from an American-made Fortress plane at a great height.]

The German air force was credited with sinking a 3,000-ton merchantman and an outpost boat between Britain and Ireland last night, damaging a 6,000-ton ship off the English east coast, and making raids on a number of British airports.

A German raid on the Gulf of Suez Wednesday night sank two merchantmen totaling 11,336 tons, DNB said.

Russians Raid Berlin, Report Starting Fires

Germans Describe Attack as Ineffective; Eastern Scotland Raked by Nazis

MOSCOW, Sept. 5 (AP).—Russian bombers dropped explosives and incendiaries on military and industrial targets in Berlin last night and saw their missiles touch off fires and explosions, it was reported today.

The announcement did not reveal how many planes carried out the attack, but said one was missing.

Berlin Reports Bomber Felled

BERLIN, Sept. 5 (AP).—A suburban anti-aircraft battery took credit today as the first to bring down a Soviet bomber in the series of attacks which the Red air force has attempted against Berlin.

The bomber, described as a twin-engined Martin (possibly a Soviet copy of the American Martin bomber), was shot down last night in a harvested grain field east of Berlin. Its wreckage was scattered over 100 yards and was still smouldering this afternoon. Troops removed the bodies of two of the crew. A third fell to his death when his parachute failed to open. The fourth was caught in the vicinity, apparently unhurt.

(The British said the Germans had lost eleven planes yesterday, and put their own losses at seven fighters and one bomber.)

Seventeen Dead in Rotterdam.

The German-controlled Netherlands radio reported today that seventeen persons were killed and ninety-five wounded by the American-made flying fortress with which the R. A. F. bombed Rotterdam yesterday, and that others may be buried under the ruins.

The attack was carried out from the stratosphere level, the announcer said, according to NBC, adding: "It was a mere chance that hits were scored at all."

ciated Press]

Yesterday the news agency DNB issued a statement to the effect that thirty persons had been killed and seventy-two injured in Tuesday's British air raid on Berlin.

German planes were credited with sinking a 3,000-ton merchant ship and an outpost boat between Britain and Ireland during the night and damaging a 6,000-ton vessel off the English east coast.

Other aircraft raided a number of British airports, authorized sources said.

"Down 25 British Planes"

The Germans reported this morning their fighter planes had downed twenty-five British aircraft in dog-fights over the English Channel yesterday without suffering a single loss.

Berlin Reports Russ Warplanes Repulsed

SEP 6 1941

[By the Asso

Berlin, Sept. 5—Anti-aircraft defenses thwarted an attempt by Russian warplanes to attack Berlin during the night and brought down one of two planes which approached the capital, a communique declared today.

The communique said:

"A few Soviet bombers attempted to approach the Reich's capital last night. Of two attackers, one was downed by anti-aircraft fire. No bombings were reported."

Claim Ship Sinking

(The alarm apparently was responsible for an interruption in telephone and telegraph communications between Berlin and Switzerland.)

The high command later said of last night's raid:

"Attempts last night by several Soviet planes to attack northeastern Germany and Berlin were ineffective. Anti-aircraft fire downed one bomber."

Eyewitness Describes Viipuri As Rat-Ridden Heap Of Ruins

Writer With Finns Says Demolition Squad For Retreating Reds Left Nothing Intact

By PAUL SJOEBLOM
Associated Press Correspondent

SEP 6 1941

With Finnish Forces at Viipuri, Sept. 5 (AP)—The Russian retreat left Viipuri a shattered city.

Foreign correspondents touring Viipuri at the invitation of the Finnish high command today found every building either damaged or demolished.

The streets are lined with the skeletons of houses through which th wind moans. The only moving things I saw were a few Finnish soldiers, speeding army truck, huge rats div ing into cellars, a shell-shocked dog which howled and ran away at the sight of me, and finally, the Finnish war flag snapping like a whip atop a tower of ancient Viipuri castle.

Section A Heap Of Rubbish

The railroad square suffered most at the hands of Soviet demolition squads. The station is a heap of rubbish. The railway tracks were either carried away or twisted out of shape.

All bridges were demolished. The Finnish officers said that only a lightning attack, which threatened the Soviet garrison with sudden encirclement, prevented the enemy from blasting the entire city as utterly as the railroad square.

Outside a number of undemolished houses were signs posted by the Finns: "Mines removed."

As the correspondents entered the city the Finnish conducting officer waved his hand over the scene and said: "This is the voluntary withdrawal the Bolsheviks were advertising."

Ruins from bombing and shelling of the city during the 1939-40 Finnish-Russian war remained uncleared. Even the towering Kaleva Insurance Building stands unfinished, screened by scaffolding just as the Finns left off work on the verge of completion when the winter war started.

All the old Finnish street signs remained untouched. The Russian equivalents were nailed above them.

The great harbor was devastated, but the forest-bound peninsula in the background was untouched.

Thousands Dead In Finn Trap

SEP 6 1941

By Paul Sjoblom
Finnish Journalist

With Finnish Forces on the Karelian Isthmus, Sept. 5—For more than five miles along the road south from Viipuri toward Leningrad lie the dead and debris of what Finnish officers say were three Soviet divisions and auxiliary detachments.

Thousands of Russian corpses, piles of battle-made debris and shell-erupted earth mark the death traps Finnish forces threw about Soviet fighting men retreating from Viipuri.

Prisoners Burying Dead

Possibly 45,000 Russians were caught in successive Finnish encirclements and only 10,000 still are alive, Finnish officers said.

Many of the 10,000 are wounded. The others have been put to work burying their fallen comrades or filling shell holes.

The prizes on the prisoners' list is given as Major General Kirpitsnikow, commander of the Red Army Forty-third Division which won the coveted award of the Red banner for its work in the 1939-40 war with the Finns. The Forty-third and the One Hundred and Fifteenth Soviet Divisions were smashed in two days of fighting, the Finns said.

Along the road to Leningrad are crippled and burned-out tanks, guns, tractors, trucks, wagons, rifles, hand grenades and all the equipment a modern army needs.

With other correspondent-guests of the Finnish High Command, I was conducted over the battle area by officers who said the prisoners were demoralized and gave no trouble.

Gangs of Russians, supervised by guards with bayoneted rifles, sweating under a broiling sun as they dug graves, filled holes or resurfaced the road.

Captives Dare Not Strike

Guides smiled at the amazement registered at the sight of some prisoners moving unmolested about piles of hand grenades.

When I asked one of the officers how they dared take the risk of a Russian deciding to toss high explosives about, he said all the fierce patriots had been killed or taken away. It was easy to spot them, the officer said, and the others knew the penalty for the slightest suspicious move.

Only a few scattered Russian units, led by commissars and officers, continued to offer resistance in woods on either side of the road. Once in a while firing could be heard in the distance.

U. S. PROTEST FILED IN TOKIO MOVIE ROW

Embassy Takes Up Threats to American Firms.

Tokio, Sept. 5 (A. P.).—The American embassy took a hand today in a wage dispute between eight American motion picture companies and their Japanese employees after the latter, it is alleged, had threatened violence if their demands were not met. A high-ranking embassy official met representatives of both groups at a Tokio police station and is reported to have lodged a protest over the treatment accorded the American firms.

The newspaper Miyako reported last week that the employees, about 250 in number, had petitioned the police and the Ministries of the Interior and of Finance for aid in obtaining dismissal pay in the event of discharge. The paper said the employees were asking three months' salary for every year of service, while the companies offered one month's for every year. The Government has been reported on the verge of consolidating all Japanese movie producers and distributors into a single controlled company, and American movie firms foresee a monopoly which may eventually force them out of business.

New York, Sept. 5 (AP)—The German radio today quoted the Prime Minister of Manchoukuo, Japan's puppet state, as telling provincial governors at a conference at Hsinking that Manchoukuo is endangered by the German-Russian war and therefore must strengthen its defense.

Mediterranean Bag Believed To Include 2 Warships And Liner

Latter Probably Carrying Troops To North Africa, Admiralty Says

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 5—Seven Axis ships including two warships and a big Italian liner which may have been carrying troops to North Africa, have been sunk or damaged in a series of British successes in the Mediterranean, the Admiralty announced today.

The liner was torpedoed "and almost certainly sunk," the Admiralty said, while in the other attacks, apparently all in the last few days, three ships were declared to have been sunk and three more damaged, two severely.

One of the damaged vessels was reported to be a 10,000-ton cruiser.

Liner Believed Transport

The big liner was believed to be the 23,635-ton Duilio, the Admiralty said in a communique, adding the observation: "The Italian liners of this type are known to have been acting as troop transports."

British communiques issued here and in Cairo reported these other actions:

Loaded southbound tanker torpedoed and sunk from Axis convoy off Sicily.

Supply ship of "about 8,000 tons" torpedoed and sunk by submarine in central Mediterranean.

Destroyer Torpedoed

Axis destroyer torpedoed and "destroyed" by planes of the R. A. F. Middle East command outside of Tripoli harbor on the night of September 3-4.

Ten thousand-ton Axis cruiser hit by torpedoes and seriously damaged in attack on "an enemy naval force"—presumably Italian—near straits of Messina between Sicily and the Italian "toe."

The 4,971-ton Italian supply ship Aquitania torpedoed and severely damaged in the convoy action off Sicily.

Large merchant ship hit by torpedo-carrying R. A. F. planes in Tripoli attack.

A loaded tanker was torpedoed and sunk from an Axis convoy off Sicily, and in the same group of vessels the 4,971-ton Italian supply ship Aquitania was severely damaged by torpedoes.

In the central Mediterranean an Axis supply ship of "about 8,000 tons" was torpedoed and sunk by a British submarine, the Admiralty said.

The enemy naval force was reported encountered close to the Straits of Messina, between Sicily and the toe of the Italian boot.

The communique follows:

"One of our submarines operating close to the Straits of Messina has carried out a successful attack on an enemy naval force.

"One of the enemy cruisers, a ship of a 10,000-ton class armed with eight-inch guns, was hit by torpedoes and seriously damaged."

British Torpedo Italian Liner, Cruiser

SEP 6 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 5—A large Italian liner of a type known to be serving for troop transport—believed to be the 23,635-ton Duilio—has been torpedoed "and almost certainly sunk" in a series of British successes in the Mediterranean, the Admiralty announced today.

The big ship was attacked while sailing with two other large passenger ships off the coast of Italy, the Admiralty said in a communique announcing two other Mediterranean attacks on Axis shipping.

In yet another engagement the Admiralty reported that a 10,000-ton cruiser was hit by torpedoes and seriously damaged by a British submarine in an attack on "an enemy naval force" (presumably Italian) between Sicily and Italy proper.

Still another Axis war vessel was destroyed outside the harbor of Tripoli, the British announced at Cairo, R. A. F. planes torpedoing an Axis destroyer. In the same attack, which occurred the night of September 3-4, a large merchant ship was hit.

A dive-bombing R. A. F. plane during the night hit another German tanker, heavily-laden, which was lying outside the French harbor of Granville, on the Norman coast, the Air Ministry reported.

The plane dropped medium and heavy bombs, and the gunner saw large white clouds of smoke rise from the 300-foot long tanker, the Ministry said.

Village In East Scotland Reports Machine-Gunning Of Streets; None Hurt

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 5 (AP)—Several German planes attacking eastern Scotland today inflicted a small number of casualties and some damage, and one of the bombers crashed, killing its crew of four, the Air Ministry said.

A report from one village said a Nazi bomber machine-gunned the streets where children were playing but that none was injured.

In the only British offensive action the Ministry said two German tankers were attacked off the continental coast last night. Clouds of smoke were seen to rise from one of the ships.

A factory at La Pallice, France, also was bombed.

Germans Raid Scotland.

London, Sept. 5 (A. P.).—German planes raided northeast Scotland and Scottish coastal waters today, the Government announced, causing some damage and a small number of casualties.

In the only British offensive action reported, the Air Ministry said a coastal command bomber attacked a tanker off the coast of Brittany last night and another bombed a factory at La Pallice, France.

A lone German raider dropped several bombs on a coastal town in northeast Scotland today, demolishing some shops and injuring several persons.

17 Rotterdam Deaths Reported

SEP 6 1941

New York, Sept. 5 (AP)—The German-controlled Netherlands radio reported today that seventeen persons were killed and ninety-five wounded by the American-made Fortress plane with which the R. A. F. bombed Rotterdam yesterday.

The attack was carried out from the "stratosphere level," the announcer said, according to NBC, adding: "It was a mere chance that hits were scored at all."

Suez Area Raided Again

Cairo, Sept. 5 (AP)—The Suez Canal area was raided again last night by planes which dropped high-explosive and incendiary bombs, killing two civilians and injuring three, a communique said today.

Air alarms were sounded over a great part of northern Egypt, including Cairo.

Cairo, Sept. 5 (A. P.).—British Middle East Headquarters said today that a heavy dust storm limited patrol activities in the Tobruk area, and that one enemy bombing raid resulted in no damage.

Italians Claim Air Victories

ROME, Sept. 5 (AP)—The Italians reported smashing Fascist air victories today as a result of two days of violent clashes over the Mediterranean and on the Russian front.

In the Mediterranean theater, 40 British planes were declared downed, 22 yesterday over Malta and between that island and Sicily and 18 Wednesday over Sidi Barrani, British North African base in Egypt. The high command said Italian losses totaled six planes.

On the Russian front, the Italians said their airmen wrought disaster among a column of Soviet motorized troops in the Ukraine.

Dispatches from the Ukraine said the whole Italian expeditionary force now is in the front lines, giving effective aid to the Germans.

JAPANESE ACT ON TRANSPORT

Tokio Places Industry on Wartime Footing.

SEP 6 1941

Tokio, Sept. 5 (A. P.).—The Japanese Cabinet today approved a traffic mobilization plan designed to place transportation and communications on a wartime footing, Domei, the Japanese news agency, announced.

The program calls for an expansion of existing facilities and is expected to result in further restrictions on their private use, Domei declared. Large-scale training of pilots and mechanics will be instituted, the agency said, to increase air transport facilities.

Also today Domei revived in a broadcast the suggestion of Dr. Kazuyoshi Suzuki, professor of international law at Meiji University, that Japanese territorial waters be extended to preclude American shipments to Russia via Vladivostok. Dr. Suzuki made the suggestion on August 30 in the newspaper Kokumin. He said that the seizure of ships violating territorial waters would be legal and that the extension of territorial waters under special conditions was a principle laid down by the United States in establishing a twelve-mile limit during prohibition days.

Japan already has made representations both to Moscow and Washington over the shipment of supplies via Vladivostok.

A Government spokesman, questioned on reports that Soviet freighters might go to Manila to pick up supplies and return to Vladivostok along the Asiatic Coast, said he could not say whether such a practice would make any difference in the Japanese attitude.

JAPANESE MUST RETURN TIN CANS

Tokio, Sept. 5 (A. P.).—The Ministry of Agriculture and Forestry has approved the proposal of the Nippon Canned Goods Manufacturing Association requiring all purchasers of canned goods to return the empty cans in the future to help conserve tin supplies, the newspaper Ashai reported today. A campaign is in progress for the collection of metals.

Tokyo, Sept. 5—The Tokyo Press, including early editions of Saturday's papers, had not mentioned up to tonight the arrival of the American oil tanker L. P. St. Clair at Vladivostok, announced in Washington yesterday.

The shipment of American oil through Far Eastern waters to Russia has been a cardinal point in Japan's complaint of "encirclement" by western nations.

Italy Tells Of Malta 'Victory'

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Sept. 5—An Italian air squadron scored an impressive victory in a great battle over Malta yesterday, shooting down 22 British fighter planes while losing only three, the Fascist high command said today.

(A British Malta command communique said a large formation of Italian Macchi 200 fighter planes approached the island yesterday and at least six, possibly nine, were destroyed without loss to the British.)

Admit Attack On Sicily

Many other fighter planes on both sides were damaged by machine-gun fire in a running air battle over Malta and the channel between it and Italy, the Italian communique said.

It reported a further Fascist air bombardment at night on Micabba air base on Malta and acknowledged that British bombers had attacked the Catania zone in Sicily and Crotone, on the south of the Italian mainland near the mouth of the Gulf of Taranto.

Two Bristol-Blenheim bombers were shot down by anti-aircraft fire at Crotone, it said.

Nazis Claim Sinkings.

Berlin, Sept. 5 (A. P.).—A ship listed as the 8,336-ton City of Oakland and a 3,000-ton vessel were today reported by DNB the German official news agency, to have been sunk by the German air force in a raid over the Gulf of Suez on Wednesday night.

DNB also reported today that the former 8,654-ton Danish motorship Malaya had sunk from an undisclosed cause with all hands lost while in British service.

May be City of Auckland.

Lloyd's register of shipping lists no City of Oakland, but the German authorities, when further questioned, reasserted that the name City of Oakland was correct for the ship they claimed to have sunk. Lloyd's lists a City of Auckland of 8,336 tons.

TURNCOAT RED SHOT DEAD IN PARIS TERROR

Ex-Communist Latest Victim Of Assassins. Civil Strife Feared

Many Arrested As French Police Open New Drive On Food Bootlegging

[By the Associated Press]

Vichy, Sept. 5—Marcel Gitton, a recanting Communist who quit the party after having been elected with Red support to the French Chamber of Deputies, died of an assassin's bullet in a Paris hospital today, the latest victim in a growing series of acts of terrorism which it was feared might approach civil strife.

His was the third fatality by stealthy violence since August 21, aside from six persons who have fallen wounded. His assailant was not identified, save that it was said he was known to have been a man of about 25.

Affair Strictly French

Provided the Germans hold to their previously announced policy, Gitton's murder will be a strictly French affair.

Gitton himself, who had been working in the suburban Lilas district Mayor's office, never regained consciousness after the attack.

In some quarters here it was being said tonight that he had joined the Communist party only as a means of getting elected to the Chamber and thus that this background might have furnished the motive for the shooting. He had refused to join other Communist deputies in signing a letter opposing the war.

Red Manifesto Shown

In this connection, Fernand de Brinon, Vichy's representative to Paris, some time ago showed to American correspondents what was described as a Communist manifesto declaring:

"For every Communist executed ten Germans must die."

During the day a military court at Dijon sentenced a young mechanic to death for alleged Communist activity.

At Meknes, a woman was sent to prison for three months for criticism of Marshal Petain and "statements of a nature to agitate the population."

Food Bootlegging Hit

In a new drive against the "black market" in both the occupied and unoccupied zones the police seized tons of foods and arrested many persons for trafficking illegally in rationed food and clothing.

Figures at the same time were made public showing the growing seriousness of the food shortage in the Paris region, where meat supplies for August fell to less than half those of July.

In the raids, 11,000 cans of ham and four tons of other ham were seized.

At Marseille 174 persons were arrested in connection with the counterfeiting and circulation of false bread tickets.

Former Paris Red Killed

[By the Associated Press]

Vichy, Sept. 5—Mounting terrorism which held the threat of civil strife in German-occupied Paris claimed a new victim today when Marcel Gitton, former Communist who had turned against his party, died in a hospital from an unidentified assassin's bullet.

Gitton's death was another in a series of shootings and attacks which both French and German authorities have been striving to stop since Pierre Laval and Marcel Deat were wounded at Versailles August 27.

It raised the toll since the first outbreak, August 21, to three dead and at least six more wounded by violence.

Gitton was a collaborator on the Communist daily L'Humanite and secretary general of the Metal Workers' Union before the war, when he was elected to the Chamber of Deputies from the Seine department.

Wasn't Unseated

He refused to join other Communist deputies in signing a letter opposing the war and was not unseated when the chamber voted to oust the signers.

The gun with which Gitton was felled was the same type of weapon as the one Paul Colette fired at Pierre Laval and Marcel Deat and the same as the one in the killing of Adolphe Rosenthal, well-known broker, in Paris last week.

All were French 6.35 revolvers, corresponding to .25 caliber firearms in the United States.

Gitton was nearing his home in outlying Lilas, returning from the Lilas borough hall, when the cyclist, who had been waiting at a curb, opened fire on the 41-year-old former Communist leader.

Got Threatening Letter

Police searched the wounded man's home and said they found he had received a threatening letter.

Gitton, who was born Marcel Giroux, recently had been working for the party of the collaborationist, Jacques Doriot, and police said the theory that he was shot by a Right extremist was inaccurate despite an early report to that effect.

The assassination followed swiftly the wounding of a German army sergeant in Paris. German police still are seeking his assailant.

Two Seized In Raid

Paris police, meanwhile, arrested two men described as militant Communists and seized a large quantity of Communist literature in a raid in the Plaisance quarter.

In the unoccupied zone military courts charged with the trial of Communists under a new law swung into action with a tribunal at Toulouse, taking over twenty-four cases from an Appellate Court.

In a Vichy suburb a young man was arrested on charges of making "anti-national statements" and assaulting a member of the new anti-Bolshevist Legion recruited to fight with the Germans in Russia.

Pierre Pucheu, Minister of Interior in the Vichy Government, denounced terrorist warfare between right and left-wing extremists and pledged himself to an all-out fight against Communism.

In an interview granted a Paris weekly paper, Pucheu outlined a three-plank Government program for a single party arrayed against the old regime and what he called Communistic elements.

"We must blow up the crust of the old regime which is choking and blocking the national revolution," he declared.

"I want to finish with Masonry, Jewish influences and terrorism of the Extreme Right and Left.

To Push Anti-Red Drive

"My struggle against Communism will be implacable."

He also asserted that "as soon as possible we must reconstitute the sentimental tie between Marshal Petain and the people, without which no lasting labor is possible."

"A valid single party drawing its strength from all classes of the nation will be necesasry to build the future," he added.

3 Parliament Chambers Planned

[By the Associated Press]

Vichy, Sept. 5—Marshal Petain has received proposals outlining the fundamentals of a new Constitution for France, providing for a democratic electorate at the bottom, checked by an aristocracy at the top.

The system as submitted to the chief of state by the National Council endeavors to use the best parts of both democratic and aristocratic rule.

Besides one lower house of Parliament, it proposes two upper chambers.

Manhood Suffrage In Cities

Universal manhood suffrage in municipalities would be the base of the pyramid of authority.

Voters would elect a municipal council to serve with a mayor, appointed by a departmental prefect who, in turn, would be appointed by the central government.

Next in order would come general councils in each Department, these elected by the municipal councils; then provincial councils in which half the membership would be named by provincial governors and the other half elected by members of the Veterans' Legion, syndicalist corporations, representatives of the most numerous families and local dignitaries who would have an ex officio right to vote.

National And High Councils

It would be these provincial councils which would compose lists of candidates for the National Council, or lowest House of Parliament. Actual election of the members would be by vote of municipal and general councilors.

Half of the suggested High Council, or second chamber of Parliament, would be named by the Chief of State, one fourth by ex-officio dignitaries such as high Government functionaries and one fourth by vote of the National Council.

Council Of Empire

The Council of Empire, whose method of selection has not yet been decided, would have advisory jurisdiction on all matters involving the empire as a whole.

FRENCH STAGE RAID ON BLACK MARKET

Suspects Rounded Up as Meat Shortage Grows.

Vichy, Sept. 5 (A. P.).—The police seized tons of food today and arrested an undisclosed number of suspects in a drive against the "Black Market" in both the unoccupied and occupied zones of France.

The action against illicit food dealing coincided with publication of figures indicating a meat shortage of increasing gravity in the Paris region.

How German-occupied Paris is being deprived of food was told in the August statistics on livestock, which showed that receipts fell to about half of those in July and to one-third of those before the war.

Here are the figures:

Vichy Hits U. S. Press Attitude On Envoy

[By the Associated Press]

Vichy, Sept. 5—The French announced today an official protest to Washington against what was described as a "lying campaign" in the United States press against Gaston Henry-Haye, Vichy's Ambassador to Washington, and members of his Embassy.

The official announcement, which cited the New York Herald Tribune particularly, said that the alleged campaign, "coming after the appeal recently addressed by Marshal Petain to the American press asking it to show more understanding in regard to France was felt with particular sadness in France."

"Violent Attacks"

The text of the announcement:

"For several days certain American newspapers have been carrying out violent attacks against our Embassy at Washington.

"The New York Herald-Tribune has been particularly prominent in this campaign directed against even M. Henry-Haye and certain numbers of his colleagues, accusing these later of activity directed against the interests of the United States.

"Coming after the appeal recently addressed by Marshal Petain to the American press asking them to show more understanding to France, these attacks have been felt with particular sadness in France.

"The French Government has protested to the American Government against this lying campaign against the French Embassy at Washington."

No Protest Yet Received.

Washington, Sept. 5 (A. P.).—State Department officials said today that no protest yet had been received from the Viehy Government against the publication in American newspapers of stories to which vigorous objection has been made by Gaston Henry-Haye, the French Ambassador.

The Ambassador, it was added, has no appointment scheduled with Secretary Hull today.

School Curb on Dutch Jews

Nazi Decree Forbids Them to Attend Classes Taught by Gentiles

BERLIN, Sept. 5 (AP).—Jewish residents of the Netherlands are forbidden to attend schools taught by gentiles under a decree issued today by German Commissioner Arthur Seysz-Inquart. The decree also forbade instruction by Jewish teachers of any pupils except Jews. The only exceptions to the sweeping rules were made in the case of universities and other institutions of higher learning.

Observers recalled in connection with the decree that the recent dismissal of a Jewish professor at Dutch University had been the cause of stubborn student strikes and demonstrations.

The newspaper "Deutsche Zeitung in Niederlanden," which published the decree, said the ruling would make necessary the erection of separate Jewish school facilities, and predicted that steps would be taken soon to fill the needs of now schoolless Jewish pupils.

DECORATED AS HEROES

English Farmer and Wife Saved Flyers in Crackup.

London, Sept. 5 (A. P.).—Harry Broadberry and his wife, Amelia, were awarded the British Empire medal today for their rescue of three British flyers from a crashed plane.

The aircraft fell on the Broadberry farm one night recently and they dragged two flyers clear of the flaming wreckage only to discover the rear gunner trapped in the turret. Broadberry got an ax and worked for an hour and a half in intense heat and, despite the explosion of gasoline tanks and ammunition, freed the gunner. His wife administered first aid to the flyers.

"The Broadberrys showed complete disregard for their own safety," an official announcement said. "As a result of their courage and endurance three lives were saved."

The George medal for heroism was awarded to Policeman Ronald Noble for his rescue work, at the height of an air raid, of two women from a bomb-wrecked building.

Even Sons Born In Latin America Must Pay, Probers Reveal

[By the Associated Press]

Buenos Aires, Sept. 5—The Congressional committee investigating subversive activities reported today to the House of Deputies that not only Germans but Argentine-born sons of Germans were taxed as much as a third of their pay checks to maintain a Nazi political organization in the country.

The report said this money was turned over to the German Embassy which in turn paid the expenses for activities outside its proper diplomatic field.

One of these activities was given as the financing of the pro-Nazi Buenos Aires newspaper, El Pampero, and another as the distribution of Nazi propaganda in other South American nations.

A previous report said there were 60,000 persons in Argentina pledged to support Adolf Hitler "to the death."

1,200 Refugees at Cuba In Ship Built to Carry 15

4 Died on 'Awful Trip' of 17 Days From Lisbon

HAVANA, Sept. 5 (AP).—A refugee-laden old Spanish ship, described as "the saddest vessel ever to reach Havana," steamed into port tonight with 1,200 homeless Europeans jammed into her cargo holds, decks and lifeboats.

It was the end of a seventeen-day voyage for the refugees aboard the 5,743-ton merchant ship Navemar, built with accommodations for only fifteen passengers. Some three hundred will land here; the remainder will go on to New York.

The drawn-faced passengers, who boarded the vessel at Lisbon, Portugal, lined the decks as the ship came in. For virtually all of them it was a first view of the New World in which they hope to start life over again.

Launches circled the ship and from aboard her came the same story in German, French and Spanish: "It was an awful trip." Four passengers died on the high seas. There were seven expectant mothers aboard.

Britain Runs Nazi War Film, Hopes It Gives Public A Shock

Government, To Jolt People Out Of Complacency, Is Showing Movie Of East Front Scenes

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 5—A motion-picture film which the British say was captured from the Germans, and purporting to show the German offensive against Russia, is being distributed in Britain and the Government hopes it will give the public a shock.

Called "War in the East," the film is shown as a record of the Nazis' most thoroughly total war to date.

The Ministry of Information has decided that the public ought to see the picture to be jerked out of a complacency which has been worrying British leaders.

[In Berlin it was said the only film on the war on the Eastern front was one entitled "Dorf in Roten Sturm"—"Village in a Red Storm."]

The film, described here as a sequel to the German documentary film "Victory in the West," shows monstrous tanks advancing through the ruins of Russia, laid waste by the Soviet scorched-earth policy. Death is shown in all its forms. Earsplitting screams of dive-bombers punctuate the scenes."

Reich Seizes Property Of Christian Scientists

9 Berlin Churches and Affiliated Societies Expropriated

BERLIN, Sept. 5 (AP).—Confiscation of property of nine Christian Science churches in Berlin was announced in the official gazette today.

Property of the Christian Science publication office for Germany, the German Society for Christian Scientists and the Union of Trustees of the Christian Science Mother Church also was seized. It was taken over by the secret police on the basis of 1933 laws for "confiscation of communistic property" and "seizure of property hostile to the nation and state," the gazette said.

Christian Science was banned in Germany July 31 for "protection of the public and state." Christian Science reading rooms had been closed two months previously.

The confiscation covers all property, including bank deposits, postal accounts, credits, mortgages, real estate, all equipment and material in offices and reading rooms and church securities.

GERMANY GAINS BUSINESS POWER IN ARGENTINA

Buenos Aires, Sept. 5. (AP)—Through military conquests in Europe Germany has gained control of approximately $455,000,000 worth of business and industry in Argentina, a congressional committee investigating anti-Argentine activities said today in a report for the House of Deputies.

Germany gained this economic power through seizure in occupied territories of firms having branches in the country, the report said.

According to an advance summary, the committee charged that the German Chamber of Commerce and like German business groups in Argentina were in reality "one more tool in the Nazi political organization."

It asserted these organizations collected money in the German colonies here and distributed it for Nazi purposes through the German embassy, which so far this year has raised by six times its normal expenditures.

The cost of operating the German embassy is 10 times more than the United States spent in the same period to maintain its embassy, informed sources said.

The investigating committee reported that at some later date it would ask the House to halt the German embassy's alleged "political activities."

The police today seized the original copies of articles published in the pro-Nazi newspaper El Pampero ridiculing the congressional investigation of anti-Argentine activities. The raid was made on order of Federal Judge Miguel Jantus, before whom the paper has been charged with contempt of congressional authority. Police met no resistance in seizing the newspaper's files.

One of the articles taken to Judge Jantus bore the headline "argentine branch of the Dies Committee reports on its failure." This was comment on the report of a Chamber of Deputies Committee alleging that a vast Nazi organization is operated here.

NAZIS TAX ALL ARGENTINES OF GERMAN BLOOD

Fifth Columnist Probe Is Demanded In Mexico

Mexico City, Sept. 5 (AP)—A series of strikes and disorders today, capped by a riot in which hundreds of university students defied the police, brought an announcement tonight by Congressmen that they intended to ask the Government for more energetic action against fifth columnists.

Deputy Cesar Garizurieta charged the strikes and disorders were the "first symptoms" of a campaign designed to create trouble for the Government at a time when the Mexico-United States good-neighbor policy is ripening into fruitful cooperation.

Today the students demanded that the date of their vacations be advanced and began shooting firecrackers and interfering with traffic in front of the Academy of Medicine.

Police Disperse Students

Police dispersed the students, but the latter then went to the Academy of Laws, where they barricaded themselves on the roof and threw stench bombs, rotten eggs and other missiles into the streets.

Six companies of police were called out and used tear-gas bombs before order was restored. No serious injuries were reported.

There were a number of injuries in rioting yesterday when striking railwaymen penetrated into the offices of the National Railways and destroyed furniture and records. Seven leaders were arrested on charges of brandishing pistols.

The railwaymen have returned to work but announced a nation-wide general strike effective September 12 unless their demands that they be allowed to work during their vacation periods at double pay are granted.

Wants Americans to Enlist in Nonmilitary Unit for Repair Work

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5 (AP)—Great Britain, it was disclosed tonight, is about to undertake with the help of the United States government a campaign to employ thousands of American technicians for service in England repairing vital equipment used by the British armed forces.

FSA Will Assist

Paul V. McNutt, Federal security administrator, announced the prospective campaign and said the 1500 Federal-state employment offices would assist in it.

The British Civilian Technical Corps hopes, he said, to employ several thousand men between 18 and 50 years of age who are skilled as radio and automobile mechanics, electrical wiremen, instrument repairers, metal workers, and in other technical occupations.

"Recruitment of American workers for service with this noncombatant defense group in England is an important step in the Administration's program for increasing U. S.-British co-operation," McNutt declared. "The Civilian Technical Corps is a nonmilitary group of skilled craftsmen organized to maintain and repair radio location apparatus, communication systems and other vital technical equipment used by the naval, military and air forces."

Arrangements with the British government, he said, provide for the return to this country of American members of the Civilian Technical Corps at any time they are needed.

Selective service headquarters was reported to have authorized local draft boards to grant deferments to men joining the British C. T. C. McNutt emphasized, however, that the employment services would not accept applications from men who were urgently needed in key defense jobs in American industries.

Prince Konoye sent a personal message to the President which, although the text has not been made public, was understood to have requested sympathetic restudy of problems facing both nations.

WILL RUSH USE OF RAIL CARS TO CARRY OIL

Eastern Gasoline Curtailment Will Continue for the Present, at Least

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5 (AP)—The Defense Petroleum Office drafted a railroad traffic expert today to help get more fuel to the East's gasoline drouth area.

Russell Appointed

Appointment of Ralph Park Russell, superintendent of car service for the Pennsylvania Railroad, as chief of the rail transportation section of the Petroleum Co-ordinator's Office was announced by acting co-ordinator Ralph K. Davies.

The announcement followed last night's agreement by the oil industry to use every available railroad tank car and a supplementing agreement by the railroads to a sharp reduction in rates for moving oil from producing fields to the East.

In railroad circles it was estimated that at least a week would elapse before extensive shipments by tank cars could get under way because of the necessity for legal arrangements on the new rates. The Interstate Commerce Commission, for its part, agreed to give approval of the new rates within a day after the petition was filed instead of the customary 30-day period.

While the Defense Petroleum Co-ordinator's Office moved swiftly to take advantage of the offer to move large quantities of oil by rail it indicated no immediate disposition to lift the Eastern gasoline curtailment program in anticipation that the railroads alone might solve the problem.

Only absolute assurance that reserves in storage and incoming supplies were fully sufficient for defense, industry and civilian needs could justify abandonment of the restrictions on use of gasoline, a spokesman said.

Testifying before a Senate committee investigating the oil situation, Leon Henderson, chief of price administration, advocated construction of pipe lines to carry petroleum products to the East.

Asserting that if the United States ever should be attacked pipe lines would be "hole cards" to offset ship tanker losses, Henderson commented:

"You can't sink a pipe line."

Overall Cut for Month 10 Per Cent

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5 (AP)—The Office of Petroleum Co-ordination said today that the Eastern overall cut of 10 per cent in gasoline consumption during September would mean that many filling stations without customers in the essential motor vehicle use classification would have their supplies cut by 15 per cent.

In announcing the September rationing program the office said the curtailment for this month would force non-essential consumers to get along with 15 per cent less gasoline.

On that basis, it was explained, the stations serving only private motorists would get only 85 per cent of the supplies of gasoline they handled during July, the month on which the rationing reductions were based.

An order of the Price Administration Office reducing over all consumption by 10 per cent exempted from the supply restrictions all vehicles essential to commerce, business, health and safety.

BOARD ENLISTS SMALL PLANTS FOR ARMS JOB

Odlum Heads Agency to See Little Business Gets Defense Work.

WILL BREAK DOWN BIG ORDERS

Baruch Repeats His Demand for Single Head for Production of American Weapons.

Washington, Sept. 5 (A. P.).—A new Federal agency set out today to enlist even the smallest industrial plants in the national armament manufacturing drive, but one of President Roosevelt's principal advisers repeated his conviction that a single administrator is urgently needed for the whole defense production program.

Bernard M. Baruch, who conquered a similar military production problem 24 years ago, called not only for a single defense chief but for a blanket ceiling on prices.

Last night, a few hours after Mr. Baruch's blunt criticism, the President announced the creation of a division of contract distribution in the Office of Production Management, to be headed by Floyd B. Odlum, New York financier.

A White House statement said that the new agency was formed to further "a determined move on the part of the administration to help the smaller business units of the country obtain a fair share of the defense orders, and to prevent, so far as possible, dislocation of industry and unemployment of workers in plants where production has been curtailed by priorities and material shortages."

SEP 6 1941

Holds Speed Is Needed.

Mr. Baruch had no immediate comment on this development. But he was no more than out of the White House door after lunching with the President yesterday when he told reporters what he thought should be done to speed vital production.

Mr. Baruch saw the new seven-member Supply Priorities and Allocations Board, headed by Vice-President Wallace, as only a "faltering step forward." He expressed the hope it would work, but he asserted:

"The one thing this picture needs is one-man authority."

Back in world war days, when he headed the War Industries Board, Mr. Baruch had—and used—the fullest power in throwing the nation's entire productive capacity behind the military effort. So successful was he in marshaling industry that Germany's beaten Marshal von Hindenburg admitted "the war was won in the American industrial centers. They understood war." He spoke of the ruthless efficiency with which the War Industries Board operated.

The President's friend and counselor made it very clear that he didn't like the administration's pending price control bill. He said he would go before the House Banking Committee next week to "kick the everlasting life" out of it.

Urges Universal Ceiling.

"I believe a universal ceiling should have been put over all prices as soon as they began talking about priorities," Mr. Baruch said.

The new contract distribution office will have branches in various States and become one of the most important divisions of OPM, the White House stated.

Its principal duties, as outlined in the official statement, are:

"1. The breaking down of large orders of supplies into smaller units, and spreading the purchases among more firms and in all localities possible.

"2. Providing assistance through the labor division of OPM in retraining and obtaining re-employment for workers who are unemployed as a result of the shutting down of some plants or reduction of their output.

SEP 6 1941

To Distribute Contracts.

"3. The effective distribution of defense contracts to the smaller business enterprises, as yet largely unused, through an expanded use of sub-contracting, contract distribution, and the pooling of plant facilities.

"4. By providing a staff of industrial and production engineers to formulate and execute specific plans for the conversion of non-defense industries and plants to defense production."

Among other services, the division plans to establish display rooms in various cities, where parts of needed weapons will be available for inspection by prospective sub-contractors. In addition, the new bureau will assist manufacturers in securing financing facilities, through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation or regular banks.

Atlas Corporation Head Quits Desk For OPM Job

New York, Sept. 5 (AP)—Floyd B. Odlum, president of the $57,000,000 Atlas Corporation, today locked his desk and prepared to devote his energies to his $1-a-year post as head of the new division of contract distribution in the Office of Production Management, Washington.

Odlum, appointed to the job twenty-four hours ago by President Roosevelt—a job which gives him equal ranking with heads of other OPM divisions—tackles the task of spreading defense orders to industries, smaller concerns as well as big, which may have available tools for defense work.

His also will be the job of seeing that peacetime plants, which reduce production to free materials for defense, get defense work to replace lost peacetime output.

Accorded Temporary Leave

Commenting on his appointment, Odlum said in a statement:

"The President's request that I organize this division and get its work moving forward left me with no choice as a matter of public duty. The directors of Atlas Corporation agreed that I must take on this responsibility and have accorded me temporary leave to do so.

"The statement from the White House concerning the new division of contract distribution in the OPM seems both clear and complete. In a nutshell its work will be to accelerate defense production to the maximum through spreading contracts more widely among the smaller business throughout the nation.

To Utilize Idle Labor

"This will also help directly in utilizing idle labor and idle plant facilities. It will stimulate conversion of certain facilities to defense purposes that might otherwise become idle due to shortage of certain raw materials for less essential civilian use.

"Higher cost producers have their place in the present all-out defense effort, just as the large factory uses its less efficient machines, or a public utility system pulls on its old or standby equipment to tide over peak loads. The increased unit cost for a period is small compared with the alternate costs, delays and net results.

"There are sure to be dislocations in some industries catering to less essential civilian uses because of shortages of raw materials and their allocations and priorities.

Looks To Industrial Experts

"Such disruptions for both employes and investors should be minimized by speedy conversion of such plants to defense production."

The division, Odlum declared, plans to use the expert abilities of industrial and plant management engineers.

L. Boyd Hatch, Atlas executive vice-president, will head Atlas in Odlum's absence.

SEES DEFENSE WORK SPEEDING

G. E. Head Predicts Constant Acceleration

NEW YORK, Sept. 5 (AP)—Charles E. Wilson, president of General Electric Co., said today that "defense products certainly are rolling now" from American factories and predicted constantly speeded up production for the future.

G. E. Employs 120,000

At a press conference after a meeting of the company's directors, Wilson disclosed that the big manufacturing concern, employing 120,000 persons, was devoting about 60 per cent of its output to defense products and that production was at the highest levels in history.

He said orders in the third quarter of this year would run higher than the $264,000,000 received in the second quarter and that the output for the first nine months of 1941 would run 60 to 65 per cent ahead of the like 1940 period when $287,000,000 worth of business was handled.

"Next year," said Wilson, "we expect to increase our operations at a similarly accelerating rate."

He said he did not speak for the defense industries as a whole but indicated he believed similarly great production advances were being made by other companies.

The directors voted a dividend of 35 cents a share, the same as declared twice previously this year. Wilson said he thought that, despite the great increase of production, earnings would remain about the same in the last half of 1941 as in the first half.

ALASKAN PLANS FOR ARMY, NAVY UNDER CRITICISM

SEP 6 1941

Sent Refrigerators In Freezing Weather, and Guns Minus Sights

Washington, Sept. 5. (AP)—Senator Brewster (R-Me), just returned from a Pacific defenses inspection flight, criticized today the military program in Alaska, including what he said was an Army proposal, since abandoned, to shelter Alaskan troops in tents.

Brewster said he called the attention of War Department officials to a requirement of law that "adequate housing" be provided for troops above the Mason-Dixon Line, and suggested that "tents in an Alaskan winter would not answer that description."

He has since been assured, he added, that adequate barracks would be constructed.

Brewster, a member of a special Senate Committee investigating the defense program, made a 14,000 mile tour of Pacific coast and Alaskan defense developments in Army and Navy planes.

He praised the efforts of Major General Simon Bolivar Buchner commander of Alaskan defense forces, to coordinate the military program in the territory, but said in an interview that officers in Alaska should be given more independent authority to overcome delays. Brewster said that it took two months for Washington officials to clear recommendations of officers on duty in Alaska.

3024-11631

Brewster said troops from the Oregon, Washington, Minnesota, and Alabama National Guard were on duty in Alaska in addition to Marines and Regular Army units. He declined to disclose the number of men now at Alaskan stations but said there was "a very substantial number."

Brewster said he would report to Senator Truman (D-Mo), chairman of the investigating committee, and also to Senator Walsh (D-Mass), chairman of the naval affairs committee.

He criticized the method of handling shipments of supplies from Seattle to Alaskan Army and Navy posts. The first shipment reaching one post, he said, was 360 refrigerators, "and the ground is frozen 100 feet deep." The refrigerators arrived even before they had a barracks constructed, he said.

"Then some guns arrived," he added, "with no sights."

Brewster said the Army, charged with defending the new Navy bases along the outlying regions of Alaska, "still is waiting for the sights.

WAR CONFERENCE FOR LABOR ASKED

Carey Wants U.S. Unions to Meet With British.

Camden, N. J., Sept. 5 (A. P.).—In an international broadcast, James B. Carey, general secretary of the C. I. O., called today for an immediate conference of labor representatives in this country and England "to forge the mightiest weapon against Hitlerism."

"We must arm our common purpose with common plans of action," said the 29-year-old retiring president of the United Radio, Electrical and Machine Workers of America.

"The conference should be the first step to further collaboration. It should unite not only these two labor movements, but every labor movement opposed to Hitler and seeking a permanent democratic victory."

The broadcast was arranged as part of the annual convention of the union. On the same program was Jack Tanner, president of the Amalgamated Engineering Union of Great Britain, speaking from England.

Mr. Carey, who was defeated earlier in the week for re-election as president, added:

"It is important for us to know what the British labor movement is doing. We believe the British labor movement holds before it the hopes of the common man for a just world in the post war era."

Bernt Balchen Named Army Air Specialist

Well-Known Flyer Made Captain; Experience Over Ice And Snow Emphasized

Washington, Sept. 5 (AP)—Bernt Balchen, well-known flyer, has been appointed a captain in the specialist reserve of the army air forces, the War Department announced today, and has been assigned to duty in the air war plans division.

The department emphasized that Balchen had had considerable experience in flying over ice and snow, and indicated that he would advise on air operations in the cold regions. The army has air forces now in Alaska and Iceland.

Balchen, a Norwegian who became an American citizen in 1931, was one of the pilots on flights of Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, the explorer, across the Atlantic in 1927 and over the Antarctic region in 1928 and 1930.

American Drug Firms Now Can Enter Latin-American Market

Biddle Is Granted Consent Decrees In U. S. Court In New York

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 5—Federal Government today obtained consent decrees invalidating contracts between certain big American drug companies and the so-called German dye trust—contracts which allegedly had restricted American participation in the Latin-American drug market to the advantage of the German firm.

The orders, granted by Federal Judge Samuel Mandelbaum at the request of Francis Biddle, Attorney General, declared contracts with I. G. Farbenindustrie, commonly known as the German dye trust, were illegal and void.

The decrees, also restraining the companies from anti-trust law violations particularly in respect to restriction of markets in South America, were directed against the Alba Pharmaceutical Company, Inc., the Bayer Company, Inc., Winthrop Chemical Company, Sterling Products, Inc., and two Sterling company executives, President Albert H. Diebold and William Weiss, board chairman.

Companies Fined $5,000

Federal Judge John Bright fined each corporation and Weiss $5,000, and Diebold $1,000.

Biddle said in a statement that the effect of the order would make products of the American companies available to Latin-American republics whose sources of drug supply had been interrupted by the war and that there would also be increased participation by the American firms in research and export trade.

The complaints, Biddle said, alleged that Winthrop and Bayer companies, subsidiaries of Sterling, had between 1920 and 1926 entered into long term contracts with I. G. Farbenindustrie and its predecessor, Friedrich Bayer of Germany, whereby the Bayer export business outside of the United States was "subject to an illegal profit-sharing arrangement between I. G. Farbenindustrie and Bayer."

To Broaden Research

Biddle said the Bayer and Winthrop companies had agreed to broaden their export business and enlarge their research facilities for original study into products for which this country formerly relied on German research.

Biddle said the Sterling products always had been wholly American-owned and that none of the profits from the sale of Bayer aspirin in the United States had been shared with any foreign interests.

He said also that there was no foreign interest in the "numerous other subsidiaries" of Sterling in the proprietary medicine field.

The two decrees, based on civil action charging anti-trust-law violation by restricting markets, particularly in Latin-American countries, were filed with Federal District Judge Samuel Mandelbaum in New York.

Drug Firms Named

The actions named Sterling Products, Inc.; Alba Pharmaceutical Company, Inc.; the Bayer Company, Inc., and Winthrop Chemical Company, and Albert H. Diebold and William Weiss, president and chairman, respectively, of Sterling.

"The American Government's recent policy of economic pressure against Axis powers," Biddle said, "affects private contractual obligations, entered into long before the war, with contracting parties who are now Axis nationals.

"Constructive Solution"

"That contract has created difficult legal situations for American firms engaged in foreign trade and subject to the courts of foreign countries. The arrangement made in this case constitutes a constructive solution of this type of difficulty."

The information on which the complaints were based was developed during a general investigation of the drug industry by the Justice Department's anti-trust division which charged that, between 1920 and 1926, Winthrop Chemical and Bayer, a Sterling subsidiary, entered into long-term contracts with I. G. Farbenindustrie, known as the German dye trust, and its predecessor, Friedrich Bayer, of Germany, whereby Bayer's export business outside of the United States "was subject to an illegal profit-sharing arrangement between I. G. Farbenindustrie and Bayer."

Hull Hints Free French Get Lend-Lease Benefits

Replying to Query, He Explains British Supply De Gaullists

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5 (AP).—Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, indicated today that the United States, at least indirectly, was aiding the Free French cause through lend-lease shipments to the British.

President Roosevelt, when asked at his press conference today whether direct aid was being extended the Free French, referred the question to the State Department.

To the same inquiry Secretary Hull later replied that the United States had the most friendly relations in every way with the Free French government, and that he understood Free French forces were being supplied primarily by the British.

Mr. Hull added that he assumed this systematic aid would continue.

The British government has been the chief beneficiary of the $7,000,000,000 lend-lease program to aid those nations opposing aggression.

In San Diego Wednesday Commander George Cabanier said he had been appointed by General Charles De Gaulle, leader of the Free French, to organize defenses of islands in the Tahiti, New Hebrides and New Caledonia groups. Cabanier said that he would receive American lease-lend equipment through Britain.

The lease-lend law provides that when equipment is sent to any foreign country that country must agree not to re-transfer it, unless President Roosevelt consents.

Convinced Germany Will Win, Free French Warship Deserters Say

SEP 6 1941

San Diego, Cal., Sept. 5 (AP)—Six sailors officially listed as deserters from the Free French destroyer Le Triomphant in port here were apprehended today and returned to the warship.

Dan S. Kuykendal, chief of the Immigration Service here, said at least ten of the crew deserted.

Two members of the crew, Immigration Officer Walter Bliss said, told him they deserted because "they were disgusted with the Free French effort; were convinced Germany would win the war and wanted to get back to France to participate in the new order."

Acquires First Foreign Ship Under New Order

Maritime Commission Takes Over Danish Freighter African Reefer At New York

Washington, Sept. 5 (AP)—The Maritime Commission today took over its first vessel under an executive order authorizing the acquisition of foreign ships becoming idle in American ports after June 6.

The vessel is the Danish freighter African Reefer, 1,771 gross tons, which arrived in New York harbor August 23. Previous to its arrival in New York the ship had been at Madeira for more than a year. The commission has taken over some sixty ships under an earlier executive order covering acquisition of vessels idle in American ports of June 6.

The commission also announced it had formally taken over the Italian freighters Vettrin and San Guiseppe, both at Norfolk, and that they would be assigned to defense purposes as soon as sabotage damage had been repaired.

Children Of Britain 'Can Take It,' Former Senator Allen Says'

New York, Sept. 5 (AP)—Former United States Senator Henry J. Allen, of Wichita, Kan., returning today by clipper from England, asserted that all Britain's bombed children needed to forget their experience was "sunshine, attention and food."

Allen made a six weeks' study of the children's situation in England and Scotland as national chairman of the Save the Children Federation's British child aid program, which is establishing residential nurseries in England and Scotland.

Asserting the children "can take it better than the adults," Allen said that the first few days after a bombing the youngsters drew pictures of airplanes and bombs and then returned to drawing pictures of cows and countrysides.

...shal Jan C. Smuts a collection of the best species of seeds propagated there as a personal gift to President Roosevelt and the American nation.

Thoroughly Tested

Among these seeds, Blauvelt said, it was believed there may be some which could aid in the solution of the dust-bowl problem. One grass, called "Smutsonian star grass," thoroughly tested in South Africa under conditions similar to those in the dust-bowl area, has spread, through its runners, a distance of fifty-three feet within three months after planting, with upright stalks of three feet.

Blauvelt said that a teaspoon of this seed would plant eleven acres, since it replants itself by both runners and seed, is fast growing and effective against soil erosion, and particularly effective for planting and holding hill sides, road cuts and ditch banks.

Soviet Mission Spends Week End In Northwest

Forty-Seven Members Of Group To Fly To Spokane On Monday

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 5 (AP)—A Russian military mission, which arrived from Moscow yesterday, will rest here over the week end.

Monday the forty-seven will fly to Spokane in two chartered commercial planes, leaving behind the flying boats in which they made the 8,000-mile trip from the Soviet capital.

The party, led by Brig. Gen. Mikhail Gromov, transpolar flyer, ate breakfast and left in small groups to look about town. General Gromov and Capt. Anthony Fedotov, of the Russian Embassy at Washington, who joined the expedition at Nome, also left the hotel.

With their leaders and members of the party remaining non-communicative, no confirmation was possible of reports that the airmen might learn to operate American military planes to open a polar ferry route to Russia.

Seattle, Sept. 5 (AP)—A new armed and armored giant of the air took wing today.

Less than two and a half hours after it rolled from the factory, the new Boeing four-motored B-17E bomber took off with a minimum three-man crew for its first test flight.

While company officials explained that they could not disclose the big warplane's equipment, it bristled with guns and appeared a formidable aerial weapon, designed for high-altitude bombing raids. The company described the craft as "a new and highly advanced version of the familiar Boeing Flying-Fortress type, which is now in service with the United States Air Corps and the Royal Air Force."

LaGuardia, Mrs. Roosevelt And McNutt Join In Broadcast Appeal

They Ask Every Community To Set Up Council During Emergency

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 5—A plea to every community to set up a local defense council in expansion of the nation's defense program was issued tonight by Mayor F. H. LaGuardia of New York city, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Paul V. McNutt.

The Mayor, director of the Office of Civilian Defense, said on the program broadcast over a nation-wide network that it would be "a job with no pay, but a job you can't evade or neglect if this country is to survive this emergency."

Job Of Volunteers

"It's the job of helping protect your community in avoiding any menace to health or life or security that may arise," he said.

"That job is the job of volunteers recruited through the communities' civilian defense volunteer office."

The President's wife asked LaGuardia questions concerning the various tasks which could be handled by persons in their own communities.

Mrs. Roosevelt and Mayor LaGuardia spoke here and McNutt, director of Defense Health and Welfare Service, from Washington. He outlined the part in the program played by health and nutrition studies and by various educational projects.

Second Woman Is Arrested In Spy Roundup

SEP 6 1941

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 5—Federal agents today announced the arrest of Mrs. Helen Pauline Mayer, 25, on espionage charges, the second woman accused of being involved in a spy ring allegedly operated by Kurt Frederick Ludwig, who was arrested recently in the State of Washington.

The other woman, Lucy Boehmler, 18, and two men accomplices, have pleaded guilty.

Attended Bund Classes

Mrs. Mayer lived with her parents in suburban Ridgewood, Queens, and worked as a secretary. A native of Brooklyn, she was graduated from a New York city high school and attended business school. She also had attended German script classes conducted by the German-American Bund in Ridgewood.

Mrs. Mayer was held in $10,000 bail for hearing Tuesday when arraigned in Federal court.

Member Of Branch

Federal agents said she was a member of the New York Turnverein, Yorkville branch. (Many Germans and German-Americans live in the Yorkville area on the upper east side of Manhattan.)

Her father, Carl Romahn, they said, was born in Germany and is a naturalized United States citizen, while her mother, Bertha, is a native of Brooklyn.

Named Ringleader

Ludwig, born in Ohio of German parents, was named in an indictment returned Wednesday as the ringleader in the United States of a German-sponsored espionage ring which learned and divulged movements and disposition of American troops and which was charged with smuggling abroad pictures and sketches of strategic Eastern seaboard points.

Ludwig, described in the indictment as a paid German agent who conspired to obtain American national defense secrets and information on the shipment of airplanes and other war supplies to Great Britain, is being held in Washington pending removal to New York.

Father Loses Job

Because his pretty 18-year-old daughter, Lucy, was arrested in the alleged spy plot, Karl Boehmler has lost the $35-a-week job he held in a laundry for 12 years.

When Boehmler arrived at the laundry where he had never missed a day at work, William C. Eisenhardt, vice-president, told him he was discharged.

"Strictly American"

"Boehmler is no longer in our employ because we do not want anyone in our plant who is associated with a person connected with spying activities," Eisenhardt told reporters.

"We are strictly an American plan and will not countenance such things."

Ludwig Reported Confessing

SPOKANE, Wash., Sept. 5 (AP)—United States Attorney Lyle D. Keith said today that Kurt Frederick Ludwig, charged with violation of the espionage laws and with conspiracy to violate the law, had admitted mailing to Europe vital information concerning the United States Army, airplane production and ship movements. The thirty-eight-year-old German-American was ordered by Federal Judge Lewis Schwellenbach to be returned to New York to stand trial. His bond was continued at $50,000.

"He has admitted using the mails to transfer information concerning Mitchel Field, certain airplane factories, certain troop movements, the armaments on certain vessels and their apparent points of destination," Mr. Keith said. He admitted getting money for it in amounts ranging from a few hundred dollars to as much as $2,000.

In court today Judge Schwellenbach said: "I suggest, Mr. Ludwig, that you note the care with which the rights of an individual are observed in a court of the United States. You might make a comparison of your treatment here and the treatment a person in a similar circumstance would receive in Europe, especially in Germany."

ratory six chained police dogs stood watch.

The man, 69-year-old Philip L. E. del Fungo Giera, was held in $4,000 bail on a Federal complaint accusing him of obtaining $10,000 from an unidentified New Yorker while impersonating a United States Army reserve officer.

Deputy Marshal Anthony Pavoni, who aided other Federal agents and State police in arresting the man at his Wurtsboro (N. Y.) estate, said he passed an electric eye about a mile from Giera's home and immediately heard bells clanging in the distance.

When he approached the yard, he said, he saw the police dogs chained near the experimental laboratory.

Agents said Giera had claimed to have developed a mysterious "nerve gas" and a high explosive.

Raymond Ickes, Assistant United States Attorney, told Isaac Platt, United States Commissioner, that Giera had represented some twenty-one countries in espionage activities. Giera posted bond later in the day and was released.

MacKenzie's Views On War Today

SEP 6 1941

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

Confucius in his boundless wisdom doubtless would advise us to take it easy in reaching conclusions about the mystery of the submarine attack on the United States destroyer Greer.

If for the sake of argument we adopt the British idea that it was a German U-boat which fired the torpedoes, then the question immediately arises whether the action wasn't the result of a mistake.

There has been no indication that Herr Hitler wants to see America in the European war, although he might be praying that we become involved in the Orient. In fact, all the signs have been that he hopes we won't intervene in the western theatre.

The point isn't that the Fuehrer loves us the more but that he likes the idea of the United States Navy getting into action at this critical juncture the less. His reason is that he likely will undertake major operations in the Mediterranean in the near future; he presumably will intensify his U-boat campaign in the battle of the Atlantic; and he doesn't want American warships supporting the British when the Allies invade the continent.

In short, the Nazi chief has plenty of trouble on his hands already—and so much for that. The British invasion, by the way, probably won't be tried before spring, unless unexpected developments in the Russo-Nazi war make it advisable for Britain to strike sooner. Meantime the bloodletting which the Nazis are undergoing in Russia is paving the way for the Allied assault across the English Channel.

Sanguinary fighting continues throughout the entire length of the great battle-line in Russia, but there seems to have been little change in position during the past 24 hours. The authoritative German commentary Dienst Aus Deutschland says the Reds apparently are carrying out extensive attacks on the central front, but belittles their effectiveness.

Dienst misses the point. The significant fact is that the Bolshevists are able to inaugurate big-scale attacks at all, after standing off such a violent assault. It is indicative of reserve power and good morale.

It is interesting to see the Germans again resorting to what the Muscovites describe as the "psychological attack" a sort of stage-play which is calculated to confound the enemy. In the case in hand the Reds report that two companies of picked Nazi troops advanced in close formation, "preceded by a band as on parade, kettle drums rolling and bass drums thundering." Moscow says the attackers were annihilated.

The "psychological attack" cropped up more than once in the World War and I was on the grounds on one occasion when it met with notable success. During their second offensive in the spring of 1918 in France, the Germans launched a surprise attack against the British front just north of Armentiers. The sector selected was held by a division of Portuguese, and the Jerries picked it because they thought it might be vulnerable.

The Germans advanced in close formation over the crest of a hill. They were goose-stepping and, mirable dictu, actually were preceded by the famous one-armed commander, General Karl Hoefer. The old boy, who was known as a great sportsman, wore a full dress uniform and carried a yellow can which he waved as he led his troops, while his empty sleeve flapped madly in the breeze.

It's perhaps small wonder that the Portuguese line gave way in the face of such a fantatic demonstration, especially since the show was backed by a great force of fighting men. The Germans broke through, and the British averted disaster by the skin of their death.

There were other notable instances, and the Germans weren't the only ones to work these phychological tricks. There was, for instance, the famous Scots piper who regularly climbed up on the parapet of the trench at the zero hour and piped his kilted devils over the top.

The Germans were afraid of these "ladies from hell" at the best, and the skril of the bagpipe, which screamed and wailed and gurgled like a lost soul, was much to much. The proud piper was a great success and undoubtedly contributed much to the victories of his contingent.

P. S. Yes, he came through the war O. K. so far as I know, though his uniform was all but shot off him many times.

LONDON, Sept. 5 (AP)—The Admiralty issued the following communiqué today:

A large southbound liner has been torpedoed and almost certainly sunk by one of our submarines off the coast of Italy. This ship was possibly the Duilio of 23,635 tons. When attacked she was in company with two other large passenger ships.

The Italian liners of this type are known to have been acting as troop transports.

A laden southbound tanker has been torpedoed and sunk from another enemy convoy off Sicily. The Italian supply ship Aquitania, 4,971 tons, in the same convoy, was hit by torpedoes and severely damaged.

A supply ship of about 8,000 tons has also been torpedoed and sunk by one of our submarines in the central Mediterranean.

Another Admiralty communiqué follows:

One of our submarines operating close to the Strait of Messina has carried out a successful attack on an enemy naval force.

One of the enemy cruisers, a ship of a 10,000-ton class armed with eight-inch guns, was hit by torpedoes and seriously damaged.

An Air Ministry communiqué said early today:

Beaufort aircraft of the coastal command on patrol off the coast of Brittany last night attacked an enemy tanker.

Another aircraft of the same command bombed a factory at La Pallice.

The Air Ministry tonight issued the following:

An enemy bomber crashed in East Scotland this morning and was destroyed.

A joint communiqué of the Air and Home Security Ministries said:

There was very little enemy activity last night.

Bombs were dropped at a few points near the east coast, but no serious casualties have been reported and very little damage was done.

The Ministries of Air and Home Security issued the following tonight:

There has been a little enemy activity near the east coast of Scotland today.

Bombs dropped by a single aircraft at a place in Northeast Scotland this morning caused some damage and a small number of casualties.

CAIRO, Egypt, Sept. 5 (AP)—The R. A. F. Middle East Command issued the following:

Malta—A strong force of Italian fighters approached Malta yesterday morning and were intercepted by our fighters, which shot down six Macchi-200s and badly damaged a number of others. Another raiding aircraft was damaged by anti-aircraft gunfire. In the afternoon a further force of Macchi-200s was intercepted off the coast of Sicily and three were shot down and others damaged, two of our aircraft were lost in this operation.

Tripolitania—During the night of Sept. 3-4 aircraft of the fleet air arm torpedoed and destroyed an enemy destroyer outside Tripoli harbor. In addition a large merchant ship was bombed and hit.

Sicily—Other aircraft of the fleet air arm bombed and machine-gunned the Sicilian airdromes of Gerbini and Catania, where two enemy aircraft were set on fire and others damaged.

Cyrenaica—Bomber aircraft of the South African Air Force bombed enemy dumps north of Gambut during the night of Sept. 3-4 and scored a number of hits. Yesterday fighter aircraft machine-gunned a German camp near Capuzzo, setting fire to tents and destroying a motor transport.

From these operations with the exception of the two mentioned above all our aircraft returned safely.

The British Middle East General Headquarters in Cairo said:

Libya—In the Tobruk area a heavy dust storm limited our patrol activities. One enemy bombing raid resulted in no damage.

In the frontier area there was nothing to report.

Italian

ROME, Sept. 5 (AP)—The Italian High Command communiqué follows:

Formations of Italian fighter planes on a mission over Malta and the Channel yesterday engaged considerable forces of enemy fighters in hard successive fights with customary bravery and daring. Twenty-two enemy planes were shot down and numerous others effectively machine-gunned and damaged.

3024-11633

Three of our planes failed to return to their bases. Many others returned with damage and wounded among crews.

In these actions, detachments commanded by the following pilot officers particularly distinguished themselves:

Lieut. Col. Carlo Romagnoli, who heroically fought at the head of his own group and failed to answer roll call.

Major Francesco Becarria and Captains Dentino, Festa and Lucchini.

Last night the airbase at Micabba on Malta was attacked by our bombers.

Enemy planes carried out raids on the zone of Catania and four bombers made attacks on Crotone causing slight damage. Anti-aircraft defense at Crotone shot down two Bristol Blenheims. One of them fell into the harbor. Three men of the crew were dead in the wreckage.

In North Africa on the Tobruk front attempts by British units to attack were halted by our troops, supported by tanks and artillery fire. The Axis air force bombed fortifications and works at Matruh and columns of enemy motor vehicles in the Jarabub zone.

In East Africa enemy air actions against Uolchefit caused only several causalties among the native population.

Our detachments in the Culquabert sector surprised and dispersed with losses enemy troops who left arms and animals loaded with equipment in our hands.

Finnish

HELSINKI, Sept. 5 (AP).—A Finnish State Information Bureau communique:

Official war correspondents report that according to the account of Ingrian eyewitness a large number of people have fled from the district around Leningrad to the city itself. Those who have not gone there of their own free will have been forced to abandon their homes and proceed to the city. All public buildings and storehouses and in general all buildings have been put into use for billeting. Even then room has not been found for all.

People who have been unable to find shelter walk through the streets. Innumerable persons spend nights in parks, under trees and bushes, wrapped only in their clothing. The suburbs of Leningrad, too, are crowded with so many people that hundreds spend their time in the fields.

Traffic in the Leningrad area is in a state of confusion. An Ingrian locomotive engineer who left Leningrad Sept. 1 related that railway traffic had ceased then, all railways leading out of the city being either in enemy hands or so badly damaged they could not be repaired for traffic.

Motor traffic is entirely haphazard and unorganized. Thus, for instance, it no longer was possible to transport inhabitants from the suburbs and rural districts into the city even though they had been ordered to proceed there. They have been told to make their way through the woods, as the roads are under aircraft attack and artillery fire. Attempts also are being made to keep the roads open for military transports.

It is becoming wholly impossible to procure food. Bread is no longer on sale in the shops. People eat what they have stored at home, if anything. Those who arrived from the surrounding country have only the scanty parcels of food they may have brought with them. Sickness already is becoming rampant because of poor food and inadequate shelter.

Children in particular are exposed to chills, being compelled to sleep out in the open in the present damp autumn weather. Stomach disease also has caused great havoc among children. For instance, in Tipuna suburb, through which refuges who have arrived in Finland had to pass, hundreds of children have died in the vicinity of the railway stations.

..., Saturday, Sept. 6 (AP) —The Soviet Information Bureau issued this communiqué early today:

During Sept. 5 our troops fought the enemy along the entire front.

According to incomplete data, thirty-three German planes were destroyed on Sept. 3. Our losses were twenty-seven aircraft.

German

BERLIN, Sept. 5 (AP)—The German High Command communiqué said:

Successful operations on the East Front continue.

The encirclement of Leningrad is progressing. The city itself already is under fire of heavy German artillery.

Estonia has been freed of the enemy.

In waters around England combat planes last night sank a patrol boat and a 3,000-ton freighter and badly damaged an additional merchantman. Other night raids were directed against port facilities on the Scottish and English east coasts.

The British air force yesterday suffered heavy losses in the Channel region. Chasers and anti-aircraft brought down twenty-five enemy planes.

German combat planes in attacks from low altitudes on enemy ships in the Gulf of Suez the night before last sank an 8,300-ton merchantman and another large freighter was set afire.

Attempts last night by several Soviet planes to attack Northeastern Germany and Berlin were ineffective. Anti-aircraft downed one bomber.

Russian

Moscow, Sept. 5 (AP)—A Soviet information bureau communique today said:

During the night of September 4 our troops continued fighting the enemy along the entire front. Our air force attacked enemy troops and airdromes.

A unit commanded by Kozlov, in stubborn fighting, inflicted heavy losses on the Two Hundred and Sixty-third German Infantry Division. The operation resulting in the rout of the Nazi division developed as follows: The Germans held the height of Bokovo and the approaches. Kozlov's unit determinedly drove the enemy out of occupied positions and forced him to surrender one village after another. At every position the Germans lost hundreds of soldiers killed and wounded and threw down their arms and abandoned headquarters property in panic.

After the retreat to the heights of Bokovo, the commander of the German division, General Haeckel, issued an order of the day evidencing the decline of the division's morale.

"During the Russian attack on one company," the order says, "the company was thrown into dismay. Several Russians penetrated to the company's rear. Many of the company's men left the battlefield and drove away in trucks several kilometers behind the lines. This conduct contributed to the outbreak of panic."

The general's order did not raise the spirit of the German soldiers. The Nazis failed to hold the height. Soviet artillery smashed enemy fortifications. Supported by powerful artillery fire, Isakov's and Tikhonov's detachments launched the attack. The Germans retreated, again sustaining heavy losses. Our men captured large numbers of arms and prisoners.

Private Joseph Fastbender, of the Eleventh Company, taken prisoner on the height, stated: "In this action alone our division lost nearly half its officers."

The Two Hundred and Sixty-third German Division in six days lost nearly 7,000 men and officers killed and wounded and taken prisoner. The remnant of the division was withdrawn to the rear to be reformed.

The air formation commanded by Aladinsky, operating in the western direction of the front, destroyed a large concentration of enemy tanks, armored cars and motorized columns. Pilots Druzhkov, Treschchev and Zots, demolished over fifteen tanks. In two days' fighting the air formation annihilated about 1,000 soldiers and officers, and destroyed eighty German tanks, 600 trucks and 200 horses.

Returning from operations our aircraft encountered fifteen enemy planes. In the course of the ensuing air battle six German planes—three Messerschmitt 109's, one Messerschmitt 110 and two up-to-date Heinkels—were brought down. Flyers Romanenko, Shidlovsky and Treschchev brought down one plane each. Senior Lieutenant Zots and Pilot Rybkin forced to the ground one Messerschmitt 109 and destroyed it. Unit Commissar Zub brought down one Heinkel 113.

Junior Lieutenant Cherntak's torpedo speedboat was escorting two transports when observers spotted the periscope of an enemy submarine. The torpedo boat attacked the submarine, dropped depth charges and sank it. Large bubbles appeared on the surface. Several hours later the crew discovered another enemy submarine heading toward the transports. Depth charges were dropped on the submarine. After they exploded, hydro-acoustic apparatus recorded that the submarine was making off. The torpedo boat then attacked again, dumping depth charges. After the second attack, the apparatus recorded no movement of the submarine. Both transports were brought safely to their destination.

Eight Messerschmitts attacked four bombers of Captain Markovkin's squadron. Lieutenant Bolshakov, the leading pilot, decided to accept the unequal fight with the German fighters. The Fascist flyers attacked the lieutenant's plane but encountered a shattering repulse. Rear-Gunner Panchenko downed three Messerschmitts one after the other. Rear Gunners Lotoviand and Ragulin, of two other bombers, downed one enemy plane each. The three remaining Nazi aircraft turned tail. After the air fight our bombers observed masked German motorized columns. The Soviet flyers immediately attacked them, destroying tanks and cars and then, flying very low, dispersed with machine-gun fire a German infantry column advancing to the front.

Naval planes of base "N" of the northern fleet are doing good work annihilating Fascist ships and land troops. Enemy bombers repeatedly have tried to attack the base. But Soviet anti-aircraft gunners invariably have driven them off and our fighters downed them. Over a hundred German planes have fallen wrecked on the cliffs surrounding the base. In the latest raid the Fascists lost thirteen planes.

A section commanded by Sergeant Arkadiev and his several men made their way by motorboat deep into the rear of the Finnish White Guards. At night they attacked a Finnish heavy artillery battalion. Having annihilated the soldiers, our fighters disabled three guns and destroyed a large quantity of ammunition.

The other day our aircraft smashed two enemy airdromes west of Lake Ilmen. Soviet bombers raided the airdromes unexpectedly. A German fighter which attempted to take to the air was destroyed by Air Unit Commander Gruzdef while it was about to take off. German batteries opened strong fire but our fighter and attack planes silenced the enemy anti-aircraft guns. Having disposed of the crews of anti-aircraft guns and machine guns, Soviet pilots wrecked and set fire to German planes on the airdromes.

On these two airdromes our pilots destroyed seventy-four enemy aircraft which were part of the Richthofen air corps.

Within the past two days bombers of the Black Sea fleet destroyed over forty German tanks and trucks. In fighting at the approaches to Odessa Marine battalions annihilated several hundred German and Rumanian soldiers and officers. Over 300 were taken prisoner. Two guns and five mine-throwers and eighteen machine guns were among the trophies.

A COSSACK CAVALRY GROUP COMMANDED BY COLONEL DOVATOR PENETRATED INTO THE FASCIST REAR RANKS AND, DURING A LONG PERIOD, SMASHED GERMAN TROOPS AND COMMUNICATIONS. IN THE VERY FIRST ENGAGEMENT THE COSSACKS COMPLETELY ANNIHILATED THE THIRD BATTALION OF THE 430TH GERMAN INFANTRY REGIMENT. THE COSSACKS CUT COMMUNICATIONS, CAPTURED WIRELESS STATIONS, SET FIRE TO ENEMY STORES AND HACKED TO DEATH GERMAN MEN AND OFFICERS.

THE GERMAN COMMAND ISSUED A SPECIAL ORDER ON "EXTERMINATION OF COSSACK DETACHMENT." THE NEXT DAY THIS ORDER FELL INTO THE HANDS OF OUR CAVALRYMEN.

30.2 A - 11633

MAKING THEIR WAY THROUGH MARSHES AND DENSE FORESTS THE COSSACKS APPEARED WHERE THEY WERE LEAST EXPECTED BY THE GERMANS. IN ONE OF THE ENGAGEMENTS COSSACKS ANNIHILATED ONE MORE ENEMY BATTALION, DESTROYED THREE GUNS, CAPTURED FOUR MINE-THROWERS, NINE MACHINE-GUNS, 16 SUBMACHINE-GUNS AND A WIRELESS STATION AND BURNED TRUCKS AND STORES OF CLOTHING AND PROVISIONS.

SEP 6 1941

THEN THEY RAIDED A GERMAN TRUCK COLUMN AND KILLED 136 OFFICERS AND MEN AND DESTROYED 58 TRUCKS, THREE MOTOR CARS, AND THREE FUEL TANK TRUCKS. THE GERMANS SENT TANKS AND PLANES AGAINST OUR CAVALRYMEN AND LAID AMBUSHES BUT THE COSSACKS ALWAYS ELUDED THEM. BY ITS DARING RAID THE CAVALRY GROUP INFLICTED HEAVY LOSSES UPON THE ENEMY.

FIGHTER PILOT LIEUTENANT KATRICH ATTACKED A FASCIST BOMBER, DORNIER 217, FLYING AT A HIGH ALTITUDE. THE FASCIST COULD NOT STAND THE ATTACK OF THE SOVIET FLIER. IN THE COURSE OF THE ENCOUNTER KATRICH HAD SPENT HIS AMMUNITION AND NOW THE DARING FLIER DECIDED TO RAM THE FASCIST PLANE.

CLOSELY APPROACHING THE FASCIST, KATRICH BROKE AWAY THE LEFT KEE OF THE GERMAN MACHINE WITH ONE BLOW OF HIS OWN PLANE. THE DORNIER TUMBLED TO THE GROUND. KATRICH PRESERVED HIS MACHINE AND LANDED SAFELY AT HIS AIRDROME.

A SAPPER BATTALION COMMANDED BY CHERVINSKY AND OPERATING IN THE SOUTHWESTERN DIRECTION OF THE FRONT WAS ATTACKED BY AN ENEMY UNIT. THE SOVIET SAPPERS GAVE BATTLE AND KILLED 65 GERMAN OFFICERS AND A LARGE NUMBER OF PRIVATES AND SEIZED SIX ENEMY MACHINE-GUNS, SIX SEMI-ARMORED TRACTORS, AND TRUCKS, MOTORCYCLES, BICYCLES ARMS AND AMMUNITION.

AVIATION OF THE BLACK SEA FLEET IN THE COURSE OF THE PAST TWO DAYS DESTROYED BY BOMBING MORE THAN 25 GERMAN TANKS, MORE THAN 100 TRUCKS AND THREE TROOP TRAINS. SEVEN FASCIST FIGHTERS WERE BROUGHT DOWN IN AIR COMBATS. THE CREW OF SENIOR FLIGHT LIEUT. DMITRIVSKY, WHO BROUGHT DOWN TWO MESSERSCHMITT FIGHTERS, ESPECIALLY DISTINGUISHED THEMSELVES.

SEP 6 1941

IN A DARING ONSLAUGHT, COMMANDER ROGOV'S UNIT OPERATING IN THE WESTERN DIRECTION OF THE FRONT KILLED NEARLY 300 GERMANS, DESTROYED TWO ANTI-TANK GUNS, THREE ANTI-AIRCRAFT MACHINE-GUNS, MORE THAN 30 MOTORCYCLES AND AN AMMUNITION DUMP.

TANK COMMANDERS AND ASSISTANT POLITICAL INSTRUCTOR PLOTNIKOV BROKE THROUGH TO THE ENEMY REAR AND DESTROYED AN ANTI-TANK GUN AND TWO MINETHROWERS. PLOTNIKOV OPENED FIRE AT THE ENEMY AND HELPED THE RED ARMY MEN ESCAPE FROM ENCIRCLEMENT.

THE JUNIOR POLITICAL INSTRUCTOR OF "X" UNIT ON THE LENINGRAD FRONT, COMRADE VLASSOV, DEFENDING TOGETHER WITH SEVERAL RED ARMY MEN ONE FORTIFICATION, KILLED IN THE COURSE OF ONE DAY 200 GERMAN OFFICERS AND MEN.

GUERRILLA WARFARE IS GROWING EVER-WIDER IN DISTRICTS OCCUPIED BY THE GERMAN FASCISTS. ARMING THEMSELVES WITH GERMAN RIFLES AND MACHINE-GUNS, THE GUERRILLAS CONDUCT EXTENSIVE OPERATIONS AND DETRACT CONSIDERABLE NUMBERS OF FASCIST TROOPS FROM THE FRONT.

A LARGE GUERRILLA DETACHMENT COMMANDED BY THE CHAIRMAN OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE AT "N" IS OPERATING IN THE DISTRICTS SOUTH OF VINNITSA. THE DETACHMENT KEEPS UNDER ITS CONTROL MANY IMPORTANT ROADS OF THIS REGION.

3024-11635 30.24-11635

WITHIN A SHORT TIME THE GUERRILLAS DESTROYED 240 GERMAN TRUCKS AND CAPTURED 50 MOTORCYCLES.

IN THE VICINITY OF THE VILLAGE OF LANTANTSY A DETACHMENT WAS SURROUNDED BY GERMAN TROOPS. SKILLFULLY MANEUVERING AND INFLICTING UPON THE ENEMY HEAVY LOSSES, THE GUERRILLAS ENTICED HIM INTO A FOREST AND PIERCED THE ENCIRCLEMENT.

SEP 6 1941

THE FASCISTS ARE COMPELLED TO KEEP IN THESE DISTRICTS LARGE UNITS WHICH ARE IN VAIN CHASING THE GUERRILLAS. THE LOCAL POPULATION BY ALL MEANS ASSISTS THE GUERRILLAS AND INFORM THEM ABOUT THE MOVEMENTS OF GERMAN TROOPS.

A GUERRILLA DETACHMENT UNDER THE COMMAND OF THE CHAIRMAN OF A COLLECTIVE FARM BOARD AT "X" ESPECIALLY DISTINGUISHED HIMSELF. THIS DETACHMENT OPERATES IN THE GERMAN-OCCUPIED AREAS OF THE ZHITOMIR REGION. LATELY THE DETACHMENT ANNIHILATED THREE TRANSPORT PLANES AND A JUNKERS-52. NEAR THE VILLAGE OF VYSOKAYA PECH GUERRILLAS IN THREE DAYS DESTROYED 40 GERMAN TRUCKS, 15 MOTORCYCLES AND BLEW UP A RIVER BRIDGE. (END)

GERMAN FASCISTS HAVE ENSLAVED THE AUSTRIAN PEOPLE.

HITLER FORCIBLY HURLED SCORES OF THOUSANDS OF AUSTRIANS TO THE EASTERN FRONT. HOWEVER, AS EVIDENCED BY NUMEROUS STATEMENTS OF WAR PRISONERS, THEY DO NOT WANT TO FIGHT THE SOVIET UNION.

STEPHAN...A SOLDIER PRIVATE OF THE 486TH REGIMENT, SAID "THE FASCISTS HAVE DOOMED THE AUSTRIAN PEOPLE TO STARVATION AND EXTINCTION. THE AUSTRIANS RECEIVE A LOWER FOOD RATION THAN THE GERMANS. ALL STATE AND MUNICIPAL INSTITUTIONS ARE STAFFED WITH GERMANS. THE MAJORITY OF AUSTRIANS FORCIBLY MOBILIZED TO THE GERMAN ARMY WISH DEFEAT FOR HITLER AND THE RESTORATION OF AUSTRIAN INDEPENDENCE."

HAND IN HAND WITH THE RED ARMY, LENINGRAD DETACHMENTS OF THE POPULAR VOLUNTEER FORCE SELFLESSLY DEFEND THEIR NATIVE CITY FROM THE HITLERITE HORDES; SHOWING EXAMPLES OF FEARLESSNESS AND GOOD MILITARY TRAINING.

THE GERMAN INFANTRY SUPPORTED BY TANKS WAS ADVANCING ON A SCORE OF DEFENDERS OF THE REGIMENT OF POPULAR VOLUNTEERS. MEMBERS OF THE VOLUNTEER FORCE REMAINED IN THE DEEP TRENCHES AND LETTING THE FASCIST TANKS

PASS OPENED FIRE AT THE INFANTRY WHICH FOLLOWED THE TANKS. MEMBER OF THE POPULAR VOLUNTEER FORCE VASSILYEV BY ACCURATE RIFLE FIRE KILLED 14 FASCIST SOLDIERS. MOSCOW, SATURDAY, SEPT 6-(AP)-COSSACK CAVALRY IS MAKING DEEP RAIDS INTO GERMAN TERRITORY AND INFLICTING HEAVY LOSSES WITH OLD-STYLE SABER CHARGES ON UNSUSPECTING INFANTRY UNITS, THE SOVIET WAR REPORT SAID TODAY.

ONE GROUP COMMANDED BY A COLONEL DOVATOR WAS CREDITED WITH ANNIHILATING MANY GERMAN TROOPS AND SMASHING COMMUNICATIONS IN A PROLONGED RAID.

SEP 6 1941

MOSCOW, SEPT.5--THERE IS A STRONG IMPRESSION IN MOSCOW TONIGHT THAT EVENTS ARE TAKING A MORE FAVORABLE TURN ALTHOUGH THE LATEST SOVIET COMMUNIQUE CONFINES ITSELF TO A GENERAL STATEMENT THAT FIGHTING CONTINUES ON ALL FRONTS.

THE DEFENSE OF LENINGRAD, LIKE THAT OF KIEV AND ESPECIALLY ODESSA, HAS BEEN ORGANIZED WITH IMMENSE THOROUGHNESS.

THE GERMANS IN THE LENINGRAD AREA ARE CONTENDING WITH ENORMOUS RUSSIAN FORCES AGAINST WHICH THEY ARE OBLIGED TO SEND CONSTANT REINFORCEMENTS IF THEIR POSITIONS ARE TO BE MAINTAINED AT ALL.

THE GERMANS REALIZE A POWERFUL COUNTERATTACK IN THIS LENINGRAD SECTOR MIGHT PLACE THEM IN AN EXTREMELY PRECARIOUS POSITION AND THAT THEIR TROOPS RISK BEING CUT OFF BY A DOUBLE RUSSIAN THRUF FROM LENINGRAD AND FROM A SOUTHERN DIRECTION.

HENCE THE CONSTANT GERMAN CONCERN TO STRENGTHEN THE NOVGOROD "WEDGE" SOUTHEAST OF LENINGRAD.

THERE IS A GROWING BELIEF IN SOME QUARTERS THAT THE GERMANS REALIZE THE CAPTURE OF LENINGRAD IS HOPELESS, ESPECIALLY IN A REASONABLE TIME. THEY MAY ATTEMPT TO BY-PASS IT AND DIVERT THE FORCES SOUTH FROM LENINGRAD TOWARDS THE UPPER VOLGA AND POSSIXM

REASONABLE TIME. THEY MAY ATTEMPT TO BY-PASS IT AND DIVERT THE FORCES SOUTH FROM LENINGRAD TOWARDS THE UPPER VOLGA AND POSSIBLY TO MOSCOW.

THE RISK OF SUCH A MOVE, WITH MARSHAL VOROSHILOV'S IMMENSE ARMY AROUND LENINGRAD READY FOR POWERFUL SORTIES AND OPERATIONS, NEED NOT BE EMPHASIZED.

THE CENTRAL SECTOR AROUND SMOLENSK SEEMS TO BE SOMEWHAT STABILIZED WITH THE INITIATIVE REMAINING TO THE RUSSIANS. HERE THE GERMANS HAVE ADOPTED A DEFENSIVE ATTITUDE.

THE POSITION EAST OF GOMEL IS SOMEWHAT OBSCURE BUT THERE IS NO REASON TO BELIEVE THE GERMAN CLAIM, OR RATHER SUGGESTION PUT OUT VIA A FINNISH SOURCE, THAT THEY ARE PROGRESSING TOWARDS BRYANSK, KEY TOWN AND RAIL JUNCTION ABOUT 220 MILES SOUTHWEST OF MOSCOW.

THEY HAVE BEEN ATTEMPTING TO SMASH RAIL COMMUNICATIONS IN THIS DIRECTION, WHICH IN ITSELF IS SAID TO BE INCOMPATIBLE WITH THE CLAIM THAT BRYANSK IS CAPTURED.

SEP 6 1941

THE NEWS IS REASSURING FROM VARIOUS SIDES THAT THE GERMANS HAVE NOT SUCCEEDED IN CROSSING THE DNIEPER RIVER SOUTH OF KIEV. DESPITE NUMEROUS ATTEMPTS APPARENTLY EACH EFFORT TO CROSS BY PONTOONS HAS BEEN SMASHED BY RUSSIAN VIGILANCE.

THE GERMAN THRUST TOWARDS THE INDUSTRIAL CENTER OF KHARKOV AND ROSTOV TO THE CAUCASUS RAILWAY SYSTEM WOULD BE THE MOST DANGEROUS DEVELOPMENT. DESPITE THE ATTEMPTS TO CROSS THE DNIEPER FOR THAT PURPOSE SUCH A THRUST HAS NOT EVEN STARTED.

LONDON, SEP 5-(AP)-BRITISH OFFICIALS SAID TODAY THAT THE RATE OF BRITISH SHIPPING LOSSES IN AUGUST WAS "NO LESS SATISFACTORY" THAN THAT FOR JULY, ALTHOUGH THERE APPEARED TO BE AS MANY SUBMARINES IN OPERATION AS BEFORE.

(NO FIGURES HAVE BEEN ANNOUNCED FOR EITHER MONTH. HOWEVER, FIRST LORD OF THE ADMIRALTY A.V.ALEXANDER HAS STATED THAT THE JULY LOSSES WERE THE LOWEST IN MORE THAN A YEAR, AND HAS ASCRIBED THIS TO JOINT ACTION OF CONVOYS, PLANES AND NORTH ATLANTIC PATROLS. THE INFERENCE WOULD PLACE JULY AND AUGUST LOSSES SOMEWHERE UNDER 300,000 EACH.)

BATAVIA, N.E.I., SEPT.5-(AP)-HENRY F.GRADY, PRESIDENT OF THE AMERICAN PRESIDENT STEAMSHIP LINES AND FORMER UNITED STATES UNDERSECRETARY OF STATE, IS EXPECTED TO ARRIVE HERE NEXT WEEK FOR DISCUSSIONS WITH THENETHERLANDS EAST INDIES AUTHORITIES. A SPECIAL LINER OF THE KNILM--ROYAL NETHERLANDS EAST INDIES AIRLINES--LEAVES FOR MANILA TOMORROW TO PICK HIM UP.

OTTAWA, ONT., SEPT 5-(AP)-MUNITIONS MINISTER C.D.HOWE TOLD A PRESS CONFERENCE TODAY THAT PRODUCTION OF WAR MATERIALS NOW HAS REACHED THE STAGE WHERE THE GOVERNMENT WILL HAVE TO "DIRECTLY CURTAIL THROUGH RATIONING MEASURES" THE SUPPLY OF MATERIALS AVAILABLE TO MANUFACTURERS FOR NON-ESSENTIAL PURPOSES.

SEP 6 1941

HOWE SAID CANADIAN PRODUCTION HAD REACHED A POINT AT PRESENT WHERE A COMPLETE CANADIAN INFANTRY DIVISION COULD BE EQUIPPED IN SIX WEEKS "AND PERHAPS FIVE."

LOSS OF TANKERS COUPLED WITH THE DIFFICULTY OF TANK CAR TRANSPORTATION OF OIL AND GASOLINE MAY BRING AN ACUTE SHORTAGE OF THESE COMMODITIES FOR ESSENTIAL WAR PURPOSES IN SPITE OF CONSERVATION EFFORTS, HOWE ADDED.

HE SAID EFFORTS WOULD BE MADE TO PROVIDE ENOUGH FUEL OIL AT LEAST FOR THOSE WHOSE HOMES HAVE INSTALLATIONS WHICH CANNOT BE CONVERTED TO OTHER FUEL. BUT THOSE WHO USE COAL OR WOOD FURNACES CONVERTED O OIL-BURNERS MAY BE ASKED TO TURN THEM BACK TO THEIR ORIGINAL TATUS, HE SAID.

OTTAWA, SEPT 5-(AP)-FIFTY-FIVE AIRMEN WERE REPORTED DEAD OR MISSING OVERSEAS AND IN CANADA TODAY IN THE 68TH CASUALTY LIST OF THE ROYAL CANADIAN AIR FORCE--ITS LARGEST INDIVIDUAL LIST SINCE THE OUTBREAK OF HOSTILITIES.

3024-11639 30.24-11639

ONE AMERICAN WAS LISTED AS KILLED OVERSEAS IN A FLYING ACCIDENT. HE WAS ROGERS DENNIS CROZIER, A PILOT OFFICER, WHOSE NEAREST OF KIN, MRS.T.J.CROZIER, HIS MOTHER, LIVES AT (30 VAILL ST.) PORTLAND, ME.

TWO AMERICANS WERE KILLED IN FLYING ACCIDENTS IN CANADA. THEY WERE KENNETH FREDERICK DAVIS, A LEADING AIRCRAFTMAN, WHOSE FATHER, V.B.DAVIS, LIVES AT (4207 NORTH WEST DRIVE) DES MOINES, IA., AND LEADING AIRCRAFTMAN WILLIAM STEVENS MORRISS, WHOSE FATHER, J.MORRISS, LIVES AT SALADO, TEXAS.

SEP 6 1941

TWO OTHER AMERICANS ARE LISTED AS DANGEROUSLY ILL IN CANADA. THEY ARE SGT. RAYMOND ANDREW LUPTON, WHOSE FATHER, E.R.LUPTON, LIVES AT (69 VALLEY ST.) NEWARK, N.J., AND LEADING AIRCRAFTMAN JOHN WILLIAM BORUM, WHOSE MOTHER, MRS.M.G.RENNEVER (CORRECT) LIVES AT (3745 PROMONTORY) SAN DIEGO, CALIF.

OTTAWA, SEPT.5-(AP)-DR.LILLIAN SHABEN, CORNELL UNIVERSITY NUTRITION EXPERT, TOLD THE REGIONAL CONFERENCE OF THE ASSOCIATED COUNTRYWOMEN OF THE WORLD TODAY THAT WOMEN ARE NOT DOING THEIR JOB IN HEALTH AND HUMAN WELFARE MERELY BY "STUFFING THEIR HEADS FULL OF TECHNICAL INFORMATION ABOUT VITAMINS."

"TECHNICAL INFORMATION OBTAINED FROM RESEARCH MUST BE INCORPORATED INTO DAILY LIVING," SHE SAID. "A GOOD TABLE DOESN'T MEAN A WELL-NOURISHED FAMILY--AND, NO MATTER WHAT YOU'VE READ ABOUT VITAMINS, IT'S USELESS UNLESS IT'S TRANSLATED INTO TOMORROW MORNING'S BREAKFAST AND IS EATEN."

DESCRIBING THE WORK OF LT.-COL. R.H. WEBB, CHIEF INSPECTOR OF CATERING AND MESSING FOR THE CANADIAN ARMY, AS "BRILLIANT", DR.SHABEN SAID WOMEN ARE NOT KEEPING THEIR END UP AS HE IS DOING FOR THE MEN IN THE ARMY UNLESS THEY FEED THEIR PEOPLE AT HOME THE THINGS WHICH ARE VITAL TO GOOD HEALTH, NOTABLY THE "PROTECTIVE" FOODS LIKE MILK, FRUIT, VEGETABLES AND EGGS.

WOMEN ARE "SLACKERS", TOO IF THEY ALLOW THEMSELVES TO BECOME OVERWEIGHT, IF THEY DON'T TAKE CARE OF THEIR TEETH AND ARE CONTINUALLY DRAGGING ABOUT WITH "THAT TIRED FEELING."

"DO YOU KNOW WHAT YOU WEIGHED AT 30?" SHE ASKED. "THAT'S WHERE YOU SHOULD BE NOW. AND YOUR USEFULNESS DEPENDS UPON YOUR HEALTH."

SEP 6 1941

DR.RUBY GREEN SMITH, HEAD OF THE NEW YORK EXTENSION SERVICE WHO SPOKE ON "HUMAN ASPECTS OF DEMOCRACY," URGED DELEGATES TO THINK SERIOUSLY ABOUT THEIR REPRESENTATION AT THE "PEACE TABLE" WHEN THE WAR IS WON.

"PLANS MUST BE MADE NOW," SHE SAID. "WOMEN ARE QUALIFIED, AND THIS TIME WE MUST HAVE A TRULY DEMOCRATIC PEACE BY FIRST ADMITTING BOTH WOMEN AND REPRESENTATIVES OF YOUTH AT THIS TABLE TO PLAN THE FUTURE WORLD."

NEW YORK, SEPT 5-(AP)-THE CENTRAL BANK OF POLAND HAS OBTAINED A WRIT OF ATTACHMENT AGAINST FRENCH GOLD ON DEPOSIT IN THE FEDERAL RESERVE BANK OF NEW YORK IN AN ATTEMPT TO RECOVER $64,050,641 IN GOLD ALLEGEDLY TAKEN FROM WARSAW TO FRANCE WHEN GERMANY INVADED POLAND, JANUSZ ZOLTOWSKI, POLISH EMBASSY FINANCIAL ADVISOR, DISCLOSED TODAY.

SEP 6 1941

THE WRIT, SIGNED BY SUPREME COURT JUSTICE FERDINAND S.PECORA, WAS SERVED ON HEADS OF THE NEW YORK RESERVE BANK, CUSTODIANS OF $1,000,000,000 IN FRENCH GOLD. THE BANK OF BELGIUM, UNDER ORDERS FROM THE BELGIAN GOVERNMENT, ATTACHED $260,000,000 OF FRENCH GOLD HERE IN FEBRUARY.

THE STORY OF HOW POLISH GOLD RESERVES WERE SMUGGLED FROM WARSAW A FEW HOURS BEFORE THE INVASION AND TAKEN TO FRANCE WAS RELATED TUESDAY BY COLONEL IGNACE MATUSZEWSKI, FORMER POLISH MINISTER OF FRANCE ON HIS ARRIVAL FROM LISBON. HE SAID THE GOLD WAS LOADED ON BATTERED TRUCKS WHICH FELL IN WITH A PROCESSION OF REFUGEES.

THE CARAVAN, HE SAID, LEFT WARSAW WITH $70,000,000 BUT ARRIVED IN FRANCE WITH ONLY $67,000,000. THE REST FELL INTO RUMANIAN HANDS. ABOUT $3,000,000 WAS SENT LATER FROM FRANCE TO ENGLAND AND CANADA AND WHEN FRANCE FELL THE REST WAS SHIPPED TO DAKAR, WEST AFRICA, WITH $228,000,000 IN BELGIAN GOLD.

ZOLTOWSKI CHARGED TODAY THAT THE BANK OF FRANCE AGREED AT FIRST TO SHIP THE POLISH GOLD TO AMERICA WITH FRENCH RESERVES, BUT, WITHOUT CONSULTING THE BANK OF POLAND, SENT IT TO DAKAR INSTEAD.

THE COURT ORDER DOES NOT IMMEDIATELY FREE FOR POLISH USE ANY FRENCH GOLD, IT WAS EXPLAINED, BUT ESTABLISHES A POLISH CLAIM ON THE STIPULATED AMOUNT.

GREER CHASED U-BOAT 12 HRS, BERLIN SAYS

SEP 6 1941

Sub Fired Twice To Repel 'Attack,' Nazi Story

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 6 A German communique asserted late today that the United States destroyer Greer opened an attack on a German U-boat at the order of President Roosevelt "to incite the American people into war against Germany." The communique acknowledged that the German submarine fired two torpedoes. It declared, however, that it first was attacked by the destroyer in waters which the Germans have declared to be within their blockade zone. The communique said the U-boat commander was justified in his action because it was in self defense, and said he "was not in a position to determine the nationality of the attacking destroyer." The communique described the incident as a running battle, starting at 12.30 P. M. Thursday when a U-boat "was attacked by water bombs at 62.31 degrees north and 27.06 west and pursued continuously."

The engagement, it said, lated "until toward midnight," the destroyer pursuing with water bombs unsuccessfully until then.

Charged To Roosevelt

The communique charged:

1. That the United States Navy's assertion that the U-boat was the aggressor "can only be to give at least the appearance of justification to an attack by an American destroyer on a German U-boat.

2. That it proved that President Roosevelt previously, contrary to his statements, had given "general orders to American destroyers not only to report positions of German ships and U-boats but, beyond that, to attack them.

3. That, finally, "Mr. Roosevelt in this way also is trying with all means at his disposal to provoke incidents in order to incite the American people into war against Germany."

Text Of Communique

The communique, issued by DNB, said:

"American and English news services issued an item according to which on the morning of September 4, ... the course of an encounter between the American destroyer Greer and a German U-boat, the destroyer was attacked by the U-boat.

"The torpedoes, it was said, missed their mark. The destroyer then pursued the U-boat, counter-attacking with depth charges. Official German sources establish the following:

"On September 4 a German U-boat at 12.30 P. M. was attacked within the German blockade area by water bombs at 62.31 degrees north and 27.06 west and pursued continuously.

"Justified Defense"

"The German U-boat was not in a position to determine the nationality of the attacking destroyer. In justifiable defense, the U-boat thereupon discharged two torpedoes at 14.39 (2.39 P M.) which missed their mark.

"The destroyer continued the pursuit with water bombs unsuccessful until toward midnight. If American naval sources, namely the United States Navy Department, claim that the attack was started by the German U-boat the purpose of such an assertion can only be to give at least an appearance of justification to the attack by an American destroyer on a German U-boat in violation of neutrality.

"Roosevelt Orders Attacks"

"The attack itself is proof that Mr. Roosevelt, contrary to his claims, has already, at an earlier time, given general orders to American destroyers not only to report the positions of German ships and U-boats in violation of neutrality but, beyond that, to attack them.

"Mr. Roosevelt, in this way, is trying by all means at his disposal to provoke incidents in order to incite the American people into war against Germany."

The announcement broke a two-day silence by officials on the Greer incident, the Germans apparently having awaited a report from the German submarine commander. Authoritative sources had put off questions with the statement that they could not discuss the case.

Germany Charges U. S. Ship Started Fight With U-Boat

BY ALVIN STEINKOPF
[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 6—A German submarine fired two torpedoes at the United States destroyer Greer, a German communique acknowledged today, but it declared that the American warship was the aggressor and acted on orders of President Roosevelt who, it alleged, is trying "to incite the American people into war against Germany."

According to the official German version, the destroyer attacked first in Icelandic waters the Germans have declared to be inside their blockade zone and the U-boat commander, not knowing the destroyer's nationality, acted justifiably in exercise of the primitive right of self-defense.

200 Miles From Iceland

The communique, issued through DNB, located the opening clash about 200 miles southwest of Iceland and described the encounter as lasting almost twelve hours.

Shortly after noon last Thursday, the statement said, the submarine "was attacked," and almost until midnight the destroyer chased the U-boat and dropped depth bombs

According to the communique, two hours and nineteen minutes elapsed between the time the destroyer attacked at 12.30 P. M. and the U-boat discharged two torpedoes at 2.49 P. M.

Called Neutral Violation

The German statement concluded:

American naval sources, namely the United States Navy Department, claim that the attack was started by the German U-boat the purpose of such an assertion can only be to give at least an appearance of justification to the attack by an American destroyer on a German U-boat in violation of neutrality.

"The attack itself is proof that Mr. Roosevelt, contrary to his claims, has already, at an earlier time, given general orders to American destroyers not only to report the position of German ships and U-boats in violation of neutrality but, beyond that, to attack them.

"Mr. Roosevelt, in this way, is trying by all means at his disposal to provoke incidents in order to incite the American people into war against Germany."

U-Boat Able To Report

The communique, ending two days of official silence, acknowledged that the submarine's torpedoes went wide of their mark. On the other hand, the submarine was able to get somewhere for her commander to report.

There was some disposition in informal comment in Berlin, therefore, to question whether the episode would aggravate relations between Germany and the United States.

However, some sources regarded the incident as loaded with dynamite.

Subsequent events established that the warship must have been the Greer and that point no longer was subject to dispute. But the communique said that at the time "the German U-boat was not in a position to determine the nationality of the attacking destroyer."

Fails To Explain

It was not stated precisely why one submarine, despite daylight hours, could not determine that the destroyer was American.

Anyway, it was contended, that was beside the point in view of the assertion that the U-boat was being attacked. Besides its defense of the submarine's conduct on that score, the communique pointed out that the incident occurred in waters proclaimed by the German Government as a war zone and that the submarine commander properly could have presumed that the warship was British.

In the Wilhelmstrasse view, therefore, it was asserted, Germany was confronted with a deliberate effort to provoke an episode which would incite a war fervor in the American people.

Nazi Tale Meets Disbelief In Capital

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 6—A German charge that the U. S. S. Greer was the deliberate aggressor in a clash with a Nazi submarine was received unbelievingly in the capital today and Tom Connally (Dem., Texas), chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, declared that "the Nazis might as well learn now that we are going to defend our ships and our citizens."

The Germans issued a communique saying President Roosevelt was distorting the facts in order to incite the American people to war. The communique said the submarine fired two torpedoes only after it had been attacked with depth bombs.

Others Scout Story

Senator Arthur Capper (Rep., Kan.) said he believed there were "some misstatements" in the Nazi version. "I can hardly believe that the President would order our warships to attack in an effort to incite the people into war," Capper said.

Mr. Roosevelt put the blame on the submarine at a press conference yesterday, saying the destroyer was attacked without warning on its way to Iceland with mail.

"I would take the President's word over that of Hitler any day of the week," was the reaction of Representative Manasco (Dem., Ala.).

Hyde Park Silent

The President was at Hyde Park, N. Y., today where William D. Hassett, acting press secretary, was advised of the German statement.

"I'll show this to the President when I have a chance," Hassett said. "But considering its source I don't think any comment is necessary. It carries its own comment. I think it's a typical comment, considering its source."

"Spirit Of Assassination"

There was no comment from the departments in Washington but Senator Connally broadened his statement to add:

"The fact that the Nazis admit a German submarine was involved amounts to an admission that it was acting under orders of the Nazi Government in firing on our destroyer.

"This spirit of assassination, disregard for the rights of other nations and arrogant contempt for the United States dragged us into the last war.

"Going To Defend Our Ships"

"We do not want to become involved in the present war, but if our ships or citizens are attacked we are going to defend them."

Connally said the Greer's action in dropping depth bombs "may slow up the Germans in their attacks on our ships."

Senator Walter F. George (Dem., Ga.), ranking member of the Foreign Relations Committee, said he wanted additional information about the incident before forming an opinion.

Washington Says U-Boat Provoked Fight; Senators Warn Reich

TENSION GROWS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6 (AP).—The Navy Dept. bluntly disputed tonight a claim from Berlin that the destroyer Greer had been the aggressor in an engagement with a German submarine off Iceland and reiterated that "the initial attack was made by the submarine on the Greer."

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6 (AP). — German-American relations entered into a new and uglier phase today with the publication of diametrically conflicting claims as to the circumstances under which the U.S.S. Greer and a German submarine engaged in a torpedo and depth-bomb skirmish on Thursday.

Berlin today claimed the Greer, a destroyer, attacked first, and that the U-boat used its torpedo tubes in self defense.

SAYS U-BOAT FIRED FIRST.

An exactly similar claim was made for the Greer yesterday by President Roosevelt. The submarine fired first, he said, and the Greer dropped depth-bombs in self defense.

Although State Department and Navy officials were silent on the German communique, Chairman Connally (D.) of Tex., of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said:

"The Nazis might as well learn now that we are going to defend our ships and our citizens."

ATTACKS GERMANY.

"The fact that the Nazis admit a German submarine was involved," he added, "amounts to an admission that it was acting under orders of the Nazi Government in firing on our destroyer.

"This spirit of assassination, disregard for the rights of other nations and arrogant contempt for the United States dragged us into the last war.

"We do not want to become involved in the present war, but if our ships or citizens are attacked we are going to defend them."

Sen. Capper (R.), of Kas., a member of the Foreign Relations Committee and one who has not voted consistently for Administration foreign measures, directly challenged the truth of the Nazi statement.

CHALLENGES BERLIN.

"My opinion is that the Germans have made some misstatements in their communique," he said.

"I can hardly believe that the President would order our warships to attack in an effort to incite the people into war. Beyond that, there is little that can be said until all the facts are known."

In any event, the German pronouncement cleared up any lingering doubt as to the nationality of the submarine involved in the incident with the Greer, something which had to be established conclusively before this country could make a diplomatic protest.

Where the conflicting claims are concerned, the American Government would, of course, stand on the report given to it by the commanding officer of the Greer.

MAY BE NEW POLICY.

On the basis of the statement of the Greer's commander that the U-boat fired first, there was speculation in Congressional circles whether this was an indication of a new policy on the part of Germany.

Some time ago Chancellor Hitler announced that any ships which his submarines encountered in blockade areas would be sunk. The application of this policy to American warships, however, has obviously been held in abeyance.

Some suggested that if Germany now intended to attack American ships, its purpose might be twofold: to increase the effectiveness of its blockade of England, and simultaneously to bolster its Axis partner, Japan.

Since Germany invaded Russia, Japan has become surrounded with actual or potential enemies. Moreover, the United States is shipping war supplies between the islands of the Japanese archipelago to Vladivostok and the Russian army.

German U-boat activities against American naval vessels on the Atlantic, if continued and made general, might have the effect of attracting American warships from the Pacific to the Atlantic, consequently easing the pressure on Japan.

There was a disposition on the part of some to believe that the Germans actually were without any knowledge of the Greer incident beyond what has been disclosed by the American Government.

Expressing this view, Connally said the German communique was merely "a ruse to make it appear that the U-boat had not been sunk."

"CONSIDERS THE SOURCE."

"I would take the President's word over that of Hitler any day of the week," was the reaction of Rep. Manasco (D.), of Ala.

Among the congressional comment was an assertion by Sen. McCarran (D.), of Nevada, that the incident "means the country is being edged into war without the consent of the people and without congressional action."

"This movement should be stopped," he declared. "It is time the people exercised calm, cool judgment to keep the country out of a war in which we should not be involved."

Sen. Reynolds (D.), of North Carolina, said:

"If we continue to look for trouble, the probabilities are that we'll eventually find it.

30.24 - 11645

30.24 — 11645

OBJECTS TO THREAT.

"I don't believe we can continue to threaten nations and continue to inject ourselves into the business of other nations without eventually finding ourselves in trouble. I believe the majority of citizens feel as I do."

Sen. Ellender (D.), of Louisiana: "It's silly to say that a United States ship would make an attack to try and get us into war. That's just typical German propaganda."

No Comment at Hyde Park.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 6 (A. P.).—White House officials said that they would consider the source of a German communique on the case of the U. S. S. Greer and would not reply.

William D. Hassett, acting presidential secretary, was advised of the contents of the German statement.

"I'll show this to the President when I have a chance," he said. "But considering its source, I don't think any comment is necessary. It carries its own comment. I think it's a typical comment, considering its source."

Asked whether he took the communique to mean that it definitely was a German undersea craft which tried to sink the Greer, Hassett replied:

"Apparently, from this. Your interpretation is as good as mine."

WILLKIE CALLS FOR "FORCE" IN GREER'S CASE

Urges U. S. To Use "Determination" In Meeting Challenge On Seas

Addresses Yugoslavs On King's Birthday—Peter Replies From London

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 6—Wendell L. Willkie today called on the United States to use "determination and force" to meet Germany's challenge to its policy of freedom of the seas.

Speaking on a radio program celebrating the eighteenth birthday of the exiled King Peter of Yugoslavia, the 1940 Republican Presidential nominee declared "once again, savage and bestial might has challenged the right of America to freedom of the seas.

Would Serve Notice

"I know I speak the overwhelming sentiment of my fellow Americans in urging the President to meet the challenge with determination and force," Willkie said.

"I hope, and I know you hope, that the President of the United States serves notice on Nazi Germany that the United States expects its ships to go unmolested in their passage across the North Atlantic, and those interfering with them will receive the result they are entitled to.

Addresses Yugoslavs

"There are certain things a nation cannot yield without losing strength, and certain things a people cannot yield without losing soul. I hope America will lose neither her strength nor her soul."

Addressing himself to the exiled King and the people of Yugoslavia as "a nation that did not lose its soul," Willkie paid tribute to their moral courage in meeting the Nazi challenge.

Speaking from London, King Peter said:

"At this moment all our efforts must be directed to one aim: To deliver our country as soon as possible, with the assistance of our mighty allies and the great American democracy."

Simovich Sends Greeting

Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York asserted that Hitler's policy of "divide and rule" had prevailed in the Nazi destruction of a score of nations which have been attacked, singly, and added: "Pray God that we in this country may not make the same fatal mistake."

Before the King spoke, Gen. Dusan Simovich, Prime Minister, also broadcasting from London, sent a greeting to Americans of Yugoslav origin.

The luncheon was one of a series in cities from coast to coast arranged by American friends of Yugoslavia.

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 6—The Navy Department tonight bluntly disputed a claim from Berlin that the destroyer Greer had been the aggressor in an engagement with a German submarine off Iceland and reiterated that "the initial attack was made by the sumarine on the Greer."

The navy issued the following statement:

"Notwithstanding German contentions appearing in today's press that the Greer was the aggressor in its action with the submarine, the facts are the same as originally stated by the Navy Department—namely, that the initial attack in this engagement was made by the submarine on the Greer. It was then, and not until then, that the Greer counter-attacked."

'Belligerent Vs. Belligerent'

Tokyo, Sept. 6 (AP)—The newspaper Hochi dismissed the Greer incident today as "nothing but that a belligerent destroyer was attacked by a submarine in belligerent waters."

The United States is no longer really neutral since she occupied Iceland, the newspaper said.

Germans Mum On Any Other Operations

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 6—An extraordinarily brief high command communique reported from the eastern front today only that attack operations were "progressing favorably."

There was no specific mention of the battle for Leningrad, around which yesterday's war bulletin said siege lines had been drawn so close that heavy guns were pounding the city's defense area.

Informed Germans said the Russians lost forty-nine planes yesterday during air battles and Luftwaffe raids on air bases.

Heavy German air attacks in the vicinity of besieged Odessa, on the Black Sea coast, were said to have done great damage to port facilities and to four ships totaling 17,000 tons, and caused numerous casualties among Russian defense forces.

The defenders of Leningrad now have only a theoretical channel of escape—over Lake Ladoga to the east, German military writers declared.

The Germans said no large-scale operations against the city itself had yet been ordered.

The report that the rail town of Schluesselburg on the south shore of Lake Ladoga, twenty miles east of Leningrad, also was within range of Nazis batteries was cited as evidence that encirclement of the metropolis was completed.

The central sector of the front apparently was coming into the spotlight again after having faded from the picture following the big battle of the Smolensk salient. Foreign Office officials hinted that heavy fighting again was in progress there, with Panzer divisions making new gains. DNB said 30,000 prisoners had been taken in recent central-sector operations.

Weather Hampers Nazis

Bad weather and rain again were reported making German advances difficult, however.

The authoritative commentary Dienst aus Deutschland said the Germans had found Soviet soldiers the toughest fighting men they had met—equipped in some cases with weapons even more deadly than those the Germans had—but it said Soviet military leadership was weakened by continual shakeups.

Nazis Claim New Break Through Leningrad Line

BY ERNEST FISCHER

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sunday, Sept. 7—Germans reported today that they had penetrated the defenses of Leningrad in at least one place after attacks by strong German air force units and long-range artillery bombardment.

Kurt Stolzenberg, war correspondent, wrote that "we found a soft place in the defense belt around Leningrad and advanced further."

While the site of the advance was not specified, the correspondent said his units approached the former Czarist capital on "forest lanes and byways." The description indicated that German motorcycle units were established in a town near Leningrad.

Losses Ascribed To Shelling

"Around our town resound shots fired by our batteries," wrote Stolzenberg, "and hits in the forests sound as if heavy, high gates were rumbling in a castle."

The news agency DNB said that Russian field and artillery positions were subdued by powerful blows of German bombers and that the Russians "suffered exceptionally heavy losses."

Great concentrations of Soviet troops in the Leningrad are- were declared to have been scattered as the German forces sought to win the city.

Run Into More Obstacles

Stolzenberg said that as the Germans approached Leningrad more and more obstacles were presented—highways broken by mine traps, mine fields and tree trunk and concrete fortresses.

Men, women and children, he wrote, were used in the preparation of these defenses.

German artillery bombardment of Leningrad continued with heavy guns effectively hitting targets which included electric power plants and a munitions factory, German dispatches from the front reported tonight.

War Reports Meager

Discussion of the Greer case diverted attention from developments on the east front, and although the war raged furiously over much of it authentic reports were meager. The high command in just one sentence today said the German operations were "progressing favorably."

A German dispatch from the front stated that in the past few hours the Germans had made progress southeast of Gomel on the central front to a position which was beginning to menace the rea defenses of Kiev, industrialized capital of the Ukraine.

It was claimed also that the Germans had gained considerable territory east of Velikie Luki, which lies south of Lake Ilmen and about one hundred miles from the Latvian border.

On the lower Dnieper river in the Ukraine another Russian cannon boat was reported destroyed. A dispatch declared that boats of this type, averaging 200 tons, were asigned to break up German efforts to cross the river, which is beginning to figure in the news as one of Russia's strongest defenses in the southeast.

There have been frequent clashes along the river between Germans and the Russian shore artillery. The Germans claim to have destroyed about forty river boats since August 21.

In the vicinity of Odessa, besieged Russian Black Sea port, heavy German air attacks were said to have greatly damaged port facilities and four ships totalling 17,000 tons and to have inflicted numerous casualties among Russian defense forces.

Leningrad Rail Zone Cleared, Reds Say

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Sept. 6—Russian forces, pressing counter-attacks on the approaches to Leningrad were reported today to have driven the Germans out of an entire zone along a vital railway after a three-day battle.

The Russian counter-blows still were smashing at the Germans, this report said.

It did not specifically locate the area claimed to have been cleared of the invaders but designated it as the zone between railway station "F" and village "N".

HELSINKI, Sept. 6 (AP).—The Finns maintained today that Leningrad had become a doomed city, with the glare of fires visible from the Finnish frontier and with hunger and sickness stalking its desperate millions.

The report declared that thousands of men, women and children—lacking even shelter—slept in parks and clearings.

Rail Lines Reported Cut

Rail lines linking the city with the rest of Russia were said to have been severed.

"Motor traffic," the communique said, "is equally haphazard and unorganized. It no longer is possible to transport inhabitants from the suburbs and rural districts into the city even though they had been ordered to proceed there.

"It is becoming wholly impossible to procure food. Bread is no longer on sale in the shops. People eat what they have stored at home, if anything. Sickness already is becoming rampant because of poor food and inadequate shelter."

Artillery Duel Reported

Thick autumn fog hung over the northwest sector where heavy artillery batteries are dueling in the bitter struggle over Russia's second largest city.

A Red Star dispatch said thirty German planes, flying despite the fog, attempted to bomb military objectives outside Leningrad but that fifteen were downed and the others fled. Two of those fleeing were said to have been destroyed trying to reach their base.

Heavy Losses Reported

One unit of Marshal Klementi Voroshilov's forces defending Leningrad was reported by the army newspaper to have crossed the river "CH" and to have driven south, killing or wounding almost the equivalent of a German regiment and destroying an artillery company.

Another unit was said to have surrounded a German tank column which had been dug in, a third to have knifed in behind the Germans, severing a highway communications line and two others to have pierced the German front at other points, destroying equipment and supplies.

At the opposite end of the battlefront the Red army's defense ring around besieged Odessa was declared to have withstood a heavy assault and the press reported the Nazis stalled and set back outside of Kiev after two major attacks in the past month.

Along the entire battlefront fighting is raging without letup, the Soviet midday communique declared as the war neared the end of its eleventh week.

Citizens At Front

The communique declared Red army defenders of the big Black Sea port at the southern end of the battle line had been joined by Russian sailors, and military reports from the port said citizen soldiers, too, were taking part in the defense.

Without specifying on what front, the war report said units of the Fifteenth German Division had been beaten back with 700 killed and 200 captured. Russian forces were said to have seized eighteen cannon, eight Howitzers, six tanks, an armored car and quantities of light arms and ammunition.

This evidently was in the Odessa region. Other Russian reports said Rumanian forces besieging the port tried to wipe out a Russian artillery battery but failed and lost more than a battalion in dead and wounded.

Red army troops also were reported locked in a great battle with a large German force in an undisclosed sector in the center of the line.

Russian forces counter-attacking on the central front were said to be supported strongly by the air force. Red Star, the army newspaper, credited one squadron with destroying 42 grounded German airplanes, 110 tanks, 600 vehicles and killing more than 3,000 men in the past few days.

The Tass agency dispatch said that the Germans launched a powerful onslaught against the Ukraine's capital as early as August 8 and still were being held off after a second assault twenty days later.

The Russians fell back under the initial impact of the first attack, it was acknowledged, but the German drive was stalled on the second day and the yielded ground was reported recaptured in a counter-attack.

The Germans massed every kind of arms for their advance on Kiev, this dispatch said, and brought up the Forty-fourth, Ninety-fifth and Two Hundred and Ninety-ninth infantry divisions, including about three and a half regiments of artillery.

Attack Reported Launched

After checking the Nazi advance, the dispatch continued, the Red Army silenced the German artillery and turned its might against the invading forces.

So swift was the German retreat, Tass reported, that some of the Nazi dead lay unburied when the Russians moved into reoccupied villages. German losses in wounded also ran high, it said.

All three divisions were routed and important staff documents captured, the agency reported, adding:

"Orders of the day of the German command refer to tremendous losses and order immediate reformation of divisions, merging the shattered units into battalions and continuation of the fight with available effectives without expecting reinforcement. . . ."

Meanwhile sabre-swinging Cossack cavalrymen were reported raiding deep behind German lines.

MASSED BLOWS BY AIR FORCE POUND PANZERS

Mopping Up Of One Zone And Pinching Of Wedge Reported

Counter-Attacks Also Aid Defense Of Odessa

And Kiev

BY HENRY CASSIDY

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Sunday, Sept. 7—The Red army claimed today to have driven the Germans out of vital approaches to Leningrad with fierce counter-attacks, while the Red air force gave full backing with "massed blows" upon invading Panzer troops, infantry and artillery.

The Soviet midnight communique again declared the battle raged on all fronts yesterday. But the fight in the Leningrad sector was the greatest and the most vital of the Russian-German war, which entered its twelfth week today.

The rival armies fought in the northwest over battlefields darkened by rain and fog.

Claim Major Base Crushed

Dispatches to the army newspaper Red Star declared the troops of Marshal Klementi Voroshilov, defending Russia's second city, mopped up one occupied zone south of Leningrad, pinched off another German armored wedge, penetrated the German lines at several points and crushed one major Nazi air base in never-ceasing counter-thrusts.

The Russians also were employing the counter-attacks at Kiev and Odessa, the other great cities to which the Germans have approached closely. They were said to be repulsing or holding the besiegers.

The communique did not elaborate on the deeds of the air force yesterday, but the role the Red artillery is playing was seen in the official report that "thousands of German soldiers, hundreds of tanks, armored cars and lorries, scores of artillery minethrowers and machine-gun batteries have been annihilated by the accurate fire of our guns."

Lists Toll Claimed In Day

The communique said that on one single day—last Thursday—the Soviet artillery killed at least 15,000 German officers and men and destroyed over one hundred guns of various caliber, and much materiel.

Marshal Voroshilov's Leningrad troops have driven the Germans from an entire sector along a railway in a three-day battle, Red Star reported.

Another unit there crossed the river "C H" and pushed southward, destroying a Nazi artillery company and a regiment of troops, Red Star said; a third surrounded a German Panzer force of forty tanks, and a fourth swept around behind the Germans farther south to cut their highway communications.

German Planes Attack

Despite the poor visibility, thirty German planes tried to bomb military objectives outside Leningrad and seventeen of them were shot down, Red Star said.

In the Novgorod district, about one hundred miles south of Leningrad, guerrillas were credited with discovering two German airdromes which the Red air force promptly bombed, destroying seventy-four planes on the ground and killing many of the crews.

At an undisclosed part of the central front, a great battle was reported still in progress, with the Red air force strongly supporting the infantry. One Russian air squadron there destroyed forty-two grounded German planes, 110 tanks and 600 other vehicles and killed more than 3,000 Nazis in the past few days, Soviet accounts said.

Possibly this battle was in the Gomel sector, since that was the last central point mentioned in a Russian communique and has been the scene of repeated Soviet counter-offensives.

Says Kiev Stands Firm

Farther south, the Ukrainian capital of Kiev, which was an established town before history was written, stood firm against the invaders who have threatened it for many weeks past.

Russian artillery paved the way for counter-attacks which thrust the German infantry out of the village of "K" in front of Kiev, Red Star reported. Red army infantry then drove the demoralized Germans five kilometers (about three miles) outside the village, it added.

Tass said Kiev had smashed two major attempts at conquest within the past month.

Lists Three Divisions Routed

One was begun on August 8 with three divisions of German soldiery and three and a half regiments of artillery, Tass stated. All three divisions were listed as routed.

A new onslaught came on August 28 from the reformed remnants of the German force. Again the Russians hurled it back with heavy losses, Tass said.

Odessa Reported Turned Into a Giant Fortress

Soviet Writer Says Besieged City Is Impregnable

MOSCOW, Sept. 6 (AP).—Ezra Vilensky, a Soviet writer, who recently returned from Odessa, where he was a war sorrespondent for "Izvestia," official government newspaper, said today that Odessa had become a giant fortress surrounded by outer fortifications so thick and high that neither tanks nor shells could crush them.

The citizen volunteers of that port, which is situated strategically atop 150-foot bluffs, have torn up the streets to make barricadss of the cobblestones, he said. The fortifications are a series of rings, so built that the city can be captured "only if no single person inside remains alive," Vilensky said. They are being built under direction of Arkady F. Khrenov, a veteran of the Finnish war and hero of the Soviet Union.

Vilensky said the city had been under siege since August 8, after Germans and Rumanians cut it off. Women, children and aged still are being removed by the Russian Black Sea fleet, he said, adding that not a single evacuation ship had been sunk, despite German mines and air bombings.

He wrote that Russian land, naval and air forces were working together to defend Odessa, and that German raids were diminishing in number and force, while Red Army artillery, supplied from the sea, remained dominant in the area.

Of eleven Rumanian divisions which he said were thrown into the battle on this front, Vilensky estimated that four were completely routed. He asserted that Rumanian losses were immense. "I myself saw a long, high mountain of corpses," he wrote.

Cossacks Crash Front, Raid Nazi Rear 2 Weeks

Then Ride Through Battalion to Red Lines Again

MOSCOW, Sept. 6 (AP).—Elaborating on a communique praising behind-the-lines exploits of a Cossack cavalry detachment, Tass, the Russian news agency, said today that this force on Aug. 23 crashed through the German front, raided and pillaged in the rear for two weeks, and has just now returned to the Russian side after again piercing the Nazi formations.

On the morning of Aug. 23, in the fog of early dawn, the Cossacks crept up to the German lines, Tass said. With a yell the Cossacks attacked and made good their breakthrough after a six-hour battle.

At night, Tass said, the Cossacks took refuge in a dense forest. By day they emerged at widely separated points, destroyed a German transport train at one village, wrecked fifty-eight cars and a staff headquarters at another.

Finally they started back, only to find that the Germans had felled trees to make a great fence around their forest hideout. With a wild rush the Cossacks hurdled it through a hailstorm of German machine-gun and automatic rifle fire and rode down the German infantry battalion that stood in their way.

Moscow Says Polish Guerillas Are Active

Attacks On Gendarmes And Uprising Over Crop Requisitions Are Reported

Moscow, Sunday, Sept. 7—"The guerrilla movement keeps growing in Poland," the Soviet communique says today. "Attacks on gendarmes and police have become a usual occurrence and are admitted even by the Fascist press.

"Outbreaks started in villages in the vicinity of the town of Radomsko and lasted several days. The immediate reason for the revolt was the requisitioning of the newly harvest crop. A punitive detachment of twenty German gendarmes and policemen dispatched from Radomsko was met by rifle and revolver fire.

"The [illegible] killed the detachment annihilated. A German company sum[illegible] Czenstochovo also sustained considerable casualties before it retreated also."

Reds to Double Coal Output

MOSCOW, Sept. 6 (AP).—Plans to double Siberian coal production, where two-thirds of Russia's coal deposits are situated, were announced today in "Izvestia," government newspaper. Much of the increased output, planned in preparation for the coming winter campaign, was expected in the Kuznetsk Basin, between the Urals and Lake Baikal, 2,000 miles from the fighting front.

DRIVE AT BAKU IN OCTOBER IS FORECAST

Ankara Observer Says Nazis Are Massing Boats At Bulgarian Ports

Believes Hitler Is Seeking To Force Sofia To Put Troops In Field

By PRESTON GROVER

Associated Press Correspondent

Ankara, Sept. 6—Germany was declared by a foreign observer here today to have planned a combined land and sea campaign before the end of October" against the Baku oil fields and the new British-Russian supply line through Iran.

He said his information was direct from Sofia, capital of Axis-dominated Bulgaria.

Germany already is massing speedy torpedo boats and submarines, he said he was informed, at Bulgarian Black Sea ports to challenge the preponderent, but heavy Soviet Russian fleet. Craft of both types are moved overland to sea ports, the U-boats in sections.

Forecasts Dnieper Push

A heavy Nazi drive was forecast along the lower Dnieper river, with the double purpose of crossing that strategic stream and tying up Red army forces which otherwise could be diverted to meeting the sea attack.

The foreign source declared parachutists were training both Bulgaria and Croatia in preparation for the southern operations.

This military activity was reported as evidence accumulated that Germany was encountering trouble on the eastern fringe of her far-flung war effort.

Rumanians Cite Losses

The Bulgarian Parliament is now enacting a series of new anti-sabotage regulations and from Rumania came traveler reports of growing discontent at the use of Rumanian troops for the continued invasion of Russia after the regaining of all territory she had once ceded to the U. S. S. R. Heavy Rumanian losses at the onset of the campaign are reported to have been increased with the siege of Odessa.

The Bulgarian Parliament established the death penalty for serious cases of war profiteering today and voted to remove Communist and Anarchist adherents from office.

Observers here discount recurrent reports that Germans are massing roops in Bulgaria, but assert that Germany is seeking to force the Balkan nation to enter at least a few divisions in the war against Russia.

Others See Peace Until March

Most military and political observers in Ankara said they expected Turkey and the Middle East to have peace until March.

The delay in Germany's drive to the east, they said, had removed Turkey from consideration as a possible theater of war this autumn.

Most of them summed up the argument in two points:

1. Britain is unable at this time even to dream of launching a drive through the Balkans, even with Turkish help, which is unlikely to be obtained for aggressive action.

30.24 -11647

30.24 — 11647

2. Germans are unlikely to add 2,000,000 Turkish soldiers to the long list of their present enemies by attempting to break through toward the Persian Gulf and Suez or to strike the Russians from the rear.

But all hedged their forecasts in some ways. As one expressed it, "you never can tell what Hitler has up his sleeve."

Nazis Blast Hopes Of States For Resurrection By Germany

Article Distributed By High Command Says Restoration Of Powers Is "Solely Up To Führer"

SEP 7 1941

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER
Associated Press Correspondent

Berlin, Sept. 6—Dr. Hans Keller, president of the Academy for the Rights of Peoples, in an article distributed by the German high command today blasted away any hopes that "Germany after defeating her opponents" will "resurrect all those states which the storm of war has swept away."

The new order in Europe can only be a German order, he said.

Dr. Keller said Germany does not deny in principle the right of a people to its own state, but he argued:

"The essence of a state is might. Either one has might or one hasn't. In the latter case it is small consolation to have a well-founded right to might.

"A whole series of powers has proven too weak to oppose British imperialism on the one hand or Soviet imperialism on the other," he continues.

"They fell to Germany. It is solely up to the Führer to determine what measure of power he will give back to the peoples within the German Reich.

"He alone is responsible for this decision before his conscience as a German and thereby as a European. Whether his gift to these peoples will be a 'state' or perhaps an 'order' is secondary in importance once there is clarity concerning the nature of a state and its relationship to the peoples."

Neues Volk (New People), a periodical issued by the Racial Political Office of the Nazi party, at the same time pointed out that the "new order" to be established by Germany does not mean "Paneuropa."

"We do not want any mixing of various peoples and races, but the maintenance of the characteristics of each people," this organ announced. "There must, therefore, not be created a disorder of blood by the mixing of the races.

"Each people will have to contribute to this new order of Europe, but primarily it will be 85,000,000 Germans who will be . . . the formative power of this continent."

British Try Out Blitz Noises On Test Group

SEP 7 1941

By Eddy Gilmore
Associated Press Foreign Correspondent

London, Sept. 6—Workers, children and bomb-shocked neurotics were led into dark and cold tomb-like vaults in London today and, in one of the most horrible experiments of the war, were exposed to an artificial Blitz-bombing calculated to be just exactly as terrifying as the real thing.

Air raid precaution officials and physicians conducted the experiment with a view to preparing Britons for things to come in a fall and winter which government leaders have predicted will bring German raids perhaps worse than those of last year.

Wide-eyed, expecting anything, the subjects of the test huddled together as they were led underground. Some clutched the hands of others. A switch was turned, and there began a terrible sound—the raw reproduction of air raid noises.

Real Bombings Recorded

The noise, nothing concocted in a sounds-effect studio, was the real thing, recorded during one of London's worst raids last year.

Screaming sirens in a sinking and rising wail filled the vault with ominous notes. Presently, "Bang! Bang! Bang!" went the guns. The drone of bombers was heard as overhead.

The sounds swelled in the dark vault. The guns kept banging. Then big bombs burst. The guns kept up. More bombs. Then the crackle of flames. Next clanging fire engines added their noise, the other sounds continuing.

The experimenters, fearing lest they try their subjects too hard, softened the sounds momentarily to see how the people were standing the realistic reproduction.

Wails And Screams Heard

No one was crying out. A flashlight swung around the room, revealing drawn faces and frightened eyes. But no one was swooning. The experimenters stepped up the amplification.

Pandemonium broke loose. To the awful accompaniment were added wails and screams, and the shouted orders of wardens and firefighters and doctors.

After this climax the noises gradually died out. At all clear the people were led from the vaults.

The physicians questioned those who had been through it. It was terrifying, they agreed, but they said they were glad for having been through it.

Fear Immunization Sought

The ARP was overjoyed with the results. The suggestion was advanced that whole populations be put through the experiment to make them "immune, through familiarity, to fear caused by air raid noises."

This is a psychological principle underlying a visual experiment now being run by the Government in motion-picture houses in various parts of the country. A film, said to have been captured from the Nazis, purporting to show the German campaign against Russia with all the terrors of war clearly set forth, is being shown to harden the population.

The Germans are said to hope for the opposite effect—morale-breaking.

Neurotics Sent In

This first air raid experiment was conducted in the vaults of the Church of England Temperance Society's home for treatment of people suffering from neuroses.

Some of these patients underwent the experiment, and there also were people brought in from nearby towns and the countryside.

"The theory is," said the ARP, "that you can accustom yourself to anything. And the things you know don't frighten like the unknown."

Fortresses Attack Oslo

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 6—High-flying American-built fortress planes of the British bomber command today attacked Axis shipping in the harbor of Oslo, Norway, the Air Ministry announced tonight.

A brief communique told of the attack on the German-occupied port as follows:

"In the course of high altitude reconnaissance this morning fortress aircraft of the bomber command attacked enemy shipping in Oslo harbor.

"None of our aircraft is missing."

Two Injured, Nazis Say

Berlin, Sept. 6 (AP)—DNB reported today that "enemy planes" made a bombing raid on Oslo Saturday noon and that two workmen were injured when two bombs fell in a garden beside a factory.

Windows were shattered by three bombs which fell in a suburb, the report said.

DNB said "enemy planes" bombed Oslo and that two workmen were injured when two bombs fell in a garden beside a factory.

Axis Ships In Harbor At Oslo Are Bombed By Flying Fortresses

London, Sept. 6 (AP)—Axis shipping in the harbor of Oslo, Norway, eighty miles up a pine-bordered fjord from the Skagerrak, was attacked today by American-built Fortress planes of the British bomber command, the Air Ministry said tonight.

Indicating that the major purpose of the flight was scouting, a brief communique said the German-occupied port was strafed "in the course of high altitude reconnaissance."

"None of our aircraft is missing," it reported.

Nazi Planes Bomb Suez Canal Area

Airport Set Afire in Raid; Claim 3 Ships Sunk

BERLIN, Sept. 6 (AP).—The Germans reported today their bombers attacked the Suez Canal area last night, causing destruction and fires at the Ismailia Airport.

The night before, the High Command said, three freighters totaling 14,000 tons, were sunk.

31 Killed In Raids In Libya

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Sept. 6—British planes killed thirty-one persons and injured fifty-six in bombing attacks on Tripoli and Barce, in Libya, the Italian high command declared today.

It said German warplanes raided British troop quarters and airfields around besieged Tobruk and the Egyptian town of Matruh.

The Italian communique said most of the casualties in the British bombings were patients in hospitals. They charged the British, too, with attacking a hospital in the Italian sector around Volchefit, Ethiopia.

The Italians said their troops forced the British to withdraw with numerous casualties from a fog-screened surprise attack in the Culquabert section of Ethiopia.

Planes Sink Ship, Nazis Say

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 6—A 3,000-ton British ship was sunk by German bombs last night off Sunderland, on the English east coast, informed Germans said today.

(The British said there was "nothing to report" with regard to German air activity during the night.)

Big Italian Liner Sunk: London

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 6—British submarines have sunk the 11,398-ton Italian liner Esperia off Tripoli and a second merchantman in a "successful attack on a southbound enemy convoy between Taranto and Bengasi," the Admiralty reported today.

The communique reporting the sinking of the big liner indicated that she was being used as a troopship.

A second communique identified the smaller merchantman as one of the Ramb class, which have been used by Italy for Indian Ocean commerce raiding.

Reinforcements Hinted

The direction and location—between the southern coast of Italy and the Libyan shore of North Africa—indicated that the intercepted convoy was taking reinforcements for Axis forces in Libya across the Mediterranean.

Military experts in London have been predicting that a deadlocked front in Russia this winter might bring a revival of the German-Italian offensive in the Mediterranean, with one Axis spearhead driving from Libya toward Suez, and the other from the Balkans or Russia into the Middle East.

Ninth Success In Two Days

The sinkings announced today brought to nine the number of ships reported sunk or damaged by the British in the last forty-eight hours. Yesterday the Admiralty reported the probable sinking of another liner of 23,000 tons which was believed to be carrying troops, the torpedoing of a 10,000-ton cruiser, the sinking of a destroyer outside Tripoli, the sinking of two supply ships in convoy and the damaging of two others.

Today's second communique said: "One of our submarines in the Central Mediterranean has carried out a successful attack on a southbound enemy convoy between Taranto and Bengasi.

"A ship of the Ramb class was torpedoed and sunk. The Ramb class of ships are fast vessels of just under 4,000 tons and are capable of 18½ knots speed.

"They are owned by the Italian Government. One of these ships was sunk by H. M. S. Leander six months ago when acting as a commerce raider in the Indian Ocean."

The first communique said:

"The Italian liner Esperia, 11,398 tons, has been torpedoed and sunk off Tripoli by one of our submarines.

2 British Ships Torpedoed

New York, Sept. 6 (AP)—The torpedoing of two vessels in British service and the capture of two French ships by the British were reported in shipping circles today.

The Saugara, a 5,448-ton British motor freighter, was torpedoed by a submarine, then beached at Accra on the African Gold Coast, reports said. The 945-ton Danish ship Elisabeth, flying the British flag, was sunk at an undisclosed position with the loss of eight men, including the master.

The captured ships were the steam trawlers Joseph Duhamel, 928 tons, and Senateur Duhamel, 913 tons. British warships took them to Gibraltar, where they and their cargoes are awaiting prize court action.

30th Submarine Loss Admitted By British

P3-3, Named In Admiralty Statement, Believed To Be One Of New Class

London, Sept. 6 (AP)—A British submarine, apparently of a new class, was given up for lost tonight by the Admiralty, the thirtieth undersea craft asknowledged lost by the British during the war.

The vessel, the P-33, is "overdue and must be considered lost," a communique said. Details were not given.

It was generally assumed that the P-33 represented a new class, since the latest edition of "Janes' Fighting Ships," the authoritative manual on the world's navies, carries no mention of any such designation.

BRITISH SINK ITALIAN LINER OFF TRIPOLI

11,398-Ton Esperia Cut Out Of Strong Escort By Sub, Admiralty Says

Believed To Be Troopship. Merchant Craft Down In Second Attack

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 6—An airport at Ismailia on the Suez Canal, where the British built extensive shops for the assembling of American warplanes, was destroyed last night in a devastating Luftwaffe raid on the canal area and Alexandria, 150 miles west, German reports said tonight.

A German eyewitness report said the airport no longer "exists."

BY WILLIAM KING
[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 6—Britain announced today for the second day in succession a successful attack on a large Italian liner in the Mediterranean believed to have been transporting troops to reinforce Axis armies in North Africa.

An Admiralty communique stated that the 11,398-ton liner Esperia was torpedoed by a British submarine and sunk off Tripoli, attacked while in "an exceptionally strongly escorted convoy" of destroyers, torpedo boats, motor torpedo boats and flying boats.

Used As Troopships

"Liners of this type are used by the enemy as troopships," observed the Admiralty in a comment similar to that used yesterday in announcing the torpedoing and "almost certain" sinking of a liner which the Admiralty thought was the 23,635-ton Duilio.

The Duilio, also southbound, was believed to have been carrying troops.

A successful attack on a second southbound Axis convoy in the Mediterranean also was announced, with submarines torpedoing and sinking a merchant ship of the 4,000-ton Ramb class between Taranto and Bengasi.

Some Serve As Raiders

Ships of this class, owned by the Italian Government, are fast and have been used as raiders. One of them was sunk in the Indian Ocean some months ago.

The presence of large liners in Italian convoys recently attacked in the Mediterranean "undoubtedly" indicates that the Axis is attempting to reinforce its armies in North Africa, one well-informed observer said tonight.

He added that it was reasonable to assume that "some of them are getting through, since it is impossible to sink every ship that sets out."

Purpose Considered

This observer said these signs of growing activity did not necessarily mean that the Axis was contemplating an early large-scale offensive from the Egyptian frontier.

It was explained that the Axis probably needs reinforcements to insure holding its present position in Libya during major operations elsewhere. The Axis also may hope, it was said, that the unusual movement would divert British attention from other war fronts.

Another possible conclusion was that the French are now opposing the use of Tunistan territorial waters for transport of Axis soldiers and supplies.

Little Data On Numbers

Italian transports in the past, it was said, have slipped across the narrow straits of Sicily and then hugged the coast toward Tripoli, giving British warships little opportunity to molest them without virtually attacking Tunisia itself.

There is no reliable indication here of how extensive the troop movements across the Mediterranean are, nor definite information on the numbers of German and Italian soldiers in Libya.

A liner of the Esperia size probably would carry about 5,000 troops, it was said.

R. A. F. Planes Bomb Axis North African Positions

Cairo, Sept. 6 (AP)—Heavy British dive-bombing and machine-gun attacks on Axis positions on the North African coast and a successful attack on shipping in the harbor of Cotrone in southern Italy were announced by the R. A. F. Middle East command today.

Many direct hits were scored on motor transport depots at Tripoli Thursday night, it was stated, with buildings collapsing under big explosions and large fires.

At Barce, in Cyrenaica, a strong force of heavy bombers was declared to have attacked railways sidings, workshops, barracks and an airdrome, a number of direct hits being scored.

Merchant Ship Hit

Tents, buildings, dispersed aircraft and gun positions were machine-gunned by low-flying planes.

In the Cotrone attack one large merchant ship was hit, after which an explosion occurred on board, the British said. Sicilian airdromes at Gerbini and Catania also were attacked.

Three persons were killed and one injured in the Suez Canal area by air raiders last night, a communique said.

Ship's Survivors Reach Port

London, Sept. 6 (AP)—His ship was attacked once by a submarine, twice by E-boats, twice by bombers, shelled in the Straits and finally bombed at its destination—all on one voyage.

Sub Attack Kills 4 U. S. Recruits In R. A. F.

[By the Associated Press]

Glasgow, Sept. 6—Four American recruits for the R. A. F. were drowned and two injured when the boat in which they were crossing the Atlantic was torpedoed, it was disclosed here today.

The names of the drowned were not immediately available.

Survivors, who were landed at a British port yesterday were:

TOM GRIFFIN, Mississippi.
JACK GILLILAND, Kansas.
RIVERS GROVE, Georgia.
NORMAN ECHORD, Missouri.
JAMES JORDAN, San Francisco.
B. F. MAYES, Texas.
ROBERT PERESHIN, California.

Mayes suffered arm injuries and Pereshin a broken leg. They were taken to a hospital.

Tells Startling Story

The survivors said they longed to get into action in the air.

William Beattie, Belfast seaman who was on the torpedoed ship, told a startling story of talking to the submarine commander after the attack.

"There were four of us in a lifeboat," he said, "and it was waterlogged when the submarine came to the surface. The commander seemed to be in his early twenties. He asked if any officers were on board.

Denies Firing Torpedo

"He seemed to be ashamed of what he'd done and asked us what caused the explosion. He said he had not fired a torpedo.

"I asked him if he could give us any water. He said he couldn't spare any but gave us four tins of meat and two bottles of rum."

Beattie said that when the submarine moved off it accidentally struck a wobbly lifeboat and the lifeboat's stern dipped.

"The submarine commander apologized," said Beattie, adding that he was German.

Beattie said the survivors clung to the lifeboat and rafts for twelve hours before being picked up by a Polish warship.

Seven Others Land At British Port, Two Of Them Injured—Seaman Tells Of Talk With German

[By the Associated Press]

Glasgow, Sept. 6—Four American airmen en route to England for service with the R. A. F. perished in the torpedoing of their ship by a submarine whose commander, one Irish survivor said, came to the surface and shame-facedly asked "what caused the explosion."

Seven others among the eleven American flying recruits aboard were landed at a British port yesterday. Two of them were injured.

The names of the dead were not available immediately.

Survivors Listed

The survivors were announced as:

TOM GRIFFIN, Mississippi.
RIVERS GROVE, Georgia.
NORMAN ECHORD, Kansas City.
JACK GILLILAND, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Gilliland, of Pittsburg, Kan.
JAMES JORDAN, San Francisco.
B. F. MAYES, Texas, who sustained arm injuries.
ROBERT PERESHIN, California, whose leg was broken.

Echord, whose mother lives in Seattle, left Kansas City August 19 to join the American Eagle Squadron in Britain.

Trained With British Unit

Echord, Gilliland, Grove, Mayes and Griffin trained with the British air unit at Tulsa, Okla. All eleven flyers received additional training in Canada.

William Beattie, Belfast seaman aboard the torpedoed ship, said that after the attack the submarine came to the surface amidst the survivor-laden lifeboats and rafts.

In a conversation with the U-boat commander, described by Beattie as a German in his early twenties, the Irish seaman related the latter disclaimed that his craft had fired a torpedo.

Says He Seemed Ashamed

"He seemed ashamed of what he had done and asked us what caused the explosion," Beattie related.

Beattie said he asked the submarine commander for water and that he replied he had none to spare but did hand over four tins of meat and two bottles of rum.

Upon moving off Beattie said the submarine accidentally struck a lifeboat and caused the wobbly craft to dip, bringing an apology from the submersible's commander.

For twelve hours the survivors clung to lifeboats and rafts before being rescued by a Polish warship, Beattie related.

British-Russian Terms Said to Call for Surrender of Residents

TEHERAN, Iran, Sept. 6 (AP)—British sources said today that British-Russian terms on Iran, received here last night, required unconditional surrender of the German colony for internment and made no promise of Russian withdrawal from Kazvin.

England To Aid Soviet Without Financial Limit

British Chancellor Of Exchequer Declares Help To Russia Is Gladly Given

Edinburgh, Scotland, Sept. 6 (AP)—Sir Kingsley Wood, Chancellor of the Exchequer, declared today that Britain would place no monetary limit on her financial assistance to Soviet Russia.

Describing British assistance to Russia as gladly given, he said in a speech that the Russians "have told us they would not wish any such financial help be provided as a gift. But they have asked for credit in so far as the help we give them is not matched by supplies they send us."

He said Britain was "standing up well" under the strain of a daily expenditure of 12,500,000 pounds sterling ($50,000,000) and expressed confidence that further taxation in the current financial year can be avoided if inflation is prevented.

YUGOSLAV KING, 18, PLANS PART IN WAR

Peter Wants to Become R.A.F. Pilot—Holds Time Is Ripe to Invade Italy

MASS MARKS BIRTHDAY

Refugee Monarch in London Says He Has No Regret for Opposing Hitler

BY EDDY GILMORE

LONDON, Sept. 6 (AP)—Refugee King Peter II of Yugoslavia, a tall, slim, shy youth, celebrated his eighteenth birthday anniversary today convinced that the time is ripe for a British invasion of Italy.

Th King has definite ideas about the prosecution of the war and the part he can play in it.

"I believe the British should invade Italy," he confided to an interviewer. "I think the time is ripe."

"I have no regret about the decision I took to fight it out with Hitler," he added while strolling through the quiet garden surrounding his mother's country house seventy mies from London.

He has been residing with Queen Marie since June, when he arrived in Britain by plane with only an extra suit, shoes and a pair of pajamas. About England he said:

"If I can't be with my people in my own land, I would rather be here."

Peter is preparing to enter Cambridge this Fall, but he appears to be interested most in becoming an R. A. F. pilot. He indicated that his hands had been itching to get at the controls of a plane ever since his arrival here.

He told recently of his flight from Yugoslavia to Athens when he piloted the plane most of the way because the pilot was exhausted from three straight nights of aerial combat.

As the head of an exiled government Peter has marched through munition plants, has shot off anti-aircraft guns, crawled through planes and walked over ships, always managing an interested expression.

One of the high marks in the celebration of his anniversary is a thanksgiving mass in the Greek Orthodox Church in London. This is to be followed by a reception. Peter does not like receptions, considers them stuffy.

Peter became King of Yugoslavia on March 27 in a military coup d'état that preceded the German invasion of his country. Normally he would have assumed the throne today.

Nazis Execute 3 Hostages

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, Sept. 6—The execution of three French hostages in reprisal for an attack on a sergeant of the German army of occupation in France last Wednesday was announced by the Germans today.

The executions—first of the reprisals threatened by the Germans in an effort to halt attacks on German troops of occupation—were announced in all Paris newspapers and in notices plastered on walls throughout the city.

Lined Up Against Wall

The hostages, taken from among thousands of Frenchmen held in prisons, were lined along a wall and shot by a German firing squad.

The German announcement said:

"August 22, as a result of the assassination of a member of the Germany army, it was announced that for any new attacks hostages would be shot.

"Despite this warning a member of the Germany army has been the victim of a new attack September 3. Inquiry has shown the guilty party could have been none other than a French Communist.

"As reprisals for this dastardly action three French hostages have been shot."

The three were not identified immediately. Neither has the German sergeant.

Vichy, Sept. 6—Three French hostages, reported selected from among Communist prisoners of a concentration camp, were executed by a German firing squad at Paris today in reprisal for an attack in which a German sergeant was slightly wounded three days ago.

Unofficial advices reaching Vichy reported that the three Frenchmen were removed from the Drancy Camp near Paris at dawn, lined up before a wall and shot to death. They were not identified.

SEP 7 1941

General von Schaumberg, commander of the city of Paris, in a military announcement published in Paris newspapers called attention to his warning of August 22 that hostages should be executed if further attacks should be made on German troops in the Paris region.

"Despite this warning," the announcement said, "a member of the German army has been the victim of a new attack September 3. Inquiry has shown the guilty party could have been none other than a French Communist. As reprisals for this dastardly action three French hostages have been shot."

The wounded German sergeant, who also has not been identified, suffered only a flesh wound and was reported recovering. He was shot once in the shoulder as he walked on the street near the East Station.

The Drancy Camp has been used for imprisonment of most of the French Communists arrested during demonstrations in Paris and its suburbs.

Send Minister To Paris

The French moved swiftly to set up legal machinery in an attempt to stamp out acts of terrorism which might lead to further reprisal executions.

At an inner Cabinet meeting it was decided that Pierre Pucheu, who as Minister of the Interior is in charge of French police, would leave for Paris soon on an urgent mission in connection with preservation of order.

The Council of Ministers also established a new state court with summary powers, with special emphasis on the seeking out of the men behind terroristic and anti-national plots.

At the same time, establishment of a special justice court under Marshal Petain's jurisdiction to hear cases of the political prisoners at Riom charged with "responsibility for defeat" was announced. These prisoners include former Premiers Paul Reynaud, Leon Blum and Edouard Daladier and Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin.

The new court will report directly to the Chief of State before October 15. It replaces the Riom investigation court which was charged with a preliminary inquiry into the facts leading to France's defeat by Germany.

The Cabinet was believed to have taken up with Marshal Petain the questions of lineup of Government functionaries under the present Vichy regime.

It was learned that beginning October 1 Max Ungrand, the Interior Ministry's representative at Paris, will strengthen his staff with two new officials designated to place more emphasis on the preservation of order.

Darlan's Power Grows

In another reorganization today Vice-Premier Admiral Jean Darlan gained more power as Marshal Petain's administrative service was attached to his office. By this Darlan received possible direction of a proposed network of commissars of public power, a new general staff of national defense and other new services.

A Bordeaux summary court for Communists started functioning today with five Red suspects being sentenced to four years' imprisonment. A Poiters Court sentenced some railroad workers yesterday to 3-to-10 years in prison for Communist activity.

At Periguex six received sentences ranging up to twenty years at hard labor on like charges.

The Paris special courts continue to grind out cases. Two more were sentenced to jail terms yesterday.

SEP 7 1941

Gabriel Peri, former Deputy who escaped after he had been sentenced with forty-three other Communists before the German invasion, has been recaptured and faces trial.

Darlan's Power Greater In Vichy Reorganization

Several Services Are Added to Vice-Premier's Office

VICHY, Sept. 6 (AP).—Vice-Premier Admiral Jean Darlan gained more power in the Vichy government today when a sweeping reorganization attached to his office Chief of State Marshal Henri Petain's administrative service and gave him direction of a proposed network of commissars of public power, a new general staff of national defense and other new services.

General Henri Dentz, France's Near East commander, due here today from Syria after his release from British custody, was expected to head the new general staff. Dentz is considered the new army strong man because of his defense against the British and Free French invasion of Syria last spring.

Jean Jardel, who worked under Yves Bouthilliers, Minister of National Economy and Finance, was made Secretary General to the Vice-Premier. Jardel will sit in on inner Cabinet meetings and will examine in advance anything submitted for Petain's signature. He will have a rear admiral and an army colonel as aides.

Leahy Nabs Yank From Vichy Cops

Perpignan, France (At the Spanish Frontier), Sept. 6 (AP).—United States Ambassador William D. Leahy came to the rescue of Varian M. Fry, French-arrested African social worker, and took him into Spain today as a member of his official party.

Fry, arrested at Marseille and ordered to leave the country allegedly for being "pro-Jewish and anti-Nazi," was brought to the frontier last Sunday but the Spanish Government refused to let him cross because he lacked a Spanish visa.

Ambassador Leahy stopped off while en route to Barcelona for a conference with Myron C. Taylor, President Roosevelt's envoy to the Vatican, and took him along to the Spanish city.

Rumania Lauds Her Axis Tie

Berlin, Sept. 6 (AP)—DNB reported from Bucharest today that a Government proclamation marking the first anniversary of King Mihai's ascension to the throne praised Rumania's alliance with the Axis.

The proclamation said the alliance not only enabled Rumania to protect its traditions, which "were threatened by Bolshevik hordes," but also helped the country to free Rumanian soil in the east, the news agency reported.

(Russia took over the Rumanian provinces of Bessarabia and northern Bucovina in June, 1940. Rumania, fighting alongside Germany, has regained them.)

Declaring that he "did not doubt England's and America's defeat," he said: "The old Norwegian possessions of Spitzbergen, Greenland and the Shetlands, Orkneys and Hebrides will be restored to the north whereby our natural living space and the basis of our position of power in the world and on the seas will be rendered secure.

German Police Rule Emblem Must Be Used By All When Appearing in Public

Berlin, Sept. 6 (AP)—German police today ordered that all Jews over 16 years of age must wear a yellow, six-pointed Star of David on the left side of the coat whenever appearing in public.

The regulation prescribed a star as "large as the palm of the hand."

Jews were further forbidden to leave the community in which they live without written permission from local police.

The order applies not only to greater Germany but also to the protectorate of Bohemia.

Kottbus Toolmaker Gets Year, Three Others Six Months

BERLIN, Sept. 6 (AP).—A German toolmaker at Kottbus has been sentenced to a year's imprisonment because he was repeatedly absent from work, the press reported tonight.

Nazis Ousting Nicaragua Consuls

Berlin, Sept. 6 (AP)—An authorized spokesman said today that Germany had asked Nicaragua to close her consulates in German-occupied countries.

No reason was given for the action, but the request apparently was in line with the closing of embassies and legations of other foreign nations in those territories. Consulates in Germany would not be affected by the request, the spokesman said.

(Dispatches from Nicaragua last night quoted President Anastacio Somoza as saying Nicaragua had been requested to withdraw consular officials from both Germany and Nazi-occupied countries.)

Havana, Sept. 6 (AP)—Three German consuls expelled from Cuba for propaganda activities sailed with their families today for New York aboard the Spanish ship Marques de Comillas.

Four other Nazi consuls, including one who has since died, also were expelled. It was not learned tonight, however, whether the remaining three have departed.

Mexico City, Sept. 6—Show windows of seven agencies handling United States-made automobiles were smashed and swastikas painted on their facades early today.

NAZI TAX REPORTED PAID IN ARGENTINE

Declared Levied on Wages of Germans There.

Buenos Aires, Sept. 6 (A. P.).—German residents here and their Argentine-born sons are being taxed from 4 to 32 per cent of their wages to maintain a Nazi political organization in Argentina, says a report made to the House of Deputies by the congressional committee investigating anti-Argentine activities.

All employees of German-owned or controlled business houses and industries in Argentina regularly contribute, some without consent, to a fund designed to promote Nazi propaganda in South America, the report asserts. Submitted to the House late yesterday, the report declares the alleged Nazi tax system works this way:

The German Ambassador, Edmund von Thermann, appointed collectors for each German business place; the collectors deducted payments from salaries before the employees got their checks, and the money was turned over to the treasury of German labor unions, which placed it in accounts in German banks here. The German Ambassador then drew against the accounts, making out checks to cash. Recipients cannot be traced easily because Argentine law does not require indorsement of such checks.

The British blacklist has not been made public.

1200 Refugees Reach Havana After 17 Days on 'Hell Ship'

By the Associated Press.

HAVANA, Sept. 6.—A creaky, refugee-laden old Spanish ship, described as "the saddest vessel ever to reach Havana," steamed into port last night with 1200 homeless Europeans, jammed into her cargo holds, decks and even lifeboats.

It was the end of a ghastly 17-day voyage for the refugees aboard the 5743-ton merchantship Navemar, built with accommodations for only 15. About 300 will land here, the remainder going on to New York.

Launches circled the ship and from aboard her came the same story in German, French and Spanish: "It was an awful trip."

Four passengers died. There were seven expectant mothers aboard.

It will be some time before any are permitted to land, since a rigorous health and customs inspection first must be made.

the ship left Lisbon died en route, and a fifth at Bermuda.

List Of Dead

Their names were given as Mrs. Helen Schnitzler, sister-in-law of Arthur Schnitzler, Austrian writer; a Mrs. Robert and three men named Stein, Sharfstein and Wizel.

Among the passengers are Mrs. Ida Rapaport Chagoll, daughter of Marc Chagoll, Frenchman said to be exhibiting at the Museum of Modern Art in New York, and her husband.

"We had no baths, no running water, and the food and water were bad," Mrs. Chagoll said. "We are well only because the hope of reaching a free land kept our spirits up."

Trip Of 1,101 Refugees Called 17 Days Of "Hell On Earth"

Packed Like Sardines In Old Ship, They Find It Far Better Than Concentration-Camp Life

SEP 7 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Havana, Sept. 6—Seventeen days of "hell on earth" were pictured today by passengers among 1,101 refugees brought across the Atlantic crammed in the holds of an old Spanish freighter, but, as one elderly and bent man put it, "you are unable to imagine how much better it was than at my concentration camp."

Conditions aboard the 5,473-ton ship Navemar—built originally with accommodations for only fifteen passengers—were frightful, the passengers related, with men, women and children packed like sardines and sleeping in tiers in the holds, under hatches, in and under lifeboats and on the decks.

Called Nightmare

But for the conglomerate group of travel-weary Germans, Frenchmen, Poles, Czechs and Russians, the voyage was a nightmare. The thing now, a spokesman said, was to get a new start in the New World.

Of the refugees, 330 will remain in Cuba, the others going on to the United States.

Four of those who were aboard when Navemar here for hospitalization.

Capt. Manuel Martinez said he and his crew did the best they could under the circumstances, and, despite the complaints, Cuban health authorities agreed it was a remarkably healthy ship in view of the conditions.

The captain said most of his passengers were from German and French concentration camps.

The service said the first leg of the flight by a five-man Dutch crew was made from San Diego to Honolulu in the record time of 16 hours and 50 minutes. Between Guam and Wake Islands the plane was kept aloft 26 hours by a hurricane.

Australia Names London Minister

[By the Associated Press]

Sydney, Australia, Sept. 6—Dr. Sir Earle C. G. Page, Minister of Commerce, has been appointed special minister from Australia to London.

Sir Earle was named yesterday after former Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies, now Minister of Defense Coordination, had declined the post on the ground he did not believe he could speak will full authority for Australia.

Menzies resigned as Prime Minister August 28 after a quarrel with the minority Labor party which objected to a Cabinet-approved proposal to send him to London. The Labor party insisted the situation in the Pacific was too grave for the Prime Minister to leave.

Sir Earle is expected to confer with President Roosevelt on lend-lease and Pacific problems during a stop-over in the United States.

U. S. Alert For Japan Blockade

SEP 7 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 6—American officials watched the North Pacific today for any sign that Japan—after failing to stop the first two American tankers carrying oil to Russia—would attempt to blockade Vladivostok by declaring a "safety zone" across the sea lanes between the chain of Japanese islands which almost encircle the Siberian port.

Authorities on international law said that aside from involving the traditional American policy of freedom of the seas, any such action by Japan might be interpreted by Russia as a violation of the Treaty of Portsmouth, which ended the Russo-Japanese war in 1905.

Third Tanker On Way

If the Japanese intended to do anything to prevent American oil deliveries to Russia, it was said, they missed the boat at the very start by failing to intercept the tanker L. P. St. Clair, which reached Vladivostok on Thursday with 95,000 barrels of high-octane gasoline.

A second tanker, the Associated, was reported to have arrived at Vladivostok yesterday with a cargo of aviation gasoline.

Still another tanker was said to be due there tomorrow or Monday.

Free Seas Insisted Upon

Although the State Department has never confirmed that Japan lodged representations against the oil shipments, it is conceded that Japanese Ambassador Nomura probably mentioned the question in talks with Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

If the question was raised, it was said in informed quarters, Hull probably informed the Ambassador that the United States still maintained the policy of freedom of the seas and any interference with American shipping would be considered on that basis.

U. S. GENERAL LAUDS SOVIET AIR MISSION

John B. Brooks Says He Never Saw Group So 'Intensely All Business'

Four Men At Spokane Dive Into Study Of Latest American Craft

[By the Associated Press]

Spokane, Wash., Sept. 6—Intent on learning everything regarding United States military plane operation in the quickest possible time, four members of a Russian aviation mission inspected the headquarters setup of the Second Air Force today.

"They have come here to acquaint themselves with and study latest American aircraft and probably some of the production methods," explained Anton D. Fedetov, attache of the Russian Embassy in Washington.

Joined Mission At Nome

Fedetov joined the mission at Nome, Alaska.

Brig. Gen. John B. Brooks, acting commander of the Second United States Air Force, with whom the Russians went into immediate secret conference, remarked that "these men definitely are not joy riding."

"That's right," Fedetov interposed. "It is our desire to get all possible information in the shortest possible time."

The four are members of the party of forty-seven which arrived at Seattle this week after plane flights from Russia by way of Alaska.

The group, headed by Brig. Gen. Michael M. Gromov, head of the mission and famed Polar flyer, came to Spokane unannounced.

With General Gromov were Col. Andrew B. Iumashev and two aviation technicians.

Fedetov refused to discuss plans of the mission.

General Brooks, all praise for the group here, disclosed that he had met General Gromov at Washington in 1939 after the Moscow-to-San Jacinto, Cal., flight across the Arctic in 1939 which Gromov headed.

Lauds Soviet Mission

"I have seen and escorted lots of missions," said General Brooks, "but never have I seen a group so intensely all business as are these men here.

"They arrived before breakfast and we went to work immediately. They wouldn't stop to eat, so I finally had some food sent up and got it into them while we worked."

After the conference at a downtown hotel the party left for Fort George Wright, Second Air Force headquarters.

Return To Seattle

"It will be just work from here on out," both the general and Fedetov asserted.

The Russians returned late today to Seattle aboard a commercial plane.

Members of the mission in Alaska were expected to reach Spokane Monday.

New York, Sept. 6 (AP)—The National Maritime Union (CIO) today pledged solidarity with the trade unions of Great Britain and Russia, sending copies of such a resolution to Lord Halifax and Constantine A. Oumansky, Ambassadors of these countries in Washington.

The resolution declared that the American labor movement "cannot be preserved so long as the threat of Hitler and Hitlerism is abroad in the world."

Bomber Bigger Than Fortress Announced

Army Ordering 1,000 New-Type Air Fortresses

$347,156,674 in Contracts Let Day After First Test of Bigger, Better Bomber

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6 (AP).—A mighty new long-range, high-altitude bomber, believed by authorities here to be one of the world's most powerful aerial weapons, was ordered into mass production by the War Department today with awards of contracts totaling $347,156,674.

Representing this country's latest contribution to the British drive to win aerial superiority over the Axis powers, especially in far-flying bombardment craft, the new plane as the B-17E is a larger and more powerful version of the Boeing flying fortress, already in use by the British Royal Air Force in attacks against Germany. The department said it was approximately five feet longer than the present fortress and weighs thirty tons, six tons more.

It was estimated in view of approximate cost figures on earlier flying fortress models, that the new planes would cost somewhat in excess of $300,000 each.

Bomber Commands Formed

Simultaneously the department announced the organization of four bomber commands within the army air forces combat command and described them as the "backbone of the air forces."

"Power turrets both on the top and bottom of the fusilage and a 'stinger' turret in the tail provide for resistance to attack from any direction," the department said. "Enlarged horizontal and vertical tail surfaces provide for the increased size and weight."

SEP Planes

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 6—The War Department announced today the award of airplane contracts totaling $347,156,674, shortly after it had disclosed plans for the mass production of "bigger improved flying Fortress" bombers.

The number and type of planes covered by the contracts were not disclosed. However, the companies which obtained the awards manufacture bombers primarily and it was indicated that the orders were for the new model.

Boeing Airplane Company, Seattle, Wash., received two of the contracts totaling $337,447,057. The remaining one for $9,709,616 went to Douglas Aircraft Company, Inc., Santa Monica, Cal.

"Larger Than Fortress"

The new four-engine bomber, known

3024-11651

was described officially as a bigger, improved model of the Boeing Flying Fortress.

Carrying heavier fire power than the B-17D flying fortresses now in use in the American air forces and the British Royal Air Force, the B-17E incorporates armament improvements resulting from lessons learned in the war. These include gun turrets on the top and bottom of the fuselage and a tail turret, designed to give the plane protection against attack from any direction. Speed is expected to be about the same as that of the B-17D—around 300 miles an hour.

The first B-17E rolled out of the Boeing Airplane Company's factory at Seattle yesterday, and two-and-a-half hours later was on its first test flight. Today the War Department announced that tests were being made and that the plane will be turned out in mass production by three manufacturers—Boeing, the Douglas Aircraft Company at Santa Monica, Calif., and the Vega Airplane Company, a Lockheed subsidiary, at Burbank, Calif.

This was followed by announcement of the award of two contracts to Boeing for $337,447,057 and one to Douglas for $9,709,616. Presumably the Vega orders will be disclosed later.

Neither the type nor the number of planes covered by these contracts was divulged—nor were delivery dates given—but officials made no secret of the significance of the sequence of events as evidence that the B-17E's are being ordered in quantity.

Moreover, on the basis of estimates that each of the new planes would cost in excess of $300,000, it was generally accepted that manufacture of about 1,000 had been provided for by today's contracts.

Many of these planes undoubtedly will go to Britain under the lease-lend program, and others, it is expected, will be moving in a few months to strategic American outposts in the Far East, the Caribbean and the north Atlantic.

Planes of the B-17D class already have seen extensive service in British raids over northern Europe. On one daylight flight in high altitudes, the War Department said today, "they were virtually beyond the range of sight or sound by hostile ground crews" and the first warning of the attack came "when bombs screamed down out of an apparently clear sky."

CAMPAIGN SLATED FOR WASTE PAPER

Effort To Increase Collection For Defense Needs Starts Soon

Baltimore Among Thirty-Three Cities Listed By Federal Officials

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 6—A campaign to increase collection of waste paper will be started soon in thirty-three cities, defense officials said today.

"Waste paper is needed for defense," Leon Henderson, Price Administrator explained, "because it is the raw material of paperboard boxes in which many defense products are packed and transported." The defense program uses one fourth of the paperboard now produced. Total production this year is expected to exceed 8,000,000 tons.

Backed By OPA

The campaign will be conducted by the waste paper consuming industries with the support of the Office of Price Administration.

Housewives, small business houses and industries will be asked to save paper and give it to charitable organizations or sell it to dealers at the current market price. Organizations such as the Boy Scouts, the Girl Scouts and parent-teacher associations have been invited to participate.

A test campaign has been under way in St. Louis for several weeks. The national campaign will open immediately in New York, Chicago and Milwaukee and be extended soon to these cities:

Newark, Jersey City, Cleveland, Boston, Minneapolis-St. Paul, Washington, Philadelphia, Detroit, Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Buffalo, Cincinnati, Kansas City, Rochester, Toledo, Memphis, Birmingham, Dallas, San Antonio, Houston, Denver, Atlanta, Columbus, Akron, New Orleans, Indianapolis, Louisville and Providence.

For the present, no effort will be made to increase collections west of Denver because the paper mills on the Pacific Coast have an ample supply of waste paper.

BOETTIGER'S PAPER IN ATTACK ON KNOX

Journal Published By Roosevelt's Son-In-Law Calls Press Relations Poor

Declares Navy's Popularity Has Diminished With Newspapermen

[By the Associated Press]

Seattle, Sept. 6—The Seattle Post-Intelligencer, whose publisher, John Boettiger, is President Roosevelt's son-in-law, charged in an editorial today that the navy's popularity with newspapermen had "diminished dangerously" as a result of Secretary of the Navy Knox's "woefully misguided orders affecting the press."

The editorial was prompted by an incident that occurred Thursday on the arrival of a Russian military air mission. Newsmen and photographers were halted by navy revolver shots after they had sailed their pressboats within the restricted area of the naval air station.

The editorial said in part:

"The firing upon American newspapermen by United States Navy men at Sand Point is about the last straw.

Cites "Long Series"

"It culminates a long series of incidents of officiousness, stupid regulations and a lack of cooperation which would seem to indicate that the United States Navy, in our knowledge at least, is trying to deliberately alienate the American press. . . .

"There have been other incidents which are equally vexing. At least half of the 500,000 people around Seattle are wholly aware of certain facts which the United States, in concert with the British Admiralty, has asked the newspapers to withhold from their readers.

"The Post-Intelligencer under this mandate has cooperated fully, but the situation has not improved navy-press relations. . . .

Praises Earlier Relations

"The public relations of the navy until Frank Knox became its Secretary were the highest of any branch of military service or of any department of the Government and that is saying a great deal.

"Since Mr. Knox became Secretary and as a result of his woefully misguided orders affecting the press the popularity of the navy has diminished dangerously.

"The War Department, on the other hand, under the able administration of Mr. Stimson, has built its press relations to an admirable degree. There is fullest respect and cooperation between local army officials and the press. . . .

"It is ironical that Mr. Knox, a newspaperman, should thus betray the American navy and the American press."

Threats To Palestine And U. S. Essentially Same, Says Roosevelt

Cincinnati, Sept. 6 (AP)—President Roosevelt told the forty-fourth annual convention of the Zionist Organization of America today that "the threat to Palestine does not differ in essence from the threat to this country."

He declared in a message to the convention that he was gratified "to note that the danger to Palestine, which was felt to be not inconsiderable a few short months ago, at this time is measurably removed."

"It is hardly necessary for me to say that the threat to Palestine does not differ in essence from the threat to this country," the President added, "and I am confident that this fact will find due recognition in your deliberations. I look forward to the day when the great work which has been accomplished in Palestine may be carried forward in peace and harmony."

MOSCOW, Sept. 6 (AP)—The Soviet Information Bureau issued this communiqué today:

During the night of Sept. 5-6 our troops fought the enemy along the entire front.

All Fascist attempts to break through the Odessa defense lines are being shattered against the unwavering stanchness of the gallant defenders of the city.

Black Sea navy men are heroically fighting at the approaches to the city. In one engagement naval detachments, supported by our batteries, twice attacked an enemy division. In fierce fighting crack units of the enemy division were routed. The enemy lost about 700 men in killed and over 200 were taken prisoner.

In this engagement Red sailors captured eighteen field, anti-aircraft and anti-tank guns, eight mine-throwers, six tanks and tankettes, one armored car, twenty machine guns, twenty automatics, many rifles and hand grenades, 2,000,000 cartridges, shells of various calibers and spare gun parts.

MOSCOW, Sunday, Sept. 7 (AP)—The Soviet Information Bureau issued the following communiqué early today:

During Sept. 6 our troops fought the enemy along the entire front

Our air force dealt massed blows to the enemy's Panzer troops, infantry and artillery in the field, and destroyed aircraft on his airdromes.

According to precise data now available, fifty-six German planes were destroyed on Sept. 3 and not thirty-three, as previously reported. On Sept. 4 sixty-one German aircraft were destroyed in air combats and on the enemy's airdromes. We lost seven planes.

BERLIN, Sept. 6 (AP)—Today's German High Command communiqué:

Operations of attack in the east are progressing favorably.

In the fight against England the air force in day attacks dropped heavy-caliber bombs on rail facilities on the Scottish east coast and destroyed a 3,000-ton merchantman east of Sunderland last night.

A strong German combat formation effectively bombed hangars and shelters on the Ismailia airport on the Suez Canal yesterday evening. During an attack by German bombers on the British naval base at Suez the night before last three enemy freighters totaling 14,000 tons were destroyed.

The enemy did not enter the Reich's territory by day or night.

LONDON, Sept. 6 (AP)—The text of an Air Ministry communiqué:

In the course of high-altitude reconnaissance this morning Fortress aircraft of the Bomber Command attacked enemy shipping in Oslo harbor. None of our aircraft is missing.

The Ministries of Air and Home Security issued this communqué:

There is nothing to report.

A communiqué issued by the Admiralty:

One of our submarines in the Central Mediterranean has carried out a successful attack on a southbound enemy convoy between Taranto and Bengazi.

A ship of the Ramb class was torpedoed and sunk. The Ramb class of ships are fast vessels of just under 4,000 tons and are capable of 18½ knots speed. They are owned by the Italian Government. One of these ships was sunk by H. M. S. Leander six months ago when acting as a commerce raider in the Indian Ocean.

Another Admiralty communiqué stated:

The Board of Admiralty regrets to announce that H. M. submarine P-33 (Lieutenant R. D. Whiteway-Wilkinson, D. S. C., R. N.) is overdue and must be considered lost. The next of kin have been informed.

LONDON, Sept. 6 (U.P.)—The Admiralty issued the following communiqué today:

The Italian liner Esperia, 11,398 tons, has been torpedoed and sunk off Tripoli by one of our submarines. The Esperia was in an exceptionally strong escorted convoy. The escort consisted of destroyers, torpedo boats, motor torpedo boats and flying boats. Liners of this type are being used by the enemy as troopships.

CAIRO, Egypt, Sept. 6 (AP)—The Royal Air Force issued the following communiqué today:

Libya: During the night of Sept. 4-5 heavy bombers of the Royal Air Force and aircraft of the Fleet Air Arm raided a number of objectives in Cyrenaica and Tripolitania.

At Tripoli many direct hits were scored in motor-transport depots, and several buildings collapsed and large fires were started among vehicles and other buildings. In addition a number of violent explosions took place.

At Barce a strong force of heavy bombers attacked railway sidings, workshops, barracks and an airdrome. A number of direct hits caused fires to break out among buildings in the target area. In addition low-level machine-gun attacks were made on tents and buildings and dispersed aircraft. One of our bombers also machine-gunned anti-aircraft gun positions, silencing two guns.

Aircraft of the Fleet Air Arm carried out a dive-bombing and machine-gun attack on an enemy landing ground, where bombs fell all around the perimeter. Incendiary bombs were seen to drop among dispersed aircraft and further bombs fell among tents and stores, where a number of fires broke out.

Italy and Sicily: At Cotrone on Sept. 4 bomber aircraft of the R. A. F. attacked shipping which had taken refuge in the harbor after a successful attack on a convoy the night of Sept. 2-3. One large merchant ship was hit and an explosion took place on board.

During the night of Sept. 4-5 aircraft of the Fleet Air Arm dropped a number of bombs on the Sicilian airdromes of Gerbini and Catania, where explosions and fires were caused.

Malta: During the same night enemy aircraft attempted to raid Malta. R. A. F. night fighters shot down one BR-20 into the sea and one wounded member of the crew was subsequently rescued from the water.

From all these operations one of our aircraft is missing.

British Army Headquarters issued this communiqué:

Nothing to report.

ROME, Sept. 6 (AP)—Today's Italian High Command communiqué:

In North Africa, on the Tobruk fighting front, enemy armored cars and tractors were shelled and dispersed by our artillery fire. Clashes between advanced elements resulted in favor of our troops.

German aircraft attacked cantonments and airports in the Tobruk and Matruh zones.

The enemy air force carried out raids on Tripoli and Barce, hitting civilian buildings and a hospital. All together there were thirty-one dead and fifty-six injured, mostly among patients of the hospital.

In East Africa, at Wolchefit, English planes attacked another hospital center, causing only material damage. In the Culquabert sector the enemy, profiting from fog, attempted a surprise attack. Prompt and violent reaction by our vigilant detachments forced the adversary to withdraw, leaving numerous bodies on the field.

WITHIN THE LAST THREE DAYS LIEUT. PETRUNICHEV'S BATTERY DEFENDING THE LEFT BANK OF THE DNIEPER RIVER THWARTED FOUR GERMAN ATTEMPTS TO BUILD A PONTOON BRIDGE. THEY KILLED NEARLY 500 SAPPERS AND INFANTRYMEN, DESTROYED 43 TRUCKS, THREE ANTI-AIRCRAFT MACHINE-GUN INSTALLATIONS, SEVERAL TANKS AND A LARGE AMOUNT OF SAPPER'S EQUIPMENT.

GUNNERS ARTAMONGOV AND GOROKOV ESPECIALLY DISTINGUISHED THEMSELVES. THE FORMER DISABLED THREE FASCIST TANKS AND 12 TRUCKS, THE LATTER SILENCED AND DESTROYED A GERMAN BATTERY OF FOUR GUNS.

AN ARTILLERY PLATOON COMMANDED BY SENIOR LIEUTENANT RUBOCHKIN, OPERATING IN THE WESTERN FRONT DIRECTION, REPULSED A TANK ATTACK AND INFLICTED HEAVY LOSSES UPON THE ENEMY.

THE GERMAN COLUMN FELL UNDER FIRE OF OUR HOWITZERS AT A DISTANCE OF FIVE KILOMETERS FROM OUR DEFENSE LINE. BEFORE THE FASCIST TANKS APPROACHED WITHIN ONE AND A HALF KILOMETERS, HALF OF THEM WERE DESTROYED. THE OTHERS TURNED TO FLIGHT. IN THIS ENCOUNTER SOVIET ARTILLERYMEN ALSO KILLED NEARLY 300 GERMAN INFANTRYMEN AND ABOUT 100 CAVALRYMEN.

SEP 7 1941

THE GERMANS LANDED A PARTY CONSISTING OF MORE THAN 200 PARACHUTISTS, WITH FIVE TANKETTES, IN THE REAR OF LIEUTENANT APRAKSIN'S BATTERY OF HEAVY GUNS. THE PARACHUTISTS ATTEMPTED TO SURROUND AND CAPTURE THE BATTERY. OUR ARTILLERYMEN IMMEDIATELY ORGANIZED A CIRCULAR DEFENSE. BY DIRECT FIRE, GUNNER ZHURAVLEV SMASHED THE FIRST TANKETTE ATTEMPTING TO APPROACH. GUNNER PROTASSOV PUT OUT OF ACTION TWO MORE TANKETTES. THE REST OF THE ENEMY MACHINES DID NOT VENTURE TO CONTINUE TO ATTACK OUR GUN CREWS. THE GERMAN PARACHUTISTS CREPT TOWARD THE BATTERIES. THE ARTILLERYMEN OPENED A POINTBLANK FIRE FROM THEIR GUNS AND MACHINE-

MOSCOU -- SECOND ADD COMMUNIQUE TEXT X X X PLANES.

SOVIET ARTILLERY IS HEROICALLY FIGHTING GERMAN FASCIST TROOPS. THOUSANDS OF GERMAN SOLDIERS, HUNDREDS OF TANKS, ARMORED CARS AND TRUCKS, SCORES OF ARTILLERY MINE-THROWERS AND MACHINE-GUN BATTERIES HAVE BEEN ANNIHILATED BY THE ACCURATE FIRE OF OUR GUNS.

AS REPORTED ON SEPT. 4 OUR TROOPS STUBBORNLY FOUGHT THE ENEMY ALONG THE ENTIRE FRONT. DURING THAT DAY SOVIET ARTILLERY KILLED NO FEWER THAN 15,000 GERMAN OFFICERS AND MEN, DESTROYED OVER 100 GUNS OF VARIOUS CALIBERS, 34 MACHINE-GUN NESTS, 48 MINETHROWER BATTERIES, 18 PONTOON BRIDGES AND CROSSINGS, 940 MOTOR VEHICLES AND NEARLY 180 TANKS AND ARMORED CARS.

SEP 7 1941

RED ARMYMEN OF LIEUT. NEZENTSEV'S BATTERY UNSELFISHLY FOUGHT GERMAN AND FINNISH FASCISTS. THE OTHER DAY THIS BATTERY COMPLETELY DESTROYED A BIG GERMAN SUPPLY COLUMN, SMASHING DOZENS OF TRUCKS AND CAPTURING AMMUNITION AND INFANTRY.

GUNS. IN TWO HOURS OF STUBBORN FIGHTING THE GERMAN DIVERSIONISTS LOST NEARLY 150 KILLED. THE REMNANTS OF THE LANDING PARTY WERE ANNIHILATED BY LIEUTENANT LIPATOV'S COMPANY, WHICH CAME TO ASSIST THE BATTERY. TWO TANKETTES, MANY MACHINE-GUNS, AUTOMATICS AND WIRELESS SETS FELL INTO OUR HANDS.

HEAVY LOSSES UPON THE ENEMY. SOVIET TROOPS ATTACKED AND DESTROYED 22 FORTIFICATIONS, EIGHT ANTI-TANK BATTERIES, 12 MACHINE-GUNS AND FIVE MINETHROWER BATTERIES. ABOUT 500 GERMAN OFFICERS AND MEN WERE KILLED. SIX TANKS, TWO MOTORCYCLES, A NUMBER OF BOXES OF SHELLS AND SEVERAL SCORE THOUSAND OF CARTRIDGES WERE SEIZED. IN ANOTHER WESTERN SECTOR, OUR UNIT WITHIN ONE DAY BURNED DOWN THREE ENEMY TANKS, DISABLED NINE TANKS AND CAPTURED 270 BOXES OF MINES.

SEP 7 1941

OUR FORMATION WITHIN ONE DAY ON THE OFFENSIVE ROUTED THREE ENEMY INFANTRY COMPANIES, DESTROYED OR CAPTURED 12 MACHINE-GUNS, TWO GUNS AND 18 MINETHROWERS. THE SAME DAY THE "X" AIR FORCE FORMATION, OPERATING IN THE WESTERN DIRECTION OF THE FRONT, PUT OUT OF ACTION 40 FASCIST TANKS, 30 TRUCKS AND 10 GUNS, SILENCED THREE FIELD BATTERIES AND ONE ANTI-AIRCRAFT BATTERY AND KILLED MORE THAN 900 GERMAN OFFICERS AND MEN.

A SHIP OF A DNIEPER FLOTILLA UNDER COMMAND OF COMMISSAR BIRYUKOV, IN COOPERATION WITH AN ARMORED TRAIN, KILLED OVER 3,500 GERMANS WHO ATTEMPTED TO FORCE THE DNIEPER. AN ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNNER ON THIS SHIP, RED ARMYMAN BOIKO, BY TWO SHOTS BROUGHT DOWN A GERMAN JUNKERS-88 BOMBER.

TENS OF THOUSANDS OF GERMANS AND RUMANIANS HAVE BEEN WOUNDED IN THE FIGHTING AT THE APPROACHES TO ODESSA. THE FASCIST COMMAND IS UNABLE TO ENSURE TIMELY EVACUATION OF THE WOUNDED FROM THE FRONT ZONE BECAUSE OF A SHORTAGE OF AMBULANCE CARS AND WAGONS.

THE GERMANS USE FOR EVACUATION OF THE WOUNDED TRUCKS DELIVERING AMMUNITION TO THE FRONT. THOUSANDS OF WOUNDED WHO GATHER ALONG THE ROADS ARE WAITING FOR PHYSICIANS.

GERMAN DR.FISCHER, WHO VOLUNTARILY SURRENDERED, STATED THAT HALF THE WOUNDED GERMAN AND RUMANIAN SOLDIERS "FAIL TO REACH FIELD DRESSING STATIONS AND HOSPITALS." SEP 7 1941

"AFTER FIGHTING NEAR BLAGOVESHCHENKA, IN THE ODESSA REGION, GERMAN AND RUMANIAN STRETCHER BEARERS PICKED UP 900 KILLED AND 2,100 WOUNDED GERMAN AND RUMANIAN OFFICERS AND MEN," HE CONTINUED.

"OF THE 2,100 WOUNDED, 900 DIED WITHIN THREE DAYS BECAUSE THE COMMAND DID NOT SEND A SINGLE CAR, EVEN FOR THE GRAVELY WOUNDED OFFICERS.

"AN ENORMOUS DEATH RATE HAS BEEN CAUSED ALSO BY A SHORTAGE OF MEDICINES AND EVEN MEDICAL PERSONNEL."

DESPITE BRUTAL PERSECUTION, THE GUERRILLA MOVEMENT KEEPS GROWING IN POLAND. ATTACKS ON GENDARMES AND POLICE HAVE BECOME A USUAL OCCURRENCE AND ARE ADMITTED EVEN BY THE FASCIST PRESS.

NEUES WIENER TAGEBLATT PRINTED A REPORT ON THE EXECUTION OF TWO GUERRILLAS, JOSEPH SLAVEK AND JOHANN KLOVNIK, WHO WOUNDED TWO GENDARMES AND SIX POLICEMEN AND ARRANGED A NUMBER OF ACCIDENTS AND EXPLOSIONS.

OUTBREAKS STARTED IN VILLAGES IN THE VICINITY OF THE TOWN OF RADOMSKO AND LASTED SEVERAL DAYS. THE IMMEDIATE REASON FOR THE REVOLT WAS THE REQUISITIONING OF THE NEWLY HARVEST CROP. A PUNITIVE DETACHMENT OF 20 GERMAN GENDARMES AND POLICEMEN DISPATCHED FROM RADOMSKO WAS MET BY RIFLE AND REVOLVER FIRE.

LOSING NINE KILLED, THE DETACHMENT RETREATED. A GERMAN COMPANY SUMMONED FROM CZENSTOKHOVO ALSO SUSTAINED CONSIDERABLE CASUALTIES BEFORE IT RETREATED ALSO.

A MAJORITY OF PEASANTS WHO PARTICIPATED IN THE REVOLT JOINED THE GUERRILLAS. NEAR RAZVADOV STATION GUERRILLAS WRECKED A TROOP TRAIN. AS THE GERMANS THEMSELVES ADMIT ABOUT 30 MEN LOST THEIR LIVES.

GERMAN AUTHORITIES HAVE CONSIDERABLY STRENGTHENED GUARD ON STATIONS, BRIDGES AND RAILWAY WAREHOUSES, ELEVATORS AND FOOD TRAINS SINCE POLISH PEASANTS, IRRITATED BY FREQUENT REQUISITIONS, SET FIRE TO WAREHOUSES AND DO NOT PERMIT THE GERMANS TO EXPORT FROM POLAND FOODSTUFFS TAKEN FROM THE POPULATION.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: DREW MIDDLETON OF THE LONDON ASSOCIATED PRESS BUREAU, WHO COVERED THE BEF IN FRANCE AND REPORTED SUBSEQUENT WAR DEVELOPMENTS IN BRITAIN, HAS ARRIVED IN ICELAND. HE TELLS IN THIS DISPATCH OF MILITARY ACTIVITIES ON THE NORTH ATLANTIC ISLAND.)

BY DREW MIDDLETON

REYKJAVIK, ICELAND, SEPT 6-(AP)-WITHIN A FEW SHORT MONTHS THIS ATLANTIC ISLAND OCEAN HAS BEEN TURNED INTO A UNITED STATES-BRITISH GIBRALTAR OF THE NORTH.

ICELAND BRISTLES TODAY WITH GUNS, AIRFIELDS DOT THE COUNTRYSIDE AND WARSHIPS OF AMERICA AND BRITAIN COMB SURROUNDING WATERS IN EVER-WATCHFUL PATROLS.

NEWLY-ARRIVED OBSERVERS ARE IMPRESSED AT ONCE WITH THE DEFENSES OF THIS KEYSTONE IN A COMMUNICATIONS ARCH OVER WHICH ARMS AND MATERIALS PASS FROM AMERICA TO GREAT BRITAIN. GIBRALTAR ITSELF AND MALTA IN THE MEDITERRANEAN ARE SCARCELY MORE STRONGLY-HELD THAN THIS BARREN LAND, WHICH IS HALF AGAIN THE SIZE OF IRELAND.

CENSORSHIP, OF COURSE, WILL NOT PERMIT DISCLOSURE OF THE NUMBER OF MEN OR THE AMOUNT OF EQUIPMENT HERE, BUT IT CAN BE SAID THAT THE AMERICAN, BRITISH AND NORWEGIAN FORCES ON THE ISLAND EXCEED THE NUMBER OF TRAINED TROOPS BRITAIN HAD TO REPEL INVASION IN THE SUMMER OF 1940.

SEP 7 1941

UNITED STATES MARINES IN OLIVE-GREEN UNIFORMS OCCUPY AN IMPORTANT PLACE IN ICELAND'S DEFENSE PLANS. THEIR GUNS AND TANKS HAVE TAKEN UP POSITIONS ALONGSIDE THE BRITISH.

THE BRITISH APPEAR TO HAVE GREAT RESPECT FOR THE MARINES, WHO SETTLED ON THE ISLAND AS THOUGH IT WERE THE MOST NATURAL PLACE IN THE WORLD TO BE.

IN PLANNING THE DEFENSES OF ICELAND NO POSSIBILITY HAS BEEN OVERLOOKED.

THE ISLAND IS WITHIN RANGE OF TROOP-CARRYING PLANES BASED ON THE EUROPEAN CONTINENT, AND THE LONG NIGHTS WOULD AFFORD PROTECTION FOR A HOSTILE FLOTILLA CREEPING DOWN PAST GREENLAND TO EFFECT A LANDING IN THE NORTH.

AMERICAN AND BRITISH OFFICERS HAVE STUDIED THESE PROBLEMS, AND HAVE MADE THEIR PLANS ACCORDINGLY.

SO WELL HAVE THESE FORCES DONE THEIR WORK THAT SUBMARINE SINKINGS IN THIS PART OF THE ATLANTIC HAVE DROPPED TO A NEW LOW. ONE REPORT HAS IT THAT NOT A SINGLE MERCHANT SHIP HAS GONE DOWN ALONG THE NORTHERN ROUTE FROM THE UNITED STATES TO GREAT BRITAIN IN THE PAST SEVEN WEEKS.

BERLIN, SUNDAY, SEPT 7-(AP)-TEN BRITISH PLANES WERE SHOT DOWN LAST NIGHT DURING THE COURSE OF RAF RAIDS ON WESTERN GERMANY, AUTHORIZED SOURCES SAID TODAY.

SN153AED

BERLIN, SEPT. 6-(AP)-PORT FACILITIES AND A RAILWAY TRANSFER STATION IN ALEXANDRIA WERE ATTACKED LAST NIGHT BY GERMAN BOMBERS, DNB SAID TONIGHT.

AN OIL TANK WAS REPORTED TO HAVE GONE UP IN FLAMES AND& OTHER FIRES WERE SAID TO HAVE BEEN STARTED IN THE EAST PORT.

WARSHIPS ANCHORED IN THE HARBOR OF THIS BRITISH NAVAL BASE WERE BOMBED, DNB REPORTED, BUT RESULTS WERE NOT STATED. THE AGENCY SAID THAT A 6,000-TON TANKER IN THE GULF OF SUEZ WAS DAMAGED.

SOFIA, BULGARIA, SEPT. 6-(AP)-THE BULGARIAN PARLIAMENT IN A CLOSING SESSION TODAY ESTABLISHED THE DEATH PENALTY FOR SERIOUS CASES OF WAR PROFITEERING AND VOTED TO REMOVE COMMUNIST AND ANARCHIST ADHERENTS FROM PUBLIC OFFICE.

SEP 7 1941

BARCELONA, SPAIN, SEPT. 6-(AP)-ADMIRAL WILLIAM D. LEAHY, UNITED STATES AMBASSADOR TO VICHY, ARRIVED HERE TONIGHT FOR A CONFERENCE WITH MYRON C.TAYLOR, PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S ENVOY TO THE VATICAN, WHO IS EXPECTED HERE BY SPECIAL PLANE TOMORROW FROM LISBON.

SINGAPORE, SEPT. 6-(AP)-APPARENTLY RELIABLE BUT UNVERIFIED REPORTS REACHED HERE TODAY FROM THAILAND THAT BANGKOK POLICE TWO DAYS AGO RAIDED A JAPANESE-OWNED HOTEL THERE AND ARRESTED THE MANAGER AFTER DISOVERING STORES OF GUNS, GRENADES AND AMMUNITION.

THE REPORT BROUGHT SPECULATION THAT ONLY PART OF THE MUNITIONS THE JAPANESE WERE SAID TO HAVE SENT TO THAILAND WERE DELIVERED TO THE THAI ARMY, AND THAT THE REST WAS CACHED IN JAPANESE ESTABLISHMENTS IN THE THAI CAPITAL.

REPORTS HAVE BEEN CURRENT HERE OF JAPANESE FIFTH COLUMN ACTIVITY IN THAILAND.

MANAGUA, NICARAGUA, SEPT. 6-(AP)-THE NICARAGUA GOVERNMENT IS CLOSING ALL GERMAN CONSULATES HERE BECAUSE THE NAZIS HAVE ORDERED ALL NICARAGUAN CONSULAR OFFICERS WITHDRAWN FROM GERMANY AND GERMAN-OCCUPIED COUNTRIES FOR UNKNOWN REASONS, IT WAS ANNOUNCED HERE TODAY.

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

AMERICA'S ANSWER TO THE SUBMARINE ATTACK ON THE U.S.S. GREER HAS VERY FIRMLY PUT IT UP TO HERR HITLER TO DECIDE WHAT HE WANTS TO DO ABOUT IT.

TO BE SURE, WASHINGTON HASN'T YET OFFICIALLY IDENTIFIED THE UNDERWATER CRAFT WHICH MADE THE ASSAULT. HOWEVER, IN REYKJAVIK, ICELAND, WHERE THE GREER IS BERTHED, IT IS SAID THAT THE SUBMERSIBLE WAS GERMAN.

ONE USES THE PAST TENSE, "WAS" GERMAN, BECAUSE OFFICERS AND MEN OF THE DESTROYER SAY THEY DROPPED A DEPTH BOMB WHILE RIGHT OVER THE SUBMARINE AND BELIEVE THEY MUST HAVE DAMAGED THE CRAFT AND MAY HAVE DESTROYED IT. JUST IN CASE THE RAIDER DID GET AWAY, WASHINGTON HAS GIVEN INSTRUCTIONS THAT IT BE SOUGHT OUT AND ELIMINATED. ONE ASSUMES SUCH AN ORDER PRESUPPOSES THAT THE IDENTITY OF THE BOAT IS KNOWN, OR THAT ANY AXIS SUBMARINE ENTERING THIS ZONE IS LOOKING FOR TROUBLE IN STORMY SEAS.

ALL THESE FACTS HAVE BEEN LAID BEFORE THE FUEHRER BY THE AMERICAN PRESS, AND CERTAINLY GIVE HIM ENOUGH FACTS TO WORK ON. WHAT WILL HIS ANSWER BE?

WE DON'T NEED TO SPLIT HAIRS OVER THE NATIONALITY OF THE SUBMARINE. OBVIOUSLY IT WAS AN AXIS SUBMERSIBLE, AND THE STRONG PROBABILITIES ARE THAT IT WAS NAZI BECAUSE OF THE LOCATION OF THE INCIDENT IN THE NORTH ATLANTIC. NOW THE ATTACK MUST HAVE BEEN THE RESULT OF ONE OF THREE THINGS: (1) THE U-BOAT WAS ACTING UNDER ORDERS FROM THE HIGH COMMAND; (2) IT WAS A MISTAKE; (3) IT WAS AN ERROR IN JUDGMENT BY THE SUBMARINE COMMANDER.

SEP 7 1941

AS INDICATED IN THIS COLUMN YESTERDAY, AT LEAST UP TO THE TIME OF THIS INCIDENT HITLER HAD GIVEN EVERY INDICATION THAT HE WANTED TO AVOID BRINGING THE UNITED STATES INTO THE EUROPEAN WAR. THIS ATTITUDE WAS PURELY A MATTER OF SELF-PRESERVATION. HE PROBABLY HASN'T BEEN PARTICULARLY CONCERNED ABOUT HAVING TO FACE TROOPS FROM THIS COUNTRY, BUT THE PRESENCE OF A STRONG UNITED STATES FLEET IN THE CONFLICT MOST CERTAINLY WOULD HAVE RAISED HOB WITH HIS OPERATIONS.

IT STILL REMAINS TRUE THAT OUR NAVY MIGHT EASILY SPELL DEFEAT FOR CAMPAIGNS WHICH HITLER IS CREDITED WITH PLANNING FOR THE WINTER. THESE INVOLVE THE MEDITERRANEAN ZONE AND THE MIDDLE EAST, AS WELL AS THE ATLANTIC. IF HE NOW HAS DECIDED FOR SOME INEXPLICABLE REASON TO FORCE US INTO THE WAR, IT LOOKS AS THOUGH HE SUDDENLY HAS LOST THE CUNNING WHICH HAS ENABLED HIM TO OVERRUN MOST OF EUROPE. YOU DON'T HANG A STONE ABOUT YOUR NECK WHEN YOU ENTER A DIVING CONTEST

THEREFORE IT WILL BE SURPRISING IF THE NAZI LEADER IS DELIBERATELY SEEKING TO FORCE THE ISSUE WITH US AT THIS PRECISE JUNCTURE. THUS WHILE THE GREER AFFAIR HAS CREATED A DELICATE SITUATION, THERE IS NO PRESENT INDICATION THAT IT NEED LEAD TO WAR. IN THIS CONNECTION SENATOR LEE OF OKLAHOMA MADE A STATEMENT IN WHICH HE SAID IN PART:

"WE INTEND TO DELIVER THE GOODS AND IF ANY MORE OBSTACLES GET IN OUR WAY THEY CAN EXPECT TO BE SHOT AT. I DON'T THINK THE RECENT INCIDENT WILL LEAD TO A DECLARATION OF WAR."

SEP 7 1941

-DASH-

BY THE WAY:

MY VERY SCOTCH FRIEND SANDY MACHRIHANISH, OF ABERDEEN, CALLS ATTENTION TO THE FACT THAT THE LONDON PRESS CITES THE ATTACK ON THE GREER AS AN ARGUMENT FOR OUR ENTRANCE INTO THE WAR. SANDY, WHO FREQUENTLY HAS A SOMEWHAT VINEGARISH OUTLOOK ON THE AFFAIRS OF THE SASSENACHS, AS HE PERSISTS IN CALLING THE ENGLISH, MAKES THIS COMMENT:

"IF THE SASSENACHS COULD HARNESS THE ENERGY THEY USE IN TRYING TO PERSUADE THE UNITED STATES TO GET INTO THE WAR, THEY WOULD HAVE POWER ENOUGH TO RUN ALL THE MUNITIONS FACTORIES IN ENGLAND."

HITLER ISN'T GETTING

TO MOSCOW ANY FASTER

THAN NAPOLEON'S ARMY

TO KEEP UP, FUEHRER WOULD HAVE

TO BE IN KREMLIN BY SEPT. 12 (600)

BY J.R.TRIPLET AND GLADWIN HILL

(ADVANCE)...NEW YORK, SEPT 6-(THE SPECIAL NEWS SERVICE)-HITLER ISN'T GETTING TO MOSCOW ANY FASTER THAN NAPOLEON, WHOSE FASTEST MOBILE UNIT WAS A HORSE.

THE TWO WOULD-BE CONQUERORS OF RUSSIA STARTED THEIR DRIVES TOWARD MOSCOW ON ALMOST THE SAME DATE--HITLER ON JUNE 22, NAPOLEON ON JUNE 24.

SEP 7 1941

TO MAINTAIN THE PARALLEL, THE GERMAN FUEHRER WOULD HAVE TO STRIDE INTO THE HIGH-WALLED KREMLIN AS A CONQUEROR ON FRIDAY, SEPT. 12.

IT WAS AT THE KREMLIN THAT LITTLE NAPOLEON, BENEATH THE SMOKE OF MANY FIRES SET BY THE RUSSIANS, WOUND UP AN 83-DAY CAMPAIGN LAUNCHED FROM A LINE THROUGH MIDDLE POLAND AND EAST PRUSSIA IN 1812.

HITLER'S DRIVE, CARRIED ON BY PANZER DIVISIONS, DIVE BOMBERS AND PARACHUTISTS IN CONTRAST TO NAPOLEON'S HORSE AND FOOT TROOPS, IS 77 DAYS OLD.

NAPOLEON GOT TO SMOLENSK ON AUG. 16. HITLER, POSSIBLY CONSCIOUS OF THE ANNIVERSARY, BEGAN CLAIMING SMOLENSK A MONTH SOONER, ALTHOUGH THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND DID NOT SAY UNTIL AUG. 6 THAT "THE BATTLE OF SMOLENSK" HAD BEEN WON. ON AUG. 11, WHEN THE FIRST AMERICAN CORRESPONDENT WAS ALLOWED IN, BATTLE WAS RAGING JUST BEYOND THE CITY.

TOMORROW WILL BE THE ANNIVERSARY OF NAPOLEON'S BATTLE OF BORODINO, JUST WEST OF MOSCOW, WHICH GAVE HIM ACCESS TO THE CAPITAL.

AT THIS MOMENT OF WRITING, BORODINO HADN'T REPORTED SIGHTING

HITLER.

IN HIS DRIVE INTO THE LOW COUNTRIES, THE GERMAN FUEHRER AVERAGED ABOUT 30 MILES A DAY. IN HIS DRIVE TOWARD MOSCOW, HE HAS AVERAGED BARELY SEVEN MILES A DAY.

AGGRESSIVE SOVIET COUNTER-ATTACKS AND AN EVIDENT DESIRE OF THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND TO CONCENTRATE PRESSURE UPON THE RUSSIAN FLANKS HAVE CONTRIBUTED TO HOLD THE NAZI CENTRAL ARMY SOMEWHERE IN THE BLOODSTAINED BATTLE ZONE EAST OF SMOLENSK.

NOTING AN OFFSET OF TWO DAYS IN THE STARTING TIMES, HERE IS A COMPARISON OF THE WARSAW-TO-MOSCOW TIMETABLES:

POSITION	NAPOLEON	HITLER
START	JUNE 24	JUNE 22
VILNA	JUNE 28	JUNE 24
GRODNO	JULY 5	JUNE 23
SMOLENSK	AUG. 16	JULY 18 (X)
MOSCOW	SEPT. 14	?

(X)--GERMANS CLAIMED CAPTURE OF SMOLENSK JULY 16. GERMAN HIGH COMMAND SAID AUG. 6 "THE BATTLE OF SMOLENSK" HAD BEEN WON.

-BASH-

IN DETAIL, THE TWO LEADERS' STRATEGIES DIFFER GREATLY.

NAPOLEON'S DRIVE WAS A SINGLE SPEARHEAD TOWARD MOSCOW. HITLER ATTACKED THE 2,000 MILE NORTH-AND-SOUTH RUSSIAN FRONT IN A DOZEN PLACES, AND HSJZDBLE TOWARD MOSCOW HAS ATTACKED THE 2,000 MILE NORTH-AND-SOUTH RUSSIAN FRONT IN A DOZEN PLACES, AND HIS DRIVE TOWARD MOSCOW HAS BEEN SLOWED DOWN BY THE NECESSITY OF REINFORCING HIS MANY ENGAGEMENTS AT OTHER POINTS, NOTABLY THE DRIVE TOWARD LENINGRAD AND THE DRIVE INTO THE UKRAINE.

HITLER HAS ALSO MET STOUTER, SMARTER RESISTANCE ALL ALONG THE LINE.

AGAINST NAPOLEON, THE RUSSIANS USED GENERALLY A RETREATING, SUCKING-IN STRATEGY. IN ADDITION, THERE WERE AMAZING BUNGLES ON BOTH SIDES.

AT SMOLENSK, THE FRENCH NEARLY KNOCKED THEMSELVES OUT, AND IF THE RUSSIANS HAD BEEN CLEVER ENOUGH TO CHANGE THEIR STRATEGY QUICKLY AND STRIKE BACK, THEY MIGHT HAVE DEMOLISHED THEM. INSTEAD, THEY KEPT RETREATING AND GAVE THE FRENCH TIME TO PULL THEMSELVES TOGETHER.

AT BORODINO, NAPOLEON BUNGLED. ALL MORNING DURING THE BATTLE HE WAS ON THE ALERT. BUT AFTER NOON HIS MIND SEEMED TO FALL INTO A STUPOR, AND HIS CLOSE TOUCH OF COMMAND RELAXED.

THE RUSSIANS WERE DEFEATED IN THE ENGAGEMENT, AND 38,0000 OF THEM KILLED, BUT 25,000 FRENCH WERE KILLED ALSO, AND NAPOLEON'S FORCES THROWN INTO SUCH CONFUSION THAT HE COULD NOT FOLLOW UP AND ANNIHILATE THE RUSSIAN ARMY.

INSTEAD, HE WAS FORCED TO BLUFF HIS WAY THROUGH ONE OF THE ODDEST TRANSACTIONS IN MILITARY HISTORY.

THE RUSSIANS WERE FOLLOWING THE SAME "SCORCHED EARTH" POLICY OF DESTRUCTION THEY ARE USING NOW, AND NAPOLEON KNEW THEY WOULD LEAVE THE CITY OF MOSCOW ALMOST UNINHABITABLE.

SO PRETENDING HE WAS GIVING THE RUSSIANS A BREAK, HE ARRANGED A SEVEN-HOUR ARMISTICE FOR THEM TO EVACUATE THE CITY, IN EXCHANGE FOR THEIR PROMISE NOT TO DESTROY THE SHELTER AND PROVISIONS HIS ARMY NEEDED.

3024— 11659

THUS HE GOT INTO MOSCOW, BUT HIS ARMY WAS NO SOONER IN THAN THE RUSSIANS SNEAKED BACK AND BURNED AND DESTROYED THE CITY SO THAT IT WAS UNTENABLE.

ON OCTOBER 19, -- ONLY SIX WEEKS FROM THIS DATE--THE FRENCH MOVED OUT--AND ON THE 24TH WERE BEATEN BY THE RESURGENT RUSSIANS AT MALOYAROSLAVETZ.

ON THE 27TH CAME THE FIRST FROSTS OF THE WINTER THAT SOON VANQUISHED NAPOLEON. BY THE FIRST OF DECEMBER, HE WAS BACK IN PARIS, A BEATEN EMPEROR.

105TH WEEK OF THE WAR

BY THE SPECIAL NEWS SERVICE

THE FIRST INCIDENT INVOLVING A UNITED STATES WARSHIPS AND A GERMAN SUBMARINE OVERSHADOWED THE FIERCE BATTLE RAGING BETWEEN THE GERMANS AND RUSSIANS IN THE 105TH WEEK OF THE WAR.

GERMANY ACKNOWLEDGED SATURDAY THAT A NAZI U-BOAT HAD ATTACKED A DESTROYER THRUSDAY IN THE VICINITY OF ICELAND, CLEARING UP THE IDENTITY OF THE SUBMARINE WHICH THE U.S. NAVY SAID LAST THURSDAY FIRED TORPEDOES WHICH MISSED THE U.S.DESTROYER GREER.

TO THE AMERICAN CHARGE THAT [illegible] ONLY AFTER THE SUBMARINE HAD OPENED THE ATTACK ON THE DESTROYER THE LATTER DROPPED DEPTH CHARGES, THE GERMANS REPLIED THAT THE REVERSE WAS THE CASE.

"THE GERMAN U-BOAT WAS NOT IN A POSITION TO DETERMINE THE NATIONALITY OF THE ATTACKING DESTROYER," THE BERLIN COMMUNIQUE STATED. "IN JUSTIFIABLE DEFENSE, THE U-BOAT THEREUPON DISCHARGED TWO TORPEDOES AT 14.39 (2 P.M.) WHICH MISSED THEIR MARK.

"THE DESTROYER CONTINUED THE PURSUIT WITH WATER BOMBS UNSUCCESSFULLY UNTIL TOWARD MIDNIGHT..."

THE GERMANS FLATLY ACCUSED PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT OF RESPONSIBILITY FOR THE INCIDENT "IN ORDER TO INCITE THE AMERICAN PEOPLE INTO WAR AGAINST GERMANY."

ON THE PREVIOUS DAY, MR. ROOSEVELT, TERMING THE ATTACK DELIBERATE, SAID THE U.S. FLEET HAD BEEN INSTRUCTED TO HUNT DOWN AND "ELIMINATE" THE SUBMARINE.

Reds, on Offensive, Drive Foe Back In Mud and Fog Before Leningrad

Russians, in Massive Air and Land Attacks, Blast Nazis on Broad Front

Big U-Boat Captured North of Murmansk

Germans Admit Defense of 'Village by Village'; Finns Report Big Gains

By Henry Cassidy

By The Associated Press

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (Monday).—Russian forces, on the counter-offensive against the Germans by land, sea and air, have driven the Germans from a vital highway leading to Leningrad, delivered "massive" aerial blows at the Nazis and captured a submarine in the Barents Sea north of Murmansk, it was reported today.

The Red armies hold the initiative on a broad section of the eastern front, it was announced here, with some of the fiercest fighting of the war, now in its twelfth week, taking place around the clock on the mud-churned, fog-shrouded battlefield before Leningrad.

Today's early morning war report said Red airmen backed up the embattled land forces yesterday with one destructive attack after another upon the Germans at the front and ranged far beyond the lines to hammer home telling raids on Nazi airdromes.

The captured German submarine was identified by the official announcement as the U-73, one of Germany's largest submersibles.

Nazis Admit Bitter Fight

[German sources in Berlin, admitting that the defenders of Leningrade were fighting it out village by village and that the slowly advancing Nazi forces could count on the bitterest resistance from every clump of trees and on every hillock, said hundreds of German planes had attacked the Russians south of Lake Ladoga Saturday and had directed blows against troop concentrations and columns between the Dnieper River and the Sea of Azov. In the middle sector, D. N. B., official news agency, said railroad lines leading to the front were bombed and twenty-six trains destroyed.]

[A Finnish communique said an offensive launched northeast of Lake Ladoga on Thursday after a long quiet period in the sector had carried the Finns forward forty-seven miles to the Sykaeri River, apparently in the neighborhood of the old Soviet-Finnish frontier.]

Accounts of the determined Russian efforts to smash the Nazi threat to Leningrad indicated that tremendous losses were being inflicted upon Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's invaders.

The counter-attacking force commanded by Colonel Donskov was said in an account in "Izvestia," government newspaper, first to have blocked a German thrust across a river and then to have taken the offensive. The Germans lost 1,500 dead and wounded in the one action, the paper reported. [Although the river was not named, it may have been the Neva, which flows from the southwestern corner of Lake Ladoga at Schluesselburg, through Leningrad to the Gulf of Finland.]

Colonel Donskov's troops were forced to fight off a group of fifty German parachutists dropped in their rear during the night, it was said, but these were finished off before dawn.

Finns Said to Flee

To the north of Leningrad fighting was reported going on with the Finns in the vicinity of Kesteng, on the shore of a Karelian lake. Soviet accounts said Finnish soldiers fled in panic to the woods near the Soviet-Finnish border when Red infantry delivered telling blows.

While hastily mobilized citizens and sailors from the Baltic fleet and the Soviet Navy aided in the battle to turn aside the German thrust at Leningrad, fighting continued along the entire front. Western Red Army forces pursued counter-attacks in the direction of Gomel, southwest of Moscow, and were reported yesterday to have recaptured a series of large settlements.

On the approaches to Kiev, the Ukrainian capital, hundreds of big guns, famed for their accurate fire, were reported raining shells from all sides upon concentrations of German troops and tanks.

At the southern end of the line, where Odessa, like Leningrad, is a center of resistance, sailors of the Red fleet also were playing a stellar role. Naval guns, in co-operation with the army, were shelling German concentrations, artillery batteries and airdromes.

In the Gomel sector a rifle division was reported by "Red Star," army newspaper, to have destroyed twenty-one German tanks in one stubborn battle and to have captured many field guns.

In another sector of the western zone, the dispatch said, a large German force tried several times to cross the Khamara River, and did succeed in laying pontoons. However, the Red air fleet attacked, wrecked the bridges and several hundred Germans were reported drowned. The rest were said to have been routed.

Thirty-five German bombers were reported destroyed when Russian raiders swooped upon two airdromes.

In one action in the Kiev sector, Russian dispatches reported a particularly stubborn attempt of the Germans to take Hill 23, commanding river "N." After repeated assaults up the slopes in which they suffered huge casualties, it was said, the Germans finally reached the crest, only to be thrown out when Russian reserves launched a counter-attack.

Scattering of a ten-mile-long column of German tanks and trucks in the southwest by a flight of Soviet planes was reported in yesterday's communique. It said 600 Germans were killed and sixty trucks and many tank destroyed.

DNB Says Navy And Luftwaffe Sank 92 Ships In Finnish Gulf

New York, Sept. 7—The Hungarian radio tonight said the first snow fell today in the eastern Carpathian Mountains and at other points of Transylvania. CBS heard the report.

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 7—Hundreds of German combat planes and dive bombers attacked the defenders of Leningrad in the area south of Lake Ladoga yesterday, DNB reported tonight, and only one German plane was acknowledged lost in the assault.

In the extreme southern sector the Luftwaffe directed blows against troop concentrations and columns in the area between the Dnieper river and the Sea of Azov, the official news agency said.

In the middle sector German planes again bombarded railway lines leading to the front, destroying twenty-six trains including one loaded with munitions, DNB said.

Tell Of Bitter Resistance

Other dispatches from the Eastern front today said that the defenders of beleaguered Leningrad were fighting it out village by village and that slowly advancing German troops could count on the bitterest resistance at every clump of trees and on every hillock.

DNB announced that the German navy and air force sank sixty-five Russian transports and twenty-seven warships in the Finnish Gulf in the past week.

The regular communique from Adolf Hitler's headquarters merely said that "operations in the east continue to take their planned course."

Military considerations, Berlin sources said, make it impossible to disclose troops positions or indicate more than in a general way what progress had been made.

Protected By Land Mines

But every report allowed to drift back from the fighting zone emphasized the determined nature of the defense.

Dispatches said that fields, highways and even towns were protected by countless land mines to be touched off by a careless footstep or the pressure of an auto wheel.

The commander of one German corps said that his engineers had managed to remove 1,000 mines in about two days.

Reports from the front also stressed difficulties imposed by the weather. One army reporter wrote that the roads are "bottomless mud."

Give Credit To Finns

The Germans credited the Finns with helping considerably to sap the strength of Leningrad's defenses. It was said that the Finns on the Karelian Isthmus were tying up thousands of Russian soldiers who otherwise could be thrown against the Germans.

German dispatches credited the Finns with taking 9,000 prisoners in the capture of Viipuri.

In air-sea action, which was part of the Leningrad operations, the Germans reported aerial destruction of a 2,000-ton transport off Œsel Island, damaging of a speedboat and three patrol craft.

The air force was reported to have carried out new attacks on the city and harbor of Odessa, on the Black Sea, at the southern end of the main German-Russian battle line. Odessa has been ringed by German and Rumanian besiegers for days.

Surprise Attack On Ochakov

As a surprise to the Germans about forty miles east of Odessa there has just been a Russian artillery counter-assault on Ochakov. Russian batteries opened fire from a small Black Sea island, but the Germans said they were silenced by German gunners.

German military leaders were especially reluctant to mention places involved in fighting on the middle sector of the front.

However, they said that the Luftwaffe had been busy there, derailing six troop trains and causing one munitions train to explode.

They said also that the Germans in a surprise thrust had crossed a river, unidentified, in the middle sector and there formed a bridgehead which they held against counter-assault. The Germans reported capture of fifty-two cannon and hundreds of prisoners in the middle region.

Air Force Tells Of Hits On Supply Bases And Forts In Karelia

[By the Associated Press]

Helsinki, Sept. 7—Finnish troops resumed their offensive northeast of Lake Ladoga three days ago after a long pause and have advanced nearly fifty miles, a Finnish communique announced today.

The Finns said they had reached the Sykaeri river in a three-day battle, drawing tighter the German-Finnish noose about Leningrad.

The communique said: "After a long pause, the attack launched northeast of Lake Ladoga in July was resumed September 4. In three days' time our troops, who advanced fighting seventy-five kilometers (forty-seven miles), have reached the Sykaeri river."

Air Force Lists Bombings

The Finnish air force also reported successes in eastern Karelia, where the offensive was revived after the mopping up of all territory that had been ceded to Russia.

An air communique announced direct hits on enemy supply bases, batteries, fortifications, trenches and motorized columns at the front. Behind the lines a Russian transport train was said to have sustained a direct hit on the Murmansk railroad. Railroad yards also were reported successfully bombed.

In air fights over the area between Ladoga and the town of Aunus the Soviet lost three bombers and two fighters, according to the Finnish communique, while ground gunners were said to have shot down three bombers and one fighter plane.

The Finns admitted losing one plane.

RUSSIA ORDERS GERMANS IN VOLGA AREA EXILED, FEARING SABOTAGE PLOT

Charges Tens Of Thousands Of Spies Among Descendants Of 18th Century Settlers Await Signal From Reich

Resettlement In Siberia As Soon As Possible Decreed—Families To Be Given Land And State Aid To Start Life Anew

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Monday, Sept. 8—A mass movement into exile in Siberia was ordered today for the heavily German-derived population of the Volga because of their alleged readiness to sabotage the Russian war effort with "explosions in those regions at a signal from Germany."

In the area settled by the Germans in the eighteenth century reign of Catherine the Great, the Russians said, are "tens of thousands of diversionists and spies among the German population."

Region Is Autonomous Republic

The German Volga territory is an autonomous Soviet republic in European Russia, north of the Caspian Sea.

Of its population of 571,089 in 1926, about sixty-seven per cent. were Germans. The republic covers some 10,329 square miles, about three fourths lying on the left bank of the Volga river and the remainder on the right bank.

Settled To Develop Territory

The German population grew from 27,000 colonists settled there in 1760-61 at the invitation of Catherine the Great by special manifesto when the population was so much less than today that the Government was concerned about the development of the uncultivated territory.

The Soviet order calling for the resettlement in Siberia provided that it be carried out as soon as possible by the National Defense Council headed by Premier Joseph Stalin.

To carry out the vast project, the Volga Germans must be transported across thousands of miles of Asiatic Russia.

The decree provides that they be resettled in the Novosibirsk and Omsk regions of western Siberia, the Altai region of the Kazakhstan republic and "neighboring localities rich in land."

The resettled families will be given land and state aid to start life anew in their new surroundings, it was stated.

[Editor's Note—Otto D. Tolischus in a dispatch from Berlin printed in The Sun in October, 1939, reported that the German Government then wanted to repatriate Germans living in Russia. Whether this plan fell through because of the difficulties or distances involved or because of Russian objections is not known.]

Decree Cites "Information"

A decree signed at the Kremlin August 28 by President Michael Kalinin and made public tonight said:

"According to reliable information received by military authorities there are a thousand and tens of thousands of diversionists and spies among the German population of the Volga region who are prepared to cause explosions in these regions at the signal from Germany.

"No German ever reported to Soviet authorities the presence of such great numbers of diversionists and spies. Therefore the German population of the Volga regions is covering up enemies of the Soviet people and Soviet power."

To Avoid Martial Law

"If diversionist acts took place under orders of Germany by German diversionists and spies in the Volga German republic or neighboring regions and there were bloodshed, the Soviet Government would be forced according to martial law to adopt measures of reprisal against the entire German population.

"In order to avoid such undesirable occurrences and to forestall serious bloodshed, the presidium of the Supreme Council of the U. S. S. R. has found it necessary to resettle the entire German population of the Volga regions to other regions under condition that the resettlers are allotted land and given state aid to settle in new regions.

Will Be Given Land

"Resettled Germans will be given land in the Novosibirsk and Omsk districts, the Altai region of the Kazakhstan republic and neighboring localities rich in land.

"In connection with this, the National Defense Council is instructed to resettle the soonest possible all Volga Germans who will be given land estates in new regions."

Red Pilot Tells of Hits On Blacked-Out Berlin

Says 'Very Big Bombs' Set Off Flames in City

MOSCOW, Sept. 7 (AP).—A pilot's story of dropping "very big bombs" on blacked-out Berlin was published today in "Krasnaya Zvezda," organ of the Russian Commissariat of Defense.

Lieutenant Malinin, the pilot, said Berlin was reached despite exceptionally unfavorable weather.

"Suddenly," his account said, "light flashed in the air in front of us: these were the lights of five enemy fighters. But the Nazis failed to notice us. Berlin was below us. I looked at my watch: 1.47, everything all right in full accordance with the schedule. . . Berlin was clearly visible.

"The military objective—the purpose of ur flight—was below us. The machine shook. A blinding explosion flashed below. Another one, then still another. These were very big bombs. The explosion of every one of them was distinctly seen from above as huge columns of flame.

"After a series of powerful explosions on military objectives, we went back into the clouds. Looking back for the last time I saw here and there bursts of flame amidst the darkness enveloping Berlin.

"'Everything all right!' my comrades stated on their job.

"The return trip passed without our ever noticing it."

Nazis Report 92 Vessels Of Russia Sunk in Week

Estimate Foe's Baltic Loss at 65 Transports, 27 Warships

BERLIN, Sept. 7 (AP).—As a "sign of the destruction of Soviet power in the Baltis," D. N. B., official German news agency, announced today that sixty-five Russian transports and twenty-seven warships had been sunk by the German Navy and Air Force in the Gulf of Finland last week.

"The figures show that flight of the Russians out of Tallinn and Baltic port (Paltiski) was prevented," D. N. B. said. Both places are in Estonia; Tallinn is the capital.

The agency's tabulation was:

Sunk by naval operations—Forty-three transports loaded with soldiers and equipment, three destroyers, nine mine sweepers, three patrol boats and nine other war vessels.

Sunk by air force—Twenty-two freighters totaling 74,000 tons, one cruiser and two destroyers.

Damaged by the navy — Three heavy cruisers, including the Kirov; three destroyers, one mine sweeper, five other warships and eight transports.

Damaged by the air force—One auxiliary cruiser, four destroyers and thirty-nine freighters.

Duce Army in Greece Beset By Guerillas

MOSCOW, Sept. 7, (A P)—The Soviet Information Bureau claimed today the Greek guerilla units and saboteurs are increasing their activity daily against the Italian army of occupation.

The Bureau's communique said:

Of the cases of the disappearance of Italian soldiers and the setting of fires to provision and raw material stores have increased in frequency.

On Aug. 28, guerillas caused a heavy accident to a troop train. Thirty-five cars with Italian soldiers on their way to the Turkish frontier were derailed. More than 120 soldiers were killed or gravely injured.

Another train wreck took place, Aug. 29, when guerillas derailed a long train loaded with fruit for Germany.

BRITONS PRAY FOR VICTORY OF RUSSIANS

Day Of Services Includes Pleas For Red Arms As Well As British

Archbishop Of Canterbury Calls War One Of Opposing Concepts

By Noland Norgaard

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 7—In churches which many times in the past rang with denunciations of all things Communistic, millions of Britons prayed today for a victory of Russian as well as British arms.

A day of prayer, requested by the King, coincided with the first anniversary of the beginning of the great air assault on London. One year ago 350 warplanes swooped down on this capital and flames leaped from bombed docks and buildings.

No bombs disturbed London's churchgoers today, but elsewhere there were grim reminders that the air war was not ended.

Find Chapel Shattered

Worshipers in one southwest England town found their chapel shattered by an overnight raid.

The Archbishop of Canterbury in broadcast services appealed to Britons to devote their prayers especially to the Russian armies. He asserted the war had become a conflict between wholly opposite concepts of man—the one as a child of God, the other as a creature of the state—in which there could be "no compromise, indeed no neutrality."

Arthur Cardinal Hinsley said in a broadcast that Poland had made a pact with the Soviet in order to deliver her sons and daughters "from slavery more awful than death."

Do Not Forfeit Rights

He added, "Russia or Russia's Government we know to have been guilty of great wrongs to others and Poland, also. But a people whose rulers have done wrongs does not forfeit all its own rights. We pray that defense of Russia's rights may help repair Poland's unmerited wrongs."

The cardinal said, "Our Prime Minister and Mr. Roosevelt have stated grand aims of victorious peace—freedom from want and freedom from fear. . . . This war, we believe, was forced upon us as the necessary, the sole means of securing lasting peace. Never again must peace be prepared for war."

SEP 7 1941

Chance To Win Russia

The bishop of Portsmouth in a pastoral letter suggested the war as an opportunity to win Russia "for Christendom."

"As Russia, under God, has given Great Britain welcome relief in her hour of distress," so "let us pay our debt by giving back to Russia . . reliance upon God," he said.

Wreckage hammers on nearby bombed buildings beat an accompaniment to the prayers in St. Paul's and the thin notes of a piano substituted for those of the cathedral organ, damaged by bombs.

Chief Rabbi Dr. J. H. Hertz conducted an open-air prayer in the ruins of the great London synagogue. There were similar services in other blitz-wrecked churches.

Nazis Report Sinking Of Four Merchantmen

Berlin, Sept. 7 (AP).—The Germans reported the sinking of four freighters, totaling 30,000 tons, last night and admitted that a number of persons were killed and damage done in overnight British raids against northwest Germany and the Norwegian coast.

Three of the merchantmen were reported shot out of convoys in St. George's Channel between England and Ireland, and another picked from a convoy off Lowestoft on the east coast, it was said. Another freighter was damaged, according to the official report.

Beckum, 10 miles east of the railway center of Hamm, and Nortmund were particularly mentioned as having come in for British attacks. The High Command said all the bombs fell in residential districts.

Strong raids by German planes also were reported on Ismailia airport along the Suez Canal and the east harbor of the British Fleet's base at Alexandria.

BRITISH BOMBERS STRIKE AT BERLIN

Germans Claim the Downing of Flying Fortress in Oslo Raid Saturday Night

LONDON DISCOUNTS STORY

Nazis Believed 'Fishing for Information'—R.A.F. Sweeps North France In Day

by Edwin Shanke

BERLIN, Monday, Sept. 8 (AP)—A squadron of British bombers reached Berlin in the course of attacks on North and Northwest Germany during the night, it was stated officially today.

Nine British planes were claimed to have been shot down.

Residents who ventured out to watch the developments between the sounding of the air-raid alert and the all-clear signal classified the raid as "lively."

The official communiqué said only a few of the attacking aircraft were able to penetrate the fire of anti-aircraft batteries surrounding Berlin. Explosive and incendiary bombs were dropped, but the communiqué said no military damage resulted.

Report Flying Fortress Downed

The Germans claimed last night to have shot down a Royal Air Force four-motored Flying Fortress on the Norwegian coast Saturday night, but acknowledged that British forays against Norway and Germany that night caused a number of deaths and did damage.

A D. N. B. official news agency dispatch said the Fortress plane was shot down in an attack on the Oslo area and that two of the big bomber's crew were taken prisoner. D. N. B. quoted the Norwegian Telegraph Bureau as saying the R. A. F. did no military damage but caused civilian casualties.

[An "Oslo, via Berlin," dispatch to The United Press said Flying Fortress raiders reached the center of Oslo Saturday night and that "one British plane was reported shot down by anti-aircraft fire."]

Commenting on the German High Command's claim that ten other British bombers were downed in Western Germany during Saturday night, D. N. B. called the num-1,000 tons, west of the Faeroes.

The Germans reported sinking four freighters, totaling 30,000 tons, Saturday night in the battle against England and another, of 1,000 tons, west of the Faeroe Islands.

"Fishing" Is Suggested

LONDON, Monday, Sept. 8 (AP)—The Germans apparently were "fishing for information" when the official German news agency, D. N. B., claimed that a Flying Fortress bomber had been shot down on the Norwegian coast, an authoritative British source declared early today.

The British declined to reply further to the German claim but it was believed in some quarters that no Flying Fortress bomber had been shot down. Britain has yet to announce the loss of one of those huge American-built substratosphere bombers but one recently barely made a British port after being heavily damaged.

The Air Ministry announced yesterday that raids were made by Coastal Command planes of an undisclosed type upon Bergso Island off the west coast of Norway Saturday night. All these planes apparently returned to Britain, as the communiqué said only that eight planes of the Bomber Command were missing from attacks on objectives in Germany.

The Air Ministry reported Saturday night that Flying Fortresses of the Bomber Command attacked "enemy shipping in Oslo harbor" Saturday morning and that no aircraft was missing.

R. A. F. SETS FIRES IN BOULOGNE RAIDS

Nazi Planes Meanwhile Drop Bombs On British Towns

SEP 8 1941

By Ernest Agnew

[By the Associated Press]

London, Monday, Sept. 8—The sky over Boulogne reddened early today with the glow of fires started by R. A. F. night raiders who crossed paths with German bombers pounding widespread sections of Britain.

The R. A. F. assault upon the German-held invasion port started around midnight, with subsequent waves of bombers adding new fires to those set by the initial formations swinging out across the Channel.

While this raid was in progress, the Nazis struck back, bombing a southeast coast town, the northeast coast, East Anglia, a town in the east of England and northeast Scotland.

Direct Hits On Two Pubs

Some casualties were reported in the southeast coast town where two taverns were wrecked by direct hits and a large number of houses and shops were damaged by German dive bombers. One northeast coast village was raked by machine-gun fire and bombs were reported dropped near an isolation hospital in northeast Scotland.

Reports reaching London failed, however, to mention any serious damage or concentrated attack at any one point.

Over Boulogne the R. A. F. encountered one of the heaviest anti-aircraft barrages yet seen from this side of the Dover straits.

Follows Raid On Factory

This assault followed a Saturday night attack upon a synthetic rubber factory at Huls in the Rhineland, where the Air Ministry reported large fires were set by bull's-eye scoring British planes, and daylight Sunday offensives over the Channel and northern France in which three R. A. F. fighters were lost.

Returning pilots said they left the vital Huls plant in billowing smoke and flames.

The Ministry admitted that this and other Saturday night attacks on industrial objectives and communications of western Germany and the harbor of Bergso Island, off the coast of the German-occupied Norway, cost the British eight planes lost.

At Bergso Island a fish-oil factory also was reported set afire.

Ship Fired; Escort Blown Up

The Air Ministry also told of an attack by a squadron of Blenheim bombers on a German supply ship and its escorting war vessel off the Dutch coast early yesterday afternoon in which, it said, the supply ship was fired and its escort blown up.

One German fighter plane was reported destroyed by the Blenheims' fighter escort and another downed in one of several "offensive sweeps over northern France."

The communique admitted the loss of two Blenheims and two fighter planes.

The R. A. F. flyers ran into heavy anti-aircraft defenses around the Huls factory, which they located only after a long search, the Air Ministry said. Powerful searchlights made their task especially difficult, one pilot diving to within a hundred feet of the ground to avoid them.

Rattle On Planes

Some Canadian flyers back from the Huls attack said that anti-aircraft shell fragments rattled against their bomber like "skeletons dancing on a roof."

Many of the crews reported their bombs fell in the dead center of the rubber plant, the Air Ministry said.

As they flew away they left behind them "multicolored fires settling down in the end to an angry red glow with clouds of dense smoke billowing skyward."

Admission of the loss of eight R. A. F. planes was partially offset by an official report that the crew of a bomber lost on the night of September 2-3 had been saved.

Suez Canal Attacked

CAIRO, Egypt, Sept. 7 (AP)—An R. A. F. communiqué said two enemy planes were shot down last night in a foray against the Suez Canal area. One plane fell in flames and some of its crew were captured, it was said. Other enemy raiders were reported damaged.

ROME FIRES GUNS AFTER RAID ALARM

ROME, Sept. 7 (AP).—Rome anti-aircraft batteries went into action for the first time in many months last night following an alarm signal from Italy's network of listening posts.

A communique said several batteries of the city's outer defenses threw up an "interceptive fire." There was no mention of hostile planes over the capital.

British planes did bomb Tripoli, Libya, and Catania, Sicily, however. The communique added there were no victims.

It said Italian planes bombed the airport at Nicosia, Cyprus, the night of Sept. 5, "causing fires and explosions."

Plot To Recall Nazi Troops?

[By the Associated Press]

Vichy, Sept. 7—Authorized sources declared tonight that the wounding of two German officials in Paris Saturday night was part of a Communist plot "to force the Reich command to withdraw the greatest possible number of divisions from its Eastern front."

This strategy, it was said, calls for provoking "the greatest disorders in France."

The Moscow Government, these circles added, "hopes by using militants in occupied France to lessen the pressure of the German armies by forcing the Reich general staff to keep important effectives in the occupied zone."

Recall Reds' Circular

Vichy circles recalled a French Communist circular of August 15, when the party served notice that "for every member shot by occupation authorities ten Germans must die."

"The order to provoke the maximum disorder in occupied France is no longer in doubt," the commentators added. "Broadcasts in French from the Moscow radio constitute real appeals for revolt."

Point To Secret Broadcast

These sources cited a broadcast of September 5 by Marcel Thorez, prominent French Communist leader, from a secret Communist station in which he declared "never has there been such a favorable occasion. We must act now that Hitler has launched all his reserves in Russia."

The Germans wounded in Paris, a civil official and a non-commissioned officer, were shot a few hours after the execution by German firing squads of three French Communists in reprisal for acts against the German forces of occupation.

Eagle Pilot Bags Fighter; Another Saves Damaged Plane

Messerschmitt Brought Down By Utah Man—Texan Gets Back With Hole In Wing And Guns Damaged

SEP 8 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 7—An Eagle Squadron flyer from Utah shot down a Messerschmitt 109 fighter plane today during a sweep over northern France, and a freshman member of the American squad fighting with the R. A. F. barely limped home with a badly damaged plane.

Flight Lieutenant Chesley Gordon Peterson, of Santaquin, Utah, made this report on his return from the engagement:

"Over Boulogne on the way back there was a big scrap with a lot of ME109F's (Messerschmitt fighters). One of them got above me but I managed to climb right up under his belly and I gave him everything I had from seventy-five-yard range.

"First his wheels dropped. Then he went down into a slow spin. . . . He crashed near the outskirts of Boulogne."

On the same sortie was Pilot Officer Patrick Dowling, of Texas, who has been with the Eagle Squadron only ten days. It was his first operational flight.

The Air Ministry's news service said a plane shot a large hole in the wing of Dowling's plane and damaged his guns.

Despite engine difficulties and oil which covered his windshield, the news service said Dowling glided back and landed in a field.

The British called it a "fine piece of flying."

Petersen's bag was one of two ME109F's shot down by the R. A. F. during the day, other pilots getting one during a raid on German shipping off The Hague, Netherlands.

British, U. S. Warships Join In Hunt For Greer Attacker

North Atlantic Criss-Crossed By Naval Craft Seeking Trace Of German Submarine

SEP 8 1941

By Drew Middleton

[By the Associated Press]

Reykjavik, Iceland, Sept. 7 (Passed by Field Censor)—British and United States warships criss-crossed the tumultuous North Atlantic today, hunting the German submarine which clashed last Thursday with the United States destroyer Greer.

The U-boat has a "slim chance," according to one American naval officer. He expressed little doubt that it already had been damaged by the Greer and that its crew was weary from seventy-two hours of dodging depth charges dropped by planes and destroyers.

Many British and American naval officers here say they believe the submarine, which was attacked by the Greer, was sunk in the action with the American destroyer and that the Berlin announcement, indicating that it escaped, was intended to cover the loss.

Another theory is that the U-boat was damaged but not sunk by the Greer and that after diving to escape the destroyer it came to the surface during the night. Its commander then may have taken a desperate chance and wirelessed his account of the engagement to the German submarine base at Brest.

It was considered doubtful that the submarine had yet made port. To do that, naval observers said she would have had to do most of the trip submerged, following a tortuous course to escape the hunters.

It is surprising that a submarine should attack a destroyer. Destroyers are built to fight submarines and the latter have little chance of victory unless their first torpedo hits the mark.

If this fails the submarine's only chance is to dive and play dead. Once its position is known its chances of survival become progressively slimmer as more surface and aerial craft enter into the search.

Berlin Radio Says U. S. Lies

BERLIN, Sept. 7 (AP).—Germany, after energetically accusing the destroyer Greer of an unprovoked attack on a German submarine, had nothing more to say today in the controversy.

[A Berlin radio broadcast heard in New York called the United States Navy Department's version of the incident "an official U. S. A. lie." The broadcast, picked up by the Columbia Broadcasting System, said: "The Washington Navy Department has issued a statement in which the official German clarification of the Greer incident was described as a misstatement of facts.

["The Navy Department has found it advisable to stick to its lie that the first aggressive act was committed by the German submarine. This new official U. S. A. lie is so clumsy and the new edition of the same swindle so transparet that no explanation of the reasons behind that statement is necessary. Roosevelt in playing with fire. He believes he has found an occasion to incite the American people to war feeling by twistig the facts."]

The official contention, expressed yesterday, that the destroyer shot at the submarine before the U-boat fired two torpedoes, was front-page news in Berlin papers, but was not given extreme display.

There was no press comment and even the headlines were almost uniform. Typical was the "Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung's": "United States Destroyer Unsuccessfuly Attacks German U-Boat—Roosevelt Attempts Provocation—Official German Attitude Toward Fake English-American Reports."

New York, Sept. 7—A Berlin radio broadcast heard here today called the United States Navy Department's version of the Greer-submarine incident "an official U. S. A. lie."

"The Washington Navy Department has issued a statement in which the official German clarification of the Greer incident was described as a misstatement of facts," said the broadcast, picked up by CBS.

"The Navy Department has found it advisable to stick to its lie that the first aggressive act was committed by the German submarine. This new official U. S. Nye Asserts U. S. People Are Unmoved By Attack

Trenton, N. J., Sept. 7 (AP)—United States Senator Gerald P. Nye (Rep., N. D.) declared today at an America First committee rally that the United States' "130,000,000 people were hardly moved by the submarine attack that seems to have been made on an American destroyer."

The non-interventionist Senator, charging that President Roosevelt and Administration leaders had led this nation to "the precipice of war," expressed hope the President would postpone comment on the engagement between the destroyer Greer and a German submarine until the "hours of anger" subsided.

The "hours of anger," Nye said, were being experienced to a far greater degree by Mr. Roosevelt than by the average American citizen.

Versailles, Sept. 7—Pierre Laval was allowed out of bed today for the first time since he and Marcel Deat were shot by Paul Colette on August 28. The former Vice-Premier of the Vichy Government was sufficiently strong to walk next door to see Deat.

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, Sept. 7—Two German officials were wounded slightly in a new outbreak of anti-German incidents as the battle between the occupying authorities and French non-conformists continued today.

A German civil official and German non-commissioned officer were shot by unidentified assailants Saturday night, hardly more than twelve hours after the dawn execution of three French Communists by German firing squads in the first manifold reprisal for acts against the occupation forces.

Incendiary Fire Breaks Out

Further indication that the German policy of shooting hostages is not having the desired effect was seen in an incendiary blaze which also broke out Saturday night in a garage in the fashionable Auteuil suburb which had been requisitioned by German troops.

The German civil official was shot by two unidentified assailants on Rue Lafontaine in the Auteuil quarter. The attackers fled.

The German non-commissioned officer was shot on the Rue Daboukir in the Louvre quarter under similar conditions. While he was more seriously wounded, he was not considered in danger.

Incendiary Machine Found

The garage fire was discovered during the night in the Rue Felicien David and the incendiary machine which had started the blaze was recovered by investigators. The garage was being used by the Germans as a storage depot.

The execution of three Frenchmen, drawn from the Drancy concentration camp, was the result of the wounding of a German sergeant September 3. Official posters announcing the executions referred to the proclamation of August 22, of General von Schaumberg, commander of the city of Paris, warning that in the future hostages would be shot in a number comparing to the seriousness of the offense against Germans.

The Germans said inquiry had shown that those guilty of the attack against the sergeant, who suffered a slight wound in the shoulder, "could have been none other than French Communists."

TEHERAN BALKS AT ANGLO-RUSS PEACE TERMS

Difficulty Seems To Be Over Soviet's Failure To Withdraw Troops

Deadlock May Provoke Explosion, With Ousting Of Shah As Result

By Daniel De Luce

[By the Associated Press]

Teheran, Sept. 7—The Iran Government today failed to issue a statement at the regular session of Parliament on peace negotiations with Britain and Russia, thereby indicating the terms presented by the Allies last Friday had not been approved.

British sources, however, flatly declared the German legation would be ousted from Teheran and all Germans without diplomatic status must be surrendered to the Allies for internment or exchange.

Soviet Clings To Territory

A week ago the British at least appeared to be willing to deal lightly with the Germans, but when the Iran Government raised the question of the withdrawal of Russian troops from Kazvin and other points near Teheran, the British and Russians took the opportunity to change their terms as regards the Nazis.

There was no indication the Soviet intends to relinquish at present any part of the occupied northern territory.

Parliament discussed a minor Justice Ministry bill, contrary to expectations in foreign circles, that the Government would announce conclusion of a peace or its own resignation.

Iran To Be Gateway For U. S. Aid To Russia

By Edward Kennedy

With the British Forces in Iran, Sept. 6 (Delayed A. P.)—British and Russian troops on Iranian soil marked time today as armistice negotiations with Iran's ruler, Reza Shah Pahlavi, entered their tenth day without conclusion.

Meanwhile, plans for making Iran a great connecting lane between Britain and Russia and a gateway for promised American aid to the Soviets await the signing of an agreement.

The two powers have preferred to leave the monarch in authority rather than face the disruptions which might result from a change of regime or to tie up a large number of needed forces of their own in a general occupation of the country.

Ousting Of Shah Hinted

The question, now, however, is how much longer their patience will last while Germans are hammering away on Russia's Western front and each day is more precious than the day before.

The deadlock may provoke an explosion within non-occupied Iran, for there always has been strong anti-Shah elements there, and, in addition, it is reported that many of those around the Shah are anxious to end the tension by coming to an agreement.

According to reliable information reaching here, the monarch is holding out in Teheran and in such manner that his ministers no longer dare advise him otherwise.

No matter what happens, it is almost certain that further occupation of Iran by Russian and British forces will take place only in the event of internal disintegration which makes such a step imperative.

To Double-Track Railway

Among the projects to be begun once the agreement is signed is the double-tracking of a large part of the Shah's fantastic railway from the Persian Gulf to the Caspian Sea.

This line is regarded as a marvel since it was built with imperious disregard for economics and over terrain so difficult that it cost more per mile than any other railway in the world.

It now is to become the main roadway between two main powers in the fight against Hitler.

The Shah refused to connect it with any other railway but ran it from a port he created on the gulf to a port he created on the Caspian. It will come in handy since the British have access to the gulf and the Russians have ships in the Caspian.

Other work to be undertaken in Persia is the construction of airfields which will put the British within bombing range if the Germans get near the Caucasus.

Full Debate On War Expected In Parliament

Likely To Follow Churchill's Review Of Events That Transpired During Recess

London, Sept. 7 (AP)—When Parliament reconvenes shortly, another full debate on the war is expected. This would come after Prime Minister Churchill reviews events that have transpired during Parliament's brief holiday.

Foremost on Churchill's list are likely to be further disclosures about the Atlantic conference with President Roosevelt.

Churchill also is expected to touch on Russian resistance and the problem of sending her all possible help, British handling of Iran difficulties and the state of Britain's defenses against a possible invasion attempt.

'Almost All' Of Eleven Argentines Seized By Nazis In Paris Freed

Berlin, Sept. 7 (AP)—Responsible Argentine sources said today that "almost all' the eleven Argentine citizens detained a few days ago for investigation by German authorities in Paris have now been released.

These quarters refused to make further comment.

The Argentine Foreign Office said on September 3 that it had ordered the Argentine Embassy in Berlin to obtain a full report on the roundup, which was made about the time the Germans were arresting thousands of Frenchmen to stamp out oppositionist elements. The Argentine Foreign Office said it had no information on the cause of the arrests.

Leahy and Weddell Confer With Vatican Envoy at Barcelona

BARCELONA, Spain, Sept. 7 (AP)—Myron C. Taylor, en route to Rome to resume his post as President Roosevelt's personal envoy to the Vatican, conferred for nearly four hours today with Admiral William D. Leahy and Alexander W. Weddell, American Ambassadors to Vichy and Madrid respectively.

At the conclusion of the conversations Mr. Weddell said they spent "a delightful day talking shop." He declined to amplify his statement or to disclose the subjects discussed.

Admiral Leahy said he would return to Vichy tomorrow. Mr. Taylor and his wife arrived today by plane and are expected to remain until Tuesday.

Mr. Weddell said the meeting here originally was scheduled between Admiral Leahy and Mr. Taylor and that "of course I could not let two such distinguished diplomats pass through without greeting them."

Mackenzie King's Opposition To War Cabinet Strengthened

More Resolved Than Ever Against Such Empire Body, He Says After London Trip

[By the Associated Press]

Montreal, Sept. 7—Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King of Canada returned home today by transatlantic ferry plane from Britain, where last week he joined British Prime Minister Churchill in calling for full United States backing in the war against Germany.

King was greeted at the airport by C. D. Howe, Minister of Munitions, and Ernest Lapointe, Justice Minister. Shortly after stepping from the R. A. F. ferry command transport he left by automobile to board a train for Ottawa.

He was accompanied on his return across the Atlantic by E. P. Taylor, chief executive officer of the British Supply Council of North America, and Col. G. Vanier, newly appointed commander of Military District No. 4, at Quebec.

Trip Well Timed

King said he believed his trip was made at "the most opportune time" and added that "I would not have accomplished as good results had I gone to Britain earlier."

"Mr. Churchill was kind enough to say my visit had meant much to the British and that my speech at the Lord Mayor's luncheon had been most helpful," he said.

The Prime Minister asserted he returned home more resolved than ever in his opposition to an empire war Cabinet for settling problems between the Canadian and British governments.

In a written statement issued shortly after his arrival, King said the most vivid impression of his trip was "a heightened sense of the immediate dangers of the present conflict to all parts of the world."

Sees Rapid Moves

"Developments from now on," he added, "may follow with surprising rapidity. Time as well as space is being eliminated."

King said his conviction was stronger now than ever "that the defeat of Nazi barbarism, and Prussian militarism which underlies it, will come only from the unremitting and united efforts of all free men."

He announced that he would broadcast to the people on his visit within a few days.

Charges Plot To Draw In Portugal And Turkey

Rome, Sept. 7 (AP)—Virginio Gayda, authoritative Fascist spokesman, said today that President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill had agreed on plans to bring Portugal and Turkey into the war by occupying their territory on the pretext of protecting them against the Axis.

"Will Turkey, which has considerable military forces and high national conscience, want to get confused with Persia and its obscure vicissitudes and will it be reconciled to such easy submission?" Gayda inquired in the newspapers La Voce d'Italia.

Gayda said it was "permissible to think" that the Germans would conquer European Russia, including Leningrad, Moscow, Kiev and Kharkov before winter.

Then much of the German army would be freed for action on other fronts, he said. This is one of the weak points, he added, in the plans of Roosevelt and Churchill to prolong the war for two years more in order to give the United States and Britain time to complete their preparations to fight Germany.

4th of Australia Eligibles Fight

SYDNEY, Sept. 7 (AP).—Pledging that the Australian people would continue the war until the complete overthrow of Hitlerism, Prime Minister Arthur W. Fadden said today that one in every four eligibile men was serving in Australia's fighting forces. Australia, he said in a broadcast to the nation, now is able to give a good account of herself in any emergency and within six months will be devoting at least 30 per cent of her resources to the war effort.

ZIONISTS ASK PLEDGE OF PALESTINE FUTURE

Call on Allies to Declare for Post-War Commonwealth

CINCINNATI, Sept. 7 (AP)—The convention of the Zionist Organization of America endorsed late today a declaration calling upon Great Britain and the world's democracies "to proclaim establishment of the Jewish Commonwealth of Palestine as an integral and essential part of a democratic world order" when peace is restored.

Dr. Stephen S. Wise of New York presented the declaration, addressed "particularly to Prime Minister Churchill, who has given memorable evidences of his support of the Zionist cause."

Asking that the Jewish people be included "in the roster of the conquered and oppressed who confidently look forward to moral and national restoration," the declaration urged Britain to "take immediate advantage of the repeatedly expressed desire of the Jews of Palestine to make their maximum contribution to the common war effort by establishing a Jewish military force under British command."

The statement sought "a speedy rectification" of British policy, "with respect to the Jewish national home."

"We urge the British Government," it continued, "to permit return to Palestine of the refugees who, contrary to the intent of the mandate and the dictate of humanity, have been deported from the shores of their ancestral home in which they sought sanctuary."

Speakers included Edmund I. Kaufman of Washington, Zionist president; Louis Lipsky of New York, former Zionist president; Dr. Solomon Goldman of Chicago, Professor Reinhold Niebuhr of Union Theological Seminary, New York, and Judge Morris Rothenberg of New York.

Nazis "Nation Of Gravediggers"

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 7—Matthew Woll, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, declared today in an address at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine that Hitler's new order "promised to abolish unemployment—it has in fact abolished freedom, individuality, nationality."

"The acid test of this new order of Hitler's is the attitude toward labor," he said. "It promised jobs for all—it has made Germany a nation of gravediggers and of moral outlaws in the world."

He spoke at a celebration of Labor Sunday in the cathedral.

BELGIAN DIET HELD AT 40% OF MINIMUM

Nutritionist Reports Health Of Several Generations May Be Impaired

Hoover Sees Little Comfort In Postwar Food When Youth Is Stunted Or Dead

SEP 8 1941

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 7—A report asserting that Belgian adults were receiving only forty per cent. of minimum food needs and Belgian children from fifty to eighty per cent. was released today by the National Committee on Food for the Small Democracies.

The report, prepared by Dr. E. J. Bigwood, technical adviser to the Belgian Government in London, declared that an intensive survey showed that adults in Belgian towns had weight losses from eleven to forty-four pounds from diet deficiencies, death and disease rates were rising and concluded:

"The general health situation in Belgium is alarming. It seems inevitable that the health of several generations will be irremediably impaired if nothing is done to relieve the present situation."

No Help Yet Offered

Commenting on the report, former President Herbert Hoover, honorary chairman of the food committee, said the "cold facts of weakness, disease and death" given in the statistics could not express "the tragedy of a brave, liberty-loving nation whose appeals for help have yet had no answering voice in the councils of either totalitarianism or democracy."

"It is little comfort to them," he continued, "to receive the promises by the democracies of food after the war is over, when the hope of the race—the youth—will have already been stunted or dead."

Hoover said that the suffering of the Belgians would be "even worse during the coming winter and spring" because arrangements to obtain some food supplies from Russia had been terminated by the German invasion of Soviet territory.

SEP 8 1941

Survey Of Expert

In his survey covering the food situation to July of this year, Dr. Bigwood, authority on nutrition and a professor in the University of Brussels, said that since early in the year six sevenths of the Belgian urban population had existed on a diet of 900 to 1,100 calories a day.

The remaining seventh, representing the wealthy families, had been able to maintain a normal diet of 2,700 to 3,000 calories a day for a few weeks after Germany invaded Belgium, he said, by buying in the "black market." Recently these families have subsisted on 1,500 to 1,700 calories daily as a result of increasing food shortages, the report said.

MOVIE PROPAGANDA HEARING IS NEAR

Senate Group To Call Number Of Film Notables This Week

Accusation Is Made That Pictures Are Seeking U. S. Entry Into War

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 7—Men of prominence in the motion-picture industry will be called upon by a Senate committee this week to answer accusations that the films have been used to spread propaganda favoring United States entry into the war.

Hearings, scheduled to open Tuesday, also will cover allegations that the radio industry has engaged in propaganda for war.

Chairman Clark (Dem., Idaho) of the five-man investigating group said today the first witnesses would be Senators Nye (Rep., N. D.) and Clark (Dem., Mo.), bitter critics of Administration foreign policy. Nye and Clark are authors of a resolution asking the inquiry.

Long List Of Witnesses

The two Senators will be followed by leaders of the film industry, including Nicholas Schenck, Harry Warner, Barney Balaban, Darryl Zanuck and Alexander Korda. Chairman Clark said he had no immediate plans to call any motion-picture actors or actresses, but added that this might be necessary if any films were found to contain war propaganda.

The investigation will open during a lull in Congressional legislative proceedings. The House will continue its vacation for another week, but a joint committee of Senate and House members is scheduled to start Wednesday to rewrite the $3,583,900,000 tax bill passed by the Senate Friday.

Many Senate Changes

The Senate made many changes in the measure passed by the House, including a reduction in personal income tax exemptions, but despite these changes Senator George (Dem., Ga.), chairman of the joint committee, expressed the view that a final bill would be agreed upon in a few days. In that case, the record-breaking revenue measure will be ready for consideration of the House when it reconvenes next week.

The Interstate Commerce subcommittee which will conduct the propaganda investigation is composed largely of Senators hostile to the President's foreign policies. In addition to Chairman Clark, the members are Bone (Dem., Wash.), McFarland (Dem., Ariz.), Tobey (Rep., N. H.) and Brooks (Rep., Ill.).

Willkie In Other Corner

On the other hand, Wendell Willkie, a supporter of the President's foreign policies, will serve as counsel for the film producers.

The subcommittee was named after Nye and Clark (of Missouri) had asked for an investigation of charges that the multimillion-dollar film and radio industries had attempted "to influence public sentiment in the direction of participation by the United States in the present European war."

"We believe we have plenty of material for our purposes," Chairman Clark said.

Out After Facts, He Says

"This is a fact-finding Senate inquiry and it's going to be fair, but we're determined to get the facts."

Since appointment of the group, Nye and Clark have amended their original request to include charges of monopoly in production, distribution and exhibition of motion pictures as well as fair-trade practices.

Chairman Clark said first inquiries might deal with asserted controls in the industry by the so-called "Big Four or Big Five."

Censorship Attempt Charged

In New York, Fight For Freedom, Inc., charged in an open letter to Congress that the subcommittee was about to engage "in the most barefaced attempt at censorship and racial prosecution which has ever been tried in this country."

The group announced the protest was signed by sixty-three prominent persons, including Helen Hayes and Melvyn Douglas of the stage and screen.

Fight For Freedom contended that the subcommittee was never authorized by a vote of the Senate and was "packed" with "extreme isolationists."

"Any attempt to stir America's patriotism in defense of its freedom, any attempt to portray the very degradation and baseness of Nazism, as flaunted by Hitler and his cohorts," the statement said, "will be attacked by this group as 'warmongering' and silenced by racial and religious attacks on the groups or individuals responsible."

DIES SEES RED TINGE ON AIDS OF HENDERSON

SEP 8 1941

Washington, D. C., Sept. 7 (AP).—Chairman Dies (D-Tex.) of the House committe on un-American activities made public tonight a letter to President Roosevelt charging that at least four of Leon Henderson's aides in the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply had expressed Communistic views.

Recalling that he had accused Henderson himself on the House floor of recent connections "with several of the front organizations or transmission belts of the Communist Party," Dies concentrated his latest attack on these subordinates:

Robert A. Brady, head consultant of OPACS at $7,500 a year salary.

His wife, Mildred Edie Brady, principal specialist in consumer education at $5,600.

Tom Tippett, assistant chief of the rent section at $5,600.

Dewey H. Palmer, $20-a-day consultant.

E. J. Lever, principal field representative of the Labor Division of the Office of Production Management, with a $5,600 salary, also was accused of being "affiliated with outstanding Communists."

Quotes Men He Accuses.

In connection with his charges Dies submitted a sheaf of forty-three exhibits, mostly excerpts from the writings of these officials between 1935 and 1939. On the basis of these exhibits Dies contended that Henderson "has surrounded himself with highly-paid assistants who are, by their own public records, strangers to the American way."

He said that the Dies committee "has learned that Communists specialize in the penetration of government agencies wherever there is a lack of vigilance against their Trojan horse tactics," and concluded:

"If and when these persons (whom he named) are removed from their respective positions, I shall be glad to cooperate with the Administration in bringing to light similar facts concerning other employes of OPACS, to the end that this country may be defended against its enemies within as well as against those without."

Henderson Scornful of Dies.

In testimony before the House Banking Committee last month, Henderson expressed the view that Dies was not "a responsible member of Congress."

Dies devoted more than half of his 15-page letter to the President to a discussion of various writings and activities by Brady from a book on German Fascism which Brady wrote in 1937 while associate professor of economics at the University of California. Dies quoted excerpts which he described as following "the Communist Party line." The tenor of the quotations was that German Fascism was not greatly different from American capitalism in its repressive effects on the workers.

MOTHER OF PRESIDENT IS DEAD AT HYDE PARK; HIS ADDRESS POSTPONED

Mrs. Sara Roosevelt Succumbs To Acute Circulatory Collapse At 86—Son And First Lady At Bedside—Funeral Tuesday

SEP 8 1941

Chief Executive's Broadcast, Expected To Deal With New Tension In German-American Relations, Set For 9 P. M. Thursday

[By the Associated Press]

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 7—Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, who lived to see her only son thrice become President of the United States, died today at the ancestral Roosevelt home overlooking the Hudson river.

Death came at 11.15 A. M. of an acute circulatory collapse resulting principally from her advanced age. She would have been 87 on September 21. The first intimation of her declining health came Friday when President Roosevelt left Washington for Hyde Park to visit his mother, whom he said he wished to undergo a physical checkup.

Mrs. Roosevelt died while her son was preparing an address of major importance to the world scheduled to be broadcast from the White House in Washington tomorrow night.

Will Broadcast Thursday

It was announced officially that the address, expected to deal with the new tension in German-American relations, would be postponed until 9 P. M. Thursday. It will be carried from the White House by major American networks and rebroadcast to the world in fourteen languages.

Dr. Scott L. Smith, the family physician, announced that Mrs. Roosevelt had been unconscious for twelve hours preceding her death and that her condition had not become alarming until Saturday evening.

Even at her advanced age she was extremely active, attending many charitable functions and state occasions. She had spent the summer at her cottage on Campobello Island, N. B., leaving August 31 for Hyde Park.

President At Bedside

Both the President and his wife were with his mother when she died. They had spent last night at her bedside.

Her greatest joy was her son, whom she referred to occasionally when speaking in public as "My son, the President." Although noted for her extreme energy and activity, she preferred to avoid the limelight, but if she could lend herself on any occasion in a manner to "help Franklin," she usually did.

She had watched her son take command of a country in the depths of depression and lead a fight for domestic recovery perhaps unparalled in the nation's history. Then she saw him become a spokesman of democracy opposed to the advance of totalitarianism in a world at war.

Her Views On War

Once in 1939, when she sailed for Paris, she was asked if she were not afraid of war. She replied:

"I don't know. I suppose so, but if it comes I'll live through it. And if not"—she shrugged and smiled.

Mrs. Roosevelt had been a widow since December 8, 190[illegible].

Although her hair was white and her face showed some signs of her age, she was a handsome woman, retaining much of the singular beauty which had caused friends in her young womanhood to label her and her four sisters "the five beautiful Delano sisters."

It was disclosed that the funeral would be held Tuesday at the family home, which commands a beautiful view of the Hudson, and that only relatives and neighbors and friends of the approximate age of Mrs. Roosevelt would be permitted to attend.

Burial will be in the family plot behind historic St. James' Church, an ivy-covered gray stone building more than two miles up the Albany Post Road from the Roosevelt estate.

Mrs. Roosevelt not only lived to see her only son become President of the United States—the thirty-second—but also lived to see him shatter all precedent by being elected to a third term in the highest office in the land.

Born In 1854

She was born September 21, 1854, the daughter of a long line of merchants in the Far East trade. Her father was Warren Delano, who engaged in banking and commerce. Her marriage to James Roosevelt joined her to a line equally well established.

Only twenty miles separated her Hyde Park estate on the Hudson river from her girlhood home, Algonac, near Newburgh, N. Y.

Her last previous reported illness was April 29, 1940, when she suffered an upset stomach while motoring in New York city and was treated in a drugstore near the New York World's Fair. She returned to her car and was driven home.

Saw Sister Saturday

Mrs. Roosevelt's only living sister, Mrs. Price Collier, of Tuxedo Park, N. Y., visited her Saturday afternoon. Her brother, Frederic A. Delano, who is chairman of the National Resources Planning Board in Washington, came to Hyde Park this morning.

Four of the grandchildren were notified during the night of the serious turn in her condition. James and Elliott Roosevelt arrived during the afternoon and John Roosevelt was expected momentarily. It was indicated that Mrs. John Boettiger, who is in Seattle, and Franklin Roosevelt, Jr., would be unable to come to Hyde Park.

President's Visit

The President had a good visit with his mother in her room just after he arrived here from Washington yesterday morning and spent some time with her again yesterday afternoon.

In announcing that the funeral would be held Tuesday, the temporary White House made a special request that no flowers be sent. This official statement was issued:

"Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of the President, died at her home in Hyde Park at 12.15 P. M. o'clock today, Eastern daylight saving time.

"Dr. Scott L. Smith, the family physician, made the following statement:

"'For the twelve hours preceding her death, Mrs. Roosevelt had been unconscious following an acute circulatory collapse due principally to her advanced age. The first intimation of this occurred during Friday night but did not become alarming until late Saturday evening.'"

Two years ago—at the age of 84—Mrs. Roosevelt was hostess to King George VI and Queen Elizabeth on their visit to the United States and thus became the first woman in history to entertain British rulers in a private home (Hyde Park) in this country.

Long Mistress Of Home

Throughout her mature life she was mistress of the stately stone and stucco home here, and it was for this reason that she was hostess to royalty, instead of her famous daughter-in-law, on that occasion.

Besides entertaining the King and Queen that year, she attended numerous luncheons, participated in Mother's Day observances, visited Paris just before the war started, attended a Jackson Day political dinner and a meeting of the Birth Control Federation of America. This was typical of the breadth of her interests almost until her death.

She was unaffectedly elated when election returns sent her son to the White House again last November, and she remarked on that occasion:

"Of course, I am very happy. I really didn't want him to run again, but, since he did, I'm glad it turned out so well. I couldn't bear to see him let down. And I know he's fully capable of carrying on for another four years."

She married James Roosevelt October 7, 1880, and in January, 1882, their son, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, was born. The father was a lawyer with financial and railroad interests and his father, Isaac Roosevelt—the President's grandfather—was a distant cousin of Theodore Roosevelt.

Studied Abroad

Mrs. Roosevelt's early education came from governesses in her girlhood home and later she studied four years in France and Germany. With her mother she took a four-month trip to China when she was only 8 aboard the clipper ship Surprise.

In Hongkong she joined her father and returned to this country by way of Europe.

In addition to the Hyde Park estate, she maintained a town house in East Sixty-fifth street, Manhattan.

The Rev. Frank R. Wilson is rector of the Episcopal church in the churchyard of which Mrs. Roosevelt will be buried. The parish dates back to 1811. The President's father is buried there and so are his grandmother, Mrs. Rebecca H. Roosevelt, who died in 1876, and his first son, who died in infancy in 1909 and who also was named Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

Next To Her Husband

The President's mother will be buried next to her husband. In accordance with traditions of the Hudson Valley, with its Dutch background, she will lie at his left, just as she stood at his left when they were wed.

It is traditional also that the dead lie with their heads to the west, so that on resurrection day they may arise facing the rising sun.

The Roosevelt plot is directly to the rear of the church. Old elms, beeches and oaks shade the churchyard, while a hedge climbs over an iron fence around the family lot.

The bedroom of the President's mother is at the southeast corner of the second floor, looking out over the broad lawns of the estate toward the Albany road.

100 Condolences An Hour

Soon after the announcement today of the death of the President's mother, messages of condolence began streaming into the temporary White House at a rate of more than a hundred an hour.

Telegraph offices had to reserve special wires to handle the messages.

Official Washington Sends Condolences To President

Washington, Sept. 7 (AP)—Official Washington sent its sympathy to President Roosevelt today on the death of his mother, a familiar figure at state occasions and White House gatherings.

Among the first messages was one from Secretary of State and Mrs. Hull. They wired the President that Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt's "high ideals, splendid character and remarkable personality endeared her to generations of Americans. She was one of the finest and noblest women we ever knew and she held an abiding place in our affection."

Congressional attaches said it was expected that the Senate and House would adopt resolutions of sympathy.

"Typical American Mother"

In New York, Mayor F. H. LaGuardia expressed sorrow on behalf of New York city in the death of Mrs. Roosevelt and described it as "the passing of a typical American mother."

SEP 8 1941

"She gave the country a great President and the world a great leader," he said.

In Albany, Gov. Herbert H. Lehman asserted Mrs. Roosevelt "was loved not only in this country but throughout the world," adding "her devoted and unselfish life will serve as an inspiration to the nation."

Canadian Prime Minister Sends His Condolences

Ottawa, Sept. 7 (AP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King tonight sent two messages of sympathy to President Roosevelt whose mother died today at Hyde Park, N. Y.

It was the first thing Mr. King did after he left the private railway car in which he came here from Montreal following a transatlantic flight.

One message was a personal wire to the President; the other was a message on behalf of the Government and people of Canada.

O'Conor Sends Condolences

Governor O'Conor last night wired condolences to President Roosevelt.

"In the name of the people of Maryland," his telegram said, "I express heartfelt sympathy upon the death of your beloved mother.

"Blessed with a lengthy life, she devoted herself to the betterment of humanity and in every respect was a noble exemplar of motherhood.

"That you may be consoled in your hour of bereavement is our earnest prayer."

Despite Her Furs And Orchids, Mrs. Roosevelt Liked To Laugh

Though Ever Regal, She Entertained British Rulers With Homely Anecdotes

SEP 8 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 7—Ever regal, ever serene, Sara Delano Roosevelt affected furs, orchids and a gold lorgnette for the sake of dignity and tradition, but she always had time for a laugh.

Behind that lorgnette were a pair of merry brown eyes that could sparkle with efficiency one moment and twinkle with humor the next.

The President's mother entertained the British rulers in her home in 1939, but instead of a stuffy affair the occasion was fraught with fun as she regaled King George VI and Queen Elizabeth with homely anecdotes.

Once at a picnic young John Roosevelt was asked by his father to escort his grandmother across a rough stretch of beach, and John, taking her arm, said:

"Come along, toots."

That was one of the times she laughed like a co-ed.

Silenced A Guest

She once gained acclaim as one of the very few persons who ever silenced the late Huey Long.

On this occasion, so the story goes, the "Kingfish" was monopolizing conversation at dinner at Hyde Park house, expounding his theories of government and advising the Chief Executive on a number of matters.

Mrs. Roosevelt got the ear of another guest during a lull and stage-whispered:

"There was only one reason why I didn't want Franklin to go into politics. He has to deal with such peculiar people."

Never in awe of any dignitaries brought into her home by her son, it was she who made out the menus and decided what quarters the British rulers would occupy, knowing she could put them at their ease.

Broke Into Conferences

Nor would she hesitate to break in on an important Presidential conference in Mr. Roosevelt's study just to ask some simple question such as what her son wanted for lunch.

Last year when she suffered an upset stomach and everyone was expressing concern, she brushed off inquirers with a smile and a laugh: "It's just a little stomach trouble. I don't know what happened. I must have been poisoned."

While living for a time in Paris as a child, Sara Delano exchanged greetings with the Empress Eugenie, waving at her from a balustrade while the Empress, surrounded by her court, rode past.

Sixty Summers

Mrs. Roosevelt, who had been coming here summers for sixty years, had visited—as in every other year—many island homes. She knew members of the families by their first names.

"She was broadminded and sociable," said one weather-beaten fisherman—a tear in his eye.

Mrs. Roosevelt had a deep interest in the island schools and many a village youngster owes his education to her liberality.

Supported Institute

During most of the summer, the President's summer home, which adjoins hers, was occupied by a youth group studying principles of democracy. She joined the President's wife, who sponsored the institute, in supporting it.

The Roosevelt family worshiped at St. Anne's Episcopal Church on the island and nearly every Sunday while here Mrs. Roosevelt attended services in the little, brown wooden chapel.

Flags Are Half-Masted At Campobello Island For "Grand Old Lady"

Campobello Island, N. B., Sept. 7 (AP). American and British flags flew side by side at half-staff tonight in this little Canadian island in memory of the "Grand Old Lady."

Hardy fishermen and villagers, who knew Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt as a neighbor and counselor, heard the news of her death almost with disbelief.

Only a week ago, they recalled, she left her rambling, red-shingled Dutch Colonial summer home buoyant and apparently in good health. Even a 600-mile motor trip a month earlier from Hyde Park had not seemed to tire her.

NEW YORK, SEPT 7-(AP)-THE GERMANS, IN A MANEUVER TO ELUDE THE RUSSIAN "GHOST VOICE" INTERRUPTING THEIR NEWS PROGRAMS BROADCAST FOR HOME CONSUMPTION, WERE REPORTED BY THE BBC TONIGHT TO HAVE SHIFTED FROM A LONG-WAVE TO A MEDIUM-WAVE STATION BUT STILL DIDN'T SHAKE THE KIBITZER.

SEP 8 1941

THE BRITISH BROADCAST, HEARD HERE BY CBS, SAID TONIGHT'S NAZI BROADCASTS WERE SENT FROM A MEDIUM-WAVE STATION AT BRESLAU INSTEAD OF FROM THE POWERFUL DEUTSCHLANDSENDER STATION NEAR BERLIN.

"BUT THE MYSTERY VOICE FOLLOWED THEM AND CUT IN WHILE THE NEWS WAS BEING BROADCAST FROM BRESLAU," THE BBC SAID. "THE INTERRUPTIONS WERE FAINT, BUT SUFFICIENT TO MAKE THE GERMAN ANNOUNCER RUSH THROUGH THE NEWS WITHOUT PAUSE."

TOKYO, MONDAY, SEPT.8-(AP)-THE JAPAN TIMES AND ADVERTISER REPORTED ABOUT 1,000 PERSONS ATTENDED A PUBLIC ANTI-JEWISH RALLY YESTERDAY AND ADOPTED A RESOLUTION THAT ALLEGED JEWISH ASPIRATIONS FOR WORLD DOMINATION WERE INCOMPATIBLE WITH THE SPIRIT OF THE JAPANESE EMPIRE.

TOKYO, MONDAY, SEPT.8-(AP)-NICHI NICHI, COMMENTING TODAY IN A FRONT-PAGE EDITORIAL ON THE UNITED STATES DESTROYER GREER INCIDENT, SAID A CLASH BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND GERMANY IS "SIMPLY A MATTER OF TIME."

PASSAGE OF THE LEND-LEASE ACT WAS IN EFFECT A SEMI-REPEAL OF THE UNITED STATES NEUTRALITY LAW, NICH NICHI SAID, AND FULL REPEAL OF THE LAW COULD BE EXPECTED SHORTLY BECAUSE OF A LACK OF SHIPS NEEDED TO CARRY SUPPLIES TO GREAT BRITAIN.

SEP 8 1941

IT ADDED THAT SHOULD THE UNITED STATES SEND GOODS TO BRITAIN IN HER OWN SHIPS, CONVOYED BY HER NAVY, SHE "WILL LEAP INTO THE WAR."

TOKYO, MONDAY, SEPT.8-(AP)-SADAO ARAKI, A FORMER WAR MINISTER, WROTE IN HOCHI TODAY THAT DISSENSION WITHIN JAPAN WAS MORE TO BE FEARED THAN ENCIRCLEMENT OF THE EMPIRE BY THE UNITED STATES, THE BRITISH EMPIRE, CHINA AND THE NETHERLANDS EAST INDIES.

ARAKI URGED EVERY INDIVIDUAL TO FULFILL HIS ROLE IN A "HOLY CAMPAIGN" TO RID JAPAN OF FOREIGNISM. DOMESTIC TROUBLES HAVE BEEN CAUSED, HE SAID, BY FOREIGN IDEAS WHICH ARE INCOMPATIBLE TO THE JAPANESE WAY OF LIFE.

BUFFALO, N.Y., SEPT 7-(AP)-COUNT CARLO SFORZA, FORMER MINISTER OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS IN ITALY, CONTENDED TODAY HIS NATIVE COUNTRY IS IN A STATE BORDERING ON DESPAIR.

HE TOLD THE MAZZINI SOCIETY THAT MUSSOLINI REMAINS IN POWER ONLY BECAUSE THE ITALIAN PEOPLE BELIEVE A REVOLUTION WOULD RESULT IN CONTROL BY GERMANY.

COUNT SFORZA, ASSAILED IN THE STREETS OF MILAN IN 1926, WENT TO FRANCE TO LIVE AND ESCAPED TO THIS COUNTRY IN JUNE, 1940.

NEW YORK, SEPT 7-(AP)-TWO BRITISH MOTHERS, CONFIDENT THAT THE WORST BOMBINGS OF ENGLAND WERE PAST AND THAT GERMANY WOULD NOT ATTEMPT AN INVSION, LEFT TODAY WITH THEIR CHILDREN ABOARD THE AMERICAN CLIPPER FOR LISBON ON THEIR WAY HOME TO BRITAIN. SEP 8 1941

MRS.THELMA LEIGH, 23, AND HER 16-MONTHS-OLD CHILD, CAROL DIANA, DEPARTED AFTER A 14-MONTH STAY IN THE UNITED STATES AND CANADA, AND DR.PEARL M.GOLDMAN, PROFESSOR OF SOCIOLOGY, WAS BOUND FOR LONDON AFTER MORE THAN A YEAR IN THIS COUNTRY WITH HER 18-MONTH-OLD SON, ANTHONY JOHN. BOTH SAID THEY FELT THE NAZI MENACE HAD DIMINISHED.

AMONG 15 OTHER PASSENGERS HEADED FOR EUROPE WERE JOHN DOS PASSOS AND THORNTON WILDER, NOVELISTS, WHO PLANNED TO ATTEND THE ANNUAL CONGRES OF P.E.N., INTERNATIONAL LITERARY ORGANIZATION, SCEDULED FOR SEPT. 10-15 IN LONDON.

DOS PASSOS SAID HE REGARDED THE UNITED STATES AS ALREADY IN THE WAR AND DECLARED THAT "NOW WE HAVE TO FIGHT, THERE IS NO QUESTION ABOUT IT NOW THE WAR IS EVERYWHERE."

THE CLIPPER CARRIED 24 PASSENGERS FOR BERMUDA AND 3,181 POUNDS OF MAIL.

WASHINGTON,SEPT 7-(AP)-A BITTER DISPUTE OVER PROPOSED CONSTRUCTION OF THE WORLD'S LARGEST OIL-CARRYING PIPELINE WAS DEVELOPING TODAY BETWEEN HIGH-RANKING DEFENSE AND ADMINISTRATION OFFICIALS.

CRITICAL OPPOSITION TO THE PROJECT, INTENDED TO MEET WHAT THE OFFICE OF DEFENSE PETROLEUM COORDINATOR SAYS IS A GASOLINE AND OIL SHORTAGE ON THE EAST COAST, CAME FROM ADMIRAL EMORY S.LAND, CHAIRMAN OF THE MARITIME COMMISSION; RALPH W.BUDD, DEFENSE TRANSPORTATION COMMISSIONER; AND SPOKESMEN FOR THE RAILROAD AND SHIP INDUSTRIES.

SUPPORTING THE PROJECT WERE SECRETARY OF INTERIOR ICKES; RALPH K.DAVIES, ACTING PETROLEUM COORDINATOR; AND MANY OF THE LARGE OIL COMPANIES. SEP 8 1941

THE DISPUTE CAME INTO PUBLIC ATTENTION AT HEARINGS BY THE SPECIAL SENATE COMMITTEE INVESTIGATING PETROLEUM SHORTAGES. SENATOR MALONEY (D-CONN), CHAIRMAN, SAID THAT THE SENATE GROUP MAY BE FORCED TO TAKE PART IN THE PIPELINE CONTROVERSY.

DAVIES, FORMER OFFICIAL OF THE STANDARD OIL COMPANY OF CALIFORNIA, TOLD SENATORS THAT A PIPELINE 1,800 MILES LONG, EXTENDING FROM TEXAS AND LOUISIANA OIL FIELDS TO THE EASTERN COAST, COULD END THE EASTERN GASOLINE AND OIL SHORTAGE CAUSED BY DIVERSION OF TANKER SHIPS TO ENGLAND AND THE NAVY.

HE SAID THAT A CRUDE OIL LINE WOULD BRING 250,000 BARRELS DAILY TO THE EAST, OR CONSIDERABLY MORE THAN SOME OF THE ESTIMATES ON THE DAILY SHORTAGE. DAVIES SAID THAT MAJOR OIL COMPANIES WERE WILLING TO FINANCE THE "LONGEST AND LARGEST" PIPELINE AT AN ESTIMATED COST OF $80,000,000 AND THAT SURVEYS ALREADY HAD BEEN COMPLETED WITH POSSI-

30.24—11673

BILITY OF COMPLETION AND OPERATION WITHIN NINE MONTHS.

ADMIRAL LAND, CONTENDING THAT SUCH A LINE WOULD TAKE 750,000 TONS OF STEEL, ASSERTED:

"IF THIS STEEL IS GOING TO COME FROM NAVY SHIPS OR MY SHIPS, THEN I'M AGAINST IT."

HE OFFERED A SUBSTITUTE PROPOSAL FOR BUILDING OIL CARRYING BARGES THAT WOULD REQUIRE MUCH LESS STEEL.

SEP 8 1941

AGWX

BUDD AND OTHER RAILROAD EXECUTIVES TESTIFIED THAT THEY WERE UNABLE TO GET STEEL NEEDED TO REPAIR AND BUILD NEW FREIGHT CARS, AND THAT USE OF A SURPLUS OF 20,000 RAILROAD TANK CARS WOULD ELIMINATE IMMEDIATE NEED FOR THE PIPELINE.

THEY SAID THAT WITH RETURN OF NORMAL TIMES TANKER SHIPS WOULD CARRY ALL PETROLEUM NEEDED AT MUCH LOWER RATES AND THE PIPELINE WOULD BE USELESS UNLESS CONVERTED INTO A NATURAL GAS CARRIER, AS SUGGESTED BY ACTING PETROLEUM COORDINATOR DAVIES.

LEON HENDERSON, DEFENSE PRICE ADMINISTRATOR, TESTIFIED THAT MORE OIL PIPELINES MUST BE BUILT, BUT INSISTED HE HAD NOT MADE UP HIS MIND ABOUT THE PROJECT BECAUSE OF THE ARGUMENT OVER STEEL PRIORITIES.

MEANWHILE THE SENATE COMMITTEE CALLED FOR TESTIMONY MONDAY BY SENATOR DOWNEY (D-CALIF), THOMAS HENRY, PRESIDENT OF THE AMERICAN AUTOMOBILE ASSOCIATION, AND REPRESENTATIVES OF FILLING STATION OPERATORS.

ANTI-AIRCRAFT

WASHINGTON, SEPT 7-(AP)-CONGRESSIONAL SOURCES SAID TODAY THAT LARGE QUANTITIES OF 4.5-INCH ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS, THE WEAPON USED BY MOST BRITISH AIR DEFENSE UNITS AND HEAVIER THAN THE ARMY'S NEWEST 90-MILLIMETER GUN, ARE BEING MANUFACTURED IN THIS COUNTRY.

INFORMED LEGISLATORS SAID THAT WHILE THE 4.5 HAD NOT BEEN ADOPTED OFFICIALLY BY THE ARMY, ITS PRODUCTION HAD BEEN ORDERED IN CONFORMITY WITH A DECISION TO STANDARDIZE AMERICAN-BRITISH MUNITIONS PRODUCTION AS MUCH AS POSSIBLE. SEP 8 1941

THIS POLICY, IT WAS EXPLAINED, GREW FROM THE FACT THAT THE BRITISH HAVE LARGE NUMBERS OF VARIOUS TYPES OF WEAPONS ON HAND FOR WHICH THEY WOULD WANT AMMUNITION AND SPARE PARTS FROM THE UNITED STATES IN EVENT OF DESTRUCTION OF THE BRITISH SOURCES OF SUPPLY.

AMERICAN OFFICIALS EMPHASIZED THAT ANY STANDARDIZATION WOULD BE ALONG LINES THAT WOULD INSURE THE USABILITY OF THE EQUIPMENT BY THIS COUNTRY'S FORCES, SHOULD THE NEED ARISE.

EVEN IF THE ARMY DECIDED TO EQUIP SOME OF ITS UNITS WITH THE 4.5 INCH GUN, IT WOULD NOT MEAN THAT THE 90-MILLIMETER WEAPON, JUST NOW GOING INTO PRODUCTION AT THE RATE OF ABOUT 60 PER MONTH, WAS OBSOLETE.

ROBERT P.PATTERSON, UNDERSECRETARY OF WAR, MADE THAT PLAIN WHEN HE SAID THAT THE 90-MILLIMETER GUN HAD NOT MADE THE THREE-INCH, FORMERLY THE ARMY'S STANDARD, OUT OF DATE. HE SAID THE LATTER STILL WAS AN EFFICIENT WEAPON ALTHOUGH ITS RANGE WAS ABOUT 5,000 FEET

LESS THAN THAT OF THE 90-MM.

OFFICIALS EXPLAINED THE DIFFERENT GUNS WOULD BE USED FOR DIFFERENT PURPOSES. SOME BOMBING PLANES OPERATE AT ALTITUDES CLOSE TO 40,000 FEET AND INASMUCH AS THE 90-MM GUN'S RANGE IS ONLY 34,000 FEET, THE HEAVIER BRITISH WEAPON PROBABLY WOULD BE MORE EFFECTIVE AGAINST SUCH SUB-STRATOSPHERE BOMBERS.

SIMILARLY, STILL DIFFERENT WEAPONS MUST BE AVAILABLE FOR USE AGAINST LOW-FLYING PLANES AND DIVE BOMBERS. FOR SUCH PURPOSES, THE ARMY HAS .50 CALIBRE MACHINE GUNS AND 37-MILLIMETER CANNON.

THE NAVY, WHICH USES 1.1 INCH POM-POMS AND 20-MILLIMETER GUNS AGAINST DIVE BOMBERS, RELIES CHIEFLY ON ITS DUAL-PURPOSE 5-INCH RIFLES FOR PROTECTION AGAINST THE HIGH-ALTITUDE ATTACKERS. THESE WEAPONS CAN BE USED FOR BROADSIDES AGAINST LIGHT-ARMORED SURFACE VESSELS OR CAN SHOOT STRAIGHT INTO THE SKY TO HEIGHTS OF ABOUT 31,000 FEET.

STORM SIGNALS ARE UP FOR THE UNITED STATES IN BOTH THE ATLANTIC AND THE PACIFIC. WHAT THEY SEEM TO MEAN IN THIS SECOND WEEK OF THE

30.24—11675 30.24—11675

WAR'S THIRD YEAR IS THAT THIS COUNTRY IS NEARER OPEN HOSTILITIES THAN IT HAS BEEN SINCE THE FATEFUL DAYS LEADING UP TO ENTRANCE INTO THE FIRST WORLD WAR A QUARTER CENTURY AGO.

THEN AS NOW THE ISSUE AT THE HEART OF THE CRISIS WAS FREEDOM OF THE SEAS AND THEN AS NOW GERMAN U-BOAT OPERATIONS RAISED THE CHALLENGE TO AMERICA'S HISTORIC POLICY IN THE ATLANTIC. ADDED TO THESE PARALLEL CIRCUMSTANCES OF PAST AND PRESENT IS THE NEW FACT THAT TODAY THE UNITED STATES ALSO FACES POTENTIAL OPPOSITION IN THE PACIFIC OVER THE SAME ISSUE..

IT WAS AGAINST THIS GRIM BACKGROUND OF FACTS THAT PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT ARRANGED TO MAKE A RADIO ADDRESS TONIGHT (MONDAY) BEFORE THE DEATH OF HIS AGED MOTHER FORCED A CHANGE IN PLANS AND POSTPONEMENT OF THE ADDRESS UNTIL THURSDAY.

WHAT THE PRESIDENT INTENDED TO TALK ABOUT REMAINS A MATTER OF CONJECTURE IN THE ABSENCE OF ANY OFFICIAL INDICATIONS AS TO HIS SUBJECT, BUT CURRENT WAR DEVELOPMENTS TAKEN IN CONJUNCTION WITH HIS UTTERANCES OF RECENT MONTHS SUGGEST THAT HE MAY WELL HAVE IN MIND REAFFIRMING IN SPECIFIC TERMS THIS GOVERNMENT'S POLICY OF KEEPING ITS VITAL SEA LANES OPEN.

SEP 8 1941

COMING AT THIS TIME, SUCH A PRONOUNCEMENT WOULD BE A DIRECT WARNING TO BOTH JAPAN AND GERMANY THAT NEITHER THE SUBMARINE-DESTROYER INCIDENT OFF ICELAND NOR JAPANESE PROTESTS AGAINST MOVEMENT OF MUNITIONS ACROSS THE PACIFIC TO RUSSIA WOULD ALTER AMERICAN PLANS FOR AIDING THE NATIONS FIGHTING THE AXIS.

FORMAL NAZI ADMISSION THAT IT WAS A GERMAN SUBMARINE WHICH THE DESTROYER GREER BATTLED ON ITS WAY TO ICELAND LAST THURSDAY ADDS TO THE GRAVITY OF THIS INCIDENT.

THE NAZI, FOR INSTANCE, COULD HAVE DENIED OFFICIAL KNOWLEDGE OF THE ENCOUNTER, COULD HAVE CLAIMED THAT IT WAS A ENGLISH TRICK DESIGNED TO GET THIS COUNTRY INTO THE WAR (A CLAIM SIMILAR TO THAT MADE IN THE CASE OF THE TORPEDOING OF THE LINER ATHENIA IN SEPTEMBER 1939) OR COULD HAVE ARGUED THAT THE AMERICAN DESTROYER WAS MISTAKEN FOR BRITISH WARSHIP OF THE SAME TYPE.

THE LINE WHICH THEY ACTUALLY HAVE TAKEN, HOWEVER, IS THAT THE GERMAN U-BOAT WAS ATTACKED BY A DESTROYER OF UNKNOWN NATIONALITY AND FINALLY DISCHARGED TORPEDOES AT IT IN SELF-PROTECTION. NOT UNTIL WASHINGTON ANNOUNCED THAT THE GREER HAD BEEN INVOLVED IN SUCH AN ENCOUNTER, THE GERMANS IMPLIED, WAS IT KNOWN THAT THE DESTROYER HAD BEEN AN AMERICAN SHIP.

OBVIOUSLY, GERMANY'S FUTURE ACTIONS WILL BE BASED ON THIS ACCOUNT AND IT IS EQUALLY CLEAR THAT THIS COUNTRY'S NEXT STEPS WILL BE PREDICATED ON THE NAVY DEPARTMENT'S STATEMENT THAT THE GREER WWAS ATTACKED BY THE SUBMARINE.

UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES A RECURRENCE OF SUCH INCIDENTS SEEMS HIGHLY PROBABLE UNLESS ONE SIDE GOES FAR OUT OF THE WAY TO PREVENT THEM.

IN THE AMERICAN VIEW THERE IS NO REASON TO BELIEVE THATJ

SEP 8 1941

IN THE AMERICAN VIEW THERE IS NO REASON TO BELIEVE THAT THE NEXT TIME A SHIP OF THE ATLANTIC PATROL DISCOVERS A SUBMARINE THAT SUBMARINE WILL NOT OPEN FIRE. ON THE OTHER HAND, A GERMAN U-BOAT COMMANDER WOULD ALMOST CERTAINLY BE JUST AS SUSPICIOUS OF WHAT AN AMERICAN WARSHIP MIGHT TRY TO DO TO HIS VESSEL ONCE IT WAS DISCOVERED.

AMID SUCH SUSPICIONS ON BOTH SIDES, THE LEAST QUESTIONABLE ACTION

BY EITHER PARTY MIGHT BE ENOUGH TO START A FIGHT.

SINCE THE ULTIMATE SUCCESS OF AMERICAN AID TO BRITAIN LIES IN KEEPING THE SEA LANES OPEN AND SINCE ICELAND IS NOW AN AMERICAN OUTPO TO BE SUPPLIED AND REINFORCED, THE CHOICE AS TO WHETHER MORE INCIDENTS ARE TO BE AVOIDED APPEARS TO BE ONE FOR GERMANY TO MAKE.

TO A CONSIDERABLE EXTENT THIS CHOICE MAY BE MADE ON THE BASIS OF WHETHER THE NAZI LEADERSHIP FEELS THAT GERMANY WOULD HAVE MORE TO GAIN THAN TO LOSE BY TURNING THE U.S. INTO A BELLIGERENT AND TRYING, PROVIDED JAPAN WOULD GO ALONG, TO CONFRONT IT WITH THE PROSPECT OF WAR ON TWO FRONTS.

SEP 8 1941

IN THE PACIFIC JAPAN COULD FORCE THE ISSUE OF SHIPMENTS TO RUSSIA AT VIRTUALLY ANY TIME SHE CHOSE--PROVIDED, OF COURSE, THAT SHE WAS WILLING TO RISK BATTLE SIMULTANEOUSLY WITH THE UNITED STATES, BRITAIN, CHINA AND RUSSIA.

ANOTHER ASPECT OF THE SITUATION TO WHICH THE GERMANS, WITH THEIR LONG RECORD OF POLITICAL MANIPULATION, MAY HAVE GIVEN CONSIDERABLE THOUGHT IS THE QUESTION OF HOW THE DEMOCRATIC UNITED STATES WOULD REACT IF DIRECTLY CONFRONTED WITH THE NECESSITY OF FIGHTING IN ORDER TO CARRY OUT ITS ANNOUNCED POLICIES.

ON THE BASIS OF SOME OF THEIR EXPERIENCES IN EUROPE THEY MIGHT HOPE TO FORCE THIS COUNTRY INTO DISRUPTIVE INTERNAL POLITICAL CONTROVERSY. BUT IT MUST ALSO BE REMEMBERED THAT THEY HAVE MADE SOME NOTABLE MISCALCULATIONS, AMONG THEM THE APPARENT BELIEF THAT BRITAIN WOULD NOT FIGHT WHEN POLAND WAS INVADED AND THE EXPECTATION THAT RUSSIA WOULD CRUMBLE WHEN THE NAZI TURNED THEIR LIGHTNING WAR TO THE EAST.

YOUNG KING PETAR'S SUGGESTION THAT THE BRITISH INVADE ITALY PROMISES TO KEEP UNTIL HE REACHES HIS NINETEENTH BIRTHDAY A YEAR HENCE.

"THE TIME IS RIPE," AS THE ROYAL YUGOSLAV YOUTH TOLD AN INTERVIEWER, BUT RATHER FOR CONTINUATION OF THE LONG RANGE AERIAL HAMMERING OF SICILY WHICH HAS BEEN IN PROGRESS FOR WEEKS AND THE TELLING ATTACKS ON LIBYA-BOUND AXIS CONVOYS BEING MADE BY BRITISH SUBMARINES.

CHANCES ARE PLANS FOR ANYTHING MORE SERIOUS THAN HIT-RUN RAIDS ON ITALY, OR ANYWHERE ELSE IN EUROPE, ARE ON THE HIGH COMMAND'S FUTURE SPIKE JUST NOW.

AS SUMMER WANES IN THE DESERT COUNTRY, MAKING DECISIVE MILITARY OPERATIONS FEASIBLE, WHAT SEEMS IMMEDIATELY AHEAD OF THE BRITISH IS A RENEWED STRUGGLE TO HOLD ON IN THE MEDITERRANEAN.

SUCCESSFUL INVASION OF ITALY WOULD DEMAND EXPULSION OF GERMAN AND ITALIAN FORCES FROM NORTH AFRICA AND A BRITISH ADVANCE 800 MILES WESTWARD TO TRIPOLI, OPPOSITE SICILY. THE AVENUE OF AXIS ATTACK ON SUEZ VIA ASIA MINOR WOULD HAVE TO BE BLOCKED MEANWHILE, CRETE EITHER RETAKEN OR MADE HARMLESS AS A BASE FOR FLANKING AIR RAIDS, AND THE REMNANTS OF THE ITALIAN NAVY SCATTERED OR DESTROYED. IT'S NOT A PROGRAM FOR A WEEK-END.

WHEAT NEUTRAL MILITARY AUTHORITIES CONFIDENTLY LOOK FOR FIRST, AS WINTER APPROACHES IN RUSSIA, IS A DETERMINED AXIS RATHER THAN KBRITISH OFFENSIVE IN THE MEDITERRANEAN. THIS TIME NAZI RATHER THAN ITALIAN FORCES ARE EXPECTED TO LEAD THE WAY.

THE CONVOY ATTACKS HINT AN ENERGETIC ATTEMPT TO BUILD UP THE ITALIAN FORCES IN NORTH AFRICA INTO A FORMIDABLE SPEARHEAD FOR A NEW THRUST AT EGYPT FROM THE LIBYAN DESERT.

ON THE OTHER LAND APPROACHES TO SUEZ VIA ASIA, GERMAN FORCES ARE REPORTED MASSING IN THE BALKANS OPPOSITE UNEASY TURKEY.

THE INVASION OF RUSSIA MAY PUT ADOLF HITLER'S LEGIONS INTO POSITION TO DRIVE SOUTHWARD FROM SEVERAL OTHER DIRECTIONS AT THE SAME TIME THE ATTEMPT IS MADE TO CLOSE THE LIBYAN JAW OF THE AXIS TRAP. FOR THE PROSPECTIVE TEST OF STRENGTH, BOTH SIDES ARE MORE NEARLY READY THAN LAST YEAR WHEN THE ITALIANS FAILED SO MISERABLY IN BOTH LIBYA AND GREECE. COUNTERING THE NAZI MARCH THROUGH THE BALKANS TO CRETE IS THE BRITISH OCCUPATION OF SYRIA AND THE JUNCTURE MADE WITH RUSSIA IN IRAN. Steel Seafarer Is 2d American Ship Destroyed Since War Started

SEP 8 1941

Was Carrying Supplies To British — Identity Of Attacker Unknown

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 8—The State Department was informed tonight that the American freighter Steel Seafarer was sunk by an airplane in the Red Sea yesterday, second United States merchantman to be sent to the bottom since the start of the European war.

The identity of the plane, the department said, was unknown. The sinking, from which all crew members were saved, occurred in an ocean through which American ships have been carrying supplies to the British in the Middle East.

President Roosevelt lifted a ban in April which barred American ships from the Red Sea, declaring that water outside the combat zones from which merchant vessels of this country are barred.

Parade Of U. S. Ships

On May 9 the Maritime Commission announced arrangements had been completed for sending ships around the Cape of Good Hope and soon after the first of a parade of American vessels started out on that route.

On May 21 the freighter Robin Moor, heading through the South Atlantic and bound for Red Sea ports, was halted by a submarine identified by the freighter's crew and passengers as German. The crew and passengers left the ship in boats and the submarine sank the freighter. All hands survived that sinking, although they were exposed to days of tropical heat in the open boats before being picked up.

The sinking of the Steel Seafarer occurred four days after the United States destroyer Greer and a German submarine engaged in a torpedo-depth bomb duel in the North Atlantic. The Greer, northbound with mail for American forces in Iceland, reported the submarine fired torpedoes at her without warning, and that she then circled over the spot and dropped depth charges. Berlin asserted the destroyer opened fire first.

The State Department said its information on the Steel Seafarer came from Alexander Kirk, American Minister at Cairo, Egypt.

The Steel Seafarer, a 424-foot, 5,719-ton ship, was built in 1921 at Kearny, N. J. Records here showed she was owned by the Isthmian Steamship Company.

2,500-MILE ROUND-TRIP FORAY MADE TO KEEP RICH COAL FIELDS FROM ENEMY

Expedition To Islands 500 Miles North Of Norway Meets No Opposition—Canadians, British And Norse Are Among Attackers

[By the Associated Press]

London, Tuesday, Sept. 9—Canadian, British and Norwegian troops have made a spectacular 2,500-mile round-trip expedition by sea to the Norwegian archipelago of Spitsbergen, in the Arctic Ocean, where, it was understood, they smashed valuable coal mines coveted by Germany.

The raid on the group of islands, 500 miles north of the Norwegian mainland, was unopposed.

British ships removed some 1,000 Norwegian miners and their families, most of the men promptly enlisting in the Norwegian forces in Britain.

Date Of Expedition Not Revealed

The announcement did not disclose when the expedition led by a Canadian officer, was made. Nor was it revealed whether an Allied garrison was left on the islands, which are ice-bound most of the year. Unofficially, it was said all were withdrawn.

Nearly all of the Norwegian population was removed. What happened to the Russian miners also living there was not disclosed.

These stolid Russians and Norwegians welcomed the raiders, members of the expedition said, and even helped them land supplies, seize and operate the island's two radio stations, and plan for the return journey.

Russians Pass Out Drinks

The Russians in their communal centers, where pictures of Lenin, Stalin and other Soviet heroes were hung, passed out drinks and Russian cigarettes to the expedition's officers and discussed the war against Germany.

The landing was made by troops armed for instant action, but members of the expedition said not a single follower of Major Vidkun Quisling, the Norwegian Nazi leader, was found in the islands. Nor were any Germans stationed there.

This was the second British descent on Norwegian territory since the withdrawal during the Nazi occupation. An expedition landed on the Lofoten Islands in March and destroyed whale oil factories.

No Interference From Nazis

There was no interference from Germ[illegible]ombers either on the voyage to Spitsbergen or at the archi[illegible]itself, members of the expedition said. The War Office statement said:

"For various purposes it was recently decided to send a military force to the Arctic.

"In the course of operations which were carried out without enemy interference, a landing was effected in Spitsbergen by mixed Canadians, British and Norwegian forces under Canadian command. The main purpose of the landing was to prevent the enemy from utilizing for their own purposes Spitsbergen with its rich coal mines.

Says Nazis Planned To Seize It

"Previously a proportion of Spitsbergen coal had been at the disposal of the population of northern Norway. But it has become known that the enemy's plan was to seize all coal available including that from Spitsbergen, which would be used mainly for war transport to the far north. This source of fuel has now been denied to the Germans.

"An immediate result of the Spitsbergen landing is that a considerable number of Norwegian miners with their families have now arrived in Great Britain to play a part in the Allied war effort here. Most of them will be joining the Norwegian forces or the Norwegian merchant service."

750 Miles From North Pole

The archipelago has a total area of 25,000 square miles and is only 750 miles from the North Pole. The chief island, West Spitsbergen, is a plateau with many deep fjords. Pack ice prevents access to most of the islands except for a few months in the year. Moreover, vessels can approach the western coast during most months.

The fjords are frozen from October to May.

Mine Output Increased

The coal mines have been worked by both Russian and Norwegian miners. In 1936 they had a combined output of 707,117 tons, but this has been considerably increased. The islands' population in the winter of 1937-38 was 2,653. About three fourths were Russians and the rest Norwegians.

The landing at Spitsbergen finally took Canadian troops to Norwegian territory more than a year after it was first intended to send them there.

During the 1940 spring campaign in Norway, Canadian troops were sent to Scotland in readiness for embarkation for the North, but main British forces were withdrawn and they were not sent. In the battles of France and Flanders Canadians were in readiness several times at embarkation ports.

Some Landed In France

Some troops of the First Canadian Division actually landed in France just before the capitulation, but were withdrawn almost immediately.

The trip across the Channel and the landing at Spitsbergen are the only times Canadian troops have been sent out of the United Kingdom on action.

Usefulness Limited

Informed sources pointed out that air fields could be constructed on the islands in good weather to guard seaborne supplies sent via the Arctic to Russia from the United States.

The islands also have a potential value as a stepping-stone naval base, although the ice-locked harbors in a long winter limit their usefulness as compared to Iceland.

The port season of Archangel, Russia, roughly compares with that of Spitsbergen. Favorable weather lasts only from May to October.

Spitsbergen coal mines are known to produce the best quality steam or bunker coal and a denial of this supply to the Germans is regarded here as an important blow to German oil refineries.

Nazi-Operated Colliers

The Nazis have been operating Norwegian colliers between northern Norway and the Arctic Archipelago. Official sources declined to say whether the mines had been wrecked and all the supplies removed.

In any event the announcement that 1,000 Norwegians had been removed to Britain is tantamount to saying that the entire Norwegian population there had been evacuated. What disposition was made of the Russian miners was not explained.

While coal is the most important product the islands also have iron, zinc and asbestos resources.

DESCRIBES TRIP TO SPITZBERGEN

Daring Expedition Led by Canadians, Reporter Says

SEP 8 1941

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press Staff Writer

With the Canadian Spitzbergen Expedition, Sept. 8—Canadian troops supported by British and Norwegian detachments have occupied Spitzbergen in the Arctic seas without German interference in a daring 2,500-mile expedition from Britain which denied to the Nazis the use of the island's rich coal mines.

It was the first operation by Canadian troops outside Britain in more than a year. The Allied formation, which was under command of a Canadian brigadier, struck swiftly and secretly against the island, which is but 750 miles from the North Pole.

Reaching the island ahead of any German force, the Canadians made the first landings from warships and a troopship and garrisoned the settlements, some of whose members are now back in England, having taken with them a large number of Norwegian miners and their families whose male members will join the Norwegian forces in Britain.

Throughout the whole hazardous voyage there was not a single raid on the expedition.

GERMANS DUPED.

The plan had the approval of the Norwegian government in London, which saw a threat of German invasion of Spitzbergen on top of economic domination from Norway, and the whole scene was carried out by warships of the Royal navy, fleet air arm planes and detachments of British and Norwegian troops supporting the Canadians.

This Canadian press war correspondent was the only newspaperman with the Canadians. I traveled with the expedition to the island and lived there for a time with the Allied garrison.

The extreme secrecy with which the occupation was carried out wholly duped the Germans.

While I was at Spitzbergen there was not an air raid or any indication that the Germans would attempt to retaliate or even knew that the troops were there. One afternoon a single German reconnaissance plane flew along the coast but apparently failed to spot the Canadian units nearby.

RUSSIAN MINERS THERE.

After making their unopposed landing the Canadians lived in Norwegian and Russian towns. Everywhere they were treated hospitably by the inhabitants, who bear no love for the Nazis.

The Russians had been brought to Spitzbergen to work the mines operated by Soviet organizations and in their Communist towns the Canadians made their headquarters.

I left an English camp with the troops recently, being told we were going to an army "exercise" somewhere in Britain. Only a few senior officers knew it was anything more than this.

We went to a special coastal training area where the units were instructed in invasion tactics and beach assaults as a prelude to the expedition.

Warships shielded the troopship itself and a sea-going arsenal of anti-aircraft guns was manned by Canadians every hour of the voyage.

Canucks Lose This One

SEP 8 1941

London, Sept. 8 (AP)—In the strangest setting any Canadian soldier-footballer ever saw, a Canadian team was defeated 6 to 1 by a team of hardy Norwegian miners during the British-Canadian occupation of Spitsbergen. The game was played on a regulation-size field beside a fjord where the glaciers reach down to the sea and the seals splash offshore. More than 200 spectators were on hand, sharing their cheers for the outplayed Canucks.

TOWN NEAR SMOLENSK RECAPTURED IN 26-DAY BATTLE, MOSCOW SAYS

Germans Declared In Disordered Retreat On Central Front

Population Of Leningrad Joins With Army To Beat Off Besiegers

SEP 8 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Tuesday, Sept. 9—The Red army proclaimed today, as its greatest victory of the war against Germany, the routing of eight Nazi divisions totaling about 115,000 men in the Smolensk area of the central front.

The Germans were smashed in a twenty-six-day battle that ended in a victory for Soviet arms yesterday when Red army units regained the town of Yelnya, forty miles east of Smolensk, an official announcement said today.

This was the first time in more than two years of European war that Hitler's troops have been driven out of any major position once they had taken a foothold.

Claim Disordered Retreat

Not only were they driven out, but what's left of them now is in disordered retreat toward the West from whence they came, the Russians said.

Thus after nearly a month of silence on operations of Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's forces, the Russians told officially of what has been going on in that hotly contested central sector.

The recapture of Yelnya dislodged the Germans from an important rail town 200 miles west of Moscow. The account of the battle there was the first official admission here that the Germans had gotten that close to the Soviet capital.

The routed German divisions were identified as one S. S. (Black Shirt Elite Guards), Seventeenth Motorized, Tenth Tank, One Hundred and Thirty-seventh Austrian, Fifteenth, One Hundred and Seventy-eighth, Two Hundred and Ninety-second and Two Hundred and Sixty-eighth Infantry.

Believed Easing Pressure

On both ends of the front, meanwhile, counter-attack after counter-attack by the Red forces appeared to be relieving pressure on Leningrad in the north and Odessa and Kiev in the south.

The ferocity of the struggle on the central front was matched on the north where Marshal Klementi Voroshilov's armies stubbornly were defending Leningrad three weeks after the Germans declared the second Soviet city "under direct threat of attack."

The exact location of the fighting on the approaches to Leningrad was not given but today's communique said guerrillas were operating in the rear of the Germans in the vicinity of Luga, a rail junction eighty miles south of the Baltic city.

Broaden Air Offensive

The Russians, broadening their aerial offensive, reported a Red air force raid on Bucharest Sunday night and repeated assaults upon German troops in the field and their airdromes behind the lines.

Schooled for years to be ready to die for the revolution, the Soviet proletariat fought by the side of the Red army to beat back the iron tide rolling toward Leningrad. If they gave ground, Soviet dispatches did not mention the fact.

Leningrad broadcasts breathed defiance as workers, soldiers, sailors pledged defense to the death, but admitted that the city now is in the front line of a fierce battle.

"We have erected a steel wall around the city," said one speaker, and he declared his confidence the Germans would be turned aside.

Recall World War Threat

Not for a moment in more than twenty years have Soviet leaders allowed themselves to forget the peril Leningrad was in when the German armies drove close to the huge industrial center and port in the World War. For years they devoted themselves to converting the whole Leningrad area to a vast sprawling fortress, and from that fastness of bunkers, pillboxes and forts, augmented by thousands of newly built barricades, trenches, wire and traps, the Russians fight now to save the city which, tradition says, was built upon the bones of the subjects of Czar Peter.

Soviet accounts of how the battle went gave little idea of the positions of the forces, but described valiant counter-attacks.

One raiding cavalry unit was said to have dashed to the German rear in a sweeping foray which cost the Germans 1,200 in killed and 500 wounded. A staff headquarters was said to have been captured and a German general killed.

On the central front, where a series of Russian counter-attacks has been in progress for many days, a new encounter in which a Russian battalion repulsed a large-scale German assault in a twenty-four-hour battle was reported. The Germans were said to have lost 600 men.

The rather sparse reports from this sector west of Moscow indicated, however, that operations there were slackening.

Violent Battles In South

In the south violent battles still raged as the Germans continued to fight along the approaches to Kiev and to isolated Odessa on the Black Sea. The siege of Odessa is now a month old, while about Kiev the Germans have been held in their places since the first week of August.

In the far north, too, the Russians were forced to fight off heavy attacks. Soviet accounts indicated Finnish efforts to cut the Murmansk-Leningrad railway in the vicinity of Kesteng had been repulsed.

The Finns announced capture of Aunus, on the east side of Lake Ladoga and thirty miles south of the old Finnish-Russian frontier. Aunus is about twenty miles north of the railway which passes between Lake Ladoga and Lake Onega.

Leningrad Lines Hold, Russ Say

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Sept. 8—The Russian military reports indicated today that while the Germans were staging a major offensive at the western and southern approaches to Leningrad they had thus far failed to achieve a serious break-through.

The Red forces there were said to 30.24 — 11679

30.24 — 11679

to holding their lines stubbornly, delivering repeated counter-attacks.

The whole main front, from the Baltic to the Black Sea, was reported active throughout the night, with fighting hampered around Leningrad by rain and mud.

Cossack Raid Reported

Lashing back with fierce counter-attacks before Leningrad, the Red army reported that its rough-riding Cossacks had captured a staff headquarters far behind the German lines and listed a general among mounting casualties.

Apart from the Leningrad sector, the situation on the entire front was traced as follows by earlier communiques and press acounts:

FAR NORTH—The Germans and Finns have made several efforts to cut the Murmansk-Leningrad Railway, but have been repulsed. The latest action there was reported in the direction of Kesteng.

(Kesteng may be an alternative rendition of Kashkina, twenty-five miles east of the railway and just north the place where it curves to parallel roughly the Svir river and the Stalin Canal, northeast of Leningrad.)

CENTRAL SECTOR—In the areas of Smolensk and Gomel great battles appear to have died down, with the Germans remaining on the defensive and the Russians in action at some points west of Smolensk.

SOUTHERN (UKRAINE)—The approaches to Kiev and Odessa remain scenes of violent struggles, with the Germans still trying to reach Kiev, the Ukraine capital, and Rumanian forces striving to close the month-long siege of Odessa, on the Black Sea. The Red army defense of Kiev and Odessa continues unbroken.

Millions of Russian youths, including 536,000 at Leningrad and 30,000 at Kiev, worked for the national defense fund and directly for the national defense yesterday.

At Kiev they spent International Youth Day throwing up barricades on the outskirts of the city, according to Russian dispatches.

At one point, the noon communique of the Soviet information bureau said, a sharp attack routed a German battalion, which left 1,200 men on the battlefield.

The communique did not identify the German general who was reported killed. He presumably was slain by a raiding party penetrating deep within the German lines.

Highway Battle Reported

Despite adverse weather conditions particularly in the north, the bulletin declared that the entire front from the Baltic to the Black Sea remained active.

In some of the fiercest fighting of the war, now in its twelfth week, Soviet troops were reported to have driven the invading Germans from positions astride a vital highway leading to Leningrad. The attack was launched, the Government newspaper Izvestia declared, after the Germans had been repulsed with heavy losses in an attempt to force a river crossing.

[Though not identified in the dispatch, the river may have been the Neva, which flows southward from Lake Ladoga, through Leningrad and thence west to the Gulf of Finland.]

In the far north, in the Barents Sea, the Russians said they captured a German submarine identified as the U-73.

[The U-73, according to Jane's Fighting Ships, is a seagoing submarine displacing 517 tons.]

In the central sector, the Russians asserted, an offensive in the direction of Gomel was gaining momentum after driving the Germans from several important towns.

The Red Army reported that hard-riding Cossacks had captured a staff headquarters far behind the German lines and listed a general among mounting Nazi casualties.

At one point, the noon communique of the Soviet Information Bureau said, a sharp attack routed an entire German bat

Claim Successes in South.

German attempts to crack the defenses of the Ukrainian capital of Kiev and the besieged Black Sea port of Odessa were said to be resulting in fearful Nazi casualties. Hundreds of big guns, massed behind the defenses of both cities, were said to be raining a murderous fire on German troop concentrations, artillery positions and communication lines.

The Red Air Force was reported to be playing a big part in the defense of Leningrad, Kiev and Odessa and in the central front offensive.

The army newspaper, Red Star, reviewing aerial operations from the beginning of the war, declared Russian planes had destroyed a total of 7,200 planes—more than 2,000 of them wrecked on the ground.

Izvestia asserted that thus far the Germans had "failed to achieve their chief purpose—to gain undisputed supremacy of the air," and said the Red Air Force had proved it self not only a match for the Nazis but superior in some respects.

German air losses have been so great, the paper said, that "even working at full capacity Germany's airplane factories are unable to replace them."

It declared the Nazis had lost 12,000 skilled pilots over Britain and that the bulk of the personnel operating against Russia "now consists of hastily trained pilots."

(A Leningrad broadcast heard in London said a "fierce battle" was going on for Leningrad. The Leningrad announcer pledged defense of the "craddle of the blessed (Bolshevik) revolution" to the death. "We have erected a steel wall around the city," the announcer said, and added that defenders felt sure they could hold out against the Germans.)

Nazi Air Raiders Strike at Moscow

MOSCOW, Tuesday, Sept. 9 (AP)—German air formations struck at Moscow early today for the first time since August 27 and a Soviet communique said only two of the raiders broke through the Capital's defenses. An alarm was in force three hours. The Russians said the only damage was to three dwellings and that it was slight. The two German craft, they reported, aimlessly unloaded several small caliber explosives and a few fire bombs.

Soviet Forces In North Said To Face Peril Of Being Cut Off

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Tuesday, Sept. 9—The German-Finnish ring about Leningrad has been sealed and Russians fighting up in the far north face the imminent peril of being cut off from their main forces, Germans said today following the high command's announcement of the capture of Schlüsselburg, a key to the Baltic city's defenses.

With the capture of the ancient fortress of Schlüsselburg, the high command said that Leningr , itself under bombardment of German artillery for four days, now is completely cut off from land connections.

Murmansk Line Interrupted

This, together with the interruption of rail traffic on the Leningrad-Murmansk line, has severed major transporfation facilities for supplies of munitions and food for the northern Soviet troops, the well-informed commentary Dienst Aus Deutschland asserted.

In taking Schlüsselburg, twenty-one miles east of Leningrad on the Neva river and Lake Ladoga, the Germans were said to have reached the Neva "on a broad front."

This would place them much closer to Leningrad on the east than Schlüsselburg itself, as the river runs from Leningrad to Schlüsselburg.

Greeted By Hail Of Fire

Germans were greeted on the Neva with a "veritable hail of fire" from Russian batteries on the opposite side of the stream, Willi Stein, war correspondent, reported.

Stein told a radio audience his unit was in a position on the river bank for five days during which they shelled craft plying between Leningrad and Schlüsselburg. Five Russian gunboats, a Government steamer and a tug fell victim to Nazi batteries, he said.

The correspondent related there were fires aboard the river craft and that "screaming Russians jumped into the water."

Stukas Blast Bridges

Other radio accounts said Stukas blasted bridges across the Neva and protecting Soviet anti-aircraft batteries. Wave attacks by the dive bombers were said to have knocked out all but two of the numerous Soviet batteries.

[The German radio announced that Russians put up desperate resistance at Schlüsselburg. A broadcast picked up by NBC said advancing German troops found the terrain strewn with land mines. The city was captured only after a special German sapper detail had worked for ten hours removing 1,800 of the mines, the broadcast said.]

German dispatches said hundreds of dive bombers struck at Leningrad defenses to bolster ground troops and siege guns which first shelled Leningrad and Schlüsselberg last Friday. An indication of the size of the air battles was given in an official announcement that the Russians lost seventy-one planes yesterday, including nine destroyed on the ground.

Cut Link To Lake

Crossing of the Neva cut Russian water communications to Lake Ladoga—the first link of the Baltic-to-White Sea route via the Stalin Canal.

To the northeast, Finnish troops were said to have reached the Svir river, a part of the Stalin Canal between Lake Ladoga and Lake Onega.

Thus in the two actions the Germans and Finns divided important sections of the Russian navy. No Russian ship can now move from the Arctic to the Baltic.

DNB acknowledged that Russians had counter-attacked with a reinforced strength at several points on the Eastern front but said the attacks had been repulsed. The Germans claimed they continued to advance in the Gomel area and denied reports that the Russians had reoccupied Gomel.

Roads "Bottomless Mud"

Around Leningrad the roads were described as "bottomless mud." The Germans encountered bitter resistance at every clump of trees and on every hillock, front-line dispatches said.

"In the central sector of the Eastern front the Soviets repeatedly tried to capture a bridgehead formed by the Germans," DNB said. "Notwithstanding deadly fire the Bolsheviks sent one company after another into the battle, but all their attacks failed amid the severest bloody losses for the Bolsheviks, who also left 732 prisoners in German hands.

"Good successes were achieved in this region despite greatest difficulties. After days of incessant rains the German troops encountered morassy roads which rendered particularly difficult the bringing up of supplies and artillery."

a question of a few days. . . . The more the Bolsheviks will try to delay the fall of the city, the greater will be the sacrifices and sufferings."]

The Germans apparently sliced up from the southwest to get behind Leningrad which stands on a narrow neck of land with the Gulf of Finland to the west and big Lake Ladoga to the east.

Thus German forces are on the west, south and east and Finnish forces are on the north.

The announcement followed upon official German and Finnish reports that Finnish troops had pushed down east of Lake Ladoga to the Svir River line, near the Stalin Canal.

Aside from the importance of cutting off Leningrad, with its teeming workers' population, industries and concentration of defense forces, German sources hailed the Finnish thrust also as a major strategical development. The Svir is part of the Stalin canal system connecting the White and Baltic seas and the Finns now control it completely and have bottled up important sections of the Russian Navy, the Germans said.

Germans Report Leningrad Has Been Isolated by Land

Claim Capture of Schluesselburg, Vital Rail Center 21 Miles From City—Battle Zone Rain-soaked.

SEP 8 1941

Berlin, Sept. 8 (A. P.).—Leningrad has been isolated from all land connection with the rest of Russia and Schluesselburg, important railroad center on its eastern defense rim, has been captured, the German High Command declared tonight.

German troops stormed Schluesselburg, twenty-one miles east of Leningrad, after crossing the Neva, according to a special bulletin from Adolf Hitler's headquarters. Schluesselburg was reported under fire of heavy German artillery on Friday, when the High Command announced that Leningrad itself was under shellfire.

The announcement said:

"Motorized divisions of the German army, excellently supported by fighter units of the air force, reached the Neva on a broad front to the east of Leningrad and took by storm the town of Schluessselburg on Lake Ladoga.

"Thereby, the ring of German and Finnish troops was closed around Leningrad and this town is now cut off from all land communications."

[The Finnish radio, in a Russian-language broadcast heard by CBS in New York, said today "the fall of Leningrad is Reports to Berlin indicated that the Finns also controlled the region between Lake Ladoga and Lake Onega, which is traversed by the railroad from Leningrad to Murmansk. Thus, they said, still another outlet by which the Russians might get supplies from abroad has been closed. It is in that region that the Finns are trying to meet the Germans pushing up from the south to seal the siege ring around Leningrad.

The official German news agency reported tonight that the Red air force, buffeted by hundreds of German dive bombers smashing at Leningrad's defenses, lost seventy-one planes yesterday. (German losses were not given.) DNB said that nine of the planes were wrecked before they could take off from their landing fields. The others were said to have been downed in combat or by anti-aircraft fire.

The Stuka offensive was designed to help break the resistance encountered by German land forces on the rain-soaked northern battle-front, German reports said.

River Crossing Repulsed.

German dispatches reported that the ground forces had repulsed a new effort by the Red Army to cross the Dnieper River to the west in some central or southern sector.

Ranging far to the southeast, the German air force was said to have sunk a 6,000-ton Russian steamer west of Crimea, that is, in the Sea of Azov arm of the Black Sea.

Aside from mass attacks on Leningrad's defenses, German flyers in the north damaged three gunboats and several barges, it was reported. Nearer Leningrad the Luftwaffe smashed at ground forces, electric installations and rail lines.

The newly-unleashed aerial operations, as reported by D.N.B., were described in the German press as one gigantic and unending "rolling attack."

The news agency has not yet reported Luftwaffe attacks on the heart of Russia's second city itself, but rather described them as directed at Red Army troops "south of Lake Ladoga."

In that area important Leningrad-Moscow rail connections are located. The entire area is considered here to be a part of Leningrad's defense belt.

Finnish Claims Repeated.

Hitler's headquarters repeated a Finnish report that the Svir River had been reached in the push east of Lake Ladoga.

(A Finnish communique issued yesterday in Helsinki said that after a long pause Finnish forces three days ago launched a slashing offensive northeast of Lake Ladoga that advanced them nearly 50 miles.

(The Finns said they had reached the Sykaeri River—apparently the stream called the Svir by the Russians—which the Stalin Canal parallels. The Finns declared this drive drew tighter the German-Finnish noose about Leningrad and cleared the way for the immediate cutting of the canal, which runs from a point on Lake Ladoga, 80 miles northeast of Leningrad, to Lake Onega.)

D.N.B. declared Russian aerial resistance in the Leningrad area was relatively weak and that only one German plane was lost in initial mass assaults Saturday.

Say Germans Have Not Encircled Leningrad

LONDON, Tuesday, Sept. 9 (AP)—A dispatch from a special correspondent of the British news agency Reuters reported today that it is certain the Germans have not encircled Leningrad.

The Germans have approached fairly close only from the southwest, Reuters said, but not close enough for practical large-scale shelling.

The correspondent, stationed in Moscow, reported fighting in the Leningrad area was "extremely heavy" and added that there was every indication Leningrad was preparing for "long and arduous resistance."

Historic Karelian Town Taken, Finns Announce

HELSINKI, Finland, Sept. 8 (AP).—Finnish capture of the Karelian town of Aunus, 10 miles from the shore of Lake Ladoga, was officially claimed today.

The town, mentioned in Finnish historical records as early as 1137, was fortified in 1649 and became the capital of the old province of Aunus. It had a population of 2,000 in 1931.

The Finnish Air Force reported destruction of 50 cars of a 60-car Soviet ammunition train on the Murmansk Railroad yesterday.

British Party Leaving Finland To Cross Reich in Sealed Train

SEP 8 1941

By the Associated Press.

HELSINKI, Finland, Sept. 8.—A party of 61 Britons left Helsinki by train this morning for a rail and boat trip to Luebeck, Germany, where most of them will be locked in a special train to cross Germany on the second stage of their journey home.

They will embark at the Finnish port of Turku for the voyage to Luebeck. At Stockholm their ship will pick up 50 more Britishers who will make the trip across Germany.

Mention by the Finnish radio of an airplane connection at Luebeck was interpreted to mean the more important members of the Legation staff would be flown over Germany.

The break in diplomatic relations between Finland and Great Britain made their departure necessary. A trip through German-held territory was the only practical route.

The Germans have agreed to provide a sealed train at Luebeck to take the group to Hamburg, whence they may proceed partly through German-occupied country to Lisbon and London. It was assumed here the train's shades would be kept down throughout the ride through Germany.

Left behind were 112 other Britons who chose to remain in Finland. One of them was an army captain who joined the Finnish Army as a protest against "Churchill's embracing the Bolsheviks," authorities said.

Political observers attached significance to the presence of the Japanese Minister to Finland at the station to bid the British farewell.

The American Minister, Arthur Schoenfeld, also was present. Robert McClintock, secretary at the American Legation, accompanied the train as far as Turku.

An American coal agent, named Atkinson, will be attached to the American Legation to attend to British interests in Finland.

Members of the Finnish Legation in London will leave soon for Lisbon, there to be exchanged for the group which departed from Helsinki today.

Reds Moving 390,000 Germans From Ancestral Volga Homes

Migration to Siberia Ordered on Charges Population Harbored Agents of Enemy

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Sept. 8.—The Soviet government, declaring the lower Volga had become a haven for Nazi spies and saboteurs, directed today that some 390,000 persons of German extraction be uprooted from their homes in that area and resettled in various parts of Siberia.

Those affected by the mass migration order—descendants of German families whom Catherine the Great invited to settle along the Volga in 1762 as a barrier to Tartar invasion—will be given land and state aid to start life anew, the government said.

The migration was decreed, it was explained, as the result of an investigation by military authorities which disclosed "tens of thousands of diversionists and spies among the German population of the Volga."

Foes Declared Harbored.

The government accused the population of "covering up enemies of the Soviet people" by failing to disclose the presence of these saboteurs who, it declared, were "prepared to cause explosions in these regions at a signal from Germany."

To avert possible disorders and bloodshed which might force the government "to adopt measues of reprisal against the entire German population," it was decided to remove all persons of German descent from the region, the official announcement said.

The German Volga territory is an autonomous republic of the Soviet Union, situated about 300 miles north of the Caspian Sea and about 500 miles east of the Dnieper River front, where the Red Army is engaged in a death struggle with the Nazi invaders.

The migration decree provides that the Volga Germans be resettled some 1,600 to 2,000 miles further east—in the Omsk and Novosibirsk regions of Western Siberia, the Altai region of the Kazakhstan Republic and "neighboring localities rich in land."

The decree—which was signed at the Kremlin August 28 by President Michael Kalinin—directs that the vast resettlement project be carried out as soon as possible under supervision of the National Defense Council, headed by Premier Joseph Stalin.

The Germanic element in the Volga area represents about 65 per cent of its total population, which, according to most recent estimates, is about 600,000. The territory covers approximately 10,300 square miles.

Catherine the Great, whose invitation brought some 8,000 German families into the region, was herself the daughter of a Prussian field marshal.

She was wed in 1745 to Prince Peter of Russia and became empress in 1762, when he was dethroned by a conspiracy and later murdered.

Resettlement of large populations has been a policy of the Germans since the early days of the war, although their purpose has been to draw large numbers of Germans within the Reich from outside its borders.

After the Russian occupation of the Rumanian territories of Bessarabia and Bucovina last year Germany and Russia agreed on an exchange of populations which would have returned to the Reich a large number of Germans then in Russia. There is no evidence that this movement, which effected the Germans on the Volga, was ever carried to completion.

Germany repatriated thousands of racial Germans from the Baltic states after they were taken over by Russia in the first year of the war. These people were resettled on former Polish territory which was annexed to Germany. Germany also repatriated thousands of Germans from the Tyrol in Northern Italy, thus settling a long-standing issue between Italy and Germany.

British Warn Iran Again

SEP 8 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 8—Although no dead line has been fixed for Iranian acquiescence to British-Russian demands, an authoritative source said today, a favorable response must be forthcoming "in a very short time" if Iran is to avoid sterner measures by occupying British and Russian forces.

The most recent communication to Teheran is understood to have insisted upon expulsion or internment of all Germans and Italians and others having any connection with the Axis, whether as official agents or private citizens.

It is assumed here that a number of Axis operatives already are in custody of the British and Russians.

CALL SESSION

TEHERAN, Iran, Sept. 8 (AP).—The hard-pressed Iranian government today called an extraordinary session of parliamentary for tomorrow to announce Anglo-Russian occupation terms, the foremost of which is understood to require expulsion of all axis nationals from the Teheran zone.

Foreign diplomatic sources said it was uncertain as to whether the government has approved the terms or is attempting further negotiation. Since actual hostilities ended nearly two weeks ago, Britain and Russia have increased their demands on every point and Iran has agreed in principle but suggested modifications.

One point upon which the allies now are reported insisting is that Iran break off relations with all axis countries, except possibly Bulgaria—which hasn't gone to war against Russia.

RAF 'REPAYS' NAZIS FOR LONDON RAIDS

SEP 8 1941

Batters Berlin On First Blitz Anniversary

By the Associated Press

LONDON, Sept. 8—British pilots, attacking in coldly furious commemoration of one of Britain's most tragic nights, beat at Berlin for hours last night and early today in a raid officially termed the heaviest ever delivered upon Hitler's capital.

It was payment, in the red, familiar coin of fire bombs and explosives, for the first mass air attack on London on the night of September 8, 1940, an assault of eight hours and 18 minutes that by British count cost the Nazis 65 planes.

Twenty British bombers and one fighter plane, of squadrons of hundreds which crossed the channel last night in the white moonlight of Indian summer, were said to have gone down before German defensive fire, but this was the tital acknowledged loss of a great anniversary offensive that struck not only at Berlin but at Kiel, and other far separated points in the Reich and along the occupied French coast.

Four German fighter planes of those that leapt aloft to meet the RAF were declared shot down.

FLAMES LIGHT BERLIN

It was by every account a thrust of mighty power sharply illustrating how Britain's aerial arm, strengthened by American-built planes, had grown from a year ago to take the offensive where it once fought desperately only to protect this island.

Berlin itself, said the air ministry in a brief communique, was left alight with a series of tremendous fires.

"We could see the place like a map," said a returning flight sergeant, describing how the moonlight threw the city into clear relief.

"Soon there were many fires, with one in particular blazing large and fiercely in the heart of the city as a further guide to our bombers."

Flames, by these accounts, were especially thick about a main Berlin railway station.

WORST RAID, BERLIN ADMITS

German anti-aircraft fire was hot and unending, save when it abated at the approach of German night fighters.

(The Germans themselves made it clear beyond question that the raid was the worst they ever had experienced. The death of at least 27 inhabitants of Berlin was announced and the newspapers took the extraordinary step of going far beyond German communiques to describe the destruction and to rage at the British attackers as low down and contemptible." The destruction of 17 British planes, three of them over Berlin, was claimed.)

Aside from these violent assaults on the Reich's capital, the shipyards at the Nazi naval base of Kiel and the docks at Boulogne in France were especially hard hit overnight. German airdromes over a wide area also were assaulted.

All this capped a series of weekend raids—some of them participated in by American volunteers in the Eagle squadron—extending from Norway to the Netherlands and Brittany in occupied France.

So violent was the pounding of Boulogne that the sky over it was red all night and this morning fires in and about the city still were visible from the Kent coast.

U-BOAT CAPTURED

Even at sea the British reported an aerial success, announcing that a German submarine, damaged by aerial attack that forced it to the surface, was kept under guard from the air until British warships could reach the area, capture the vessel and bring her "successfully into harbor" as a prize of war.

(Doubt that this submarine was the one which fought with the U. S. destroyer Greer somewhere on the approaches to Iceland was expressed by British naval authorities. Too, a German version had indicated that the U-boat had reached port.)

Fires were lighted in all parts of Berlin, industrial suburbs as well as the central business district, returning British pilots said.

One immense blaze was said to have been sighted near the Alexanderplatz, with a long smoke plume drifting miles eastward. A group of fifty smaller fires sent columns of smoke thousands of feet into the sky.

One pilot described how he watched bombs fall on factories, warehouses and railway yards, and another witnessed a combat between another bomber and a German fighter.

"We saw the twin-engined plane—one of ours—caught in the searchlights," he said. "Then we saw the fighter, its tracer bullets streaming into the cone of searchlights from the darkness outside.

"Then the fighter fell in flames. And the last we saw of the bomber it was going with one wing on fire.

"I hope the crew made it."

Germany's week-end counteraction in the air was described here as weak. The southeast coast was attacked last night and some damage and casualties were caused in the east of England.

20 Bombers Lost, British Admit; Moonlight Aids

SEP 8 1941

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—One year from the night of the Luftwaffe's first mass attack on London, hundreds of planes of the American-strengthened R. A. F. rode in moonlight over Europe and bombed Berlin from midnight to almost dawn today.

It was the heaviest raid ever made on the capital of the Reich, the British Air Ministry said.

The British lost 20 bombers out of what was described as a "very powerful" raiding force. Four German night fighters were said to have been shot down. One British fighter was missing from attacks on German-held continental airdromes.

(The Germans reported that 17 British planes were bagged during the night, three over Berlin.)

Many Bombs Dropped.

A communique said "a great number of high explosives and incendiary bombs were dropped" in Berlin and that "great fires sprang up in the city and extensive damage was done."

On the night of September 7-8, 1940, the Germans pounded London for eight hours and 18 minutes, losing 65 planes, according to the British count, but executing what the Air Ministry called the first big aerial assault on the British capital."

The Air Ministry news service said the attackers found the lakes to the west of Berlin shining in bright moonlight.

"We could see the place like a map," said one flight sergeant. "Soon there were many fires, with one in particular blazing large and fierce in the heart of the city as a further guide to bombers."

The Berlin attackers were but part of the hundreds of planes striking regularly at the continent.

Fire Around Rail Station.

Crews returning from the German capital said many big fires burst around a main railway station and their glow could be seen long after the bombers set out for home.

The German defenses were strong, the attackers acknowledged. Anti-aircraft was virtually incessant and stopped only to allow the approach of German night fighters.

"We were clamped in the large cone of a searchlight," one gunner said. "Jerry was pumping flak as hard as he could. Suddenly the flak stopped and I saw an ME-110 coming up on our starboard quarter.

"I gave it a burst and saw my tracer enter a starboard engine. The 'ME' caught fire and crashed. It passed so close I thought it was going to hit us."

No Figures on Bomb Tonnage.

Although the Press Association called the Berlin raid the heaviest since the war began, no figures were issued either for the number of planes or the bomb tonnage.

The forays highlighted a week end of R. A. F. attacks on a front ranging from Norway to France.

Besides the attack on Berlin—the fourth by either British or Russian planes in a little more than a week—the offensive was aimed at Bergsø Island off Norway, the German naval base at Kiel, the Rhineland industrial town of Huls and the French-occupied port of Boulogne.

Most spectacular of the attacks other than on Berlin was the one on Boulogne begun last midnight and carried through to dawn. The sky over the French port reddened as the R. A. F. carted more and more explosives across Dover Strait to dump into raging fires. Watchers on the Kent coast today reported the fires still were burning.

Southeast Coast Bombed.

The Luftwaffe crossed paths with the British. The Air Ministry said places on the southeast coast were bombed and some damage and a few casualties were caused in the east of England.

British flyers returning from raids reported heavy anti-aircraft fire, especially at Huls Saturday night and Boulogne last night. At Huls, the flyers said, they scored a number of bull's-eye hits on a synthetic rubber plant.

Participating in daylight raids yesterday against the French coast, American Eagle Squadron flyers ran into a dog-fight with Germany's latest Messerschmitt fighters. Flight Lt. C. G. Petersen of Santaquin, Utah, said he zoomed up to within 75 yards of a Messerschmitt and opened fire.

"First his wheels dropped," Petersen said. "Then he went down into a slow spin. He crashed near the outskirts of Boulogne."

Glides Back to England.

On his freshman flight, Pilot Officer Patrick Dowling, a Texan, caught so much action his guns were damaged, his engine went awry and a large hole was torn in a wing. The Air Ministry news service said Dowling glided back to England and landed in a field after a "fine piece of flying."

The service said United States-built fighters took part in last night's offensive, raiding air bases from the Netherlands to Brittany. Fires left at one base in Northern France could be seen 25 miles away, the service reported.

The British said they lost three fighters in yesterday's offensive and eight bombers from operations Saturday night.

How U. S.-Made Bomber Captured U-Boat At Sea

SEP 8 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 8—The stiff-necked pilot and weary crewman of an American-built Hudson Lockheed bomber received official credit tonight for capture of a German submarine in one of the most amazing air vs. sea battles of the war, and all of them were eager to tell about it.

The pilot's neck was so stiff he couldn't turn his head. It got that way when he circled over the U-boat for three and one half hours after forcing its surrender by machine-gun fire at part of the crew trapped on deck.

"I kept my eyes on it every minute," the pilot said. "Then finally the (American-built) Catalina flying boat we wirelessed for came and I turned the watch over to them. They kept watch on the sub till the navy came."

[Air Ministry rules prevented transmission of the names of the pilot and crew. The location and time of the attack were not given, but naval authorities in London said they doubted it was the submarine which attacked the United State desroyer Greer.]

Attacks As Sub Appears

The four crewmen and 32-year-old Yorkshireman captain of the bomber told this story:

Patrolling far at sea the plane dive-bombed a submarine just as it was breaking the surface. A gunner shouted when he saw it rise on an almost even keel, surging up through a mass of whitecaps.

"Machine-gun them! Let's machine-gun them," he called to the rest of the crew.

Then the plane dived across the submarine, all guns blazing—front guns, the rear turret and the belly gun. As the plane dived the submarine's conning tower hatch was thrown open. About twelve of the submarine crew tumbled out and dropped on deck.

Keep Own Guns Firing

The men in the Lockheed thought the crew was manning anti-aircraft guns, so they kept their own guns firing hard. Red streaks of tracer bullets peppered into the conning tower and kicked up spurts of water all around the U-boat.

This was too much for the Germans. Those who were already on deck turned and ran back to the conning tower. They ran into a group coming up from below and trying to push out.

"There was an awful shambles," said the pilot. "They were all mixed up together. Some were trying to get in. Others were trying to get out."

The plane roared over the U-boat four times, guns streaming bullets, banking steeply each time to swing around into the attack again while the rear guns and belly guns kept up the fire.

One Firing Continuously

The rear turret was firing practically all the time. All the pilot remembered hearing besides the din of firing was the navigator muttering over and over.

"Look at those ——s coming out of the conning tower. I've lived all my life to see those ——s coming out of the conning tower."

When the Lockheed came round for the fifth attack the U-boat surrendered. One of its crew held a white shirt above the conning tower and waved it violently.

The Lockheed gunners ceased fire but continued to circle with their sights trained. The Germans' heads turned, eyes following them, as they banked around and the shirt kept waving.

Only 50 Feet Above Water

The plane was flying about fifty feet above the water. The submarine crew, between thirty and forty men, crowded into the conning tower.

"A glum lot they were," the pilot said. "We were close enough to see their faces, and there wasn't a smile anywhere."

The U-boat was riding so low that the waves occasionally broke over the conning tower. The plane sent several wireless calls for relief and finally the flying boat arrived.

Just before dark a British warship steamed up. Men from the ship said a fierce gale was blowing and the submarine couldn't be boarded. A relief Catalina flying boat came during the night. We now and then foam smothered the submarine's light.

When dawn came the U-boat was surrounded by warships and her crew removed. The navy took her to a British port.

BRITISH DOUBT SUBMARINE IS FOE OF GREER

German Naval Vessel Had Been Damaged by Aerial Attack.

EXACT PLACE NOT DISCLOSED

English Planes Keep Guard in Sky Until Warships Grab Vessel and Crew.

SEP 8 1941

London, Sept. 8 (A. P.)—A German submarine has been captured in the Atlantic. It was damaged by aerial attack, which forced it to the surface, the Admiralty and Air Ministry announced today.

The U-boat lay in a gale-tossed sea, while the British kept guard in the sky overhead until British warships could reach the scene and take over and bring the prize successfully into harbor.

London Expresses Doubt.

[The circumstances were such as might attend entrapment of the German submarine which clashed with the U. S. destroyer Greer, but the joint London communiques failed to note any connection, giving neither the precise location of the air attack, nor the date. Naval authorities in London, however, expressed doubt that the captured submarine was the one which fought with the Greer.

[A German version of the clash, accusing the American destroyer of the first blow, indicated that the U-boat had reached port after the incident of last Thursday. U-boats seldom risk wireless communication on the high seas.

[On the other hand, the search by air and sea for the U-boat, with the suggestion from American and British sources that the undersea craft could scarcely have penetrated the criss-crossing lines of the hunt, is still believed to be under way. The Greer fought the submarine 200 miles southwest of Iceland. The destroyer was en route there with mail for United States forces of occupation.]

SEP 8 1941

U. S.-Built Planes Involved.

Two American-made planes figured in the capture. The attack was made by a Hudson (Lockheed) bomber of the coastal command and a Catalina (Consolidated) patrol plane kept watch over the U-boat until surface forces arrived and took over. It was a Catalina flying boat which trailed and spotted the German battleship Bismarck before it was sunk.

As a result of the Hudson's attack, the U-boat was forced to surface in badly damaged condition and surrendered, according to the Admiralty and an Air Ministry communique.

"It was blowing full gale," the communique said. "There was a heavy swell running and no ships were in the vicinity. The crew of the U-boat remained on board the ship which they kept afloat.

Warships Reach Scene.

"Meanwhile the Hudson was relieved by a Catalina aircraft of the coastal command which patrolled over head until the arrival of his Majesty's ships.

"When his Majesty's ships arrived on the scene the weather was so bad that for several hours it was impossible to lower a boat.

"His Majesty's ships stood by the U-boat, keeping her covered by their guns and waiting for improvement in the weather. Eventually the weather moderated somewhat. The U-boat was then boarded and the capture completed. The prize was taken in tow and now has been brought successfully into harbor."

Nazis Denounce Berlin Raid As Press Demands Reprisals

Discipline Of Population Emphasized As Officials Set Death Toll At 27 Or More

SEP 8 1941 [By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 8—Roofs were torn from residential buildings and streets were littered with debris in an early morning raid on Berlin in which British planes dropped explosive and incendiary bombs with "terrible detonations," the Berlin press reported indignantly tonight.

An official announcement said at least twenty-seven persons were killed. A number of others were injured.

The newspapers charged Britain with war against the civilian population and called for reprisals by the Luftwaffe. They went beyond customary mere publication of the high command communique and described some results of the raid, obviously with permission of authorities.

German tabulations from Sunday morning through Monday morning, during which there were raids on Berlin and west German cities, said the British lost nineteen bombers, three over Berlin, and five fighters.

Emphasize Discipline

Emphasis in the newspaper accounts was on "the exemplary discipline of civilians" and the care given victims of the raids.

Nachtausgabe said the objective of the raid was to terrorize the population, but that it had failed.

"Explosives and incendiaries were dropped by the British aviators on residential sections where, almost exclusively, workers' families live," it reported.

"The dead and wounded, among them old people, women and children, are lamented victims of a species of warfare which shrinks back at no crime, no murder.

Describes Damaged Buildings

"We stand before a four-story apartment building damaged by an explosive bomb. Concussion has pushed in all window frames and glass. The roof is mostly torn off. Balconies are dislodged. The sidewalk is littered with debris and tiles. The facade shows hundreds of hits.

"In the garden before a small saloon, damaged tables and chairs are piled atop each other."

"It looks bad in the homes hit by British bombs," said Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung. "All [illegible] people, however, remained calm. . . . This criminal act will be avenged."

Gives Woman's Story

Lokal Anzeiger gave this eyewitness story by a working woman:

"When we got over our first fright caused by the terrible detonation of bombs, our first thought was: out of the cellar! The light had gone out in our shelter, but several had pocket lamps. Before we reached the street political party leaders were already coming toward us. Although our knees shook, we reached the street safely."

Der Angriff said:

"We stop before a school where all victims of the attack are being collected. In a classroom, a Nazi women's organization is already at work making mountains of sausage sandwiches. Milk is warmed, coffee prepared. . . . In another room we find women, old people, children, young mothers. The British insanity in a few seconds has robbed them of all they owned and have saved as fruits of their labor. Some wear bandages."

The Luftwaffe was reported to have dropped heavy bombs on harbor facilities at Great Yarmouth, Boston, Peterhead, Ramsgate and Margate in sweeps along the British east coast last night. Large fires were said to have been started.

27 Killed, Berlin Reports; Revenge Is Threatened

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 8.—An early morning British air raid in which at least 27 inhabitants of Berlin were killed was played up under two-column headlines today, and one newspaper, the Nachtausgabe, bitterly assailed the attack as "especially low-down and contemptible."

Ominous hints that the Luftwaffe soon would get around to reprisals appeared in the press. The Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung declared, "This infamy will be atoned!"

Obviously with the permission of authorities, the press went beyond the customary mere publication of the high command communique. At least a column was given to description of the attack (which the British said lasted from midnight almost to dawn and was the heaviest R. A. F. blow on Berlin so far.)

Emphasis, however, was on "the exemplary discipline of civilians" and the care given victims.

Residents of Berlin who watched the British attack called it "lively."

More May Be Dead.

Besides 27 dead announced by informed sources, a number of others were injured and fear was expressed that the number of dead might increase.

Of 17 British planes downed during the night, three were said to have been bagged over Berlin.

"Explosives and incendiaries were dropped by the British aviators on residential sections where, almost exclusively, workers' families live," said Nachtausgabe.

"The dead and wounded among them, old people, women and children, are lamented victims of a species of warfare which shrinks back at no crime, no murder."

Apartment Damaged.

After asserting that the British failed to terrorize the population, which it said was the raiders' objective, this newspaper continued:

"We stand before a four-story apartment building damaged by an explosive bomb. Concussion has pushed in all window frames and glass. The roof is mostly torn off. Balconies are dislodged. The sidewalk is littered with debris and tiles. The facade shows hundreds of hits.

"In the garden before a small saloon, damaged tables and chairs are piled atop each other."

(The German radio broadcast an official announcement that 3,853 persons had been killed by air raids on Germany between the beginning of the war and last August. The latest official casualty report for Britain put the number of civilian air-raid casualties from the start of the war through July, this year, at 42,257 killed and 52,125 injured.)

Der Angriff's Description.

The newspaper Der Angriff gave this descriptpion:

30.24 — 11683

"We stop before a school where all victims of the attack are being collected. In a classroom, a Nazi women's organization is already at work making mountains of sausage sandwiches. Milk is warmed, coffee prepared. In another room we find women and old people, children, young mothers.

"The British insanity in a few seconds has robbed them of all they owned and have saved as fruits of their labor. Some wear bandages."

The description ended with praise for the Nazi party's care for the victims.

The Lokal Anzeiger quoted a working woman as relating:

"When we got over our first fright caused by the terrible detonation of bombs, our first thought was: Out of the cellar! The light had gone out in our shelter, but several had pocket lamps. Before we reached the street political party leaders were already coming toward us. Although our knees shook, we reached the street safely."

Said Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung:

"It looks bad in homes hit by British bombs . . . All the people, however, remained calm even if they were not permitted to go to their homes and at first had to put up with quarters in the assembly hall of a school."

This paper closed its account with the threat:

"This criminal act will be avenged."

Heavy Bombs Dropped on Ports.

Meanwhile, it was reported the Luftwaffe dropped its heaviest bombs on harbor facilities at Great Yarmouth, Boston, Peterhead, Ramsgate and Margate in sweeps along the British east coast last night. Large fires were said to have been started by the bombings.

Various British airports were attacked, too, it was said. In addition the Luftwaffe claimed the sinking of two merchantmen, one of 5,000 tons and the other of 7,000 tons, in English waters.

"Disturbance attacks of insignificant effect" also were carried out by the British on points in Northwest Germany, it was said. None of the raids caused military or war industrial damage, it was added.

Anti-aircraft batteries and night fighters were said to have shot down nine attacking planes.

Claim Fortress Felled.

Last night the Germans claimed a four-motored fortress plane was shot down off Norway. (The British have yet to report the loss of a fortress bomber.)

On the offensive Saturday night the Germans said four freighters totaling 30,000 tons were sunk and another ship damaged in English waters by the Luftwaffe. Strong raids also were carried out against an airport near Suez and the east harbor of the British Fleet's base at Alexandria.

German Children Move From Country To City

Thousands From 10 To 14 Returning To Homes After Six Months In Smaller Towns

Berlin, Sept. 8 (AP)—Thousands of German children from 10 to 14 years old are returning to their homes in larger cities of western and northern Germany after six months in the country and smaller towns.

Many went from special trains to the classrooms of schools opening today. As soon as the trek back to the cities is completed, special trains will evacuate thousands of others, accompanied by nurses and instructors, for a similar stay in the country and smaller towns.

A special train from Pomerania brought children necklaced with tickets to Berlin. Other contingents arrived at Hamburg from Bayreuth, Plauen and Chemnitz.

NAZI FLAK SHIP SUNK

Anti-aircraft Vessel Hit by British Plane.

London, Sept. 8 (A. P.).—A British patrol plane was reported authoritatively today to have destroyed a German anti-aircraft ship off the Belgian port of Ostend.

The pilot was said to have sighted three German vessels and to have seen one explode, its superstructure crumbling, when he opened fire in a diving attack.

"It is highly probable that I hit the magazine," he said. "I broke off the engagement while I was still about 200 yards away from the wreckage."

Flak ships are usually about the size of large trawlers and have powerful anti-aircraft batteries in bow and stern.

SEVEN SPECTATORS AT RAID KILLED

London, Sept. 8 (A. P.).—Seven persons, returning from channel cliffs where they had watched the R. A. F. bombardment of Boulogne, were killed today when a German raider dropped bombs on this side of the channel.

BRITONS SMOKE AWAITING ARREST

Berlin, Sept. 8 (A. P.).—Four of five British airmen in one of three planes shot down here during the night landed by parachute, close together on a moonlit field, and puffed cigarettes until their captors came. The fifth was killed.

An English-speaking civilian approached the group.

"You understand you are prisoners now," he said.

"We suppose so," a British sergeant replied.

The group chatted quietly, waiting for the squad of soldiers which took them into formal custody.

Italy And Germany Say Hermion Claim Must Have Been English Fleet Accident

Rome, Sept. 8 (AP)—Italy and Germany in a joint communique denied today a British claim that the British cruiser Hermion had rammed and sunk an Italian submarine.

AXIS AID TO LIBYA HALTED BY BRITISH

Fleet Smashes Repeated Efforts To Send Help To Forces In Africa

Alexandria, Sept. 8 (AP)—The torrid heat of the western desert slowly is dissipating and the next few weeks would be ideal for an offensive.

By LARRY ALLEN
Associated Press Correspondent

Alexandria, Egypt, Sept. 8—Britain's Mediterranean fleet in a week of violent action just ended has smashed repeated Axis efforts to reinforce Italian Libya, sinking or damaging more than a score of warships and convoyed vessels according to official count.

In this campaign, carried out by submarines and the torpedo bombers of the fleet air arm, the navy thus has greatly strengthened the steel British line stretching from the Italian peninsula to the North African coast.

Submarines and naval planes sent to the bottom two destroyers, two liners, eight merchantmen and two big schooners between September 1 and September 7, British sources declare.

10,000-Ton Cruiser Struck

In addition, a 10,000-ton Axis cruiser armed with 8-inch guns was said to have received serious blows in an air-torpedo attack and five merchantmen hit, several exploding in flames.

While all this was going forward, other naval aircraft heavily bombed Italy's Sicilian bases of Gherbini and Comiso and Tripoli and Bengasi in Libya.

Here are striking examples of the licks the British say their fleet has gotten in against the Italians.

The 11,398-ton liner Esperia, which once carried thousands of passengers between Egypt and Italy, was torpedoed and sunk by a British submarine off Tripoli, although she was escorted by destroyers, torpedo boats and flying boats. The liner was believed loaded with Axis troops and supplies.

Almost Certainly Sunk

The 23,635-ton liner Duilio, attacked by another submarine off southern Italy, almost certainly was sunk.

The last of Mussolini's 8-inch gun cruisers was damaged seriously in the Straits of Messina by torpedoes of still a third submarine.

A British cruiser, the Hermione, spotted an Italian U-boat cruising on the surface of the western Mediterranean and the submersible attempted a crash dive, but was too late, the cruiser ramming and cutting it in two.

[Italians officially denied that the Hermione had sunk a Fascist submarine.]

Increased Efforts Noted

Within the last two months hardly a day passed without attacks by submarines of the Mediterranean fleet and fleet air arm planes against Libya-bound Axis shipping.

The fact that the Axis is facing serious need for fresh men and supplies in North Africa is borne out by the frequency of attempts to get convoys through to Tripoli from where reinforcements move overland across the western desert.

Likewise it is probable that the plans of Gen. Erwin Rommel, the German commander in Libya, are receiving one setback after another because of the failure of the convoys to reach Tripoli.

Hospital Ship Hit, Malta Says

VALLETTA, Malta, Sept. 8 (AP)—Authorities said tonight that a British hospital ship was struck in a one-plane raid here Saturday night. Three Maltese were killed and ten were injured aboard the ship, according to the official report.

Two Axis Ships Hit.

Cairo, Egypt, Sept. 8 (A. P.).—British planes scored hits on two of three Axis ships in the Mediterranean Saturday night, the British Middle East Command reported today. Three destroyers were escorting the ships, the communique said.

One ship was reported hit three times and left listing heavily to port. The other, a tanker, was said to have been heavily damaged by two torpedoes.

R. A. F. Bolstered At Singapore

[By the Associated Press]

Singapore, Sept. 8—The R. A. F.'s offensive strength in the Far East was further increased today by the arrival of what was officially described as "large numbers" of the latest type of British-built Bristol-Blenheim bombers.

The United States has furnished most of the recent reinforcements of Britain's air power in the South Pacific—Lockheed (Hudson) bombers, Brewster Buffalo fighters and Catalina flying boats—while Australia has provided a steady flow of trainer-fighters.

Trained Men Arrive

Authorities said recent arrivals of personnel from Britain included many experienced flyers and numbers of trained ground crews to maintain the planes flown by British, Australian and New Zealand airmen.

Informed sources were confident the Empire's land forces and armaments assembled in Malaya were sufficient to deal with any potential attacks, but they said bombers were needed to blast enemy bases and strike at transports before they could approach these shores.

Cairo, Sept. 8 (A. Germans Stick To Their Story On Greer

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 8—Germany's official statement that the U-boat which fired two torpedoes at the United States destroyer Greer was attacked first by the warship was pronounced by a spokesman today an "unchallengeable statement of facts."

On the surface there was no indication of extraordinary agitation over the matter, but German sources, nevertheless, would not say that the incident was closed.

Asked whether it might lead to any diplomatic steps a spokesman replied: "I'm asked too much."

"Reich Wants No Quarrel"

Both the spokesman and the Berlin press rejected the Washington reiteration that the submarine was the aggressor and repeated the charge of Saturday's communique that the incident was part of a deliberate policy to push the United States closer to war.

"It ought to be obvious to the world that it is not the German interest or wish to maintain a quarrel with the United States," the spokesman observed.

"Roosevelt's Blatant Lie"

It might be a shrewd guess, he said, that the "British-Russian aggression" against Iran had cooled war fervor in the United States and that new circumstances had been devised "to pour oil on the fire."

Under a big headline across its front page saying "Roosevelt's Blatant Lie About Destroyer," the newspaper Zwoelf Uhr Blatt called the Greer incident "a new provocation" by the President.

TOKYO HOLDS GREER CLASH PRIME ISSUE

Press Divided On Question Of Responsibility For Attack

Japan's Involvement In War Might Depend On Decision

[By the Associated Press]

Tokyo, Sept. 8—The question of who fired first in the U. S. S. Greer-Nazi submarine sea duel assumed prime importance in the Japanese press today as leaders of public opinion weighed the chances of the incident involving Japan in war.

Article three of the tri-partite pact among Japan, Germany and Italy obligates signatories to aid the others if "attacked" by an outside power.

Press opinion was divided between those blaming the United States for the incident and those professing ignorance as to who was the aggressor.

Calls For Profit Restriction

Meanwhile Masazo Sakonji, Minister of Commerce and Industry, appealed in a nation-wide broadcast for the people's cooperation in erecting a full-time war economy which would reduce and eliminate small industries and definitely restrict the profit motive in Japanese business.

Also, some pronouncement of importance was reliably reported likely to be made by Premier Konoye later in the week, but its nature was not disclosed. Two weeks ago Konoye sent a personal letter to President Roosevelt.

The army-dominated organ Kokumin led press comment on the Greer incident with the observation it meant Germany now felt able to take a positive attitude toward the United States. The newspaper added, however, that contradictory American and German versions of who began the duel made it doubtful what Japan's obligations would be if the incident were extended.

Accepts German Version

The Japan Times and Advertiser—Foreign Office controlled — accepted the German version inferentially in recounting the combat.

Chugai Shogyo, an organ of big business, declared it was "impossible to judge which party fired first" and counseled Japanese to remember "the Pacific would actually be affected" if the United States were drawn into war with Germany.

The newspaper Hochi declared flatly that "regardless of assertions in the Greer incident, the whole responsibility must be placed upon the United States."

Greer Incident Chief Topic In Japan

[By the Associated Press]

Tokyo, Sept. 8—The Greer-Nazi submarine fight drew the attention of the Japanese press away from United States-Japanese relations today and even away from shipments of American oil to Russia.

Commentators speculating on the sea battle's effects on Japanese policy thought the clash might have made necessary a new examination of the situation in the Pacific.

The Government organ Kokumin interpreted the incident to mean that Germany no longer thought it necessary to be patient with the United States. The incident portended, the paper added, a world-wide crisis, in which "Japan's position has come to be exceedingly delicate and important."

Japan's Axis Obligations

Kokumin said that contradictory American and German announcements about the naval fight made it doubtful whether Japan's tripartite obligations would take effect through extension of the incident. (This was a reference to Japan's commitment to go to the aid of Germany if the Reich were "attacked" by a power outside the present conflict.)

Tokio Editor Warns Nation Not to Lean on Axis.

Tokio, Sept. 8 (A. P.).—Gyokuzo Hanzawa, editor and proprietor of the semi-official Diplomatic Review, declared today that "Japan should depend upon no one but herself," in a statement aimed against Japanese who talk of dependence on the Axis or other allies.

Writing in the newspaper Chugai Shogyo, Hanzawa said Japanese statesmen should survey the general world situation and calculate Japan's own interests. He was confident, he said, that Japan's leaders would "commit no folly by bringing Japan harm by seeking the advantage of other countries."

In discussing public opinion in the United States, he warned the Japanese against concluding that isolationist talk meant American opinion was split. The American method of free discussion of public issues, he said, generally results in greater unity and stronger support of the national government.

Sadao Araki, a former War Minister, writing in Hochi, said internal dissension was more to be feared in Japan than encirclement by the British, Americans, Chinese and Dutch.

Domestic troubles, he said, were the result of foreign ideas incompatible with the Japanese way of life and thinking, and if "foreignism" were abolished there would be no worries over fifth columnists or problems of espionage.

Tokyo Guesses On F. D. R.'s Speech

SEP 8 1941

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 8—The Tokyo radio, in a broadcast heard tonight by C. B. S., quoted "competent circles" as listing five points with which President Roosevelt will deal in his speech Thursday, among them "an announcement in some form regarding the American-Japanese negotiations."

The points were listed as follows:

"First—The United States will convoy transports to the outpost line, such as Britain and Iceland.

"Second—The United States will let American vessels sail across the combat zone to Great Britain and other places, abrogating the neutrality law.

"Third—An announcement will be made in some form regarding the American-Japanese negotiations.

"Fourth—A declaration will be made that the American navy will act decisively against the Axis battleships it might encounter in patrol waters, as designated by the United States.

"Fifth—American support to Great Britain and the Soviet Union will be multiplied."

KONOYE PLANS TALK

But Nature of Message Is Not Disclosed in Tokio.

Tokio, Sept. 8 (A. P.).—Premier Prince Konoye was reported reliably tonight to be planning a speech or some other announcement this week. There was no hint as to its nature.

The Premier almost two weeks ago sent a personal letter to President Roosevelt.

A SUBSTITUTE FOR A SUBSTITUTE

Tokio, Sept. 8 (A. P.).—The Japanese have come up with a substitute for the charcoal substitute for gasoline—a natural gas produced near here. The gas is carried in containers similar to the tanks used for carbonated water. The containers are stored in the rear of the car where some Japanese have charcoal burners installed.

It costs about as much for the gas as charcoal, which is more expensive than gasoline. The gas, however, can be turned off at will, but the charcoal burns away until the fumes die down.

Believes Japan Waited Too Long For Expansion

Manila, Sept. 8 (AP)—Alfred Duff Cooper, former British Minister of Information, said today he thought Japan had waited too long to hope for any further expansion southward.

"If the Japanese wanted to move at the most auspicious time they should have done so a year ago," he told newsmen. "Today we are in a stronger position in every way. Everything in the last twelve months has been to our advantage."

Duff Cooper is here en route by clipper from the United States to Singapore, where he will examine the possibilities of establishing a centralized civil government for the Malay States and thus relieve military commanders of political side tasks.

Nazis Seize 100 More Jews In Reprisal For Paris Strife

Ex-Cabinet Minister And Ex-Deputy Held As Hostages—Trouble Expected To Increase

[By the Associated Press]

Vichy, Sept. 8—More than one hundred Jews, including Pierre Masse, former Minister of Justice, and Theodore Valensi, a former deputy, today were reported arrested as hostages by German authorities in Paris in new reprisals for growing disorders against the occupying power.

Vichy no longer tried to conceal the gravity of strife in the German-occupied zone or the fact that reprisals seemed only to heighten it.

"We can expect to see street incidents multiply," the official news agency told the press of unoccupied France. The agency circulated an extract from the Paris Cri du Peuple which likened the situation in the occupied capital to open warfare.

Viewed As Communist Plot

Vichy authorities have insisted that the increasing demonstrations, shootings and sabotage were a Communist plot designed to divert German military strength from the Russian front to France.

Three hostages shot at dawn Saturday in reprisal for an assault on a German sergeant were identified as Communists but their names were not yet disclosed.

They were among some sixty persons imprisoned August 13 after anti-German demonstrations in the Porte St. Denis quarters of Paris.

Not Accused Of Communism

No charges of Communism were published here against the latest hostages. Masse, who was a Minister of Justice in the Poincare Cabinet in 1922, and Valensi, the former deputy, were regarded as political moderates. Masse was a member of the Democratic Alliance formerly headed by Pierre-Etienne Flandin.

The anti-Semitic Paris newspaper Au Pilory said three other prominent Jews had been arrested but this could not be confirmed. The three were said to be a rich banker and art collector, a businessman and horse-racing expert, and a lawyer once closely connected with Georges Mandel, a Cabinet Minister of the Republic.

Railroad Men Sentenced

The Marseille Anti-Communist Court condemned eight railroad workers to severe sentences for distributing Communist leaflets. Five were sentenced to a total of forty-five years of hard labor and one hundred years of forced residence. The three others were given a total of fifteen years in jail and fined 4,000 gold francs (about $88).

A number of other sentences were passed for writing slogans on walls.

100 Jews in France Reported Arrested As Nazi Hostages

Two Prominent Frenchmen Also Seized in Steps To Halt Paris Attacks

SEP 8 1941

By the Associated Press.

VICHY, Unoccupied France, Sept. 8.—More than 100 Jews and two prominent French lawyers, one of them a Minister of Justice in the old republic, were reported today to have been seized as hostages by German occupation authorities in Paris because of attacks on members of the German Army.

It was in these new mass arrests that the Germans took the two once-prominent lawyers, former Justice Minister Pierre Masse, who is a Jew, and Theodore Valensi, a former deputy, who is a native of Corsica.

Valensi also was described as Jewish.

The anti-Semitic Paris newspaper "Au Pilory" said three other prominent Jews had been arrested in a roundup within the last few weeks, but the reports could not be confirmed in either official or unofficial sources.

Only Masse and Valensi were known to have been in the Paris region during that time. The others were reported to include a rich banker and art collector, a business man and horse racing expert and a lawyer who once had close connections with Georges Mandel, a Minister in several Republican cabinets.

Situation Held Grave.

Vichy no longer tried to hide the gravity of the strife in the occupied zone or the fact that reprisals are only making things worse.

[The Vichy radio reported today that a devastating fire in grain warehouses in the former Department of Somme had destroyed large stores of wheat, rye and agricultural machinery. The broadcast was heard here by NBC.]

"We can expect to see street incidents multiply," the official Government news agency told its papers.

30.24— 11685

30.24—11685

Compared With Open Warfare.

The agency reproduced an extract from the Paris Cri du Peuple, comparing the situation in Paris with open warfare.

Authorized Vichy sources charged that the outbreaks, particularly shootings in Paris, were part of a Communist plot aimed at forcing Germany to withdraw troops from the eastern front.

They specified that the arrests followed a series of demonstrations August 15 and 16 in Jewish neighborhoods in the 15th and 20th arrondissments.

It was announced, coincidentally, that three hostages shot by the Germans at dawn last Saturday in retaliation for an attack on a German sergeant were Communists. Their names have not been disclosed.

They were imprisoned last August 13 after anti-German demonstrations in the Porte St. Denis quarter of Paris and were among about 60 other persons charged with being Communists, according to this information.

Political Moderates.

Authorized circles said the whole group had been investigated carefully and that the only ones considered as hostages were those whose Communist affiliations were proved beyond a doubt.

Masse and Valensi had been regarded as moderate in their political tendencies and Masse, who was Minister of Justice in the Poincare cabinet in 1922, was a member of the Democratic Alliance formerly headed by Pierre-Etienne Flandin.

Police, it was announced, also are searching for an accomplice of Paul Colette who they believed helped him obtain the weap with which he shot the collaborationist leaders Pierre Laval and Marcel Deat.

At Versailles, where M. Laval and M. Deat are convalescing in a hospital, four male nurses in a nearby sanitarium have been arrested as suspected Communists.

Shot for Aiding Escapes.

Another Frenchman was disclosed to have been shot September 1 by order of a German court martial on grounds that he helped French war prisoners escape into unoccupied territory.

An announcement in a Nantes newspaper said he was put to death because his action "aided enemy forces in view of the fact that prisoners were given the possibility of joining partisans of De Gaulle or the British army."

Two Germans, a civil official and a non-commissioned officer, were wounded Saturday night by gunmen who evaded capture. These shootings, occurring only a few hours after three French Communists were shot by German firing squads in reprisal for acts against the occupying forces, indicate the French Communist party is bent on carrying out Moscow orders, authorized sources said.

Moscow, they declared, "hopes by using militants in occupied France to lessen the pressure of the German armies by forcing the Reich general staff to keep important effectives in the occupied zone."

It was reported from Versailles that Pierre Laval was sufficiently strong yesterday to get out of bed and visit Marcel Deat in the next room. Laval and Deat were wounded on August 28 by Paul Colette during a ceremony marking the formation in Paris of a French anti-communist fighting force intended for action on the eastern front.

Hannover Jews Lose Homes in Book Reprisal

Hundreds Evicted; Authorities Cite New Yorker's Work

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 8.—Hundreds of Jews in Hannover received notice today to evacuate their homes within 24 hours.

They were permitted to take only "the most necessary objects and furniture" and advised that the remainder of their property would be sold, the proceeds to be turned over to them "at a given time."

One reason cited for the action was said to have been a book written by "the Jew Kaufmann in New York." The book, it was alleged, demands sterilization of all Germans and employment of German soldiers as coolies in foreign lands.

(This reference apparently is to a book entitled "Germany Must Perish!" by Theodore N. Kaufman, published by the Argyle Press of Newark, N. J.)

Text of Eviction Order.

Eviction orders issued by the Mayor of Hannover said:

"To Jew ----------:

"Eviction order:

"Jew dwelling ----------:

"The present war has been forced upon Germany by the Jewry of other countries.

"The enemy air force attacks open towns and unloads explosive and incendiary bombs indiscriminately on the civil population. (The R. A. F. has attacked Hannover a number of times.)

"The Jew Kaufmann in New York demands the sterilization of all Germans and the employment of German soldiers as coolies in foreign lands.

"In order to relieve the distressed situation caused by the war, I see myself compelled to immediately narrow down the space available to Jews in this city. I therefore demand that you quit your present abode immediately.

"You must leave your house keys with your police precinct headquarters.

Given Mortuary Hall.

One of the first places assigned to the evicted Jews was the mortuary hall of the Jewish cemetery. About 100 Jews of all ages and both sexes were crowded together there.

All Jews in Germany will be forbidden to wear decorations, orders or other evidences of honors conferred on them after September 15, a decree issued by the Ministry of Interior ruled today.

This applies even to Jewish heroes of the last world war who have worn their iron crosses up to now.

The action in Hannover followed one of the most sweeping recent anti-Semitic measures taken in Germany, when police on Saturday declared that henceforth Jews in Greater Germany and Bohemia must wear a yellow six-pointed star of David the size of the palm of the hand when appearing in public.

The measure was intended, it was officially explained, to make easier the strict enforcement of regulations which forbid Jews to shop in the markets before certain hours, or to appear in certain restaurants, theaters and parks.

At Newark, N. J., Theodore N. Kaufman, whose book "Germany Must Perish!" was cited by the mayor of Hannover, Germany, in his eviction notice to Jews of that city, said today "this is just a flimsy pretext for another of the innate cruelties of the German people."

The author said "I don't think it was my book that prompted this barbarity. They employed every possible German cruelty against the Jews long before my book was published."

Kaufman added:

"In July the Nazis claimed that President Roosevelt wrote my book, although I have never met Mr. Roosevelt. Last week the Nazis claimed that the President ordered the destroyer Greer to fire upon their submarine which is another German 'ersatz' truth."

Hanover's Evicted Jews Herded Into Mortuary Hall

Hanover, Germany, Sept. 8 (AP)—German authorities began herding Hanover's Jews into the mortuary hall of the Jewish cemetery here tonight following the Mayor's order evicting them from their homes on twenty-four hours' notice.

Scores of men, women and children were conducted to this fast-crowding provisional abode. The eviction orders also provided for the sale of their property, the proceeds to be turned over to them "at a given time."

Cite Kaufman Book

The orders cited, as one reason for the ousters, a book written by "the Jew Kaufmann in New York" (presumably "Germany Must Perish" by Theodore N. Kaufman), demanding "sterilization of all Germans and employment of German soldiers as coolies in foreign lands."

[In Newark, N. J., Kaufman called the reference to his book "a flimsy pretext for another of the innate cruelties of the German people. They employed every possible German cruelty against the Jews long before my book was published," he added.]

The Hanover Mayor's eviction order said: SEP 8 1941

"To Jew ——:

"Eviction order:

"Jew dwelling ——:

"The present war has been forced upon Germany by the Jewry of other countries.

"The enemy air force attacks open towns and unloads explosive and incendiary bombs indiscriminately on the civil population. (Hanover has been bombed several times by the Royal Air Force.)

"The Jew Kaufmann in New York demands the sterilization of all Germans and the employment of German soldiers as coolies in foreign lands.

"In order to relieve the distressed situation caused by the war, I see myself compelled immediately to narrow down the space available to Jews in this city. I therefore demand that you quit your present abode immediately.

"You must leave your house keys with your police precinct headquarters."

Bans Wearing of Decorations

BERLIN, Sept. 8 (AP).—All Jews in Germany will be forbidden after Sept. 15 to wear decorations, orders or other evidences of honors conferred upon them, a decree issued by the Ministry of the Interior ruled today. This applies even to Jewish heroes of the last World War who have worn their Iron Crosses up to now.

Capt. Picking, a native of Baltimore and a resident of Falmouth Foreside, Portland, Me., was en route to London to become Assistant United States Naval Attache. He was commander of the submarine O-10 during the world war and won the Navy Cross for heroic action as well as the Victory Medal with submarine clasp.

The other American killed was Charles Alvan Spence of Little Neck, L. I., flight commander of the plane.

BRITAIN LAUNCHES A GO-SLOW WEEK

Urges Occupied Countries to Reduce Production.

London, Sept. 8 (A. P.).—Col. Britton, radio leader of the V-for-Victory campaign, called on the workers of German occupied lands to start a "go slow week" today "to reduce production to the lowest possible limit to slow down the German war machine."

The Netherlands news agency of the Dutch Government-in-exile announced that anti-Nazi resistance had reached a new high in the Netherlands with assassination of a sergeant of the Holland storm troops. He died on Friday after having been stabbed in the neck during a Nazi parade at Utrecht. The Dutch agency quoted the German controlled Netherlands radio as authority for this report.

A similar attack occurred at Utrecht on June 14, it was said, when a follower of the Dutch Nazi party, National Socialistische Beweging, was knifed.

The Dutch agency said that an increasingly prevalent form of Dutch resistance is violation of blackout regulations. The Hague's Police Commissioner was said to have threatened to cut off gas and electricity from homes where the rules are not rigidly obeyed.

During August the current was stopped in 485 Dutch homes and 7,244 fines imposed for such violations, according to the German-controlled newspaper Algemeen Handelsblad.

SHANGHAI'S BLACK MARKET PASSES

SEP 8 1941

It Recently Quoted Chinese Dollar Above 4 Cents.

Shanghai, Sept. 8 (A. P.).—Shanghai's foreign exchange black market disappeared today as the Anglo-American Chinese currency stabilization board took new steps to strengthen and control the exchange value of the Chinese dollar.

By agreement with the board fourteen American, British, Dutch and Chinese banks which were licensed to do exchange business under the recent freezing regulations have refused to sell foreign exchange pending clarification of the board's orders. They continued to buy American dollars, however, at the board's official rate of 18.82 Chinese dollars for one American dollar, as against Saturday's black market rate of 20.50.

Licensed banks were informed the board would grant exchange at official rates for the importation of such legitimate products as rice, gasoline, oil products, coal, tobacco leaf, various foodstuffs, machinery, chemicals and automobiles.

American business men in Shanghai were placed in a similar position to that of Americans in Tokio with a limitation of $200 a month upon remittances abroad to meet essential requirements such as insurance payments.

The board's action was apparently intended to prevent leaks to Japanese or Axis interests of stabilization funds and to make sure no Shanghai imports could be re-exported to Japan.

Last Black Market Price.

The last quotation for the Chinese dollar in the so-called black market was a trifle above 4 cents last Friday. Abolition of this unofficial exchange market followed a recent appeal by Secretary Morgenthau to American and to foreign banks to co-operate with the Chinese currency stabilization fund for which the United States indirectly puts up a portion of the money needed for its operations.

BRAZIL OBSERVES 119TH FREE YEAR

Vargas Calls for National State of Alertness.

Rio de Janeiro, Sept. 8 (A. P.).—Brazil marked her 119th anniversary of independence yesterday with a parade of mechanized equipment recently acquired from the United States, and heard President Getulio Vargas call for a national state of alertness.

About 20,000 troops paraded, showing ten medium tanks, twenty-three baby tanks, more than 200 trucks, 200 motorcycles and other equipment.

President Vargas said Brazil was preparing "for the worst eventuality."

"Only thus will we be in condition to mobilize at any moment our material resources and moral values for our own defense or in the function of our promises for Pan-American co-operation," he said.

Washington, Sept. 8 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt has sent a message to President Getulio Vargas asserting that the cordial relations between the United States and Brazil were a "vindication of those principles" on which the world of the future must be based.

The message, on the occasion of Brazil's 119th anniversary of independence, was dispatched yesterday. It was separate from a presidential statement read in Mr. Roosevelt's behalf by Carlos Martins, the Brazilian Ambassador, on a short-wave radio broadcast to Brazil.

The agreement would be similar to those already made by Bolivia, Brazil, Ecuador and Venezuela and which are contemplated by other South American countries in an effort to keep the Western Hemisphere's warmaking materials in this hemisphere.

A United States offer, disclosed in Washington today, to buy the full Argentine mineral production is the third of four major steps toward a United States-Argentine agreement.

The first was Congressional action taken in the recent defense law and the second was an executive decree, effective this month, controlling exports.

The fourth will be to fix a price below current Japanese bids, but which will guarantee long-term revenue, whereas Japanese buying is sporadic.

He has been on the temporary retirement list since his arrest on the plot charge.

Buenos Aires, Sept. 8—Argentina and the United States are near an agreement which will close one of the few remaining routes over which Axis powers get Western Hemisphere materials vital to defenses on this side of the Atlantic, authorized sources said today.

A contract under which the United States would buy all Argentine-produced defense minerals—some of which now are reaching Germany by way of the Italian South Atlantic Air Service and by ship to Japan—still has to be signed, but these informants said "the signature may come any day."

Roosevelt Premonition Revealed By Pastor

SEP 8 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 8—The rector of the church at which President Roosevelt and his mother have worshiped for many years disclosed today that the President came to Hyde Park this week end on a premonition that he must see his mother at once.

The Rev. Frank Wilson, of St. James' Episcopal Church, said that shortly after the President's mother died yesterday Mr. Roosevelt told him that he must have had a hunch, for it wasn't until the last moment that he suddenly changed his plans and decided to come home this week end.

Intended To Wait A Week

The President had intended to come next week, not this, the Rev. Mr. Wilson said, because he had been home only last week. But the other night he suddenly felt that he could not wait; that he must see his mother at once.

The Rev. Mr. Wilson spoke of the strong bond that existed between the President and his mother, and said that one of the last things Mrs. Roosevelt said to him before she left for Campobello early in the summer was "I must take care of myself. I can't let anything happen to me now, because I must not add any burden to the many he (the President) is carrying now."

OTTAWA, Sept. 8 (CP).—Munitions Minister Howe today announced an order-in-council curtailing production of passenger automobiles for sale in Canada in 1942 to approximately 44 per cent of the 1940 total.

The government reserved the right to restrict or prohibit entirely the production of automobiles.

In 1940, Mr. Howe said, production ran at an average of 11,000 cars a month for the first seven months, and at an average of 3,700 a month for the remaining months.

MRS. ROOSEVELT'S FUNERAL IS TODAY

President's Mother To Be Carried To Grave By Residents Of Estate

SEP 8 1941

Chief Executive Reported To Be Bearing Up "Very Well" Under Shock

[By the Associated Press]

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 8—Men from the family estate will bear Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, 86-year-old mother of the Chief Executive, to her grave tomorrow, just as another generation of workmen did her husband before her.

Simple Episcopal services, omitting a eulogy, will be held at 2 P. M. in the big, comfortable library of the Roosevelt ancestral home. The mother who saw her only son inaugurated three times as President of the United States will be buried in the churchyard of St. James' Church, where she worshiped for more than half a century.

Flood Of Condolences

Heads of nations throughout the world. American officialdom and plain, common citizens continued to tax communications facilities with messages of condolence. They began coming by the hundreds soon after Mrs. Roosevelt died at 11.15 A. M. yesterday, with her son beside her bed.

The President was described as bearing up "very well" under the shock of his mother's death and as being very grateful that he had been able to have a final reunion with her.

Mr. Roosevelt was alone today with his family and with his grief. An American flag flying at half-staff from the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library, near Hyde Park House, was the only visible evidence of his sorrow.

Few To Attend Funeral

The final arrangements for the funeral emphasized the Chief Executive's desire for privacy. He preferred that not even his closest friends be present to share his bereavement, so attendance will be restricted to relatives and to those who live on the 1,200-acre estate. Reporters will not be present.

It was as Franklin D. Roosevelt, the individual, rather than as the President of a nation, that Mr. Roosevelt bore his sorrow. Yet the duties of his office intruded into the privacy he sought.

White House officials placed before him, reluctantly, papers demanding his immediate attention. One official remarked, "his job goes on."

To Lie Beside Husband

The Rev. Frank R. Wilson, rector at St. James, will conduct the services. A choir of eight voices will sing two of Mrs. Roosevelt's favorite hymns, "Abide With Me" and "O Love That Wilt Not Let Me Go."

The President's mother will be buried in the churchyard beside her husband, James, who preceded her in death by forty-one years.

The last request of the President's father was that men on the estate be his pallbearers. The decision to follow the same procedure again illustrated the love of the Roosevelts for the traditions of the family and their own Hudson valley.

County Flags Lowered

Flags on all public buildings of Dutchess county were lowered to half-staff. Mrs. Roosevelt had many interests in the county and knew many of its residents well She was associated with several local charitable and cultural organizations and she gave this drowsy village a library in 1926 as a memorial to her husband.

The President's mother died after an acute circulatory collapse induced by her advanced age. Knowing that mother was not well, Mr. Roosevelt arrived from Washington Saturday morning and had several visits with her before her condition became worse and she entered a state of coma twelve hours before her death.

Meanwhile, in Washington, the Senate adjourned out of respect for Mrs. Roosevelt. A resolution expressing sorrow and extending sympathy to the President and members of his family was adopted unanimously.

Campobello Memorial Service

Sorrowing residents of Campobello Island, N. B., will go to St. Anne's Episcopal Church tomorrow morning to attend memorial services for President Roosevelt's mother, who a week before her death had donated money to the little, brown wooden church in which she worshiped during her visits here.

Mrs. Roosevelt was the "grand old lady" of that Canadian island where she spent nearly every summer for almost sixty years.

Only eight days ago Mrs. Roosevelt made her last crossing of the narrow strait between the island and Lubec, Maine, ending her summer stay.

Petain, Darlan Send Sympathy

Vichy, Sept. 8 (AP)—Marshal Petain and Vice-Premier Darlan cabled messages of sympathy today to President Roosevelt on his mother's death.

Petain recalled that he had met Mrs. Roosevelt several times in Paris and "so much appreciated her charm and vivacity of spirit."

WAR SUPPLIES OF U. S. FLOWING AROUND WORLD

And Big Spurt Is Expected as New Plants Open Next Spring.

ROOSEVELT MAY REPORT SOON

His Last Statement on June 11 Showed 11 Per Cent of Funds in Hand Allocated.

By D. HAROLD OLIVER

Washington, Sept. 8 (A. P.).—Defense officials predicted today that American war supplies would be flowing in greatly increased amounts to opponents of the Axis all over the world in another six months.

Already, supplies are moving to China to help build a railroad supply line supplementing the Burma truck route; to Britain for all purposes, to the Middle East, the Netherlands East Indies, Russia, the Free French forces, and Polish forces training in Canada.

The real magnitude and nature of the vast program, defense officials said, will begin to be realized only when American production takes the sharp curve upward that is expected next spring as big factories reach a high tempo and the volume of supplies is swelled by the output of small plants and back-alley machine shops now being lined up for defense orders.

Small Expenditure Reported.

Thus far, President Roosevelt has limited public announcement of lease-lend operations largely to a report he sent to Congress last June 11, covering the period from March 11 to May 31. This report was very general in nature and showed only $75,000,000 of goods transferred under the act and $4,277,000,000 allocated.

His second-quarter report is due this week. It is expected, like the first, to withhold details which would benefit the Axis Powers, but to show that approximately 90 per cent of the $7,000,000,000 has been allocated, compared with a little more than 60 per cent as of May 31.

About $15,000,000 worth of rolling stock and road-bed materials are just beginning to reach China for a railroad from Burma to a point in the Chinese interior. This will supplement the Burma road that has served as the southern supply route for China since her seaports were closed by the Japanese.

While details have been withheld, it is understood the British have started a section of this railroad to the southern Chinese border and the Chinese will extend it some 300 miles northward through mountainous territory.

Military Mission Named.

Manufacturing equipment, raw materials and planes also are going to China; an American military mission has been named, and technicians, road builders and truckers have already been there and returned.

Ships, tanks, planes, ammunition and other supplies are moving to Great Britain in growing amounts. In his first report, the President said that relatively more and more heavy and medium bombers would be shuttled across the Atlantic; that 2,000,000 tons of cargo ships and oil tankers were being made immediately available to Great Britain, and that $550,000,000 had been allocated for lease-lend ships.

American oil is moving to Vladivostok across the Pacific despite Japanese protests. A mission headed by W. Averell Harriman and Major-Gen. James H. Burns has been named to go to Moscow for consultations with the Russians and British on what Russia wants from the United States.

Aid to Russia will not come under the lease-lend act at present. The Soviets are expected to pay in gold, manganese and other raw materials. RFC loans against Russian materials may figure in these transactions.

Dutch Indies Pay.

American supplies are moving to the Middle East in substantial volume, and are expected to pick up. A Pan American Airways project to ferry planes across the South Atlantic to Africa and thence to the Suez area is expected to prove an important factor.

In the face of Japanese cries of encirclement, American planes and small arms and other supplies are moving to the Dutch East Indies for cash.

Officials say that American lease-lend supplies are going indirectly through the British to Gen. Charles de Gaulle's Free French forces, as well as to other unnamed beneficiaries in the same manner. The lease-lend act permits such indirect aid with presidential approval.

Commander George Cabanier said last week at San Diego that he had been selected by Gen. de Gaulle to seek lease-lend supplies to assist in organizing the defenses of Tahiti, the New Hebrides, and New Caledonia Islands in the Pacific.

The President announced last week that he had authorized transfer under the lease-lend law of guns and other supplies for Polish volunteers training at Owen Sound and Windsor, Ont.

FILM INDUSTRY 'PLEADS GUILTY' AS HITLER FOES

SEP 8 1941

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8 (AP) — Wendell L. Willkie today told a senate committee about to undertake an inquiry into war propaganda that the movie industry was ready to plead guilty to being "opposed to the Hitler regime" and to co-operate with the American government in matters of national defense.

Questioning the legal authority of the committee to conduct the hearingsit will begiu tomorrow, Willkie, as counsel for the movie industry, said in a letter to Chairman Clark (D-Ida) that he had come to the conclusions the inquiry group "intends to inquire whether or not the motion picture industry, as a whole, and its leading executives, as individuals, are opposed to Nazi dictatorship in Germany."

"If this is the case, there need be no investigation. The motion picture industry and its executives are opposed to the Hitler regime in Germany; they have watched with horror the destruction of a free life within Germany and the ruthless invasions of other countries by Naxis.

ABHOR HITLER REGIME

"On behalf of the motion picture industry and its personnel, I wish to put on the record this simple truth: We make no pretense of friendliness to Nazi Germany nor to the objectives and goals of this ruthless dictatorship. We abhor everything which Hitler represents."

Meanwhile, Senator Clak (D-Mo) with Senator Nye (R-ND) a sponsor of the investigation resolution, told reporters that "any time you go to a motion picture show you can see the propaganda to get us into war."

"There will be no effort in this investigation to impose censorship or restrict the freedom of the press," he added, "but we do want to expose the forces which are trying to get us into war. We want to find out whether there has been any conspiracy between motion picture producers or radio commentators to get us in, and if so, who is responsible."

The investigation proposal would include radio in the proposed field of inquiry. The Senate has authorized no investigation, and the Interstate Commerce sub-committee technically will hold hearings to determine whether an inquiry should be conducted. Two score witnesses already have been summoned, however, and the hearings are expected to develop into a ful-fledged investigation of the movie industry.

QUESTIONS PROBE LEGALITY

In contending that the committee was proceeding with "doubtful legal authority," Willkie said "the investigation and harassment of free expression in the United States is a procedure, once accepted, that may be applied to the theatre, to newspapers and magazines, to the radio, to publications of all kinds, and finally to the rights of public officials and private citizens to speak freely."

But, he said, the movie industry realized that its critics would testify.

"So we shall appear at your proposed hearings," he continued. "We shall do so under protest. We are realists and we know that to protect the good name and prestige of the motion picture industry, we have little choice."

And, if the cmomittee will permit, he said, "we will offer witnesses with a first hand knowledge of Germany—men and women who have actually lived in Germany under Nazism. They will prove to you that the motion picture industry pictures Nazi Germany as it is.

"We ask permission to present witnesses with first hand knowledge—again men and women who have lived in England during the war. They will prove to you that the industry's portrayal of the magnificent courage of the English people is correct."

RECORD FOOD CROP SOUGHT FOR 1942

Administration Asks U. S. Farmers To Provide Huge Increases In Edibles

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 8—With the assertion that "this is our war," Claude Wickard, Secretary of Agriculture, called upon farmers today for an unprecedented production in 1942 of vital food supplies which he said would "win the war and write the peace."

Promising to prevent any sharp price slump due to increased production, the Agriculture Department here made public its program for more foodstuffs next year while Wickard, in a speech broadcast from San Francisco, explained that it was designed to build a "stockpile" to feed this country and "those resisting aggression."

Hitler Or Us

"It is perfectly plain now that it's Hitler or us," Wickard said. He added that the proposed "stockpiles" would serve not only to feed the United States and Britain but "to give the starving, conquered people of Europe something to hope for, something that will spur them on in their resistance to the aggressor."

"I know that if I were a Frenchman or a Dutchman," Wickard continued, "and I looked across the Channel and saw that the British were still eating pretty well, eating good American food, while I was living on cat meat as somewhat of a delicacy I'd be inclined to rise up and try to get in on some of that American food."

Announcing the 1942 program, Wickard said it would assure "plenty of the commodities for which there is increased need while continuing to hold in check the production of commodities of which we already have large reserves." In the latter category are wheat, cotton and tobacco.

Fields For Expansion

Wickard called particularly for expanded production of hogs, eggs, milk, cheese and chickens, and announced the Agriculture Department would support prices for these commodities until December 31, 1942, at not less than eighty-five per cent. of parity. All are selling now above the parity price—that level at which the commodity has the same purchasing power it had in the 1909-14 period.

Wickard said the expanded farm program would not repeat "the mistakes of the first World War which brought a long series of difficulties for the farm people."

No New Dustbowls

"The fact that we are asking for greatly increased production of some commodities does not mean that the lid is off on production of all commodities," he continued. ". . . We are not going to have to plow up the hills and plains to get it.

"We have adequate reserves, feed grains for increased production of livestock products and it will not be necessary to increase total crop acreage next year."

Wickard said the most urgent need was for more milk, adding:

"We need to consume more dairy products in this country for improved health and strength and the British will need tremendous quantities of cheese, evaporated milk and dried skim milk."

Big Milk Boost Asked

He called for the production of 125,000,000,000 pounds of milk in 1942, or about 8,200,000,000 pounds above the estimated 1941 production. The goal for eggs was set at 4,000,000,000 dozen, an increase of about 330,000,000 dozen over this year.

An increase of 7,700,000 in the number of hogs slaughtered was fixed as the pork goal for 1942, while increases also were asked in the production of beef and veal, chickens, lamb and mutton.

The 1942 acreage goals for cotton and tobacco were little changed from 1941. The wheat goal was placed at between 50 to 55 million acres, compared with an estimate of 63,503,000 this year.

The report said there probably would be no acreage limit on 1942 sugar production. This year the estimated acreage was 285,000 for cane sugar and 800,000 for beet sugar.

Increased acreage goals were set for sweet potatoes, potatoes and commercial vegetables.

Since fruit production can not be quickly increased, the department said emphasis would be on better distribution and prevention of waste.

Answer All Mail In 48 Hours, New Priority Chief Demands

OPM's Nelson Slashes Red Tape, Brings In Mail Order Clerks To Clear Backlog

SEP 8 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 8—To clear out a vast accumulation of requests from businessmen seeking preference ratings to obtain materials, Donald M. Nelson, now handling priorities matters for the Office of Production Management, brought in a corps of correspondence experts from private industry and set them to work for long hours over the week end.

The experts, borrowed presumably from the mail-order house, of which Nelson formerly was executive vice-president, toiled over several thousand applications side by side with high officials of the priorities division in the spacious OPM board room and in an old police station where some sections of the division have been housed.

As a result, it was announced, several thousand pieces of mail were cleared up and "the division of priorities is back on nearly normal schedule."

Nelson instructed commodity division chiefs that from now on every application should be handled within forty-eight hours. As a reminder, he directed that colored slips be attached to every letter received, a different color for every day of the week.

"When a businessman files an application or sends us an inquiry, he deserves a prompt answer," Nelson said. "Even if we cannot give him what he wants, he has a right to know where he stands without undue delay."

A terse description was given of the technique by which the successor to E. R. Stettinius, Jr., as priorities director cleaned up the mail by cutting red tape. A special staff turned each approved application into a legal preference rating. This saved the time formerly required for making out a formal priorities certificate.

RUSSIANS DIVIDE

Mission Split to Speed Its Work Here.

Spokane, Wash., Sept. 8 (A. P.).—The personnel of the Russian aviation mission, which arrived in Seattle last week after an 8,000-mile flight from Mossow via Alaska, has been split to speed its work.

Thirty-seven of the Soviet flyers and technicians arrived in Spokane and told Brig.-Gen. John B. Brooks, acting commander of the Second Air Force, that the remainder of the group—twelve including Anton M. Fedetov of the Russian embassy in Washington—had gone to Los Angeles.

Bertroff Ivanov, spokesman of the group which came to Spokane by train, said the section which went to Los Angeles included Brig.-Gen. Michael M. Gromov, head of the mission. Ivanov declined to discuss plans or the party.

Previously it had been reported that the mission would come to Spokane in a body and fly to Washington in army transports.

U. S. Attorney Makes Charge As Spy Ring Trial Opens In Brooklyn

SEP 8 1941

16 Men Before Court; Government Witness Tells Of Threat From Gestapo

By PAT Mc Grady

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 8—Harold M. Kennedy, United States Attorney, opening the trial in Brooklyn Federal Court of sixteen men charged with participation in a huge German spy ring, declared today that particulars of this nation's treasured Norden bombsight had been given to Germany in 1938.

He said in his address to the jury that Hermann Lang, a defendant who was final inspector for the Norden company, went to Germany in that year.

"We will prove," Kennedy declared, "that while there he furnished particulars about the bombsight; that after he returned he continued to feed out information on the bombsight. We will prove that his compensation on deposit in Germany is some 10,000 marks."

Innocence Claimed

Defense counsel denied that their clients had participated in any conspiracy or that they violated any laws in sending any information to Germany.

Frank J. Walsh, counsel for six defendants, asserted that "we've got a right to a free transmission of intelligence to countries with which we are not at war," and that "there is no law which says you may not aid Britain or you may not aid Germany." He asked the jury to consider whether "we are being bound by the Administration's policies or laws" and whether the conspiracy "originated in Germany or in the offices of the Federal Bureau of Investigation."

Threatened By Gestapo

A Government witness, William G. Sebold, 42, testified that Gestapo agents in 1939 threatened "Fertig Machen"—which he translated as preparing him for burial—because of his reluctance to disclose American aviation secrets.

After conferences with the American consulate in Cologne, Sebold said he wired the Gestapo member that he "accepted the proposition one hundred per cent."

In a separate case in Manhattan today, a Federal grand jury indicted Mrs. Helen Pauline Mayer, 25, of Ridgewood, Queens, on charges of conspiring to aid a foreign power by obtaining information about United States army camps. She was arrested Friday.

NAZI THEORIES SEEN BRINGING OWN DOOM

Berle Calls Plan In Master Race "Scientifically Silly" And Worse Militarily

Assistant Secretary Of War Puts Faith In Little People Of Europe

SEP 8 1941

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 8—Adolf A. Berle, Jr., Assistant Secretary of State, tonight described the Nazi plan for creating a "master race" as "scientifically silly" and infinitely worse politically and militarily.

Addressing the Conference of Science, Philosophy and Religion at Columbia University, Berle said that the ultimate controls in modern in life lie with the Little People who labor with their hands on the "mechanisms which keep civilization going. Whenever they stop wanting to do these things or whenever the civilization they are supposed to operate with the sweat of their brows ceases to be an expression of the faith they have, the machine stops going.

"By excluding five sixths of the people in its chosen areas," he said, "it arrayed against itself the forces it most needed."

"This is what is happening on the continent of Europe today," he went on. "There is not a single fraction of the entire mechanism which its Nazi conquerors can trust. The more intelligent of those conquerors are desperately seeking for some exit from a situation which they themselves have created.

"Yet there can be no exit so long as they profess and practice an outlaw faith which by their own choice cuts them off as effectively from most of mankind as though they were lepers."

Henderson Denies Dies' Red Charge

SEP 8 1941

Declares He'll Eat Any Organization He Belonged to on Treasury Steps'

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8 (AP).—Rep. Martin Dies last night made public his charge against Price Administrator Henderson, revealing that he had urged President Roosevelt to dismiss Henderson and four members of his staff on the ground that they held or condoned Communist views.

Henderson, at a special press conference, declared that he would "eat on the Treasury steps any Communist organization" to which he belonged or ever did belong.

The charges against the aides, he said, would be turned over to the Civil Service Commission, and if the commission held them to be unfit he would discharge them as soon as he could get to a telephone. He added, however, that "summary punitive action on the basis of one man's opinion is as un-American a procedure as anything to which Mr. Dies has yet given his attention."

Aides Listed

Dies, who recently said in a House speech that Henderson had connections with several "front organizations or transmission belts" of the Communist Party, leveled his accusations against these employees of the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply:

Robert A. Brady (described by Dies as "head consultant" but said by Henderson to be an employee of the OPACS consumers division and responsible to the head of that division). His annual salary is $7,500.

His wife, Mildred Edie Brady, principal specialist in consumer education, $5,600 a year.

Tom Tippett, assistant chief of the rent section, $5,600.

Dewey H. Palmer, consultant at $20 a day.

Dies added that E. J. Lever, principal field representative of the OPM labor division, with a $5,600-a-year salary, also was "affiliated with outstanding Communists."

"Not Responsible"

Last month Henderson remarked at a House Banking Committee hearing that Dies was not a "responsible member of Congress," adding that he would not "fire anyone because Martin Dies or anyone else highly or lowly placed casts reflections on him."

Lever, in a statement issued from his headquarters in Philadelphia, said, "With unerring accuracy Dies has often picked some of the most consistent anti-Communists in the labor movement and charged them with being Communists in the public press."

Lever, a former machinist in an aircraft factory, was a CIO steel organizer before he joined the OPM.

$196,960,030 In Arms Exports Are Approved

State Department Announces That $69,072,276 Worth Were Shipped In Month

SEP 8 1941

Washington, Sept. 8 (AP).—The State Department announced today that arms, ammunition and implements of war valued at $196,960,030 were licensed for export during July and that $69,072,276 worth were actually shipped.

For the seven months ending with July the licensed total was $1,057,976,191, of which $381,403,432 were actually exported. The countries to which the articles were sent were not announced.

In a separate announcement the department said that general licenses authorizing exportations to Canada, Great Britain, northern Ireland, Newfoundland and Iceland had been amended to include shellac and titanium.

AAA Urges Lifting 7-7 Gas Sales Ban

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8 (AP).—The American Automobile Association urged a Senate investigating committee today to recommend discontinuance of the night ban on gasoline sales in Eastern states, but a spokesman for filling station operators asked its continuance.

Meanwhile, in a step to facilitate use of railroad tank cars to ship petroleum east from the southwestern oil fields, the Association of American Railroads applied to the Interstate Commerce commission for authority to make emergency reductions in the freight rates and asked speedy consideration of the application.

At the Senate committee hearing, however, Senator Downey (D. Calif.) contended that J. J. Pelley, president of the carriers' association, had "overjudged what the railroads can do." Pelley's statement that 20,000 tank cars were available to move gasoline to the East, Downey said, was based on a canvass made a year ago and since that time consumption has increased 11 per cent, due to the defense program. Downey recommended construction of pipelines as the best solution.

Russell E. Singer, general manager of the AAA, a motorists' organization, told the committee the 7 p. m. to 7 a. m. closing of filling stations "is not in the public interest and is not justified as a means of gasoline conservation" and that none of the resultant savings in operating costs to the stations were being passed along to consumers.

"Gasoline consumption figures are concrete evidence that the night closing of stations has not had the effect of reducing consumption," he said.

Singer also urged that the committee "recognize that the passenger automobile is no longer a vehicle of pleasure." He said surveys showed that 77 per cent of all trips by automobile were for necessary purposes, such as in connection with earning a livelihood, or closely related business pursuits.

Benjamin Jacoby, president of the Associated Gas Retailers of Philadelphia, said the dealers were "happy" under the curfew arrangement and that it would mean a 10 to 12 per cent curtailment in consumption. He also declared that the price standards for gasoline set by Leon Henderson, price administrator, in 40 cities "do not allow for a living profit" in some cases.

U. S.-Canadian Defense Board To Meet Today

New York, Sept. 8 (AP)—Mayor F. H. LaGuardia today announced the United States-Canadian Permanent Joint Defense Board would hold a one-day conference tomorrow at Summer City Hall.

In addition to the Mayor, chairman of the American Section, the United States will be represented by Capt. Harry W. Hill and Commander Forrest P. Sherman, of the navy; Maj. Gen. Stanley D. Embrick and Lieut. Col. Clayton Bissell, of the army, and John D. Hickerson.

Representing Canada will be Col. O. M. Biggar, chairman; Capt. H. Eried, of the navy; Air Commander A. A. L. Cuffe, Brigadier Maurice Pope and Dr. H. L. Keenleyside.

Windsors Plan to Visit Washington This Month

To Pass Day in Capital on Way To Alberta Ranch

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8 (AP).—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor will pass twenty-four hours in Washington Sept. 25 and 26 en route to their ranch in Alberta, Canada, the British Embassy announced today. The Duke, who is Governor of the Bahamas, and his consort, the former Wallis Warfield, of Baltimore, will stay at the embassy.

When they will leave Nassau and the means of travel northward, a spokesman in Nassau said, had not been settled. It was considered likely they would go to Miami by Pan American clipper, then continue by train to Washington.

The Windsors, who completed their first year in Nassau Aug. 17, plan an extended vacation at his Pekisko ranch, near Calgary. The Governor and his Duchess were away today on a week-end trip to near by Governour's Harbor, on the island of Eleuthera. They are due back at Government House tomorrow.

S. AMERICA FEARS U. S. AIMS: JESSUP

International Law Expert, Home After Air Crash, Says Old Policy Must be Barred

NEW YORK, Sept. 8 (AP)—An international law authority, who on a South American tour was the hero of an airplane crash, arrived home today and reported that some Latin-Americans were uneasy about this country's post-war plans.

Suffering from shock, exhaustion, and deep bone bruises of both legs, Dr. Philip C. Jessup left the Moore-McCormack liner Brazil in a wheelchair and was taken to the Medical Center.

"There is, in some friendly and unfriendly minds, a natural uneasiness concerning what we will do with our tremendous power after the war," he said in a statement issued by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, of which he is director of the international law division.

"A decade of the good neighbor policy has helped enormously to overcome the results of mistaken policies of the past, but the post-war situation will be a great challenge to our intelligent self-restraint.

"We shall meet that challenge successfully because the government and the people of the United States are irrevocably committed to the sound conclusion that the old stupid type of imperialistic policy can never be used again."

Dr. Jessup, who also is professor of international law at Columbia University, said he had noted in a year's tour of 15 of the 20 Latin-American republics as an observer for the Carnegie Endowment that the people there were receiving a misleading impression of this country through Mexican movies.

"We are so accustomed to them, we do not realize that millions of people form their impressions of us exclusively from this source," he said. "Naturally they assume we are chiefly a nation of gangsters and divorcees. * * *

"Hollywood has a national responsibility as our principal foreign advertisement; I have heard that steps are being taken to meet this responsibility. I hope so."

Dr. Jessup declined comment on the wreck of the Pan American air liner in the Brazilian jungles near Sao Paulo Aug. 19—an incident in which only five of 13 passengers survived and to which he guided a rescue party.

To bring help, Dr. Jessup and the plane steward, Hugh Davies, cut their way through at least 15 miles of dense jungle with only a penknife.

Upon his arrival in New York, Dr. Jessup was greeted by his brother, John B. Jessup of Wilmington, president of the Equitable Trust Company.

PLANT TO PRODUCE SYNTHETIC RUBBER

Defense Project Will Put Out 10,000 Tons Yearly.

SEP 8 1941

Naugatuck, Conn., Sept. 8.—The United States Rubber Company broke ground here today for New England's first great plant to help supply the nation with synthetic rubber. F. B. Davis Jr., president of the rubber company, and Kenneth Goodyear, descendant of Charles Goodyear, turned the first spade of earth.

With a capacity already increased to 10,000 tons per year, four times that originally planned, the plant is being built under an agreement of lease between the rubber company and the Defense Plant Corporation. The latter is advancing funds for construction, with the company in charge of operations.

Mr. Davis said, during the ground-breaking ceremony:

"Synthetic rubber is especially important to the nation at this time for two reasons. First, it has properties superior in many respects to those of natural rubber that make its use extremely valuable for numerous defense products. For example, synthetic rubber's superior resistance to gas, oil and acids make its use all-important in self-sealing gas tanks, fuel hose, tank linings, machine mountings, packings and many other allied products.

"Second, in the event the country's supply of crude rubber should be cut off, synthetic rubber could be substituted for defense articles and most civilian products utilizing rubber. Let us be sure, however, that we are not misled into believing there is enough synthetic rubber to make possible such a substitution immediately.

"There were less than 2,000 tons produced in the United States in 1939, about 5,000 tons in 1940, and probably not more than 10,000 tons will be manufactured in 1941. These amounts are only a fraction of the country's tremendous consumption of 600,000 to 800,000 tons of crude rubber a year.

"However, the Government and the industry are steadily attaching more importance to synthetic rubber. An indication of this fact is that we were originally requested to build a plant with a capacity of 2,500 tons a year, and before negotiations were concluded this amount had been increased to 10,000 tons a year. Should we be asked to expand production in the future, we will be ready to do so."

Mr. Davis said his company is putting every effort behind construction, and it is expected the plant will be ready for operation within a year.

Science Today: Outlook For 'Magic' Fuel Good

SEP 8 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Atlantic City, Sept. 8—The more ordinary motor gasoline the United States produces the more one hundred-octane fuel there will be for American fighting planes, Dr. Thomas Midgley, Jr., said today.

One hundred octane is the special gasoline which America alone possesses. It is a by-product, Dr. Midgley explained, of ordinary gasoline. It is too expensive to make, he added, except as a by-product, and so requires huge production of regular fuel.

Exports Would Help

Should the United States export enough of the ordinary gasoline to Britain, Russia, China and other nations, such an outlet would help out on any deficiency of American motor gasoline consumption.

Other chemists attending the American Chemical Society meeting which began today said that no one can predict how much exports will increase, but that the possibilities are vast.

Dr. Midgley today received one of chemistry's highest honors, the Priestley medal, for his inventions of tetraethyl lead and of safe refrigerants, and his part in perfecting vulcanizing processes to lengthen the life of rubber and for extracting from sea water the bromine now used in a majority of American auto engines.

Aids Plane Efficiency

The special American fighting gasoline adds about twenty-five per cent. to performance of a plane. This, Dr. Midgley explained, means not simply that a plane can fly twenty-five per cent. faster but that it can take off with a greater load, or fly farther at cruising speeds, and fly at considerably greater altitudes and also fight at higher altitudes.

No other nation, he said, has this fuel because no other produces the enormous amounts of reguiar gasoline to make it possible. The 100-octane is a by-product of what is known as refiner gas, particularly during the cracking process of gasoline manufacture.

Even better than this magic fuel is gasoline of much greater power, now in the laboratory stage, which can be made as a further by-product of ordinary gasoline.

Engines have to be redesigned to use the high-power American fuel. Its benefits, Dr. Midgley said, apply equally to liquid or air-cooled engines.

Bad Raids Over, 2 Britons Believe

New York, Sept. 8 (AP)—Confident that the worst bombings of England are over and that Germany will not attempt an invasion, two British mothers were en route to Europe with their children today aboard the American Clipper.

They are Mrs. Thelma Leigh, 23, and her daughter, Carol Diana, 16 months, and Mrs. Pearl M. Goldman and her son, Anthony John, 18 months.

Mrs. Leigh had been in this country and Canada for fourteen months, while Dr. Goldman, a professor of sociology, had been here more than a year.

Both said they believed the Nazi menace had diminished.

Italian

ROME, Sept. 8 (AP)—An Italian High Command communiqué today:

In North Africa, on the Solum and Tobruk fronts, activity of advancing detachments and Axis artillery is reported. Installations and depots of the port of Tobruk were shelled by German batteries.

Our aviation was very active. Detachments of fighter planes attacked an enemy base at Sidi Barrani with brilliant action from low altitude, setting fire to five planes on the ground and numerous motor vehicles. Other planes and motor trucks were effectively machine-gunned.

Bombing planes hit works, fortifications, batteries and installations of the fortified town of Tobruk, causing fires. All of our planes, some of them hit, returned to their bases.

German bombers operated profitably against advanced airports and important objectives at Matruh. German fighter planes meeting an enemy formation shot down one Curtiss plane.

British planes carried out new raids on Barce and Bengazi and bombed several colonists' villages in the Cyrenaican Jebel without causing casualties. Two planes

LONDON, Tuesday, Sept. 9 (AP)—The War Office issued the following communiqué today:

For various purposes it was recently decided to send a military force to the Arctic.

In the course of operations which were carried out without enemy interference a landing was effected in Spitsbergen by mixed Canadian, British and Norwegian forces under Canadian command.

The main purpose of the landing was to prevent the enemy from utilizing for their own war purposes Spitsbergen with its rich coal mines.

Previously a proportion of the Spitzbergen coal had been at the disposal of the population of Northern Norway. But it had become known that the enemy's plan was to seize all coal available including that from Spitsbergen which would be used mainly for war transport to the Far North.

This source of fuel now has been denied to the Germans.

An immediate result of the Spitsbergen landing is that a considerable number of Norwegian miners with their families now have arrived in Great Britain to play a part in the Allied war effort there. Most of them will be joining the Norwegian forces or the Norwegian merchant marine.

Canadian personnel came from headquarters of a western infantry brigade, an Alberta regiment, a Saskatchewan regiment, a Central Ontario field ambulance and an Eastern Ontario field company.

LONDON, Sept. 8 (AP)—The Admiralty and the Air Ministry issued the following communiqué today:

A Hudson aircraft of the Coastal Command recently sighted and attacked a U-boat in the Atlantic. As a result of this attack the U-boat was forced to surface in badly damaged condition and surrendered.

A full gale was blowing and a heavy swell was running.

No ships were in the vicinity. The crew of the U-boat remained aboard their ship, which kept afloat. Meanwhile, the Hudson was relieved by a Catalina flying boat from the Coastal Command, which patrolled overhead until the arrival of His Majesty's ships.

When His Majesty's ships arrived on the scene the weather was so bad that for several hours it was impossible to lower a boat. His Majesty's ships stood by the U-boat, keeping it covered with their guns and waiting for an improvement in the weather.

Eventually the weather moderated and the U-boat was boarded by a crew from the warships and the capture was completed. The prize was taken in tow and brought safely to harbor.

An Air Ministry communiqué:

The R. A. F. last night attacked objectives at Berlin, Kiel and other places in Germany and also docks at Boulogne.

The attack on Berlin was carried out by a very powerful force in brilliant moonlight.

A great number of high explosives and incendiary bombs were dropped in the attack lasting about two hours. Great fires sprang up in the city and extensive damage was done.

Shipyards at Kiel and docks at Boulogne also were heavily bombed and good results were seen.

Four enemy night fighters were destroyed by our bombers in the course of these operations.

Twenty of our bombers are missing.

Aircraft of the Fighter Command attacked a number of enemy airdromes in occupied territory during the night. One of these aircraft is missing.

An Air Ministry communiqué tonight:

This morning one of our fighters on patrol off the Belgian coast attacked an anti-aircraft vessel. The ship was severely damaged and afterward blew up.

This afternoon Blenheims of the Bomber Command escorted by fighters attacked a number of small enemy ships in the Channel. One ship was hit and another damaged.

Two Fortress aircraft are missing from a formation which carried out a long-distance reconnaissance flight today.

CAIRO, Egypt, Sept. 8 (AP)—The Royal Air Force Middle East Command issued this communiqué today:

SEP 8 1941

Mediterranean—Aircraft of the Fleet Air Arm made a successful attack on a convoy of three medium-sized merchant vessels, protected by three destroyers, in the Mediterranean on the night of Sept. 6-7.

One merchant ship was hit three times, causing violent explosions and much black smoke. The vessel was compelled to stop and listed heavily to port. Another ship, a tanker, was hit with two torpedoes and severely damaged.

Libya—On the same night a heavy raid by R. A. F. bombers on Bengazi resulted in a number of direct hits on military stores and adjacent buildings. Barce and Berka also were attacked and buildings on the road south of Cyrene were machine-gunned.

While this raid was being carried out, aircraft of the Fleet Air Arm made a series of attacks on landing grounds at El Tmimi, El Gazala, Martuba and El Adem. Five enemy aircraft were destroyed at El Tmimi and a number of others severely damaged.

One enemy aircraft was destroyed at El Gazala and another at Martuba and considerable damage was caused to a number of other enemy machines. Fires were caused at El Adem and damage was done to buildings at a majority of these airdromes.

Enemy gun positions east of the Tobruk defenses came in for severe bombardment from aircraft of the South African Air Force.

Sicily—In Sicily on the night of Sept. 6-7 Air Arm aircraft attacked buildings on Comiso airdrome and also raided Catania and Gerbini airdromes. Enemy aircraft on the ground, in addition to being bombed, were machine-gunned and a number were made unserviceable, if not completely destroyed.

One aircraft is missing from all the operations reviewed in this communiqué.

German

BERLIN, Sept. 8 (AP)—A German High Command communiqué, issued today from "the Fuehrer's headquarters":

Finnish troops attacking east of Lake Ladoga have reached the Svir River.

In the fight against Great Britain, strong air force units last night dropped heavy and heaviest caliber bombs on military objectives on the Tyne and Humber, as well as on harbors on the British east coast and airports on the isle. Fires and explosions showed the success of these raids.

Speedboats attacked a strongly protected convoy on the British coast and sank five armed merchantmen totaling 13,500 tons.

The air force yesterday and last night destroyed three merchantmen totaling 12,000 tons off the British east coast and near the Faeroe Islands.

In the Channel region the British Air Force in day encounters lost five chaser planes and three bombers.

Naval forces downed two British bombers on the Norwegian and Dutch coasts.

British planes last night entered the region around Berlin via Western and Northern Germany. Strong defense frustrated the full effect of the raid. The civilian population suffered dead and wounded through incendiaries and explosives. Night chasers and anti-aircraft brought down fourteen and naval artillery three of the attacking bombers.

A German communiqué issued earlier:

British bombers last night carried out disturbance attacks of insignificant effect on North and Northwest Germany.

One squadron of planes headed toward Berlin, but only a restricted number was able to break through the anti-aircraft barrage.

Because of the dropping of explosive and incendiary bombs on residential sections, the civilian population suffered several dead and wounded.

There was no military or war industrial damage.

As far as can be ascertained thus far, anti-aircraft batteries and night fighters shot down nine planes.

Russian

MOSCOW, Tuesday, Sept. 9 (AP)—A Soviet Information Bureau communiqué said today:

During Sept. 8 our troops fought against the enemy along the whole front.

In the Smolensk sector fighting for the town of Elnya, near Smolensk, which lasted twenty-six days, ended in the routing of the enemy's S. S. Division, Fifteenth Infantry Division, Seventeenth Motorized Division, Tenth Tank Division, 137th Austrian Division and 178th, 292d and 268th Infantry Divisions.

Remnants of the enemy's divisions are hastily retreating in a westerly direction.

Our troops occupied the town of Elnya.

Our air force continued to deal blows to enemy troops in field operations and destroyed aircraft on his airdromes.

On Sunday night our aircraft bombed Bucharest. All our planes returned to their bases.

On Sept. 6 sixty-two German planes were destroyed in air combats and on enemy airdromes. We lost thirty-three planes.

Russian

SEP 8 1941

Moscow, Sept. 8 (AP)—The Soviet Information Bureau communique today said:

In the course of the night of September 7 our troops continued to fight the enemy along the whole front.

Our cavalry units, commanded by Batskalevitch, carried out an extensive raid in the enemy's rear. Lieutenant Sokolovsky's squadron came across a battalion of German motorized infantry which had halted in the forest. Overwhelming the Nazis by a sudden attack, the horsemen smashed the German battalion and captured a wireless station, many motor cycles, bicycles and trucks loaded with provisions and ammunition.

After this engagement, the Germans moved against Soviet cavalrymen, Panzer troops and a detachment formed of two cadet schools. The cavalrymen dismounted and accepted battle.

Senior Lieutenant Porokh and Political Instructor Orlov led their men in a vigorous charge. The fighting lasted eight hours. The Nazis lost about 300 killed and wounded. One German general was among those killed.

In a subsequent engagement the gallant cavalrymen destroyed a battalion of enemy motorized infantry and captured their headquarters. During the entire period of the raid the cavalrymen were diverting from the front large enemy forces and destroyed many trucks, armored cars, guns and a large quantity of fuel and ammunition and blew up a number of bridges.

According to incomplete figures, in these engagements the Nazis lost about 1,200 killed and 500 wounded.

In stubborn fighting Captain Kozulya's battalion on a western direction front for twenty-eight hours successfully repulsed all attacks of large enemy forces, inflicted heavy losses on them and held its position until the arrival of reinforcements.

After artillery preparation drunken Germans launched an attack. When they came close our riflemen, machine gunners and mine-throwing crews opened simultaneous fire. The enemy was repulsed.

In the course of a second attack one German battalion managed to force its way through the barricades and trenches of the first company. The commanders of the first and third companies, Sheremetyev and Zuyev, led their men in an attack. Over 150 enemy officers and men were killed and 21 surrendered.

Attempting a sham encirclement, a group of German automatic riflemen penetrated into the rear and opened fire. Sergeant-Major Shornikov with several marksmen promptly annihilated them.

At night the Germans undertook three attacks which proved abortive. In night fighting junior Lieutenant Surkov's platoon by a violent counter-attack overwhelmed a whole German company and captured twelve men. Artillery, mine-throwers and machine guns dealt the enemy crushing blows.

In fighting with Captain Kozulya's battalion, the Germans lost over 600 officers and men, 12 guns, 7 mine-throwers and 11 machine guns.

The batteries of Lieutenant Trushkin and junior Lieutenant Shevchenko smashed a German truck column. After the very first salvo, the leading German machines flew into the air. Fascists were running up and down the road, attempting to drive the remaining trucks into the forest. Then junior Lieutenant Shevchenko rolled his guns into an open position and by point blank fire began battering the Fascist column. The artillery fire destroyed thirty enemy trucks, a motor car and four motor cycles.

After the occupation of towns and villages in Soviet Estonia, German Fascists commenced the extermination of the Estonian people. The occupation of every town and village was always accompanied by plunder, violence and wholesale slaughter.

Alexander Kelgumae, from the Ravila rural district, who fled from the Fascist hell, relates: "I was in the small town of Likhula when the Fascists occupied it. The very first day the butchers shot dozens of innocent people, including 13 youths and adolescent girls."

Jansen, a municipal worker of Tartu, said, "in the city park a group of German storm-troopers halted an 11-year-old son of my neighbor, Karl Veske. Seeing him wearing a pioneers' (Soviet Youth Organization) red tie, the Fascists dragged him to a tall chestnut tree. One of them brought a rope. With sadistic cold-bloodedness they made a noose and hanged the boy from the tree. His body hung in the park two days. The parents were not allowed to bury their child."

A German private, Franz Hoffman, who surrendered to the Red army, said, "in a small Estonian village I witnessed a horrible scene. A group of drunken soldiers, headed by a sergeant-major, broke into the house of the peasant, Kaspert. The 70-year-old peasant, his wife and two little grandchildren were home. The sergeant-major demanded his pig and chickens. The old man answered he had no pig while the chickens were already taken by soldiers. The enraged Nazi ordered his men to bayonet the old man. Then they finished off his wife and grandchildren." The Nazis openly brag that they will exterminate everything Estonian.

Thousands of anti-Fascist handbills pass from hand to hand in all large centers of Italy—Rome, Milan, Turin, Genoa—and in many villages. Italian patriots demand in these handbills immediate discontinuation of hostilities, evacuation of Italian armies from the Eastern front, expulsion of German troops from Italy and discontinuation of food exports to Germany. The handbills are scattered in the streets and posted on walls and fences. Several persons who circulated these handbills were shot at Genoa.

Norwegian patriots blew up a gunpowder factory at Gulhagen, near Drammen. Scores of tons of explosives were destroyed. The factory was ruined.

The Soviet people are successfully training powerful reserves for the Red army. Sergeant Petrov of the Leningrad city militia and Militiaman Izdon have formed from the populace their sections of volunteer fighting squads. Every squad includes riflemen, grenade-throwers, machine-gun crews and stretcher bearers. Izdon has already trained fifty-two men and now is training another batch of sixty-eight.

The working people of Stalino study in groups tank destroyers and learn parachute-jumping. Several hundred girls are studying to become telegraph and telephone operators.

Over 300 Ossoaviakhim members of the Bauman district in Kazan have commenced tactical field drills. Recently in the vicinity of the Troitskoye village they carried out a war game —annihilation of an air-landing party—in the course of which the Ossoaviakhim members showed their ability skillfully to camouflage, handle firearms and reconnoiter. Groups of riflemen —parachutists, snipers, machine-gunners, radio operators and grenade-throwers — have been formed in all districts of the city of Yaroslavl.

Collective farms youths successfully master the military art. Youths of the village of Travyanka in the Kamensk district, Chelyabinsk region, study marching in formation and handling of rifle grenades. Girls study in first-aid squads.

Young collective farmers of the Regar district, Tadjik republic, have formed a group of Voroshilov horsemen and study riding and sabering. In Yerevan thousands of workers of the Kirov mills railway junction and oil mills study in Ossoaviakhim units the use of rifles, machine guns and grenades and acquire the habit of bayonet fighting and grenade-throwing.

The War Interpreted

By Dewitt MacKenzie

Decision of the Soviet government to uproot some 390,000 people of German extraction from their homes on the lower Volga and start them off in a mass migration movement to Siberia must rank among the most extraordinary military operations of its kind in history.

Moscow explains that this action was necessitated by the presence of "tens of thousands" of Fifth columnists among the population of the German Volga territory. The government charges that the people of this little republic have been harboring these saboteurs who were all set to start operations against the Reds when Hitler gave the signal.

The imagination bogs down in trying to envisage this trek across the great Russian steppes and through the Ural mountains for some 2,000 miles to new homes. That's a mighty lot of people to move—more than the populations of Indianapolis or Rochester or Louisville or Seattle —about as many as live in Kansas City—creeping up toward New Orleans and Cincinnati.

WINTER NOT FAR OFF

Even under the best of conditions this would present a titanic task. And now the fierce Russian winter is about to close in. The Soviet is short of rolling stock for its railroads, and how it is expected to move this great army is a mystery, not to mention transportation of any of household effects and farming implements.

If the operation is to be undertaken over snow-blocked roads, in the face of blizzards and devastating cold, we shall have such a story as rarely has been told. Perhaps, however, the Bolshevists do figure on moving the people and their effects by train.

However that may be, this gives a fair measure of the determination of the Reds to fight the Nazi invaders to a finish—though we need no further proof than has been given already in the great defense offered by the Soviet armies and civilians. It also is a striking example of the alertness of the Muscovite government and its thoroughness. We have seen the Bolshevists destroy whole cities and great engineering works as they retreated before the enemy, and now we find them moving a vast population—not a hundred or five hundred miles, but two thousand.

The presence of large numbers of spies in the German Volga republic presents a grave threat to the Russian military operations, for this is a strategic area. If you will look at your maps you will see that it straddles the Volga river only about 300 miles north of the Caspian sea.

MAIN DEFENSE LINE

Now the Volga is likely to be one of the main Red defensive lines, if they get pushed back that far. It provides a powerful position and it is, of course, vital that it shall not be infested by a swarm of Hitlerian Fifth columnists.

Before the Germans reach the Volga there are other rivers, notably the Don, which also afford strong protection, and it might be disastrous to have these Nazi saboteurs on the Volga busy back of the Red army. By cooperation with German parachute troops they might even put a sizable fighting force into the field to attack the Reds from the rear.

I should say one of the main reasons for this drastic Soviet move is to afford protection for the Red positions in the Caucasus. The drive which a million and a half Nazi troops are making across the Ukraine is aimed at breaking through into the Caucasus, thereby breaking Russia's lifeline to the Persian gulf and the open seas, and also opening the gate for a drive down into Persia.

Someway the war seems very far away today, and little else matters except that the President's mother is dead. Mrs. James Roosevelt was held in affectionate regard by the entire nation. F. D. R.'s loss is ours. America's heart is with him in his great trouble.

Germany's Foes Benefiting At Last From Propaganda

Writer Discusses Battle to Influence Public Opinion and Morale

(Editor's note: The darkest front of the war is the battle to influence public opinion and morale. From this vital sector come no communiques, no correspondents' dispatches, to tell how the fight is faring. Here, in an unusual article providing inside glimpses of propaganda methods, Gladwin Hill attempts to appraise progress in the invisible psychological war.)

SEP 8—1941

By Gladwin Hill

NEW YORK, Sept. 8 (The Special News Service)—The anti-Nazi forces are gaining greatly in the vital battle of propaganda.

Propaganda — the influencing of public opinion—is an inexact science and hard to measure, but there are many unquestionable indications that Britain and her Allies are landing more effective mental salvos and that Germany's psychological fire-power is diminishing.

Important Combat Factor

Propaganda's target is public opinion, and through it morale, and morale is universally recognized as a combat factor just as important as tangible weapons.

Hitler was the earliest outstanding figure in the present international struggle to recognize this importance. He emphasized it in his textbook "Mein Kampf" and he demonstrated it in his Fifth Column victories, which involved mental rather than physical conquest.

The Nazis' high-powered propaganda machine was going full blast several years before the war started.

This gave Germany an important edge. The anti-Nazi powers, who had been following their national ways with comparatively little concern about influencing the opinions of their neighbors, had to start virtually from scratch to build up war-pressure propaganda systems.

These are complex organizations. They involve not only the ordinary channels of public information like the press, radio and the movies; but also wide-scope strategy and planning, comparable in the psychological field to a far-reaching military plan.

Mental pressure, not physical, is the basis of every action. Before the human body will do anything, the mind has to will it. When a man does something at gunpoint, he is only superficially acting against his will; actually he is acting with his will; he has decided he would rather do the thing than get shot. The gun may not even have a bullet in it; if you have made him think there is it is just as effective. Thus, the technique of physical pressure pales in significance beside the art of mental influence.

Example of How It Works

Creating a mental impression is a matter of great indirectness and subtlety. If the rumor got going that Hitler and Mussolini were at odds, the press, the radio and the movies could shout denials for years and the world would only become more convinced that the rumor was true. A simple meeting between the two could demolish the rumor quickly.

This is the kind of problem involved in propaganda strategy.

For some time after the war started, the utterances of the anti-Nazi propaganda systems were almost inaudible against the clever thunderings of the head-started German machine.

One important notion this machine established widely was that the German military machine was unbeatable.

The importance of this is shown by the attention Winston Churchill gave at the outset to combating it.

Time and time again, for weeks and months, when seconds were precious to him, Churchill took the time to make speeches and write statements in his trenchant style hammering home the point: "We won't be beaten—Britain will be defended to every last stick and stone."

If Churchill had not done this, if the idea had been allowed to gain currency that the Nazi machine was indeed invincible, Britain would have been beaten right there.

The British were handicapped at the start of the war because they had not laid down any bulwark of defensive propaganda among their own people—like Hitler's repeated declarations to the Germans that "we are alone against the world."

Shortsightedness Inherent

In foreign propaganda the British were at even more of a loss, because for centuries they had, as a nation, been Kipling's "cat that walked by himself." Even Britishers have indorsed the wheeze that the most outstanding characteristic of the Englishman is his complete inability to see the other fellow's point of view — which is a prime requisite of successful propaganda.

Indicative of their difficulty at acquiring this facility quickly is the fact that they have had four different propaganda ministers since the war started—Baron MacMillan, Sir John Reith, Duff Cooper and now Brendan Bracken. A typical instance of mismanagement occurred when Sir John Reith took over the job. With much fanfare, one of his aides called the press in—and informed them that the one basic rule of the administration would be that Sir John would never see the press!

But the wrinkles gradually are being ironed out.

The Rudolph Hess flight marked a turning point in the fortunes of anti-Nazi propaganda.

In itself it was a windfall of psychological ammunition for Britain. Also, it came at the time when the anti-Nazi propaganda effort in general was acquiring some co-ordination and getting up some steam.

Several important public relations experts here agree that Britain did not capitalize psychologically on the Hess flight as much as she might have.

They regard it as a mistake that any British sources were allowed to spread the idea Hess might have come on a peace mission, that he was doing anything but betraying his comrades outright.

Hess Affair Turning Point

However, on the whole, the flight was a distinct propaganda point for Britain. Ever since, the anti-Nazi psychological campaign has been faring better and better.

One significant element, interestingly enough, has been an American agency, short-wave radio station WRUL in Boston, maintained by a nonprofit, educational foundation, which broadcasts news, comment and good-will programs in 13 languages all over the world.

When Yugoslavia was wavering last spring between submission and resistance to the Axis, a Yugoslav commentator on WRUL exhorted his countrymen to fight Germany, and the programs were credited by the American minister to Yugoslavia with having a significant part in influencing the country's decision.

The station's correspondence and grapevine reports indicate it has listeners in every country in Europe, and its effectiveness as an anti-Nazi influence may be measured by the Nazis' repeated denunciations of it on their own broadcasts. The Vichy ambassador to occupied France called WRUL along with London and Moscow stations as a factor in the shooting of Pierre Laval.

Britain followed up the Hess flight with the master stroke of the "V" campaign. Its effectiveness was demonstrated when the Nazis were forced to the extreme in propaganda technique of trying to adopt it themselves.

The Germans put a big dent in their propaganda operations themselves when they invaded Russia.

They had allowed the idea to get around that they were going to clean up with the dazzling speed of their previous victories. When they met more resistance than they had anticipated, they had to cover up awkwardly with short, empty communiques. The contrast between these and their customary long, detailed communiques was embarrassing and revealing.

Meanwhile other smaller slips, almost inevitable in a campaign of deception, have exposed their propaganda methods bit by bit and thus irreparably impaired them.

The Germans published a picture of some people in a Nazi-flagged boat in the shadow of Gibraltar, calculated to establish the impression that the Nazis were penetrating this important sphere of British influence. Then a New Yorker identified himself in the picture. It had been taken on a German cruise ship before the war started.

Only a few weeks ago, the Nazis published a series of pictures purporting to show German soldiers catching and executing a Russian sniper. A later picture of a German Army photographic squad disclosed that one of them had been the supposedly dead "sniper."

Things like that undermine carefully built-up public credulity which cannot be re-established for a long time.

The anti-Nazi forces scored again

matchless weapon of propaganda. The British Broadcasting Corporation made 80 broadcasts about it in the first 12 hours, in 40 languages, and several hundred broadcasts within the next two days.

The psychological effectiveness of the Hitler-Mussolini meetings has decreased greatly, partly because Italy has been disclosed as such a weak partner in the Axis, and partly because the device itself has been used several times, not always with any earth-shaking aftermath.

The German press screech after the last Mussolini-Hitler meeting that it was in sharp contrast to "the poor show" of the Roosevelt-Churchill meeting sounded suspiciously like sour grapes.

There are many other evidences of deterioration in the Nazis' propaganda reign.

Ironically, one of the first places that the legend of German invincibility took a tumble was the conquered countries. As soon as the Germans moved in, it was discovered that they were far from supermen in corruptibility.

French people have been able to bribe their way through one German occupation official after another.

This eye-opening has been followed quickly by extensive defiance of the Germans—first, disregard of minor rules, then aggressive sabotage and now small-scale revolt like riots and the Laval shooting.

in building up international morale with the Roosevelt-Churchill meeting at sea.

Although from an analytical standpoint this event was similar in its elements to the widely watched meetings between Mussolini and Hitler, it was carried off so adroitly that it avoided the stigma of imitation.

It was a daring venture psychologically as well as physically. One basic technique of propaganda is to beat the other fellow to the draw, the way Germany tried rather unavailingly to do with Britain on the disclosure of the Hess flight.

If the Germans could have disclosed the Roosevelt-Churchill meeting before Britain or the United States had a chance to announce it, it would have been a major coup —which is undoubtedly why concern was expressed about premature rumors of the meeting which ran through Washington and London.

Call Sea Meeting Success

As things worked out, the occasion was a pronounced success. The London Daily Herald called the resultant eight-point declaration "a

SHEELY WAS TAKEN TO THE POLICE STATION AFTER HE HAD BEEN WARNED NO PICTURES WERE TO BE TAKEN, BUT HAD SNAPPED ONE FROM ACROSS THE STREET FROM THE DAVENPORT HOTEL WHERE THEY STOPPED.

RELEASED AFTER AN HOUR, WITH AN ADMONITION BY CHIEF IRA MARTIN NOT TO PUBLISH THE PICTURE UNTIL IT WAS RELEASED BY THE WAR DEPARTMENT, SHEELY WENT TO HIS DARKROOM.

DEVELOPMENT SHOWED THREE CITY POLICEMEN AND SEVERAL AUTOMOBILES IN FRONT OF THE HOTEL AND NO RUSSIANS, WHO HAD ALREADY GONE INSIDE.

BRIG GEN. JOHN B. BROOKS, ACTING COMMANDER OF THE SECOND AIR FORCE, SAID HE REGARDED THE PHOTOGRAPHER'S ARREST AS A CIVIL MATTER SINCE SPOKANE POLICE WERE THE AUTHORITIES INVOLVED AND NOTHING TO "GET HET UP ABOUT."

AFTER HIS RELEASE, SHEELY SAID HE HAD BEEN AT THE RAILWAY STATION WHEN THE RUSSIANS ARRIVED AND HAD BEEN ORDERED FROM THE STATION BY MILITARY, CIVIL AND RAILWAY OFFICIALS.

WHEN THE RUSSIANS ARRIVED IN SEATTLE LAST WEEK THERE WAS NO PROHIBITION OF PICTURES EXCEPT WITHIN THE BOUNDS OF THE U.S. NAVAL AIR STATION, WHERE NEWSMEN AND PHOTOGRAPHERS WHO VIOLATED THE RESTRICTIONS, RAN AFOUL OF AUTHORITIES. SHOTS WERE FIRED TO STOP ONE PRESS BOAT. NAVAL AUTHORITIES, HOWEVER, DID NOT OBJECT TO PICTURES TAKEN OF THE RUSSIAN PLANE AS IT TAXIED UP TO THE STATION.

PICTURES OF THE FLIERS ALSO WERE TAKEN AT THEIR SEATTLE HOTEL. GENERAL MICHAEL GROMOV EVEN POSED FOR ONE PICTURE WITH THE FRENCH CHEF WHO TOOK HIS ORDER.

GENERAL BROOKS TONIGHT SAID HE HAD BEEN "VERY SURPRISED" THAT SHEELY HAD BEEN TAKEN TO THE STATION OR THAT POLICE WERE STATIONED AROUND THE HOTEL.

SEP 8 1941

"WHEN WE ARRIVED AT THE STATION THIS MORNING TO MEET THE RUSSIAN MISSION, SHEELY WAS GOING INSIDE AND A STATION MAN ASKED ME IF IT WAS OUR DESIRE TO HAVE PICTURES," THE GENERAL SAID.

"I EXPLAINED IT WAS MY UNDERSTANDING THAT THE RUSSIANS THEMSELVES WERE OPPOSED TO PICTURES AND THE RAILROAD OFFICIAL ASKED SHEELY NOT TO TAKE ANY IN THE BUILDING.

"WHEN WE CAME OUT, SHEELY TOOK A PICTURE, AT WHICH THERE WAS NO PROTEST. I CERTAINTLY MADE NONE SINCE ARMY JURISDICTION DOES NOT EXTEND TO PUBLIC STREETS.

ACTION AGAINST SEA RAIDERS EXPECTED TO FOLLOW SINKING OF AMERICAN SHIPS; RUSSIANS DRIVE ON TOWARD SMOLENSK

AMERICAN-OWNED CRAFT TORPEDOED SOUTH OF ICELAND

All but Three of Crew of 27 Presumed Lost by State Department

SEP 10 1941

CARRIED GENERAL CARGO

Attack, Which Took Place Aug. 17, Adds Material for Speech by Roosevelt Tomorrow

Washington, Sept. 9.—(AP)—The S. S. Sessa, an American-owned freighter flying the flag of Panama, was sunk by a torpedo on Aug. 17 about 300 miles southwest of Iceland, the State Department announced today, and all but three of her crew of 27 were presumed lost.

The crew included one American.

The announcement followed by one day receipt of word in Washington that another American freighter—the S. S. Steel Seafarer—had been sent to the bottom of the Red Sea by an airplane of unknown nationality on Sept. 5. All hands were saved.

The State Department announcement did not say what ship had fired the torpedo into the Sessa, but Secretary Cordell Hull told his press conference that there was no doubt of its nationality. The Sessa was sunk, presumably, in the general area of the skirmish last Thursday between a German submarine and the American destroyer Greer.

Add New Strain

The new incidents, coming so soon after the Greer's clash, added a new strain to the already severely frayed relations between the United States and the Axis nations. They also provided new material for the speech which President Roosevelt will deliver Thursday night. Some expect it to contain a declaration that the United States will meet force with force on the high seas.

The Sessa was a former Danish ship taken over by the United States under recent legislation authorizing requisitioning of idle foreign vessels. It was chartered by the Maritime Commission to the Marine Operating Company of New York, and later was transferred to Panamanian registry. Transfer to foreign registry is a procedure frequently adopted to permit vessels to enter combat zones barred under the Neutrality Act to vessels manned by American crews. The water around Iceland is not recognized as a combat area by the United States Government, therefore, officials said, it was legal for the crew to include an American.

Three Picked Up

Three members of the Sessa's crew were picked up Sept. 6 at a point some 300 miles southwest of Iceland, the State Department said. The ship was said to be carrying to Iceland supplies of a general character destined for and owned by the Icelandic Government. She sailed from New York Aug. 7 and was due in Iceland about 12 days later. The Steel Seafarer was presumably carrying war supplies to the British, one of numerous vessels assigned to that duty by the Maritime Commission. The Maritime Commission reported today that the Seafarer was bombed at 11:30 p. m. last Friday.

The American member of the crew of the 1700-ton Sessa, who was among the misisng, was identified by the Maritime Commission as W. Mohammad, radio operator, of New York.

The commission today announced that the following other officers and crewmen were aboard the Sessa:

Master, Niels Nielsen, Danish; Chief Mate, H. K. Bjerregaard, 37, Danish, Odense, Denmark; Second Mate, T. V. Petersen, 24, Danish, Stubbekobing, Denmark; Third Mate, G. Larsen, 45, Norwegian, Bergen, Norway.

Able-Bodied Seamen

Able-bodied seamen: G. L. T. Ljunggren, 32, Swedish, New York; K. Thomsen, 21, Danish, Bratbjergaard, Denmark; S. Wendel, 20, Icelandic, Reykajavik, Iceland; W. Dwyer, 22, Irish, Edmonton, Alberta, Canada; J. De Oliveria Correira, 25, Portuguese, Bairro De S. Paio, Portugal.

Ordinary seamen: H. Granick, 25, British, London; J. Ryan, 20, British, London.

Chief Engineer, A. Laursen, 44, Danish, Copenhagen, Denmark; First Assistant Engineer, R. Morch, 30, Danish, Skyern, Denmark; Second Assistant Engineer, M. Christiansen, 58, Norwegian, Haugesund, Norway; Third Assistant Engineer, J. Alm, 38, Swedish, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Firemen: F. Lecue, 22, Spanish, Bilboa, Spain; R. J. Oliveira, 26, Portuguese, Porto, Portugal; A. L. Marques, 41, Portuguese, Portugal.

Coal Passers: T. Adils, 34, Icelandic, Reykajavik, Iceland; J. Thomas, 38, Portuguese, Portugal; B. B. Verissimo, 48, Portuguese, Nazare, Portugal.

Steward, B. Jensen, 33, Danish, Copenhagen, Denmark; Chief Cook, E. L. F. Berger, 40, Belgian, New York.

Boys: J. Budge, 46, British, New York; G. Glover, 56, British, New York; A. Davenny, 26, British, New York.

Lacks Information

The commission lacked information on which three of the 27 listed survived the torpedoing of the vessel.

In New York, officials of the Isthmian Line, which operated the Steel Seafarer, said that all survivors had been taken into a Suez Canal port. The ship's 35 officers and crewmen escaped in boats after the vessel was hit while passing Juba Strait, the officials said. Twenty-four men landed on Shadman Island and the other 12 were picked up by a British warship, the officials added.

At his press conference, Hull declined, pending the receipt of additional information, to express an opinion whether the incident was in violation of the American policy of freedom of the seas.

There was much speculation as to the nationality of the plane which sank the tSeel Seafarer. British authorities in Cairo, Egypt, blamed a German bomber based in Greece.

The scene of the attack was included originally in the "combat area" delineated by President Roosevelt, a region into which American ships were forbidden to go by the neutrality act. With the British victory in East Africa and the end of the war there, however, the Red sea was removed from the combat zone, permitting American ships to carry supplies all the way to the Suez Canal.

The double sinking, in connection with the attack upon the Greer, aroused intense speculation as to the future of German-American and Japanese-American relations. Some suggested that the three incidents indicated Germany was finally putting into effect the policy laid down long ago by Adolf Hitler—that ships coming before the torpedoes of the German U-boats would be sunk.

Three Points Seen

The developments, too, intensified interest in the President's speech of Thursday night, Washington looked to it, rather than to statements by other officials meanwhile, for a statement of American policy with regard to such attacks on shipping.

One informant, a man usually in close touch with things, forecast that the speech would make the following three points:

(1) Serve notice on Germany that this country intends to keep the sea lanes open to its outpost in Iceland.

(2) Give notice that the appearance of any hostile vessel or aircraft in waters between Iceland and the United States would be regarded as an effort to interfere with American communications.

(3) Give notice that American naval vessels would be ordered to open fire on any such ships or planes.

SEAMAN TELLS HOW SEAFARER WAS BOMBED

Helmsman Says Plane Dived On Freighter Before Dropping Explosive

24 In Crew Spent 12 Hours In Boats, Then Day On Isle Before Rescue

Suez, Egypt, Sept. 9.—(AP.)—The first mate of the American freighter Steel Seafarer declared today the ship was sunk in the Red Sea by a swooping German plane whose crew refrained from machine-gunning the survivors as they clambered into lifeboats.

He was among the two dozen of the ship's personnel who landed here this afternoon with a vividly detailed story of the attack last Friday and with a variety of opinion as to whether the fatal blow was struck by an angling bomb or an aerial torpedo.

The crew generally agreed that the ship was struck below the waterline by the closest thing to a "near miss" and that it sank quickly.

12 Hours in Rowboats.

They told of spending nearly 12 hours in rowboats and then 24 more hours on a rocky Red Sea island before a British warship rescued them. The other 12 of the crew were picked up by another British ship.

Tall, ruddy Robert Cartwright, Nantuckett Island, Mass., the helmsman said:

"It was 11:30 o'clock Friday night when it happened. The moon was full and we were steaming peacefully northward. Suddenly I heard a very heavy explosion to starboard and the ship rocked like we had struck a reef.

"At the same time I heard an airplane engine roar and saw a brown streak flash overhead.

"The plane must have cut off its engines, dived and then turned them on again as the bombs were dropped."

Sank in 20 Minutes.

Ralph S. Pratt, of New York, the first mate, said the Seafarer was sunk by a bomb or aerial torpedo which hit beneath the water line. She sank within twenty minutes, Pratt said. All crewmen were able to get off in boats before the ship went down.

"I was asleep below when the ship was hit," Pratt said.

"A sound something like the crack of a rifle woke me up. A second later a very heavy explosion threw me out of my bunk. The washstand came out. Everything was topsy-turvy.

"I got one shoe on and couldn't find the other. I grabbed a slipper and rushed up on deck. While the crew was taking to the boats, I will say this for the German, he didn't machine-gun us afterward as some of them have done.

"Capt. John Halliday, of Baltimore, was on the bridge with the third officer. He sounded the alarm immediately and the crew rushed to the decks, some of them in pajamas, some in nightshirts and some in shorts," Pratt went on.

"There wasn't much time. The bomb or torpedo had plugged a hole under No. 4 hatch and we were beginning to sink fast.

"We got the first men up into two boats, launched them all right, then packed the remainder into a third.

"I remained aboard until the last with the captain to see if there was a chance of saving her, but it was clear that nothing could be done. We pulled away and three minutes later her decks were awash."

Lost Watch And Money

Pratt said he had thought about the possibility of the ship being attacked throughout the voyage, and explained that he kept his money, watch and flashlight in a bag ready to go.

"But that evening I said to myself, 'No danger now; you needn't worry,' and threw the bag into a drawer.

"So, today I'm out of a watch and my money."

James Abernethy, of New York, the ship's wireless operator, said the explosion brought down the aerial and wrecked the emergency transmitter.

"I sent up flares with the captain for a bit," he recounted, "then got into the last boat.

SEP 10 1941

"It was while watching the Seafarer sink that the captain's boat lost sight of one of the others.

Were Carried Away

"Apparently the occupants had hoisted a sail and were carried away. But they had food, water and other supplies sufficient for a fortnight, but anyway they're safe now."

Land was only ten miles away but the sea was heavy, the currents were strong and it was 11 o'clock the next morning before the two boats reached shore. The first thing the captain did was to signal a passing ship to search for the third boat.

Twenty-four survivors and two boats remained at the island until 4 P. M. the next day, when the British navy rescued them.

"It wasn't so bad," said one crewman. "We had enough to eat and drink."

Few of the men were depressed by the sinking itself, but all were concerned that the ship went down with her valuable cargo so close to her journey's end.

One Thrown To Deck

Paul Batty, of Pittsburgh, said he was thrown to the deck by the explosion which he judged to be a bomb scoring a near miss, as a great spout of water rose over the starboard and came down on the deck, splitting an awning.

Other crewmen thought it was an aerial torpedo that sent their ship to the bottom. Most agreed there was only one explosion—a big one.

Several survivors came ashore from the rescue warship wearing dark blue British football pants. Others wore white naval jackets and shorts.

From the statements of the various members of the crew, the question of whether the pilot of the plane was able to distinguish the Seafarer as an American vessel appeared to be a moot point.

There was brilliant moonlight, but it was doubtful that the attacker could make out the Stars and Stripes painted on the vessel's sides.

Blames German Bomber.

Alexandria, Sept. 9.— (AP.) — Sources at this British naval headquarters said tonight the dive-bomber which swooped low in bright moonlight Friday night and sank the American steamer Steel Seafarer could not possibly have mistaken her for anything but an American ship.

The Steel Seafarer was fully illuminated, they said, with floodlights playing on the large American flags painted on her sides. Belligerent vessels are not lighted. The Seafarer was said to have been a considerable distance from any other ship when attacked.

The surviving crew was landed today on the western coast of the Gulf of Suez, between Hurghada and Dishet el Tabaa by the rescuing British warship. None was lost or injured.

The British said the ship, which was carrying American war supplies to Suez, was sunk by a long-range German bomber operating from Greece. It went down in the Red Sea about 130 miles south of Suez.

Another American ship was attacked some days ago south of Suez, but reliable sources said it escaped untouched.

BERLIN WARNS SHIPPING FROM ITS WAR ZONES

Says All There Will Be Sunk, Regardless Of Nationality

Nazis Declare Attack On Seafarer Should Cause No Surprise

SEP 10 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 9 — The Germans warned again tonight that all ships in Axis-declared war zones are subject to attack "regardless of nationality" and indicated that either an Italian or German plane sank the American freighter Steel Seafarer in the Red Sea Friday night.

A spokesman said, however, that "it is beyond discussion that there should be any general order to attack American ships."

Since the Red Sea has long been considered a war zone by the Axis, he said, no one should be surprised that the Steel Seafarer was sunk there. He pointed out that the 5,719-ton vessel was lost while en route to Suez, presumably with lease-lend supplies for the British.

Term Action "Provocation"

President Roosevelt's signal, April 11, lifting the ban on American vessels in the area, was described by the Germans as "premature." Some termed the Seafarer's appearance in the Red Sea a "provocation," like the incidents involving the Greer and the merchantmen Robin Moor and Zamzam.

"Incorrigible warmongers wanted the United States to wage a sea war without declaring war," said the Hamburger Fremdenblatt.

There was no immediate comment on a Washington announcement that a supply ship en route to Iceland was sunk by torpedo August 17.

New Red Sea Raid

Emphasizing the activity of Axis bombers in the Red Sea area the high command announced today the sinking of a 7,000-ton tanker and the damaging of five other large merchantmen in a Sunday night raid on shipping over Suez Gulf and roadstead.

DNB reported further that in new raids last night a 4,000-ton merchantman was damaged in Great Bitter Lake, which is a part of the Suez Canal system, and that another of 8,000 tons was hit in the Gulf of Suez and so badly damaged that it flashed S O S signals.

At Abu Suier airdrome, near Ismalia, the news agency said German bombers scored a hit on a large hangar and set a fuel dump afire.

At the northern pole of German war activity, the high command recorded the loss of the 1,460-ton artillery cadet ship Bremse, which was convoying supplies to German forces off northern Norway.

Most British Forces

Much to the surprise of the Germans, the communique said, British naval forces were encountered in these waters.

The little Bremse, armed only with four 5-inch guns and anti-aircraft cannon, courageously elected to stand and battle a British cruiser and two destroyers and as a result was sunk after a short, fierce fight.

Part of the crew was saved, and the rest of the convoy escaped, it was said. (The British claimed three other ships were sunk.)

Nazi submarines have sunk 21,500 tons of British shipping in the Atlantic, including four ships from a single convoy, in recent days, the high command said.

Seafarer In War Zone: Nazis

SEP 10 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 9—The German high command today said the Nazi air force in a Sunday night raid on "enemy ships in the gulf and roadstead of Suez" destroyed a 7,000-ton tanker and badly damaged five large merchantmen.

There was no indication whether the ship that was sunk was the American vessel Steel Seafarer, but authorized quarters said news of the sinking of an American ship in those waters should occasion no surprise, since the area had been declared a dangerous war zone by the Axis.

Asked whether there was a general order to attack American ships, authorized quarters said "certainly until now none have been attacked around England. It is beyond discussion that there should be any general order to attack American ships."

Gulf Joins Red Sea

(First Washington reports of the sinking of the Steel Seafarer, a freighter of 5,719 tons, said the incident occurred in the Red Sea. The Gulf of Suez leads from the Red Sea to Suez and the two descriptions of the scene of the sinking appeared to coincide. The fact that the attack was made in darkness could easily account for a Nazi error in describing the vessel as a tanker of 7,000 tons.)

Authorized sources said "this area has been declared a war zone by the Italians long ago."

"Roosevelt Acted Hastily"

"The area which is considered in war is one that has been carefully described," the source said. "Of course there is shooting around the Suez Canal. There are naturally Italian and German planes in that region since the Axis is attempting to cut off the British from supplies there.

"Roosevelt, in connection with the Abyssinian (Ethiopian) events, said this was no longer a war area, but, as the reported incident shows, he acted somewhat hastily."

Attack Charged to Nazis

CAIRO, Sept. 9 (AP.)—The crew and officers of the American merchant steamship, Steel Seafarer, sunk in the Red Sea, were landed today on the western coast of the Gulf of Suez.

They had been picked up by British warships, and were landed between the oil port of Hurghada and Dishet el Tabaa.

Reliable British sources said a long-range German bomber operating from Greece sank the vessel. The Seafarer was attacked and sunk about midnight Friday some 200 miles south of Suez. Alerts were sounded the same night in northern Egypt but no bombs were dropped on Egyptian soil. In the bright moonlight, the merchantman probably was an easy target.

The Steel Seafarer was the second ship attacked in the Red Sea by Axis aircraft. The first attack was made some days ago south of Suez but reliable sources said the bombed ship escaped untouched.

A Cairo communique announced air raids last night on the Suez Canal area and Alexandria.

Italians Echo Berlin Press.

Rome, Sept. 9 (A. P.).—Fascist newspapers united today in denouncing the Greer incident as an American "aggression" and an attempt by President Roosevelt to get the United States into war.

The tardy editorial reaction echoed that which appeared previously in Berlin.

The assertion of Virginio Gayda, authoritative editor of Il Giornale d'Italia, that the Greer attacked without provocation was typical of the Italian press reaction.

No Surprise, Says Rome.

Rome, Sept. 9.—(AP.)—An Italian communique said tonight that reports of the sinking of the American freighter Steel Seafarer in the Red Sea should not be surprising.

"Even admitting the truth of the sinking of this ship," it was added, "it would represent a very natural fact since the Red Sea some time ago was declared a war zone also by Italy as is the Suez Canal a war zone." (This position roughly paralleled that of the Germans.)

HINTS HITLER MIGHT FORCE NAVAL CLASH

SEP 10 1941

Promises Commons Power Will Be At Hand To Guard Ocean Routes

Describes Allied Front As Running From Spitsbergen To Tobruk

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 9—Winston Churchill expressed the wish today that American naval forces already endlessly patrolling the Atlantic approaches to the Western Hemisphere might be of even "greater help" to the British in the battle for that ocean.

At the same time, describing the Allied front as running now in a vast arc from Spitsbergen in the Arctic to Tobruk in the western desert of Africa, he promised without amplification that "adequate naval power will be at hand" to hold the Atlantic and Indian Ocean routes of supply against Axis attack.

Review Essentially Cheerful

The struggle for the Atlantic dominated the Prime Minister's comprehensive review before the House of Commons—a review that was essentially cheerful although he warned that Hitler might soon change tactics and engage the United States naval forces in those waters—but he ranged, too, from the Russian front to the now inactive theater in Libya.

As to Libya, he announced that powerful new British reinforcements had reached the Army of the Nile and now stood ready to defeat a German invasion of Egypt.

As to Russia, he declared that its "magnificent resistance" already had cost the Germans more blood in three months than they lost in any year of the World War; that Hitler already was facing the necessity of having to maintain his forces from the Arctic to the Black Sea "with precarious lines of communication through all the severities of the Russian winter and the vigorous counter-strokes that may be expected of the Russian armies."

Supply Need Urgent

Still, he said, the Soviet's need of supplies was urgent since "a considerable part of the munitions industry and the iron and steel production of Russia has fallen into the hands of the enemy," and thus Britain herself must expect some reduction in the American aid upon which she had counted to permit its diversion to the Soviet.

"If the United States are to fulfill the task they are setting themselves," he remarked, "large installations will have to be set up or converted and there will have to be a further curtailment of civilian consumption over there."

Of the long and bitter combat in the Atlantic, Churchill reported an enormous improvement in the British position, saying that largely through the development of new tactics British and allied shipping lost in July and August amounted to scarcely more than one third the tonnage of the Axis losses, despite the fact that British shipping offers ten to twenty times the number of targets.

Adds End Is Not In Sight

Still, he said, the end was not in sight, adding:

"The Germans are much hampered on the American part of the Atlantic by fear of trouble with the powerful American naval forces which ceaselessly patrol the approaches to the Western Hemisphere. This has been a help to us, but I could wish it might be a greater help.

"The enemy's tactics may change. No doubt Hitler would rather finish off Russia and Britain before coming to close quarters with the United States.

"Hitler has, however, also the greatest possible need to prevent precious munitions supplies, now streaming across the Atlantic in pursuance of the policy of the United States Government, from reaching our shores.

Ocean-Wide Danger Zone

"Should he do so, the area of danger zones will again become ocean-wide. Meanwhile, let us hear no vain talk of the Battle of the Atlantic having been won."

The Prime Minister said the Germans were using "acoustic" mines planted nightly by plane around England.

He did not describe them, but said they were being employed in addition to magnetic mines "in many dangerous combinations."

Churchill said thirty to forty German planes were sowing mines in British waters nightly.

Tells Of Sea Conference

He spoke briefly, then, of his return by way of Iceland from the Atlantic meeting with President Roosevelt. In Iceland, he said, "very considerable United States and British naval and air forces are assembled."

The meeting, he said, resulted not alone in the familiar eight points but in agreements for British-American measures in aid of Russia and on a policy intended to "put a stop to further encroachments (by Japan) in the Far East."

Sums Up Situation

Concluding his address, his first appearance before Commons since the Roosevelt conference, he thus summed up Britain's situation and hopes:

"The mood of Great Britain is widely and rightly averse from every form of shallow or premature exultation. This is not the time for boasting or glowing prophecies, but there is this: a year ago our position looked forlorn and well-nigh desperate to all eyes but our own. Today, we may say aloud before an awestruck world, 'We still are masters of our fate. We still are captains of our soul."

30.24 — 11703

30.24 — 11703

Churchill met in advance criticisms of the eight-point declaration subsequently delivered by two Conservative members of Parliament.

Described As Milestone

For he said that while he had always deprecated the formulation of peace or war aims at this stage, "a joint declaration by Great Britain and the United States of America is an event of a totally different nature."

"Although the principles in the declaration have long been familiar to the British and American democracies," he added, "the fact that it is a united declaration sets up a milestone or monument which needs only the stroke of victory to become a permanent part of the history of human progress."

The two M. P.'s, Hugh Strauss and Maurice Petherick, took a different view, however.

Called American Document

Strauss said the Atlantic charter was "an obviously predominant American document," and went on:

"Most of us would do a great deal for Anglo-American friendship, but one of the things we ought not to do is too readily to agree with the magniloquent general declaration of principles which . . . was put forward by a nation which made profound mistakes about Europe at the end of the last war and shows every sign of making similar mistakes at the present time."

Petherick said he doubted the wisdom of the document at such a time and that after winning the war Britain "should not be in too much of a hurry to make peace."

Calls for More American Navy Assistance

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—Prime Minister Churchill, in a sweeping review of the war, today expressed the wish for "greater help" from the American Navy and warned that Adolf Hitler may come to "close quarters" with the United States and turn the whole Atlantic into one vast war zone.

Addressing the House of Commons, assembled for the first time since August 6, Mr. Churchill declared bluntly that the battle of the Atlantic was not yet won.

An implication that both Britain and the United States were ready for Atlantic eventualities was in his statement that "strong British and United States forces" in Iceland now include "some very considerable United States and British naval and air forces."

The Prime Minister gave the British people a somewhat cheering picture of the battle of the seas, with a sudden increase in British successes in the past two months, but he made it plain that there was a long fight ahead.

Reference to Spitsbergen.

Mr. Churchill made only a passing reference to Spitsbergen, Norwegian Arctic archipelago which Allied forces have raided to prevent its coal from going to Germany, but mention of the action brought loud cheers.

"The Allied front," he said, now runs in an immense crescent from Spitsbergen in the Arctic Ocean to Tobruk in the western desert, and our section of this front will be held by British and Empire armies with their growing strength, fed and equipped by ocean-borne supplies from Great Britain, the United States, India and Australasia, and I'm glad to say adequate naval power will be at hand in the Atlantic and Indian Oceans to secure these sea routes against attack."

Some Commons members were disappointed that there were no further disclosures regarding the dashing expedition to Spitsbergen, announced only yesterday.

Nazis Much Hampered.

Mr. Churchill told a cheering House:

"The Germans are much hampered on the American part of the Atlantic by fear of trouble with the powerful American naval forces which ceaselessly patrol the approaches to the Western Hemisphere. This has been a help to us, but I wish it might be a greater help.

"The enemy's tactics may change. No doubt Hitler would rather finish off Russia and Britain before coming to close quarters with the United States.

"Hitler has, however, also the greatest possible need to prevent precious munition supplies now streaming across the Atlantic in pursuance of the policy of the United States Government from reaching our shores.

"Should he do so the area of danger zones will again become ocean-wide. Meanwhile let us hear no vain talk of the battle of the Atlantic having been won."

Important Decisions Reached.

Mr. Churchill asserted that he and President Roosevelt reached "highly important decisions" in their historic Atlantic conference regarding help for Russia and "the policy to be pursued" to check Japan and prevent spread of war to the Pacific.

The important new decisions with Mr. Roosevelt, the nature of which was unrevealed, were in addition to the eight-point war aim pronouncement.

Agreements also were reached, Mr. Churchill said, on a "large number of purely technical matters" embracing "every question relating to the war and the state of affairs after the war."

"Close personal relationships were established between high naval, military and air authorities of the two countries," he said.

Mr. Churchill said the eight-point joint declaration "sets up a milestone, or monument, which needs only the stroke of victory to become a permanent part of the history of human progress."

SEP 10 1941

Must Give Arms to Soviet.

He said Britain must be prepared for "definite reductions" in miltary supplies from the United States so that they now can go to Russia; he praised Russian resistance as "magnificent" and said Germany now is "certain of having to maintain armies through the Russian winter from the Arctic to the Black Sea."

To help the Russans fight, he said, the British "must be prepared for serious sacrifices in the munitions field."

Britain has made considerable progress" in giving Soviet Russia economic assistance in her fight against Germany, Mr. Churchill said.

Russia gave Britain a list of her requirements some time ago, he said, and substantial shipments already have been made, including supplies of rubber, tin, wool, jute and shellac.

"We are doing our best to meet Russian requests in full" in spite of transport difficulties, he added.

"Remaining commodities which we are unable fully to supply from the empire or Allied sources are now the subject of discussions in Washington, and these will continue at the forthcoming Moscow conference."

The Prime Minister announced that "powerful" British reinforcements have reached Egypt and said he was confident "we shall be able to defend Egypt successfully from a German invasion across the Western desert."

Britain's fortunes on the merchant shipping warfare and the battle of the sea in general have changed, Mr. Churchill told the House, so that in July and August the sinkings of British and Allied ships were only slightly more than one-third of the total Axis tonnage sunk by British and Allied warplanes and submarines.

British submarines, he added, had sunk or seriously damaged a total of 17 enemy warships and 105 supply ships in 1941, for an average of 15 a month.

The ships torpedoed, Mr. Churchill added, "vary between large liners of over 20,000 tons and caiques and schooners laden with troops and military stores."

"There has been a corresponding increase in tonnage and the value of cargoes safely landed on our shores," Mr. Churchill added, "despite the fact that every night 30 or 40 German planes sow mines in British waters."

He said that "an extraordinary rise during the last three months in the destruction of German and Italian ships" was "achieved very largely by development of new and brilliant tactics by the coastal command and R. A. F. bombing squadrons."

"To the exploits of the air force must be added those of our submarines," he continued. "The destruction of enemy shipping by both forms of attack has been enormous."

Mr. Churchill closed with a characteristic peroration:

"It is no time for boasting, but there is this: A year ago our position looked forlorn and very nigh desperate. Today we say aloud, we are still master of our fate and captain of our soul."

Lauds Russian Armies.

Wearing horn-rimmed spectacles, the Prime Minister read from notes as he surveyed the war front from Iran to Newfoundland.

Mr. Churchill won the loudest cheer when he declared that the "magnificent resistance" of the Russian armies had cost the Germans more blood in the last three months than Germany lost in any single year of the first World War. Soviet Ambassador Ivan Maisky was in the gallery.

He got another big cheer when he demanded the surrender of all Axis nationals in Iran to protect the supply route to Russia.

(A dispatch from Teheran, Iran, today reported that the Parliament there had accepted British-Russian terms, which include the ousting of Axis legations and the surrender of Axis nationals.)

Of the forces in Iceland, he said:

"The spacious airfields which we have constructed and are expanding there and in Newfoundland will play an ever-increasing part not only in control of the broad waters, but in the continued flow of the ever-broadening stream of heavy bombers now acting against Germany night after night, which will play a decisive part, or one of the decisive parts, in the final victory."

Says Americans Must Curtail.

Both the United States and Great Britain will have to make further sacrifices in the war against Germany, he added.

"We must be prepared for serious sacrifices in the munitions field in order to meet the needs of Russia," he said. "The utmost exertions and energy will, therefore, be required of all concerned in production in order not only to help Russia, but in order to fill gaps which must now be opened in our own longed-for and last arriving supply.

"The flow of our own production in this country and in our own Empire is still rising. It will reach the full flood in the third year of the war, when our factories are completed and come into bearing.

"If the United States are to fulfill the task they are setting themselves, large installations will have to be set up or converted and there will have to be further curtailment of civilian consumption over there.

"We must ourselves expect a definite reduction in the importation of supplies from America upon which we had counted. Within certain limits, we are prepared to accept those facts and their consequences."

GERMANS SOWING ACOUSTIC MINES

London, Sept. 9 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Churchill told Commons today that the Germans were using "acoustic" mines planted nightly by plane around England.

He did not describe them, but said they were being employed in addition to magnetic mines "in many dangerous combinations."

Mr. Churchill said that thirty or forty German planes were sowing mines in British waters nightly.

ATLANTIC CHARTER IS CALLED MISTAKE

SEP 10 1941

M. P. Tells Commons U. S. Errs on European Issues.

London, Sept. 9 (A. P.).—In the House of Commons today Henry George Strauss, Conservative, criticized the Roosevelt-Churchill Atlantic Charter as an "obviously predominantly American document" and a mistake.

"Most of us," he said, "would do a great deal for Anglo-American friendship, but one of the things we ought not to do is too readily to agree with the magniloquent general declaration of principles put forward by a nation which made profound mistakes about Europe at the end of the last war and shows every sign of making similar mistakes at the present time."

Another critic, Maurice Petherick, also a Conservative, said that the charter caused considerable anxiety and that he doubted the wisdom of such a document at a time when the only aim should be to win the war. He declared that Britain "should not be in too much of a hurry to make peace" after winning the war, adding: "I join in the plea that the British Government should approach the United States of America with a view to examining not in the heat of the moment but over a period of time the implications, inventions and purports of the document."

Partial Text Of Churchill War Review

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 9—A partial text of Prime Minister Winston Churchill's House of Commons speech follows:

Late in July I learned the President of the United States would welcome a meeting with me in order to survey the entire world position in relation to the several and common interests of our respective countries.

Important conclusions were reached on four main topics.

First of all, there was the eight-point declaration of broad principles and aims which guide and govern the action of the British and United States Governments and peoples amid the many dangers by which they are beset in these times.

Steps To Help Russia

Secondly, that measures should be taken to help Russia resist the hideous onslaught Hitler has made upon her.

Thirdly, the policy to be pursued toward Japan in order, if possible, to put a stop to further encroachments in the Far East likely to endanger the safety and interests of Great Britain or the United States and by timely action to prevent the spread of war to the Pacific Ocean.

Also, there were a large number of purely technical matters to be dealt with and a close personal relationship was established between the high naval, military and air attaches of both countries. . . .

Different Nature

I have, as the House knows, hitherto consistently deprecated the formulation of peace aims or war aims, however you put it, by his Majesty's Government at this stage and I deprecate it at this time when the end of the war is not in sight and when the conflict sways to and fro with alternating fortunes and while conditions and associations at the end of the war are unforeseeable. But a joint declaration by Great Britain and the United States of America is an event of a totally different nature.

Although principles in declaration have long been familiar to the British and American democracies, the fact that it is a united declaration sets up a milestone or monument which needs only the stroke of victory to become a permanent part of the history of human progress.

Nazis Change Tactics

The battle of the Atlantic has been going on unceasingly. In his attempt to blockade and starve out these islands by U-boat and air attack, the enemy continually changes his tactics. Driven from one beat to the next, chased from home waters and driven from the approaches to these islands, he proceeds to the other side of the Atlantic. Increasingly hampered by United States patrols in the North Atlantic, he develops his malice in the south and we follow hard upon his tracks and sometimes we anticipate his tactics.

Improvement in sea warfare manifests itself in two directions. In the first place, there is a very great falling off in the sinkings of British and Allied shipping and a corresponding increase in the tonnage of valuable cargoes safely landed on our shores. . . . The second improvement is the extraordinary rise in the last three months in the destruction of German and Italian shipping, which has been achieved very largely by the development of new and brilliant tactics of the coast command and R. A. F. bombing squadrons acting with the coastal command. . . .

Ship Toll Listed

I would like the House to pay attention to this statement because it is really an extraordinary statement for anyone to be able to make. I may say that sinkings of British and Allied shipping by enemy action in July and August added together do not amount to much more than one third of the German and Italian tonnage we have sunk by our aircraft and our submarines.

How remarkable that statement is may be judged when we remember that we present perhaps ten, or it might even be twenty, times the target to hostile attacks upon the seas as is presented us by the shipping of the enemy. . . .

Hampered By U. S. Navy

The Germans are much hampered on the American part of the Atlantic by fear of trouble with the powerful American naval forces which ceaselessly patrol the approaches to the Western Hemisphere. This has been a help to us, but I could wish it might be a greater help.

The enemy's tactics may change. No doubt Hitler would rather finish off Russia and Britain before coming to close quarters with the United States. Hitler has, however, also the greatest possible need to prevent precious munition supplies now streaming across the Atlantic in pursuance of the policy of the United States Government from reaching our shores. Should he do so the area of danger zones will again become ocean-wide. Meanwhile, let us hear no vain talk of the Battle of the Atlantic having been won.

Tells Of Iceland Visit

It was with great pleasure that on my homeward voyage I visited Iceland. We were received with the utmost cordiality by the Government and the people.

I had the honor to review large numbers of strong British and United States forces which no doubt for performance of entirely different and separate duties happen to be engaged jointly in defending this important island, a stepping stone across the Atlantic, from Nazi intrusion and attack.

SEP 10 1941

Forces Assembled

Very considerable United States and British naval and air forces are assembled in Iceland. Spacious airfields which we have constructed and are expanding there and in Newfoundland will play an ever-increasing part, not only in the control of the broad waters, but in the continued flow of the ever-broadening stream of heavy bombers now acting against Germany, night after night, which will play a decisive part, or one of the decisive parts, in the final victory. . . .

We are in Syria only to end the war. However, we must make it quite clear that our policy and that of our Free French allies is that Syria is to be handed back to the Syrians, who will assume as soon as possible their independent sovereign rights. . . .

Nile Army Bolstered

Powerful reinforcements have reached the army of the Nile and I now feel considerable confidence that we shall be able to defend Egypt successfully from German invasion across the western desert. . . .

The magnificent resistance of the Russian armies and the successful manner in which their vast front is being withdrawn in the teeth of Nazi invasion makes it certain Hitler's hopes of a short war with Russia will be dispelled. Already in three months he has lost more German blood than was shed in any single year of the last war.

Aid Sped To Russia

Already he faces certainty of having to maintain his armies spread out from the Arctic to the Black Sea with precarious lines of communication through all the severities of a Russian winter and vigorous counter-strokes that may be expected from the Russian armies.

From the moment, now nearly eighty days ago, when Russia was invaded we have cast about for every means to give with the utmost speed effective help to our new ally. . . . The need is urgent and the scale is heavy because a considerable part of the munitions industry and the iron and steel production of Russia has fallen into the hands of the enemy. . . .

The flow of our own production in this country and in our empire is still rising. It will reach the full flood in the third year of the war when our factories are completed and come into bearing.

If the United States are to fulfill the task they are setting themselves, large installations will have to be set up or converted and there will have to be a further curtailment of civilian consumption over there.

Must Accept Decrease

We must ourselves expect definite reduction in the importation of supplies from America upon which we had counted. Within certain limits we are prepared to accept those facts and their consequences. . . .

We must have control and maintenance of the through communications from the warm water port of Basra to the Caspian Sea. It is from this point particularly that American supplies can be carried into the center of Russia in an ever-widening flow of British supplies as well.

"Captains Of Our Soul"

The allied front now runs in an enormous crescent from Spitsbergen in the Arctic Ocean region to Tobruk in the western desert and our section of this front will be held by British and empire armies with their growing strength fed and equipped by seaborne supplies from Great Britain, the United States, India and Australia and I am glad to say that adequate naval power will be at hand, both in the Atlantic and Indian Oceans, to secure these seas against all attacks.

The mood of Great Britain is widely and rightly averse from every form of shallow or premature exultation. This is not the time for boasting or glowing prophecies, but there is this: A year ago our position looked forlorn and well-nigh desperate to all eyes but our own. Today we may say aloud before an awe-struck world, "We still are masters of our fate. We still are captains of our soul."

Fuel Dump Afire Four Hours

One fuel dump, containing 75,000 gallons of oil, burned for four hours like a mighty blowtorch when the Canadians touched it off. The flames roared a mile above a fjord and drums were hurled into the sky like giant fireworks as they exploded.

Churchill disclosed to the House of Commons that "the Allied front now runs in an enormous crescent from Spitsbergen, in the Arctic Ocean, to Tobruk, in the western desert."

Ross Munro, Canadian Press correspondent who accompanied the expedition, was permitted to say that "vast stores of ammunition had to be unloaded as well as quantities of supplies."

[This indicated an occupation of some length was intended after accomplishment of the main purpose of the expedition—"to prevent the enemy from utilizing for their own war purposes Spitsbergen with its rich coal mines."]

The press used stories of the expedition as a basis for new calls for invasion of the Continent. The occupation was pictured as part of a plan to harry the Nazi forces attacking Russia and a means of aiding patrol of the North Atlantic.

"Most of the Canadians were bitterly disappointed because there wasn't any fighting," said Major Bill Bury, of Edmonton, Alta., a member of the expedition. "When we were sent on this trip we thought it was a godsend after the monotony of waiting."

A number of French soldiers who fought at Narvik last year and reached Spitsbergen after the Allied collapse in the north were brought back to London to join the Free French forces.

Some of the returning soldiers had copies of a Polar Post which the expedition issued at Spitzbergen and which carried this weather forecast, "Colder with probable snow flurries."

The mean temperature at Spitzbergen in winter time is about 8 degrees below zero, fahrenheit.

Oil, Coal Stores On Spitzbergen Fired by Allies

SEP 10 1941

Five Rich Mines Disabled in Raid; London Won't Say if Any Troops Remained

LONDON, Sept. 9 (AP).—Destruction of the Spitzbergen coal mines and the burning of great coal and oil reservoirs by Royal Canadian Engineers were confirmed tonight when British authorities, without explanation, lifted a ban against mention of the extent of the demolition operations.

An eyewitness correspondent was permitted to report for the first time that five rich mining properties were rendered useless and that 400,000 tons of coal and 125,000 gallons of fuel oil were set afire.

The first announcement of the Spitzbergen foray had declared that the chief purpose of the venture was to keep the coal out of German hands.

But while the full development of this aim was disclosed almost twenty-four hours after the initial announcement of the Arctic expedition, it was still not permissible to say whether any of the Canadian-British-Norwegian landing force had been left to garrison the archipelago. The War Office remained pointedly silent on that phase of the operation, though Prime Minister Winston Churchill placed Spitzbergen today on the Allied front against Germany and there were unofficial predictions that the invasion was only a foretaste of more to follow.

It would take months to make the mines useful again and the Canadian forces leading the expedition removed millions of dollars worth of essential machinery, [redacted]

German Plans to Seize Mines Are Declared Foiled Bloodlessly

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Spet. 9.—Alleged German plans for seizure of the rich coal mines of Spitzbergen, Arctic Archipelago owned by Nazi-occupied Norway, were declared officially today to have been thwarted bloodlessly by a powerful Canadian, British and Free Norwegian expeditionary force in a full-dress invasion which the natives welcomed.

"This source of fuel has now been denied to the Germans, the British War Office said, without reporting whether the mines simply were left under guard or their usefulness destroyed. They have been worked primarily by Norwegian and Russian labor.

(Authorized Germans said the British had destroyed the mines as well as the radio at Spitzbergen.)

Civilians helped the soldiers unload their craft of munitions and supplies.

(This operation suggested the establishment of a garrison. The War Office, however, did not disclose whether a garrison was left on the islands, this being officially regarded as "information useful to the enemy.")

The expedition was led by the Canadian brigadier, Arthur E. Potts of Saskatoon, Saskatchewan.

Had "Various Purposes."

British ships removed about 1,000 Norwegians—miners and their families—to England, where the men signed up for military or merchant marine service. It thus was indicated that at least some of the mines, which produced 707,117 tons of coal in 1936, would be out of operation for the duration of the war.

The British also brought back a number of French officers and other ranks, part of the Allied force which fought at Narvik last year. They will join the Free French forces.

The War Office said "various purposes" led to the dispatch of a military force to the mountainous, glacial islands and London newspapers saw Spitzbergen as a possible waystation for direct aid to Russia. Spitzbergen's two radio stations were seized.

Several regiments and special units—donning leather jerkins, sheepskin coats, and sweaters to ward off the chill of the long Arctic day and white Arctic night at sea—made the 1,259-mile trip to the archipelago, only 750 miles from the North Pole, aboard a troopship heavily guarded by war craft.

German Plane Sighted.

Neither on the voyage nor in the landing, the officers said, were they opposed. The only German war craft sighted was a reconnaissance plane, which flew along the coast one day but apparently failed to spot Canadian units nearby.

The landing was made in a manner similar to a raid on the Norwegian Lofoten Islands last March, in which the British reported the capture of 225 men, Germans and their Norwegian adherents, sinking of 11 ships and destruction of a fish oil plant used in the manufacture of explosives.

It was to prevent reprisals such as followed the Lofoten raids that Spitsbergen Norwegians were withdrawn to England. Members of the party said no Norwegian was left behind.

Canadian Trappers on Job.

Many of the soldiers were formerly trappers and hunters in northern Canada. Others were rugged farmers, accustomed to the rigors of outdoor life in cold, Canadian winters.

Landing parties nosing through a mist-shrouded fjord gripped machine-guns, rifles and grenades, expecting trouble. They were greeted by groups of Norwegian and Russian miners, the latter in padded blue tunics and with trousers tucked into high boots.

"They just stood and looked at us for a full minute," said a member of the commander's party. "The commander made some overtures, saying 'Hello.' Finally a Russian who seemed to be one of the head men came up and shook hands, bowing formally."

Despite language difficulties, friendships developed swiftly. The civilians helped the soldiers unload their craft and helped also in operations at the radio stations. The miners gave the troops cigarettes, candy and souvenirs. Officers and men were billeted in private homes as well as in community buildings.

Under Soviet Flag.

A Russian motor boat pilot whose craft was chartered by the commander to make a trip to one of his ships broke out the red emblem of Soviet Russia as he steered from the dock.

"I guess I am the first Canadian commander ever to sail under the flag of our Soviet Allies," the officer said.

Norwegians, particularly the young people, were reported to be glad to leave Spitsbergen when the time came for them to board the troopship for the voyage to England.

Many of the children were dressed in colorful ski costumes.

Miners said their wages were reduced after the German occupation of Norway and that trade union representatives sent to Oslo to negotiate had returned in failure.

On the first anniversary of the German invasion this spring, they said, a vast mine fire broke out and destroyed 40,000 tons of coal. Five men were reported killed.

Additional details of the invasion were expected to be presented before Parliament soon.

"The precise political significance of the landing," said the Daily Express, "must, for obvious reasons, remain secret for the present. But it is understood it is part of a plan which includes harrying of Nazi forces attacking Russia."

"Welcome Appetizer"

The News Chronicle said the landing "may reasonably be deemed a small but welcome appetizer for offensive land operations which Britain must undertake in more than one theatre of the war if she is to play her full part in easing the prolonged strain on her Russian ally."

"Sure possession of this Arctic base should assist our patrols in the North Atlantic. It carries a threat also against Axis forces striking at Russian territory in the extreme north."

Pack ice prevents access to most of the islands from October until June. But vessels can approach the western coast of the chief island of the 25,000-square-mile chain, West Spitsbergen, during most months.

By air it is 700 miles to Murmansk, Soviet Arctic port. It is as far from Spitsbergen to menaced Leningrad, however, as it is to London.

HAPPY LANDING IN SPITZBERGEN

'We're Invading Rockies,' One Canadian Exclaimed.

By ROSS MUNRO.

Canadian War Correspondent.

Copyright, 1941, by the Canadian Press.

With the Canadian Spitzbergen Expedition, Sept. 9.—I have traveled with an Allied force composed mainly of Canadians supported by Britons and Norwegians, into the Arctic Circle to a strange landing that might have been a bitter and bloody battle, but which turned out to be an unopposed, peaceful sortie to prevent the flow of high-grade Norwegian coal to the Nazi Reich.

Into this land of glaciers, where stark, snow-crested mountains, push up through mists, where reindeer roam and seals splash offshore, the force came on a mission described by the commanding officer as "not an invasion but merely a necessary part of the common war against Germany."

Canadians Miss a Fight.

Norwegians and Russians—the Russians outnumber the Norwegians three to one—have been mining the coal in the Spitzbergen Archipelago, 750 miles from the North Pole, and they both hailed the arrival of their allies with a warmth and enthusiasm that contrasted with the reception of steel and gunfire the Canadians had been prepared to face. Some 1,000 Norwegians were removed to Britain, to take up with their fellow-citizens serving in the Norwegian forces the fight against the Nazis.

For the Canadians it was the first taste of the "real thing." Never had I seen them so enthusiastic and eager as they were on this trip. The only thing they needed to make the expedition a Norwegians Sent to Britain.

But it was not all affable sociability. Vast stores of ammunition had to be unloaded as well as quantities of supplies. The departing Norwegians had to be organized and their baggage piled aboard ship. Arduous duties took the place of combat, and in these the Norwegians and the Russians gave a cheerful helping hand.

The expedition left a British port in warm weather, and shrouded in utter secrecy, but after a few days at sea, heavy clothing was put on. The men drilled on deck to keep in trim. They were not told their destination until twenty-four hours before they landed. Five miles off West Spitzbergen we sighted the grim black mountains, crested with snow. Then a mist settled down. "It looks as if we're invading the Rockies," said a Calgary soldier as he gripped his tommy gun.

The Word Is 'Vodka.'

Several Canadian landings were made from other ships as we moved slowly to anchorage at the mouth of the fjord, and the main force prepared to disembark. I went ashore with the commander, expecting anything to happen. But it was a dud. We were welcomed by about a dozen miners.

One soldier thought he was making great progress with the language when, after asking for a drink of vodka, a Russian rushed him off to his home and poured out a four-finger drink. The Canadian smacked his lips and downed it. It was water.

A Norwegian settlement down the fjord was the neatest and tidiest on the whole island. When the Canadians got there, they marched to the Community Hall, but the hospitable Norwegians would not let them take it over as a troop billet until the women had scrubbed it thoroughly.

One of the queerest things about the expedition was the all-night daylight at Spitzbergen. Some found it difficult to sleep, but as time advanced there was a little twilight and lights were put on in the streets for a while. No blackout could be enforced, however. Nature just wouldn't have one.

Spitsbergen Force Rescues French Who Fled Nazi Camp

SEP 10 '41

Officers And Soldiers Taken To England To Join De Gaullists—Censorship Shrouds Details

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 9—Several French officers and men who escaped from Nazi prison camps more than a year ago and since have wandered forlornly through the hidden byways of Europe have been brought back to Britain by the Spitsbergen expedition and will join the Free French forces of General de Gaulle.

Details of their adventures and of how they met the Canadian force which rescued them were shrouded by censorship, but this much was made known:

The Frenchmen were captured by the Germans during the Flanders campaign.

"We made our escape from German camps in dribbles and met later," said a young officer who once worked in a Paris business office.

"We knew how the war was going and about the Vichy situation, and we ali vowed to join the Free French and fight on against the Nazis."

With tears of joy the ragged, bearded men recognized the British ship and went out to meet it.

Some leaned from their small boats to caress the warship's sides. A few tried to sing "God Save the King," but choked with emotion.

The Canadians who occupied Spitsbergen gave the French some Canadian boots and uniforms to replace the civilian rags they wore.

Stroking his new shirt, a captain who once commanded a tank battalion exclaimed:

"For fourteen months we were dead men; now Canada and Britain have given us a second life.

"It is said that a man always has two fatherlands—his own and France. I say we now have our two fatherlands—France and Britain."

Others joined in exclamations over the food they had eaten after so many months of hunger.

3 Amereican Fliers With RAF Missing Since Sunday

SEP 10 1941

Failed to Return From Operations Over France

LONDON, Sept. 9 (AP)—Three fliers of the American Eagle squadron were listed as missing today from flights in which surviving pilots said they met "a hell of a lot of Messerschmitts" over occupied France Sunday.

Those missing were Eugene Quimby, (Red) Tobin, Los Angeles; H. S. Fenlaw, Lewisville, Tex., and William H. Nichols, San Carlos, Calif.

An Eagle squadron source said the loss Sunday was the squadron's heaviest of the war. Its fliers have shot down at least 16 German planes.

"Our boys just ran into tough opposition," said a flier. "Messerschmitts were literally swarming over France. There were at least 100 in one flight."

Tobin has been credited unofficially with being the first American pilot to shoot down a German plane over Britain but he had refused to claim the victory.

S. Fenlaw of Lewisville, Tex., and William H. Nichols of San Carlos, Calif.

An Eagle Squadron source commented: "Yesterday, of course, was the first time we lost three pilots in one day.

"Our boys just ran into tough opposition. They were hopped on by a hell of a lot of enemy planes. Pilots on the sweeps reported Messerschmitts literally were swarming over France. One said he sighted at least a hundred."

Credited With First Nazi Plane.

Tobin, big and red-haired, was reported to have been the first flyer from the United States to shoot down a German plane over Britain.

To close friends he always said, "I couldn't help shooting at him. I was flying on patrol one day and there he was."

Tobin never would confirm his shooting down of the plane, however, saying, "Man, you get in more trouble with the R. A. F. over a thing like that than with the Germans."

16 or 17 Claimed for Eagles.

One American source said that against the Eagles' losses, "I know unofficially they have shot down at least 16 or 17 German planes. In addition to this they are credited with a number of probables and a number of German planes damaged."

Tobin, with three other United States youths, headed for Europe in the early days of the war with the idea of forming another Lafayette Escadrille.

R. A. F. Changes Mind.

They reached France about the time of the French collapse and barely got out ahead of the invaders. Finally reaching Britain, Tobin and his companions tried to join the R. A. F. R. A. F. officers were not interested. They said the youths did not have enough experience.

Tobin and the others dejectedly prepared to return to the United States, but then found that this was not easy either. The American Embassy finally aided them, but when they were about ready to leave,

The first time Tobin took up a Spitfire he nearly wrecked it.

"It was then," he grinned in telling the story, "that I really realized that I didn't know how to fly."

He applied himself, though, and fellow flyers said he turned out to be one of the best pilots among the Eagles, American unit of the R. A. F.

During the winter and early spring his activities were confined to the air over Britain.

Nazis Belittle Move.

Berlin, Sept. 9 (A. P.).—Authorized German sources declared today they were informed the British had destroyed the mines and radio at Spitzbergen and "the Norwegian people who have been getting coal from Spitzbergen certainly will not like this."

Otherwise they dismissed the British-Canadian-Norwegian landing on the islands as a typical prestige move.

Authorized German spckesmen said that it was obviously aimed at stiffening Russia's back, but that it was not clear what practical results were expected to follow.

They declared that Germany economically was little interested in Spitzbergen, and the British statement that the step was taken to prevent Germany's making use of the islands' coal mines was described as pretty far-fetched.

If the British expected to relieve the pressure on Russia by in Spitzbergen, and the British speaker said, "it is a pretty cheap undertaking because it involved neither risk of defeat nor sacrifice of blood."

Derision also was forthcoming. Authorized spokesmen described the seizure as bringing the British one step nearer the north pole.

"If Spitzsbergen had any military importance you may rest assured we would have been there before the British," was another comment.

Recruit For R. A. F. Describes Sinking In Which 4 Mates Died

Sub Trailed Vessel For More Than Day; Survivor Says; Broken Engine Hastened Tragedy

By EDDY GILMORE

Associated Press Correspondent

London, Sept. 9—The vessel on which four American recruits for the R. A. F. were killed recently was trailed for more than a day by the attacking submarine, one of the seven survivors disclosed here tonight.

The survivor, Jim Jordan, of Pasadena, Cal., also disclosed for the first time the names of the four who lost their lives. They were:

Harry Hay, Tallahassee, Fla.; William Bishop, Cleveland, Ohio; Frank Kruszynski, whose address was unknown to Jordan, and a youth whose last name was Cox, from New York city.

"The last two didn't train with me," Jordan said, "but I got to know them on the boat."

Anxious To Seek Sub

Jordan, who like the other flyers was trained in Canada for R. A. F. duty, donned his uniform today and begged for a plane to bomb the submarine that took the life of his four companions.

"Boy," he said, sticking out his jaw, "I saw those fellows die. I want to do something about them."

The survivors reached a British port Friday, and their names were made public the following day, but few details of the torpedoing became known to the public until Jordan told his story tonight.

Trailed By Submarine

"We realized one morning that we were being trailed by a submarine," Jordan said. "That didn't worry us much, but later in the day our engine broke down. We worked on it—all eleven American boys—for sixteen hours.

"The broken engine reduced our speed from sixteen knots to seven. That's a hell of a feeling when you know a submarine is after you. Anyhow, we chugged along zigzagging and twisting for another day.

"The next day there was a fog and first thing we knew out of this fog came a plane. It machine-gunned us, turned a cannon on us and dropped a bomb or two. The bomb didn't hit us, but the machine gun and the cannon surely knocked us about.

"Along about dusk subs closed in on us. We could even see their periscopes. They would come up, then duck down and then come up again.

Came An Awful Bang

"I saw one very close. I ran and got the captain, and just then there was an awful bang and a mass of black smoke and spray. We were hit all right, and began listing to port.

"We were so badly hit that we couldn't stop our engine. She just kept going 'round and 'round. The machine guns and the cannon had banged up both our lifeboats so we began throwing off rafts.

"I threw one off and then slid down the side of the ship after it. I got caught in a flock of ropes and swung out from the side of the boat. Then I swung back and bounced off the boat. I reckon that saved my life.

Men's Screams Above Whistle

"The others did the same thing. The listing boat began chasing us. I saw the ship's propeller cut into a bunch of them and about twenty fellows including seamen got chopped up.

"All this time the ship's whistle was screaming. I never knew there could be such a horrible noise in my life. And I never knew that men's screams could be heard above the whistle's scream. But they were. Later, I'm afraid, their screaming stopped."

Jordan said he and ten others clung to two rafts for eleven and one half hours. The submarine approached them once, he said.

"The sub gunner turned his gun on us," Jordan said. "I thought it was all up. Then the commander waved him aside. He later gave us some meat."

A Polish warship picked up the survivors. Thirty-seven of the ship's crew and passengers were lost.

Hay Former Newspaperman

Tallahassee, Fla., Sept. 9 (AP)—Harry Hay, one of four American flyers lost Friday when their ship was torpedoed en route to England, had operated a travel agency here for eleven years. He joined the British Royal Air Force last April.

Hay is survived by his widow, Dr. Marion Hay, who is an associate professor of education at Florida State College for Women here.

Hay was a member of the Associated Press staff in Columbus, Ohio, and Des Moines, Iowa, from 1925 to 1928. He was 37 year old.

Trained at Pensacola and Tulsa

Frank Kruszynski Jr. is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kruszynski, 2043 Nostrand Avenue, Brooklyn. His father said last night that Frank, 27, a native of Brooklyn, had first joined the United States Naval Air Corps about a year and a half ago and trained for seven months at Pensacola, Fla. In June, 1940, he received discharge papers from the Navy and went to Tulsa, Okla., to train for the Royal Air Force.

Three weeks ago, the father said, the flier sent word that he was going overseas and that he would write later. Last night a telegram arrived at the Brooklyn home from the British Navy, stating that the young man was missing.

Another of the American pilots was identified as Johnson Cox, 26, son of Mrs. C. J. Cox of Port Chester, N. Y. Captain Maxwell W. Balfour, director of the Spartan School of Aeronautics of Tulsa, who made the identification, said the young man had a wife living in Chicago.

Embassy Still Sees Hope

DES MOINES, Iowa, Sept. 9 (AP)—The British Embassy at Washington tonight gave the family of Harry Hay, reported one of four American Royal Air Force recruits lost in the recent sinking of a ship carrying them to England, some hope for believing he might still be alive. A brother, Curtis Hay Jr., said the embassy reported there was a chance he might be in a lifeboat or on a raft or that he had been picked up by another British vessel or taken prisoner by the Germans.

The brother said the embassy pointed out that men from other vessels had been reported lost for as long as three weeks and then had appeared.

BRITISH CLAIM SIX AXIS SHIPS AS DAY'S BAG

Five German And One Italian Vessel Reported Toll Of Naval Raiders

Locomotive Works A Cassel Bombed—Attacks Reach From Arctic To Africa

SEP 10 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 9—British naval and aerial raiders reported tonight they had sunk six Axis ships, probably destroyed two more, damaged others and pounded the locomotive works of the German city of Kassel in attacks stretching fro mthe Arctic to Bengasi in the Mediterranean.

Five of the ships reported sunk were German, one Italian.

German Toll Listed

The five German vessels were:

The warship Bremse, 146 tons.

A destroyer.

An unidentified vessel.

An armed trawler sunk by "light forces" operating under Rear Admiral P. L. Vian, D. S. O., against German convoys supplying troops on the Murmansk front against Russia.

A 4,000-ton German supply ship torpedoed in a "strongly escorted" convoy in the English Channel.

The Admiralty said a British submarine sank a large Italian schooner in the central Mediterranean.

The Germans alread had acknowledged the loss of the Bremse, which they classed as an artillery cadet craft. The London Admiralty called it a light cruiser.

Still other ships were reported damaged in the battle.

Norwegians Aid British

Norwegian patrols joined the British in a running fight in the English Channel which accounted for the sinking of one supply ship and the probable sinking of another, and a German motor torpedo boat. An armed trawler also was reported set afire in the English Channel action.

Both supply ships were torpedoed in the English channel when their convoy was sighted and attacked at midnight and followed until morning.

Nearly one hundred R. A. F. planes pounded the locomotive workshops of Kassel. The Air Ministry said most of the planes got through to blast their targets and that Germany's heightened need for railway transportation for the Russian campaign gave the raid importance.

Münster Anr Cerbourg Bombed

R. A. F. flyers also bombed Muenster and other objectives in western Germany and the docks at Cherbourg (German-occupied France), the Air Ministry said.

In the Mediterranean a second British submarine was said by the Admiralty to have attacked and hit two lighters off the harbor of Bengasi, chief port of Cirenaica, in Italian Libya. One was believed sunk.

Admitted British losses in all these attacks were four men wounded in the English Channel fighting and two airmen killed in an accident during the Kassel flight.

One German plane was reported downed overnight, German air activity over England being limited to single-plane dashes over coastal districts in eastern and southwest England. A few British casualties and minor damage were reported from these attacks.

100 British Planes Raid Nazi Locomotive Works, London Says

Majority of Attackers Said to Have Reached Goal; None Missing

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—Nearly 100 planes took part in an R. A. F. raid during the night on Kassel, Germany, site of the extensive Kenschel locomotive workshops, authoritative British reported today.

The majority of the attackers reached their objective and not a single aircraft was missing, it was stated, though two members of one crew were killed in an accident.

The British said they considered the raid on the locomotive shops particularly important in view of the Russian campaign, which makes great use of railway transportation for troops and supplies.

Many Bomb Bursts Seen.

"The weather was favorable," the Air Ministry said, "and many bombs were seen to burst on the targets.

"Objectives at Muenster and other places in Western Germany as well as the docks at Cherbourg (in German-occupied France) also were bombed."

German air operations against Great Britain during the night were confined to single-plane forays over coastal districts in Eastern and Southwest England, a government communique said.

A small number of casualties was reported from one point, the government said, minor damage occurred at a few widely-separated points, it added.

One Raider Destroyed.

One of the invading aircraft was claimed destroyed.

An earlier communique on yesterday's British operations declared two fortress aircraft were missing from a formation which carried out a long-distance scouting flight.

These were the first of the huge American-made bombers reported lost.

BRITAIN REPORTS THREE NAZI SHIPS SUNK IN ARCTIC

Thinks Fourth Was Sent Down in Battle—Berlin Admits Loss of One.

London, Sept. 9 (A. P.).—British naval forces in the Arctic have sunk three German ships supplying troops on the Russian Arctic front and in addition probably have sunk the German warship Bremse, the Admiralty announced tonight.

[The German High Command acknowledged that the Bremse, described as a 1,400-ton artillery cadet ship on convoy duty, had been lost after a short and fierce fight with the British.]

The three vessels sunk were a

30.24 — 11707

destroyer, an armed trawler and another ship, the Admiralty said. The Bremse, described here as a light cruiser, "is believed to have been sunk," a communique said.

Still other ships probably were damaged in the action, which occurred near Murmansk, the Admiralty said.

British and Norwegian patrols in the English Channel in a running fight last night and this morning sank one German supply ship of 4,000 tons, probably sank another of 3,500 tons, set an armed trawler afire and probably destroyed a Nazi torpedo boat, the Admiralty announced today.

The British said that four of their men were wounded, but that none of their ships were damaged.

The convoy, strongly escorted, was attacked first just before midnight, shadowed and attacked again, torpedoes accounting for both the supply ships.

The torpedoing and sinking of a large Italian schooner by a British submarine in the central Mediterranean also was announced today by the Admiralty.

In addition, two lighters were engaged by a British submarine off Bengasi, on the north African coast. Both were hit and one may have been sunk, the Admiralty said.

Cadet Ship Sunk.

Ber[illegible] Sept. 9 (A. P.).—The German High Command announced today the loss of the German artillery cadet ship Bremse after a short but fierce fight with British units in northern waters.

The 1,460-ton warship was on convoy duty, supplying German troops in the extreme north, a communique said. She was taken by surprise by a British cruiser and two destroyers off northern Norway, while visibility was poor.

"Protecting a convoy, the Bremse accepted the fight against the superior enemy forces and was lost after a short, fierce fight," the communique continued. "She received several torpedo hits."

"All the ships of convoy, because of the courageous operation of the Bremse, reached their destination undamaged. Part of the crew was saved."

[The Bremse, built in 1929, was about the size of a large destroyer and usually carried a crew of 192. Armed with four 5-inch guns and several anti-aircraft cannon, she could do twenty-seven knots and was used before the war for towing high-speed gunnery targets. The British had reported she was extensively damaged by air attack in May, 1940.]

Meanwhile informed sources reported today that German submarines had sunk 21,500 tons of British shipping in the Atlantic, including four vessels from a single convoy.

Convoy Scattered

Berlin, Sept. 9.—(AP)—The German Air Force attacked Moscow and Leningrad during the night, DNB reported today.

The raiders set fire to a big automobile factory in the Russian capital and successfully bombed provisioning facilities of encircled Leningrad, the news agency declared.

At the same time armed Nazi scout planes were said to have bombed harbors on the English east coast, while big German guns on the French coast scattered a convoy in Dover Strait.

On the African front, German night raiders were reported to have followed up a daylight attack on Tobruk, Libya, by blasting the Egyptian port of Alexandria, where the British have a big naval base.

Dead and wounded were left in the wake of a British raid on Kassel, 75 miles south of Hannover, and other sections of western and southwestern Germany, the Germans announced, but there was no raid on Berlin.

(The British did not officially report a raid on Berlin, although a broadcast of BBC, heard by CBS and NBC last night, said the German radio had announced the RAF attacked the capital.)

Italians Admit Sinking Of Big Ship by British

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Sept. 9.—The Italian high command acknowledged today that a British submarine had sunk the 11,398-ton Italian steamer Esperia in the Central Mediterranean, but said almost all of those aboard had been rescued by escorting warships.

(The Admiralty in London announced Saturday that the Esperia had been sunk by a British submarine off Tripoli. The announcement said the vessel, which was presumed to be carrying axis reinforcements to North Africa, was traveling with an exceptionally strong naval escort.)

The daily war bulletin also reported that British air raiders had attacked Palermo, Sicily, again last night, but said most of the bombs fell in the open sea.

It was the second raid on Palermo in as many nights. The toll of casualties resulting from Sunday night's raid was raised to 27 dead and 58 injured by official count.

Air Fight In Africa

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Sept. 9—The Milan Corriere Della Sera's correspondent in North Africa reported today a first air fight on August 8 in which "Americans" took part and said four of the opposing planes were shot down in flames into the sea.

The correspondent did not say on what information he based his statement that American pilots took part, but he quoted British prisoners to the effect that the American-made planes were not regarded as of high fighting quality.

"Experience Deficient"

The dispatch said twelve American-made Tomahawks and eight British Hurricanes escorting a convoy near Sidi Barrani were attacked by German Messerschmitt 109's and new Italian Macchi fighters and dive bombers.

The dispatch said the Tomahawks were piloted by young Americans, Canadians and Australians whose "experience sometimes is deficient."

Axis Radios Step Up Criticism of Roosevelt

New York, Sept. 9.—(AP.)—German and Italian short wave radios stepped up their criticism of President Roosevelt throughout broadcasts today, CBS listening stations reported.

Broadcasters in each country called the President a liar and elaborated on their daily accusation that he was trying to get the United States into the war.

"His menacing remarks to the Axis powers testify that war is the aim of the Government of the United States," said the Rome announcer. "Lying is one of the President's habits. Nobody believes the declarations of Roosevelt concerning the Greer case. Not even the Americans believe him."

The Berlin announcer charged that the President falsified the Greer incident to "look like a case of unprovoked aggression and bring about the desired indignation and war threat."

Counter-AttacksAtOdessa And Leningrad Also Reported

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Wednesday, Sept. 10. German bombers twice tried to attack the capital last night and early today, but were dispersed by Russian night fighters and anti-aircraft fire, it was announced officially.

One German plane was reported shot down as it approached the city.

The first alarm lasted from 10 P. M. until 1.05 A. M., and the second from 2.15 to 4 A. M.

By HENRY CASSIDY
[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Wednesday, Sept. 10—The Red army's biggest victory of the war, on the central front where shattered remnants of a 100,000-man Nazi force are reported in disordered retreat, drew from an official Soviet spokesman today the declaration that "the impending rout of all the German armies can already be discerned."

S. A. Lozovsky, Assistant Foreign Commissar who serves as liaison with the foreign press, said this vast operation, plus the unending counter-attacks by the Russians before Odessa and the determined stand of Leningrad's defenders are "signs of growing Red army resistance."

"Our confidence in final victory is growing," he added.

Stresses Air War Fury

The Soviet Information Bureau, reporting on yesterday's fighting, fell back on its usual brief statement that stubborn battles still raged along the entire front.

It emphasized the fury of the air war with the announcement that on Sunday seventy-one German planes were destroyed in combat and on the ground against twenty-four Russian losses. Two Nazi reconnaissance planes were reported downed near Moscow in daylight yesterday.

The victorious Soviet forces on the Central front, under the personal direction of Marshal Semeon Timoshenko, were declared in hot pursuit of survivors of the German forces. The Russians were reported officially to have reconquered 150 square miles of territory and 50 villages in two days.

Rain And Cold Contribute

Rain and cold which already has set in on the Northern front, Lozovsky said, "is only a contributing factor" to the defeat of the Germans.

"The main thing is," he added, "that the might of the Red army the unity of the Soviet people, reserves of man power and industry are great potentialities not only for resistance but also for counter-blows."

The blow delivered against the Germans thrusting toward Moscow from the Smolensk sector was not a local one, he asserted, and added that "the space of action is limited but it is hard-felt by the entire German army."

Lozovsky described the whole front as 'not continuous, but a zigzag line."

Try To Cut Off Wedge

"The Germans are trying to wedge in," he went on, "and we are trying to wedge their wedge and cut it off.

"Along the entire front there is incessant fighting of unprecedented intensity. This is the reason for the great losses of the Germans and their exhaustion, moral and physical, and in equipment."

In the fighting around Odessa he said sixteen Rumanian divisions originally were thrown into the struggle and that now more than half of them already have been shattered.

Rumanian Losses Cited

On the south the Rumanians, to whom the Nazis have left the siege of Odessa, have seen 20,000 of their soldiery slain in ten days in the approaches to that Black Sea port, said a Soviet communique which lauded the Red navy garrison for daily sallies into the field to scourge the foe.

Of besieged Leningrad in the north the Rusians had little to say, but they buttressed with a wealth of detail the midnight announcement of Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's triumph in the center, the greatest individual victory claimed by the Soviet Union since the German invasion began on June 22.

Novelist Describes Battle

Pravda, the Communist party newspaper, gave this account of the battle, as relayed by its front-line correspondent, a novelist named Stavsky:

The Germans reached Yelnya, forty miles east of Smolensk and 200 miles southwest of Moscow, in July—a fact hitherto not acknowledged—but were unable to advance a step farther.

They then chose that railway town as the headquarters for their planned march to Moscow, and started bringing up masses of men and materials. They heavily fortified the region with trenches, barbed wire and steel-and-concrete fortresses on the heights.

Following a method used so successfully against the Mannerheim line in Finland in 1940, Timoshenko's cannoneers started bombarding the Germans with heavy artillery day and night, with never a breathing space.

The Moscow communique said this battle began twenty-six days ago, but Pravda's account indicated there was practically no letup from the moment the Germans reached Yelnya.

Following a pre-arranged plan, it continued, the Red army went on the offensive suddenly and broke up the Fifteenth German Infantry Division and the Tenth Tank Division, capturing prisoners and booty.

But the Germans hung on, although on the defensive now, in their newmade forts on the hills.

Chopped Up Regiments

The whole Yelnya area became "giant mincing machine" which chopped up German regiments with terrible cannon fire. Still the German command brought up new divisions regularly to replace those battered by the guns.

Finally, on September 4, the Russians made certain—how was not stated—that besides the two earlier divisions they had smashed the Seventeenth, One Hundred and Thirty-seventh, One Hundred and Seventy-eighth, Two Hundred and Sixty-eighth and Two Hundred and Ninety-second infantry divisions and a division of the Elite S. S., pride of Hitler's armies.

The Germans remaining were almost surrounded, having a way out to the west through a narrow neck of land about five miles wide and under constant Soviet fire which had carpeted it with dead Nazis.

Left Crews As Screen

On the night of September 4, the Germans pulled out.

"Having left doomed automatic riflemen and mine-thrower crews as a screen, and opening frenzied artillery and mine-thrower fire at our troops constricting the neck," said the Pravda correspondent, "the German troops retreated in panic and disorder.

"It would be truer to call it flight, rather than retreat. In the fields and woods of Yelnya the Germans left unburied tens of thousands of dead men and officers. They managed to carry away an equal number of wounded.

"Our trophies have not yet been counted, but we already have gathered 102 German guns of various calibres, 195 machine guns and quantities of shells and cartridges running into the hundreds of thousands."

The Russians even seized two planes, he said, and have not yet bothered to salvage all the equipment the Germans abandoned.

"Our glorious troops are continuing to pursue the retreating enemy, not allowing him a moment's rest or respite," wrote Stavsky. "Cannonading may be heard from the west, a good twenty kilometers from Yelnya."

Capture Cavalry Squadron

In the defense of Odessa, the Soviet Information Bureau said Red sailors and marines had inflicted the worst losses on the Rumanian First, Eleventh and Twenty-first divisions. The marines captured intact a Rumanian Royal Cavalry squadron of 200 men.

Kiev, the Ukrainian capital, still holds firm against the Nazis. Pravda published a letter from Kiev by a Polish writer, Wanda Wassilewska, reporting the streets barricaded and the suburbs defended by a constant curtain of artillery fire that the Germans could not penetrate.

Leningrad, the third and greatest of the three closely-threatened Russian cities, was covered by inference in the noon communique which said "our troops continued to fight the enemy along the whole front."

Counter-attacks continued in the approaches to Leningrad, said Red Star, the army newspaper. It reported one Red Army unit broke up a German advance on the point "P" by attacking first, routing the Nazis and taking 217 prisoners.

Another dispatch said the Germans attacked the area around the city of "N" for five days without breaking through, and that when the Red Army ran short of munitions the civilians brought up thousands of gasoline-filled bottles which were used to repulse the German tank columns.

Barges Sunk

Red Star said that on the south-central front Russian planes sank several German barges which were attempting to ferry troops, trucks and artillery across the Teterev River near Gornostaipol, 65 miles northwest of Kiev. A line of 200 trucks was bombed there also, it said.

Fast Russian bombers called "gulls" were credited with destroying 19 Nazi planes in raids on two districts around Dnieperopetrovsk.

The official Soviet news agency Tass told of German capture of two villages on the River "B" at an unidentified spot on the front, and said, "but our infantry launched a vigorous counter-attack and, although the Fascists had numerical superiority, they were driven back far beyond their original positions. In this engagement our infantry destroyed five German companies."

Nazis Pursued In 16-Mile Push, Russians Claim

50 Villages Retaken On Central Front, Soviet Asserts

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Sept. 9.—The Soviet Armies of the central front today were pursuing the broken remnants of a German force of 100,000 men westward toward Smolensk, having thrust the Nazis back 16 miles in two days and recaptured 150 square miles of territory and 50 villages in a gigantic continuing battle, official dispatches reported.

A communique reported that within 10 days the Rumanians besieging Odessa have left more than 20,000 dead in the approaches to that Black Sea port as the Red Navy leads a daily sortie against the Germans' allies.

It was the big counterthrust on the central front, however, that shone as the rosiest star on the Soviet horizon.

8 Divisions Cut Up.

A government communique said eight Nazi divisions were cut to pieces in the fierce counteroffensive which began 26 days ago and reached its climax with recapture of the railway town of Yelnya, 200 miles southwest of Moscow and 40 miles east of Smolensk.

Front-line reports to Pravda, the official Communist party newspaper, gave an even more striking account of this greatest victory yet claimed by the Russians in nearly 12 weeks of war.

The Germans reached Yelnya in July, it was admitted, and chose it as the base site from which to launch their great drive on Moscow.

But the Russians struck back with fury, and soon smashed the German 10th Tank Division and 15th Infantry Division, capturing many heavy guns, prisoners and much ammunition, said the novelist Stavsky, correspondent for Pravda.

Dug in On Heights.

The Germans promptly dug in on the surrounding heights, building massive fortifications of iron and concrete linked by deep trenches and guarded by barbed wire.

The Russians settled down to a fiery artillery bombardment.

"The German command hastened to bring up fresh divisions," he wrote, "disregarding the fact that the Yelnya district had become a giant mincing machine for German regiments.

"Division after division passed through the Yelnya district. Tons of metal poured down on the Germans and battered divisions were withdrawn to the rear, but the German command continued to cling to the district."

Retreat Has Become Rout.

Finally, the Pravda account continued, the Russian pressure became so great that by September 4 there was no doubt of the outcome. The German 15th, 17th, 137th, 178th, 268th and 292d infantry divisions, a motorized division and a division of the Elite Nazi S. S. troops had been smashed, and their remnants maintained communications with the rear through a narrow pathway 5 miles wide, constantly under Russian fire.

This horrible route was carpeted with German corpses, Pravda said, and finally the Germans fell back in a retreat that has become a rout.

Tens of thousands of unburied dead lay where they had fallen, and there were equal numbers of wounded who were carried westward by their comrades, the dispatch said.

Russian booty, not yet fully counted, or even collected as the hot pursuit continued, was said to include 102 big German cannon and all sorts of ammunition and smaller arms.

The artillery of the Red Army now is pounding the Germans' backs a good 13 miles or more west of Yelnya, Pravda concluded.

May Relieve Leningrad.

Military observers expressed belief the success might relieve pressure on Leningrad, compelling the Nazis to withdraw some troops from that northern sector to save their sagging lines in the center.

The communique reporting the Soviet victory on the central front failed to give a clear picture of the situation around hard-pressed Leningrad, but devoted considerable space to reports of guerrilla activities far behind the German lines in that area.

All reports from the front pictured the Leningrad civilian population as fighting side by side with Red soldiers and contesting every foot of ground with the Nazi invaders.

Counterattacks Repeated.

Details of operations on the southern end of the front were scanty, but repeated Russian counterattacks were said to be relieving heavy German pressure on the Ukrainian capital of Kiev and the Black Sea port of Odessa.

Moscow had its first air raid alarm since August 27 as German raiders struck at the city last night, but a communique said that only two planes succeeded in breaking through the capital's defenses. The Germans unloaded a few fire bombs and several small high explosive missiles which damaged three buildings, the bulletin declared. The alarm lasted three hours.

The bulletin also reported that a Russian air squadron bombed the Rumanian capital of Bucharest on Sunday without losing a single plane.

Nazis Claim Leningrad Fall Is Merely Matter Of Time

City Held Powerless Under Rain Of Shells, According To Berlin Sources

SEP 10 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 9—Leningrad, surrounded and isolated from the rest of Russia, is being attacked by every military means at Germany's command and "should be taken within a reasonable space of time," authorized Nazi sources declared tonight.

Both the high command communique and accounts of authoritative commentators told of bombs and shells from the massed might of German air and artillery forces pounding relentlessly into the heart of the city.

By all German accounts the plight of the old capital of Peter the Great grew more desperate with each passing hour.

Plants Under Steady Fire

Its 3,200,000 people are unable even to keep their industrial facilities in operation because the plants are under "continuous fire," said Dienst aus Deutschland, authoritative German commentary service.

The high command told of the final encirclement, crediting it to "speed divisions of the German army, excellently supported by air-force combat units."

These troops reached the Neva river east of Leningrad on a broad front, Adolf Hitler's headquarters said, and then a single infantry regiment pushed across the river and captured Schlüsselburg, on Lake Ladoga, twenty-one miles east of the main objective.

Name Means "Key City"

This clinched the encirclement, German commentators declared, pointing out that the name Schlüsselburg means "key city" in German and that Peter the Great renamed the old fortress that when he built Leningrad, realizing that it was in truth the key to his capital's defense.

They said the success of the entire maneuver was being bolstered and assured by the constantly active squadrons of German bombers, both Stukas and level-flight types.

"Armament and supply facilities" of Leningrad are the particular objectives of the air raiders, the high command said.

The Germans also bombed Russian airports and troop concentrations along the shores of Lake Ladoga.

Claims 16 Planes Downed

DNB said a German pursuit squadron yesterday shot down sixteen Russian bombers of the Martin type within fifteen minutes. The location was not disclosed.

The mere cutting off of Leningrad, German military correspondents declared, has made the Russian Arctic port of Murmansk useless, since its railway line runs to Leningrad and it therefore is without a land route for food and supplies.

Far to the south, on the shore of the Black Sea, another encirclement continued in force against Odessa.

The German and Rumanian forces which have surrounded that port for a month reported the Russians were trying localized counter-attacks but that the siege still held.

Claim Attack Repulsed

On the central front, military commentators said more than 4,000 Russians were taken prisoner and 238 Russian tanks and 102 guns were destroyed or captured in fighting northeast of Roslavl, which is sixty miles southeast of Smolensk.

The numerically superior Russian forces made an attack which was repulsed; then a German counter-attack broke into the Soviet lines with deadly effect, they said.

[This is the same general area where the Russians said they had smashed eight German divisions who still were fleeing westward toward Smolensk. Oddly, each side claimed the same number of cannon captured—102.]

The German commentators said another 2,000 Russians were captured and forty guns destroyed or captured in a series of small skirmishes farther south.

Thirty-eight guns and six tanks were captured from the Russians Monday in the east, it was said.

Artillery Bombards Leningrad Plants, Germans Report

SEP 10 1941

Bombers Declared Adding To Destruction With Day and Night Raids

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 9.—The great industrial plants of isolated and besieged Leningrad are under continuous German artillery fire, making their operation impossible, while Stukas and level-bombers add to the destruction with day and night assaults, the authoritative Dienst aus Deutschland commentary declared today.

A communique from the Fuehrer's headquarters said Leningrad and its 3,200,000 population with extensive defending forces were cut off when "speed divisions of the German army, excellently supported by air force combat units, reached the Neva on a broad front east of Leningrad."

Then a single German infantry regiment stormed across the Neva River and took Schluesselburg, 21 miles east of Leningrad, the communique said.

Moscow Raided Last Night.

Yesterday and last night, it was said, the German air force concentrated on Leningrad's teeming "armament supply facilities," and also directed a night raid on Moscow.

Authorized sources said the huge water works of Leningrad were among the vital facilities hit by bombs in air force action last night.

Heavy losses in Russian men and material from German bombings of airports and troop concentrations along Lake Ladoga wer reported.

On the Odessa front Soviet batteries were reported by the news agency D.N.B. to have taken the German-occupied town of Adshiaska under fire from a small island in Odessa Bay yesterday but subsequently were silenced by German artillery.

2,000 Reported Captured.

A gunboat which attempted to cover a landing on the Dnieper River bank south of Kherson was forced to withdraw, D.N.B. also reported. Elsewhere on the south front 2,000 prisoners were reported captured.

On the central front, the news agency said the Germans broke through Russian lines northeast of Roslavl, 40 miles south of Yelnya, in several days' fighting, capturing 2,650 prisoners and destroying 178 tanks. Numerous prisoners were reported captured in an advance of motorized troops at another point on this front.

30.24—11709

Several Russian railroad trains, including two armored trains, were wrecked by bombings in the central sector, authorized quarters said.

Leningrad Not Sole Stake

German military writers pointed out that Leningrad was not the only stake for which the Nazi armed forces were fighting in the north. In the course of the encirclement operations, they declared, German and Finnish forces have gained positions which have rendered the Arctic Russian port of Murmansk useless for all practical purposes.

With the Leningrad-Murmansk railway severed, they said, Murmansk now is cut off from sources of food and supplies in the interior.

(The Finnish high command announced last night the lifting of the nightly blackout along most of the Finnish frontier as a result of gains achieved by Finnish troops.)

Scanty reports of fighting on other sectors of the Eastern front were highlighted by a dispatch telling of the repulse of a desperate Russian cavalry charge.

Informed quarters said the German air force bagged eighty-one Soviet planes in dogfights yesterday and smashed five more caught on the ground.

Famous Soviet Trial Figure to Represent Britain.

London, Sept. 9 (A. P.).—The London Evening News said today that Lieut.-Col. Allan Monkhouse, who was once expelled from Russia on charges of sabotage and espionage, has been chosen a member of the British delegation to the Moscow Arms Conference.

Mr. Monkhouse, who is an official of the Metropolitan Vickers Electrical Company, was convicted on April 18, 1933, and ordered expelled for five years. The news said the British asked for and received Russia's assent to his service as a delegate, however.

The trial of Mr. Monkhouse and five other Metropolitan-Vickers engineers by the Soviet Government in 1933 created a world-wide sensation and brought Russia and Britain almost to the brink of war. The engineers, employed on the Vickers staff in Moscow, were arrested by the OGPU and charged with conspiracy to wreck electric power stations in the Soviet Union. Despite bitter protestations from the British Government, the Soviets tried the six Englishmen and ten Russian defendants in open court. There were a number of mysterious points about the case—the weakness of the Soviet prosecution at times, the confession of one of the English defendants and the stout denials of guilt by the others—which have never been cleared up.

At trial's end, however, Mr. Monkhouse was convicted, along with L. C. Thornton, Charles Nordwall, John Cushny and W. H. Macdonald, and A. W. Gregory was acquitted. Mr. Macdonald confessed at the trial while the others declared that the entire case was a frame-up. Messrs. Monkhouse, Cushny, Nordwall and Gregory were expelled from Russia. Mr. Thornton was sentenced to three years' imprisonment and Mr. Macdonald to two years. The latter two were freed in July, 1933, however, and returned to England, where English crowds cheered them.

TEHERAN ACCEPTS TERMS OF ALLIES

Ill Premier Tells Parliament No Other Choice Is Possible

SEP 10 1941

Wide Occupation Zones And Assured Route Across Nation Granted

By DANIEL DELUCE
Associated Press Correspondent

Teheran, Sept. 9—The Iranian Parliament acceded in full today to the demands of victorious Britain and Russia after hearing sick and aged Premier Ali Furanghi express "the grief of our people over the events that have befallen us."

Two attendants half carried him to the curiously carved rostrum, which depicts the Persian god of light slaying the dragon of darkness. Then the bearded old scholar sat on the front row while Foreign Minister Ali Soheily spent an hour reading the entire file of diplomatic exchanges among Iran, Britain and Russia in a high, sing-song voice.

When he had finished, the bare quorum present, 136 members, stood sober-faced in the old rococo plaster Parliament hall to give their Government a vote of confidence.

Agree To Occupied Zones

By this act they agreed to large occupational zones in the southwest and north, transit facilities between the two zones, surrender of Axis nationals and expulsion of the German, Italian, Hungarian and Rumanian legations here.

The British occupation zone in the southwest is about 400 by 100 miles, embracing the ports and oil fields within a line running from Khanaqin, on the Iraq frontier, east to Kermanshah, southeast to Khurramabad, south to Dizful and Haft Kel, and southeast to the Persian Gulf at Bandar Dilam.

The Russian zone is 500 miles long and from 50 to 150 miles wide, covering the northern portion of the country from a few miles north of Teheran.

Route To Russia Assured

Iran retains control of the middle zone, but allied transport privileges insure a supply route from the Persian Gulf to Russia.

Britain agreed to continue paying royalties for oil rights, and Russia to pay for Caspian Sea fishery concessions. Iran also agreed to revival of the Russian-Iranian oil company for further oil explorations around Khoorian, near Samnan. The region was explored without result about fifteen years ago.

Iran still seeks to persuade Britain and Russia to reduce the zones of occupation, but the Foreign Minister told Parliament there was no choice but to accept the terms.

Russian Replies Firm

The documents disclosed firm Russian rejections of the Iranian attempts to modify the terms and the conciliatory British replies to the same requests.

The British agreed to consider compensation for Iranian loss of life and property, while the Russians said any such loss was due to Iranian resistance.

Asked to restrict contact between military forces and the civilian population, the British agreed but the Russians refused.

Asked to move their troops back from Kermanshah and Khurramabad, the British refused, but offered to give local Iranian authorities the widest powers of administration. The Russians simply declined to consider similar requests in their zone.

First Terms Easier

Ali's reading disclosed that the first allied terms presented on August 30 provided for continuance of the German Legation and some German technicians here. On September 6, he said, the allies demanded closure of the German, Italian, Rumanian and Hungarian legations and surrender of Axis nationals on the ground that they were disseminating propaganda. Bulgaria was not included in this list, he said, at Russia's special request.

Yesterday the Axis diplomats were notified to start packing, and the Iranian police confiscated firearms owned by Axis nationals. All persons not covered by diplomatic immunity will be turned over to Russia and Britain within a week, it was said.

Meanwhile, a British commercial source at Meshed, on an important route to India, said the Russians had seized six Germans and two Iranian police officials and taken them to Russia.

Iranians Accept British-Russian Terms for Peace

Axis Legations' Ousting And Surrender of Their Nationals Agreed To

By the Associated Press.

TEHERAN, Sept. 9.—Iran today accepted British-Russian peace terms, agreeing to expel German, Italian, Hungarian and Rumanian Legations here and to deliver Axis nationals to British and Soviet authorities.

The terms provide also for a British zone of occupation comprising the southwestern corner of Iran, an area about 400 miles long and 100 miles wide in which the country's rich oil fields lie, and a Russian zone about 500 miles long, varying in width from 50 to 150 miles deep, lying across the northern portion of Iran just north of Teheran, the capital.

Iran still is trying to persuade Britain and Russia to reduce these zones of occupation, but, a government spokesman told Parliament, Iran had no choice except to submit. Parliament approved the agreement.

(Acceptance of the peace terms by Iran also was announced by the British Foreign Office.)

Under the peace terms Iran must supply all possible rail facilities for the transport of war supplies to Russia. The agreement divides the country into three sections, Iran herself remaining in control of territory between the zones of the two Allies, but the transport agreement makes certain that the supply route to Russia will remain open.

The British line runs from Khanagin on the Iraq frontier east to Kermanshah, southeast to Khurrambad, south to Dizful and Haft Kel and then southeastward to the Persian Gulf at Bandar Dilam.

The Russian line runs east from the Iraq frontier near Oshnouyeh, south of Lake Urmia through Kazvin to Samnan. The capital is excluded, the line running just a few miles to the north.

Divergent Elements In Croatia Raising Problems for Axis

Situation Is Likened To That in Germany Which Brought Purge

By the Associated Press.

ZAGREB, Croatia, Sept. 9.—With divergent political elements in Croatia engaged in a tug-of-war for power, the task of fitting this baby state into the Axis powers' new European order is proving far from easy.

Politically and militarily, the situation which prevails here is described as strikingly similar to that which resulted in the famed "blood purge" in Germany in June, 1934.

In this case, members of the "Ustacha," the personal bodyguards of Dictator Ante Pavelic, are alleged to be interfering with the army and attempting to supplant its higher officers with their own leaders.

Demand Curb on Ustacha.

Army officers openly declare there cannot be order in Croatia until the Ustacha is thoroughly curbed. Evidence of their attitude was given when one of the ablest Croatian generals resigned several weeks ago and refused to return to service unless given unequivocal command without interference by the Ustacha.

Added to this situation, recurring religious quarrels between Catholics and Mussulmans, frequent incidents of sabotage attributed to Communist elements and blood feuds kept alive by the Serbs give "Poglavnik" (Fuehrer) Pavelic a thorny path to tread.

Army officials attribute to the Ustacha numerous acts of violence which have kept the country uneasy for weeks.

Some 10,000 Serbs seized a large ammunition plant along the railway north of Sarajevo and blew it up, blocking the line to Zagreb for a week beginning about August 24. (This was about the time the second Italian Army took over control of the Adriatic Coast and railways from the Croats.)

Four Ustacha Members Executed.

During one week in August, Army officials said, 42 Serbs were killed in one village alone. Four Ustacha members were executed for this slaughter on Pavelic's personal orders.

The following week three Serbian farmers mowing hay in their fields were shot down, allegedly by the Ustacha, and early this month two more were slain.

The Serbs, of whom there are 1,500,000 to 2,000,000 in Croatia, have no liking for either the Germans or Croats. They have engaged in frequent clashes with the Ustacha and at Sarajevo were blamed for the killing of six German soldiers.

The Bosnian and Mohammedan leaders are loyal to Pavelic, but their attitude toward the situation in Croatia appears best summed up by the assertion of one old Mussulman:

"There are too many little Poglavniks interfering with Pavlic's orders."

Three Japanese Ships To Move Nationals From British Empire

Foreign Office Announces Dispatch of Vessels to England and Dominions

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Sept. 9.—Japan is sending ships to Great Britain and the British dominions to remove Japanese nationals, the Foreign Office announced today.

Three ships will be dispatched, one to Malaya, one to the Near East and East Africa and one to Europe.

The route of the vessel bound for Europe was not disclosed, but presumably it will go around Cape Horn. It is to carry diplomatic replacements to Europe and may also afford transportation to Central America or Mexico for Kanama Wakasugi, Japanese Minister to the United States, who recently returned to Tokio to make a report.

The announcement did not mention Japanese in the United States, Canada, Australia or South Africa, but said the ships would be sent to the other places named because of "a radical increase" in the number of Japanese residing in the British Empire who desire to return to Japan.

700 Japanese in Malaya.

Domei, Japanese news agency, reported that Japanese residents in Malaya total 700, India, 700; the Near East, 60; East Africa, 40 and the British Isles, 600. The last figure includes those in Ireland.

The British Embassy in Tokio announced August 30 that arrangements had been completed for a British ship to come to Japan to remove Britons wishing to depart.

Admiral Seizo Kobayashi, governor general of Taiwan, said in a newspaper article today that the South Seas had become a matter of life and death for Japan, but he dismissed any idea that Japan was bent on monopolizing that area.

Tokyo Press Softens Critical Attitude On U. S. Foreign Policy

Tokyo, Wednesday, Sept. 10 (AP)—The Japanese press has soft-pedalled to a mere murmur its recent vigorously critical attitude toward foreign policy moves by the United States.

While there is no official reaction, it is evident also that concern among the Japanese over the current situation is the Russo-German war is increasing. The press now plays constantly upon the theme that the war will be a long one for Germany, in sharp contrast to optimism expressed in the early stages of the conflict.

Another significant phase of American-Japanese delations is the evident lack of moves by the United States embassy here toward negotiations for ships to remove its nations, such as those by the British and Japanese Governments.

The Japanese announced today they were sending ships to Great Britain and the British dominions to remove Japanese nationals.

The British, who announced on August 30 arrangements had been completed for a ship to come to Japan for Britons wishing to depart, said today the vessel is expected at Yokahama September 24.

'War Of Jews Vs. Anti-Jews'

[By the Associated Press]

Tokyo, Sept. 9—Neichi Muto, one of Japan's foremost anti-Semitics, declared today in an article in the newspaper Hochi that the present world war is only a conflict between Jews and anti-Jews.

"The Jews are attempting to make the world their own through the activities of the Free Masons," Muto asserted.

Advising the Japanese to search out any taint of Jewish influence in their mode of living and thinking, Muto said: "The Japanese now should prepare to fight against the Jews."

"Indo-China Resources Needed"

Kenkichi Yoshizawa, former Foreign Minister and recently head of a special Japanese economic mission to The Netherlands East Indies, was named Ambassador to French Indo-China today.

In an interview published in the Japanese press Yoshizawa declared "friendly relations with Indo-China must be furthered."

"You are well aware that the Indies are rich in raw materials," he added, 'but don't forget that Indo-China also has vast resources of rice, coal and rubber which Japan needs."

Japanese Air Defense Drills Put Off for Month

10-Day Nation-Wide Exercises to Start Oct. 22

TOKIO, Sept. 9 (AP).—Nation-wide air defense drills, originally scheduled for late this month, will be conducted for ten days beginning Oct. 22, the Japanese Home Ministry announced today. No reason for the change in date was given.

The program will include practice blackouts and fire drills in cities regarded as especially vulnerable to air attack. Meanwhile, the Ministry suggested, the defense organization should be examined and revamped where necessary.

The Japanese cabinet adopted today a national planning board program to mobilize electric power resources and labor, to control distribution and assure adequate power supplies to munitions plants and other vital industries. A control body was created to establish power demand and supply quotas.

JAPAN TRADE SEEN AS NON-ESSENTIAL

Complete Break Would Not Be Serious, Tariff Commission Declares

Report Based On Study Of Both Defense Program And General Economy

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 9—Complete cessation of trade with Japan, the Tariff Commission reported today, would not cause any "appreciable" interference with the national defense program.

A full stoppage of imports, the commission added, would have only a slight effect on the United States economy as a whole and would have no effect on the national health.

These were the major conclusions of an exhaustive study of this country's trade relations with Japan, which virtually ceased after President Roosevelt froze Japaneze credits in the United States on July 26.

Period Covered

The study was based on figures through May. It covered fifty-nine import classifications, including around ninety per cent. of the total value of purchases from Japan, which amounted to $52,461,000 during the first five months of this year, a drop of $4,979,000 from the corresponding 1940 period.

Among the other conclusions were:

1. Certain domestic industries which have been using Japanese imports, particularly the full-fashioned hosiery industry, would be adversely affected, but certain others which produce competitive articles, such as fish canneries and electric-lamp manufacturers, would be benefited.

Some Possible Steps

2. "The public interest might require that the Federal Government take measures both to facilitate readjustments in the few industries which would be most seriously affected, and to prevent any unwarranted increase of prices. . . ."

3. Present users of silk hosiery would be the principal consumer interests affected.

4. Consumers of such semi-luxury Japanese products as crab meat, sword fish and mink furs constitute only a small fraction of the population and are regarded as able to purchase substitutes "without appreciable hardship."

Other Effects

5. Consumers of low-priced Japanese-made articles, such as cotton manufactures, hat bodies, slide fasteners, chinaware and electric lamps, would generally be obliged either to curtail consumption or buy higher priced substituaes, but in some instances would be benefited by superior quality.

Stoppage of silk imports, which account for about two thirds of the total value of purchases from Japan, would "create much the greater part of the difficulties" in a complete cessation of trade, the commission said.

Stores In Hand

It pointed out, however, that domestic warehouse stocks of silk were sufficient for making about 500,000 parachutes, and that substitutes, notably nylon, were available.

The only other silk material of military importance is silk waste, of which China has been the chief supplier since 1937, the commission said.

Grady in Batavia to Study How to Increase Netherlands Indies' Production of War Items

SINGAPORE, Sept. 9 (AP)—The Alfred Duff Cooper, new British Coordinator for the Far East, said on his arival today that he was sure the United States Government was thoroughly alive to the importance of strengthening its Pacific defenses,, He said he had formed the opinion from his own observations and from conversations with American leaders, High Commissioner Francis B. Sayre in Manila and President Manuel Quezon of the Philippines.

He said he had also discussed the question of Thailand and other Far Eastern problems with Willys R. Peck, new United States Minister to Bangkok, during their air trip across the Pacific.

Mr. Duff Cooper said he had come to investigate the possibility of improving and coordinating Britain's political activity throughout the Far East but that his visit signified no changes in imperial high policy.

Malay Defense Area Extended

[By the Associated Press]

Singapore, Sept. 9—The Malay coastal defense area bordering on the China Sea was extended today to a point more than 200 miles north of Singapore.

The 120-mile eastern seaboard of Pahang, largest Malay native state, was placed under military control. The eighty-mile coast line of Johore immediately north of Singapore had been designated as a defense area previously, with mine fields already laid.

Today's extension puts under military control the mouths of the principal Malay rivers emptying into the China Sea, up which any seaborne invasion threat is considered most likely.

BURMA TAX LIFTED

Transit Duty on Aid to China Replaced by a Subsidy.

Chungking, Sept. 9 (A. P.).—The British embassy announced today that the transit duty through Burma on lease-lend goods consigned by the United States to China was abolished on September 3. The action was generally regarded as a sequel to the denunciation of the duty by Daniel Arnstein, one of three American experts sent to China to increase the Burma Road traffic.

On August 22 Mr. Arnstein described the duty as an iniquitous imposition. British officials said today that the London Government had agreed to a subsidy to replace the duty.

Rangoon, Sept. 9 (A. P.).—The Burmese Government said today that the British Government's offer to compensate Burma for the abolition of its transit tax on American lease-lend supplies to China has been rejected. "In view of Britain's generosity, Burma has decided to waive the right to revenues," an official statement said.

VICHY APPOINTS TWO COURTS TO TRY DISTURBERS

SEP 10 1941

Judicial Bodies Empowered to Decree Death Without Appeal

VICHY, Unoccupied France, Sept. 9 (AP)—Two all-powerful courts, one in Lyon and the other in Paris, were established today empowered to indict, try and sentence persons charged with disturbing order in either the German-occupied or the unoccupied zone of France.

For Crimes Against State

"Authors, coauthors and accomplices" in any activity dangerous to the state are brought under the new courts' jurisdiction.

This means that prosecutors upon presentation of evidence can go after the "big shots" of political movements directed against the government of Marshal Petain.

The courts are empowered to decree sentences ranging up to deportation, life imprisonment and death. No appeals will be allowed, and sentences must be executed immediately.

Have Greater Powers

An official statement made plain that the new courts would have far greater powers than those of other special tribunals such as the anti-Communist courts established in the last few weeks.

The main difference between the new courts, which are called officially "Tribunal d'Etat," and others is that the judges with their assistants may institute action themselves, whereas other courts only try cases sent to them after a police investigation and the filing of charges by prosecutors.

The court will have two presiding justices and six judges divided between its two locations.

Courts like these, informed sources said, will have authority to deal with state prisoners like Paul Colette, who attempted to kill Pierre Laval and Marcel Deat two weeks ago.

Barcelona, Sept. 9 (A. P.).—Myron Taylor, President Roosevelt's envoy to the Pope, said today that he was constantly praying for peace.

The envoy gave one Spanish journalist a monosyllabic interview at his hotel here before leaving for the airport to fly to Rome to resume his Vatican post.

"Can you confirm that President Roosevelt charged you to discuss the possibility of an armistice or other agreement either at the Pope's initiative or his?" the journalist asked.

"No," Taylor replied.

"Will you deny it?" the journalist asked.

"No," said Taylor.

Later, he told a second Spanish newspaper man, "I am constantly praying for peace."

SAN JOSE WARNED ON CONSULS AGAIN

Nazis Say Activity Of Those In Occupied Zones Is "Inadmissible"

Costa Rican Foreign Office Asserts "Energetic Protest" Will Be Made

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 9—The German Government has advised Costa Rican consuls in Nazi-occupied zones their activity is "inadmissible."

[Costa Rica last week defied a German order to remove consular officials from occupied territory.]

An official German statement said:

"The Government of Costa Rica, on the basis of argument entirely irrelevant to international practice, has not complied with requests of the Reich's Government to close its consulates in occupied territories.

"Since, according to generally recognized regulations of the articles of war, lawful authority in occupied territories actually has passed to the occupation power, the Reich's Government has advised Costa Rican consuls in territories belonging in the war zone that their official activity is inadmissible.

"It further is left to their discretion to surrender their archives to the consul general of Costa Rica in Hamburg."

San Jose, Costa Rica, Sept. 9 (AP)—Foreign Office officials said tonight Costa Rica would make an "energetic protest" to Nazi Germany if the Reich closes Costa Rican consulates in German-occupied territories.

Commenting on Berlin reports that Germany had ordered the closing, officials said they had received no official notice.

Nazi Agent Sees Japanese And German Diplomats On Eve Of Flight To Buenos Aires

Rio de Janeiro, Sept. 9 (AP)—Capt. Fritz Wiedemann, former Nazi consul general in San Francisco, held a series of secret conferences with German and Japanese diplomats tonight and prepared to fly to Buenos Aires tomorrow, his welcome in South America somewhat in doubt.

Argentina granted him a transit visa through that country to Chile. Agreements reached in the Pan-American conference at Havana provide that no American nation shall accept a diplomat or consul rejected by another American nation, and Wiedemann was ousted from the United States July 15.

The ultimate destination of the Nazi representative was undisclosed.

U. S.-British Trade Plan Offered In Argentina

Program Calls For Buying Supply Of Nation's Wartime Products

Buenos Aires, Sept. 9 (AP)—The Foreign Office announced today a joint British-United States war-buying plan for Argentine materials.

Enrique Ruiz Guinazu, Foreign Minister, announced that the United States Ambassador, Norman Armour, had presented the American part of the plan last night, and the British Ambassador, Sir Esmond Ovey, submitted the complementary part this morning.

Details were not disclosed immediately, but the Foreign Minister indicated the plan was broad and includes most Argentine wartime products, some of which are wool, leather, linseed oil and meat. Minerals probably are not covered, since the United States is negotiating for exclusive purchase of them.

PRIORITY BOARD REJECTS PLAN FOR PIPELINE

SEP 10 1941

Construction by Spring Barred Due to Steel Plate Lack; Ultimate Building Not Voted On

Senator Declares Shortage Of Oil is Past on Seaboard; Railroad Rate Cut on Petroleum Authorized by ICC

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9—A proposal of Secretary Ickes to construct by next spring an $80,000,000 oil pipeline from the East Texas oil fields to the East Coast was rejected today by the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board.

The Interior Secretary, who is also Defense Petroleum Administrator, was not present at the meeting and for that reason officials said the board did not pass on ultimate construction of the line. Instead, the board refused to grant priorities for steel plates for the line. Ickes is out of the city on vacation.

There has been a shortage of steel plates which are used in ship construction, and Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission, recently opposed the oil line proposal, in testifying before a Senate committee investigating the petroleum situation. He contended that steel for ships should take preference in the defense program to steel for an oil line.

May Use Tubes Later

Officials of the priorities board said that if the line is built later it will be constructed of seamless steel tubes.

Those present at the meeting were Vice-President Henry A. Wallace, the chairman; William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman, co-directors of the Office of Production Management; Harry L. Hopkins, lend-lease administrator; James V. Forrestal, Undersecretary of the Navy, substituting for Secretary Knox; Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson; and Leon Henderson, price administrator; Donald M. Nelson, executive director of the board, and Robert P. Patterson, undersecretary of war.

Vote Not Disclosed

Board officials declined to disclose the vote on the pipe line proposal. If the line is built of steel tubes, the board decided, the tubes can be supplied at a sufficiently slow rate so as not to interfere with the manufacture of bomb casings.

Unofficially it was estimated that the line could be built of steel tubes by mid-summer of 1943. Under Ickes' proposal it would have been completed next spring.

The line would have been about 1,500 miles long. It would have extended from East Texas to Salem, Ill., and then on to the Bayonne, N. J. area. It was proposed that about 10 oil companies unite in constructing it.

Earlier in the day, Ralph K. Davies, acting petroleum coordinator, insisted that present curtailment of retail gasoline sales must continue and demanded construction of the pipeline "as a matter of national defense just as vital as warships and planes."

However, Chairman Maloney (D-Conn) of the Senate committee investigating the Eastern petroleum situation contended that the "oil shortage is over."

"Instead of a shortage of 174,000 barrels of petroleum products, we seem to have a surplus of some 80,000 barrels based on testimony and evidence before this committee," Maloney observed. Davies was a witness before the committee.

Davies, youthful-appearing vice-president of the Standard Oil Company of California, recalled mistakes he said had been made by industrial and defense officials in their original estimates of aluminum and steel supplies and said that no one could afford to underestimate the havoc that could be caused by an acute lack of gasoline and oil for heating homes and running defense plants.

Scoffs at Tank Cars

Then he scoffed at testimony that some 20,000 surplus railroad tank cars were waiting to rush gasoline and oil East to end the threatened shortage or that tankers seized by Latin-American republics could solve the problem.

Davies flatly contradicted testimony by Admiral Land, that the pipeline would take 750,000 tons of steel away from the navy, ships, and defense industries. Davies said the figure was 480,000 tons and that supporters of the pipeline included the President, the Navy and War Department, major defense agencies, and most of the larger oil companies who were ready to build and finance it.

Maloney accused Davies of failing to give the committee full information about tank cars in his original testimony about a shortage, and urged him to work out a system of sharing the increased cost of moving gasoline and petroleum by tank car among all oil companies and agencies.

Rail Rate Cut Authorized

The interstate commerce commission during the day authorized the railroads to reduce rates immediately on crude, fuel, and refined petroleum. Officials of the Association of American Railroads said the reduced rates would become effective, Sept. 15.

On gasoline and fuel and heating oils, there will be a reduction of 25 per cent in the normal rates. On crude oil, rates will be established on a basis of 13 per cent of the first-class freight rates. In the territory east of the Mississippi and north of the Potomac and Ohio Rivers, this represents a reduction as high as 50 per cent in the crude oil rates. From the Southwestern and mid-continent oil fields, the reductions on crude oil range from 27 to 40 per cent.

Gas Stocks in East Down

NEW YORK, Sept. 9 (AP)—The weekly report of the American Petroleum Institute disclosed today that gasoline stocks in the Eastern Seaboard, where a gasoline shortage is threatened, declined 523,000 barrels last week. At the end of the week, which included heavy Labor Day travel, stocks in the East Coast and Appalachian districts amounted to 22,808,000 barrels compared with 23,331,000 the previous week and 25,145,000 at the same time a year ago.

Shortage Of 40,000 Railroad Cars Seen Possible Next Month

Washington, Sept. 9 (AP)—The National Planning Association, a private research organization, today forecast a possible shortage of 40,000 railroad cars in October if defense production moves forward rapidly in the early autumn.

"If the transport services cope with the fall demand," said the association report, "it will not be because this nation's transportation system was organized to meet the requirements of an all-out defense effort, but rather because lack of planning and shortages elsewhere have held production below expectations. Complacency followed by crises, assurance of plenty followed by shortages, have characterized our defense experience."

The association said the peak demand for cars may be between 1,020,000 and 1,030,000. It estimated the peak capacity available at 980,000 cars.

MORGENTHAU DEMANDS WAR ON INFLATION

SEP 10 1941

Nation Faces Danger Now And Must Act At Once, He Declares

Treasury Chief Urges All To Cooperate For Sound Economy

[By the Associated Press]

Boston, Sept. 9—Declaring that the nation faces inflation now, and "must deal with it at once," Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Secretary of the Treasury, tonight called upon laborers, farmers and businessmen to curb their desires for higher wages and profits in the interest of the nation's welfare.

The public must be taxed more, spend less, save faster and submit to increased regulation, he added in a long-promised pronouncement of his views on inflation delivered before the Advertising Club of Boston.

Proposals In General

Morgenthau proposed these two general methods of combating inflation:

1. By curbing demand for commodities, by higher taxes, regulation of installment credit and increased savings.
2. By controlling prices, specifically by releasing for consumption surpluses of all commodities—particularly farm products—"as fast as necessary to prevent unreasonable price rises."

As a complementary step, the Treasury chief renewed his plea for reduction of "non-essential" Federal expenditures and for economy in State and local governments as well.

Lauds Roosevelt Action

Praising President Roosevelt's recent veto of a bill to freeze Government stocks of cotton and wheat, Morgenthau declared:

"We ought not to withhold cotton surpluses, or any other surpluses, from the market in times like these."

He proposed that Canadian wheat—of which he said more than 498,000,000 bushels of surplus were available—be admitted in larger volume, as was done recently in the case of Cuban sugar.

"This has been historically a land of milk and honey," Morgenthau said. "There is still plenty of milk and honey, but too much of it is in the warehouses. Let's make it flow. . . .

Plea To Farmers

"It is sheer folly from the farmer's point of view to push prices up by creating scarcities in times like these. The farmers suffered cruelly for twelve long years after the collapse of the inflation of 1920 and 1921; they should not be made to suffer again.

"It is sheer folly in the same way for labor leaders to seek new increases in wages every few months—new increases which in turn produce higher manufacturing costs, higher prices and a higher cost of living.

"It is short-sighted for a landlord to charge all that the traffic will bear in defense centers where housing space is at a premium.

"It is poor business in the long run for any businessman to seek exorbitant profits in this period of defense spending.

Plea To Bankers

"It is bad banking in the long run for any banker to exploit the present demand for funds by seeking to charge unreasonable interest rates.

"There are always selfish groups in any country which think they can profit from inflation. They are wrong.

"Inflation does more than merely to rob the wage earner of a portion of his earnings.

"It does more than saddle the farmer with a load of debt which he cannot repay.

"It is more destructive of morale than any other single force.

"Inflation divides the country. It sets up producers against consumers, workers against employers, the people who owe money against the people to whom the money is owed.

"No group in a community profits from inflation in the long run except the three horsemen—the speculator, the profiteer and the hoarder," Morgenthau continued.

"The cost of inflation is too ruinous to producer and consumer alike for anyone in authority to tolerate it now. I can give you only this pledge—that this Administration will do everything humanly possible to prevent inflation. . . .

Demands Action Now

"We have been talking about inflation for a long time, as if it were a threat remote from our daily lives. It is a distant threat no longer. We are facing it now, and we must deal with it at once."

Then he added:

"We shall have to tax ourselves much more heavily next year than this year, great and far-reaching as the present tax bill will be.

"We shall have to invest much more widely and systematically in defense savings bonds and stamps. . . .

"We may have to extend general controls over bank credit and create controls over selected capital expenditures.

Social Security

"I hope that we may extend the social security program so as to increase the flow of funds to the Treasury from current income during the emergency and increase the outflow of funds when needed in a post-defense period.

"In addition, I have already suggested the creation of what I have called a 'separation wage'—that is, an entirely new form of contribution out of which a worker may draw a regular wage for a stated period in case he loses his job. . . .

"We must make every effort to increase the supply of goods available to the consumer wherever this can be done without encroaching upon the defense program."

Barkley Calls For Curb On Living Cost

[By the Associated Press]

Des Moines, Iowa, Sept. 9—Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley of the Senate declared today that the cost of living must be curbed and a barrier erected against inflation.

In an address prepared for delivery before the Iowa State Bankers' Association, the Kentuckian said that "unregulated and unjustifiable inflation" must be prevented "in order to avoid a perpendicular collapse and reaction" when the current emergency ends.

Likewise, he asserted, "we must put a curb upon unjustifiable increases in the cost of living to millions of our people whodepend upon meager wages and salaries to support their families."

Wants Still Higher Taxes

Estimating the nation's total income for 1941 at 95 billion dollars, or about 23 billion over the present year's figure, Barkley suggested that the huge tax bill passed by the Senate last week, with increased levies all along the line, was not stiff enough.

"This seems to be a burdensome amount added to our present taxes," he said, "but may I not ask you and the American people whether we ought not out of the increased total income of twenty-three billion dollars per year to take more than 3½ billion to help pay for the program which, at least in part, has made this increase in income possible?"

Calls For Curb On Selfishness

Barkley asked the support of bankers "in attempting to curb avarice and cupidity and selfishness" during the emergency and asserted that no one must grow "unjustly rich out of the sacrifices made by the American people."

He lauded the "courage and fortitude" of the Russians in their resistance to the Germans and said Americans "rejoins that the people of the British commonwealth of nations are imposing their militant resources, human and material, across the pathway of Hitler."

"Right To Own Government"

"Although we not not indorse nor approve nor remotely accept the theories which have been adopted by the Russian people, we recognize their right to their own government according to their own will and we recognize their right to defend themselves against the same menace that we ourselves are facing and that is being faced by every civilized nation of the world," he said.

"It is because of these things that the sympathies of the American people and their gigantic material assistance are being mobilized to help these nations (Britain and Russia) defend themselves," Barkley continued.

"U. S. Not Afraid To Fight"

"We face now . . the responsibility of giving all the aid that we can give to those nations fighting desperately to preserve human liberty. We hope we may do this without entering into the war now raging throughout the world. . . . But while we abhor war and love peace and while we have done everything humanly possible to avoid the necessity of actual war . . . I am not afraid to assert that in any commonwealth of this nation or in any community of it if the time arrives when we must lay aside temporarily the peaceful habits which we love we shall not be afraid to assume the responsibility which our forefathers assumed when the established and for 150 years have defended, our liberty, our rights or homes and our institutions.

"They were not afraid in 1776. They were not afraid in 1812. They were not afraid in 1848. They were not afraid in 1861. They were not afraid in 1898. They were not afraid in 1917. They are not afraid today."

Barkley said Congress and the electorate had supported President Roosevelt "in all his efforts to avoid the necessity for our entrance into the war."

SPIES MESSAGES SCANNED BY F. B. I.

Witness Says U. S. Agents Supervised Transmission For Months

Man Professing Hatred For Native Germany Discloses Counter-Espionage

By PAT McGRADY

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 9—A lanky, limping veteran of Germany's world War army, who professed to hate his native country, disclosed today that the Federal Bureau of Investigation, in a counter-espionage move, virtually had supervised for the last eighteen months transmission to Germany of defense information by alleged spies.

The witness, William G. Sebold, 42,

30.24—11713

30.24—11713

a naturalized citizen and a Government witness, advised a wide-eyed Brooklyn courtroom, where sixteen men are being tried on charges of participating in a gigantic espionage conspiracy, that ever since April, 1940, an F. B. I.-controlled radio station on Long Island had been clearing messages to the German spy center in Hamburg.

Meanwhile, he had been handing over to the F. B. I. the cash and information that came to him from Hamburg and had received $50 a week from the F. B. I., he said.

Trained In Espionage

Sebold told how in 1940 he came to this country after intensive training at a Hamburg espionage school. He said he had been assigned through force to transmit America's defense secrets via couriers, who carried documents boiled down to postage-stamp size through microphotography.

Harold M. Kennedy, United States Attorney, asked the witness if a secret radio transmitting set was built.

The witness said it was.

"By whom?"

"By the F. B. I."

"And who operated it?"

"Two F. B. I. agents."

Followed Instructions

He said they followed faithfully instructions Hamburg dispatched to Sebold and he said the station had operated until now.

Sebold said agents in Germany had boasted that they possessed the treasured Norden bombsight, which is believed to be accurate from 30,000-foot elevation.

In a slow, heavy-accented voice, Sebold told of his travels after the war, the end of which left him for three months in a German hospital.

He said he went to sea and jumped ship in Galveston, Texas. After working several months in Texas, he returned to Germany with $150—enough to set him up in a successful bicycle business which saved his parents from the full force of the disastrous inflation period.

Left Germany Again

Again he left Germany—this time for South America, where he worked as a Diesel engineer, barkeeper and odd-jobs man for several years until he eventually immigrated to the United States. Here he worked for the Consolidated Aircraft Corporation, and other concerns.

"You didn't like Germany?" asked Defense Counsel George Herz.

"I didn't like Germany," agreed Sebold seriously.

"You hated Germany even then—(when he left first in 1919)?"

"I hated Germany even then," Sebold echoed.

American Citizen

Herz asked him whether he was reluctant to discuss his family, which is still in Germany, because he feared reprisal by the German secret police.

"They can't take reprisals," said Sebold. "I am an American citizen."

"And how about reprisals against your family?"

"I won't answer that," Sebold snapped.

FAMILY GUARDED

SEP 10 1941

Federal Judge Mortimer W. Byers advised counsel that unless they could prove their examination vital to their client's cases, Sebold would not be required to answer questions about his family.

While Sebold did not say specifically why he hated Germany, he did criticize Communism, which he said, thrived under the social-democracy established under President Ebert.

Under cross-examination, he spoke frankly on every subject but he identities and whereabouts of members of his family.

Herz asked him whether he ever had been arrested; and when he answered affirmatively, it appeared for a fleeting moment that the defense might have discovered a point from which they could attack his testimony.

JAILED FOR SINGING

"What were you charged with?" demanded Herz.

A: Disorderly conduct.

Q: What had you done?

A: I was singing on the street in my home town in Germany.

Q: Were you drunk?

Sebold grinned and admitted, "a little bit."

Among the exhibits were communications from Hamburg headquarters and German agents in several European countries.

One or two of the letters said mistaken information had been transmitted, indicating the FBI had acted with an eye to occasional misinformation.

Some of the messages sent and received by the "spy" radio are expected to be sensational.

Nye Asserts Movies Have Stake In War

SEP 10 1941

Willkie, Counsel for Industry, Charges Effort to Suppress Accurate Picture of Nazism

Washington, Sept. 9.—(AP.)—A Senate subcommittee beginning an investigation of war propaganda, heard an assertion by Senator Nye, Republican, North Dakota, today that the motion picture industry stands to make millions of dollars in annual profits if Great Britain wins the war.

Countering Nye's additional assertion that "four or five individuals" within the industry had the power to make the theatergoers of the United States "feed on propaganda," Wendell L. Willkie declared in a public statement that Nye was seeking to "high pressure" the movie makers "to stop producing accurate and factual pictures on Nazism."

Supporting his contention that movie producers had a financial stake in the outcome of the war which might influence them toward the dissemination of propaganda, Nye said that the profits on many films depended on foreign sales.

Cites Profit Abroad.

He said one company which collected $80,000,000 in 1940, received $8,000,000 from showing its films in England, that amount representing its profit from all sales. If Britain lost the war, he went on, there would be no profitable foreign sales.

Willkie, silenced by a committee ruling that he could not cross-examine witnesses in his capacity as counsel for motion picture producers, handed reporters a prepared reply to Nye's charges that the motion picture industry was disseminating propaganda to get the United States into war. Nye was the first witness.

The 1940 Republican presidential nominee previously had characterized the hearing as a "foolish show." In his statement, he charged that Nye, who had said that no anti-Semitic cause was to be served by a formal inquiry into propaganda, was seeking to "divide the American people into discordant racial and religious groups, in order to disunite them over the United States foreign policy."

Moreover, Willkie continued, Nye was attempting to "influence the motion picture industry to alter another of its policies, the portrayal to the American public of accurate and factual pictures on our national defense program."

Specifies Pictures.

Nye had suggested that the committee investigate these films: Convoy, Flight Command, Escape, I Married a Nazi, That Hamilton Woman, Man Hunt, The Great Dictator, and Sergeant York. He added that this was only a partial list of those he believed contained propaganda.

The crowd, packed into a large caucus room, applauded vigorously and sometimes hissed as the North Dakota Senator developed his testimony during the reading of a long prepared statement.

Youthful Senator Clark, Democrat, Idaho, handling his first important chairmanship assignment, made no attempt to cut short the demonstrations as Willkie interjected remarks at one or two points.

Surrounded by legal aides, Willkie sat at one end of a long committee table, often leaning over to give reporters a reply to some statement Nye had made.

Clark opened the hearing with a statement justifying the committee's action in taking testimony on a resolution by Nye and Senator Clark, Democrat, Missouri, calling for just such an inquiry as was being made. The Idaho Senator denied Willkie's contention, submitted in a brief, that the hearing was "unauthorized and invalid."

Reports Government Demand.

Nye also testified he had been informed of a "demand" by "some agent of the government" that motion picture studios produce "propaganda" films.

Senator McFarland, Democrat, Arizona, a committee member, asked who had told the producers to turn out propaganda pictures.

"Some agent of the government," Nye replied.

"That's rather indefinite," McFarland told him.

Nye replied that he had "excellent foundation" for his testimony but believed that it was the duty of the committee and not himself to establish the facts.

He told the committee, however, that his informant was "one of the No. 1 producers of motion pictures in the United States today."

Adding that he believed the producer would be questioned about the matter by the committee, Nye said that "if there is a denial, I have five persons I should like to put on the stand who heard the statement with me."

In response to another inquiry by McFarland, Nye declined to name the producer, but said he would supply the name to the committee if it decided to make a complete investigation of the subject.

U. S. TANKS PRAISED

Stevenson Says British Find Them Excellent.

St. Louis, Sept. 9 (A. P.).—American-made tanks delivered to the British have come through with flying colors in campaigns in Greece and the Near East, Frederick A. Stevenson of New York, vice-president of the American Car & Foundry Company, said today.

He asserted that the United States Army realized the value of tanks in modern military combat and placed a substantial order with his company "six months before the panzer divisions proved that it takes a tank to beat a tank."

The American Car & Foundry Company, he said, has built and turned over more than 1,500 light tanks to the United States and other governments and is building them now at the rate of fifteen a day.

Mr. Stevenson was a speaker at the first of a series of sectional meetings, sponsored by the American Society of Mechanical Engineers at the request of the Government, to acquaint the public with defense production problems.

$11,000,000 LOAN

U. S. Agrees to Finance New Defense Expansion.

Washington, Sept. 9 (A. P.).—Jesse Jones, Federal Loan Administrator, announced today commitments totaling more than $11,000,000 for expansion of defense production.

The largest single authorization was an increase of $6,763,580 in the lease agreement between the Defense Plant Corporation, an RFC subsidiary, and the General Electric Company for additional facilities for producing naval equipment at the latter's plant at Erie, Pa. About $1,470,769 will be used for land and buildings and $5,292,811 for machinery and equipment. The authorization is an increase of an original $24,508,000 and was requested by the Maritime Commission.

Other authorizations included:

New York—A loan of $240,000 to American Machine & Metals, Inc., for the purchase of machinery and equipment to produce anti-aircraft gun mountings for the navy.

AUGUST DEFENSE COST BIGGEST YET

$1,172,000,000 Paid Out Last Month.

SEP 10 1941

Washington, Sept. 9 (A. P.).—The United States paid $1,172,000,000 cash for completed defense orders in August—the biggest month yet on record.

The August outlay boosted actual expenditures to $9,282,000,000 for the period since July 1, 1940, the date on which the Office of Production Management says the program started.

The August expenditures, representing payment for finished airplanes, tanks, guns and other military supplies, or for equipment to produce them, were 9.5 per cent greater than July's and almost five times the $235,300,000 disbursements of August a year ago.

There is a lot more to spend, however.

"At the end of August," the OPM stated, "the defense fiscal program — appropriations, contract authorizations and Reconstruction Finance Corporation commitments for defense—amounted to $56,357,000,000. If the British Government orders for war materials placed in the United States are added, the total comes to $60,046,000,000."

Failure Of Small Concerns To Expand Called Defense Defect

New York, Sept. 9 (AP)—Failure of small and medium-sized companies to expand production facilities was called a serious defect of the nation's defense program by Leonard C. Yaseen, factory locating engineer, here today.

Small concerns, Yaseen said, were the very backbone of the defense effort. Of the 185,000 manufacturers in the United States, he said, only one half of one per cent. employed more than 1,000 persons.

The small number of giant industrial companies, however, were doing most of the new plant construction.

Yaseen, Eastern manager of the Fantus factory locating service, said the "little fellows'" reluctance to expand was based, at least in part, on fallacy.

One manufacturer, he said, told him: "I am taking all the defense contracts I can safely fill in my present plant and no more. They'll be giving floor space away when the shooting is over."

That small businessman is going to be disillusioned; the big companies expect to use those plants themselves, he said.

Yaseen summed up big business comment as: "If anyone is going to use our new plant, we are. It has been designed for our purpose and we anticipate giving up our older production facilities first when the time for selection and elimination arrives."

If the United States is to exert its maximum effort, the engineer said, steps must be taken to bring the small manufacturing concern into its proper orbit.

"An equally serious problem will arise in the viciously competitive post-war period," Yaseen continued. "Plant modernization, production improvement and more efficient fabrication methods should be undertaken now before it is too late."

Fort Bragg Announces Improvised Gun Sight

Instrument Adapted Successfully To Anti-Aircraft Weapons Used Against Tanks

Fort Bragg, N. C., Sept. 9 (AP)—Successful adaptation of anti-aircraft guns for use against tanks and other ground targets by means of an inexpensive, improvised sight was announced at Fort Bragg today.

Capt. William Workman, public relations officer of the Thirty-fourth Anti-Aircraft Brigade, Coast Artillery, said good results had been obtained in low-trajectory fire with normally high-angle three-inch guns both here and at the Windy Hill (S. C.) firing range.

The sight, he explained, was made of sections of gas pipe, mirrors, adhesive tape, knive blades and cross hairs. The total cost of such an instrument is only a few dollars, he said.

BRITAIN PAYS $1,281,000

Sells Collateral To Return Port Of $425,000,000 Loan

Washington, Sept. 9 (AP)—Jesse H. Jones, Federal Loan Administrator, announced today that the British Government had repaid $1,281,000 of a loan of $425,000,000 with proceeds of the sale of 12,000 shares of Continental Baking Company eight per cent. preferred stock.

The stock was part of the collateral pledged to the loan. The British have repaid a total of $1,880,140, Jones said.

CREW REPORTS FLOATING MINE, RAFT ADRIFT

Latter Excites Speculation; Explosive Missed Exton by 10 Feet

BOSTON, Sept. 9 (AP)—A narrow miss of a drifting mine and the sighting of a strangely adorned abandoned raft—both in the South Atlantic between Brazil and Africa—were reported by the American Export Line freighter Exton upon arrival today from Calcutta, Capetown and Trinidad.

Ships Warned of Location

Ship's officers reported that on Aug. 30 the vessel came within 10 feet of a mine, which evidently had drifted away from a minefield. All ships were warned of its location—then at latitude 15 degrees, 17 minutes north and longitude 33 degrees, 47 minutes, west.

The Exton's crew was mystified two days earlier by the sight of a raft fashioned from two hatchboards lashed together, surmounted by an empty British-labeled packing case, above which projected a stick and a large white sheet. Upon the sheet were a crudely drawn likeness of Chancellor Hitler and outlines of swastikas, Japanese and Italian flags. Trailing astern was an empty flare canister.

The mariners' opinions were divided between the speculation that the raft might have been a target used by British war vessels in gun practice and the theory that the raft had been occupied by castaways who had been rescued, or washed overboard. In support of the theory that the contrivance had been used as a life raft, sailormen pointed out that numerous sharks were seen in the vicinity.

Month's Defense Outlay

The Dixie Clipper carried 21 passengers bound for Lisbon, 25 for Bermuda and 1,846 pounds of mail.

Plane, Pilot Toll May Make R.A.F. Cut Down Raids on Nazi Territory

NEW YORK, Sept. 9 (AP)—The heavy toll of bombers and pilots may force England to reduce its recent smashing raids on Germany and Nazi-held territory, Vincent Sheean, foreign correspondent, declared today on arrival from London on the Yankee Clipper.

Sheean said he was told that Britain lost 293 bombers and fighting planes—principally bombers—on the western front last month, while the Germans lost 197.

"In the raid on Berlin last Monday night, 20 bombers and 120 men were lost," Sheean said. "Day bombing of German-held territory in France also was very costly. Similar losses caused the Germans to curtail their own blitzkrieg over England."

SEP 10 1941

Among the 13 other passengers from Lisbon was David K. E. Bruce, returning from his third trip to England within a year as the United States Red Cross representative in Britain. He estimated that the Red Cross had supplied England materials and food worth $25,000,000, and said cargo losses were "comparatively slight."

Production Tempo Increasing Rapidly

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 9—American defense production will be doubled in September and October, John Biggers, former director of the OPM production division, said today upon boarding a transatlantic clipper from his new post as United States Minister to London.

Biggers, who will be in charge of synchronizing and coordinating British and American defense production, said:

"Our production is moving up at what you might say is a 30-degree incline. This month and next month it will begin to move at a 60-degree incline."

LABOR DEMANDS VOICE IN PEACE

Green Invites Foreign Trade Union Chiefs to U. S.

Atlantic City, Sept. 9 (A. P.).—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, asserted today that organized labor throughout the world would demand a voice in the formulation of a peace settlement after the present wars. He told the Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motorcoach Employees of America at its annual convention today that he had already invited foreign labor representatives to take part in such a demand.

"I have invited them," he said, "to attend the convention of the American Federation of Labor at Seattle, Wash., on October 6 for the First World Conference, if you please. We will make a demand that labor shall sit at the peace conference table. This demand shall be so singing that it will be heard in China.

"We are determined that when the war is over, and the dictators are defeated, as we know they will be, labor shall have a voice in helping formulate the peace treaty, and every labor organization in every country shall have the right of collective bargaining."

Mr. Green said he had invited labor leaders from Great Britain, Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, Norway, Belgium, Holland and most Latin American countries to attend the Seattle meeting.

Gov. Charles Edison, addressing the convention* called for a national unity strong enough "to oppose the false unity of the chain gangs of dictatorship." He said that such unity could be accomplished only "through constant attention to the well being and happiness of every single person."

Father of Seven in Navy Joins the Navy Himself

Admiral Stark Congratulates Him; All on Same Ship

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9 (AP).—Admiral Harold R. Stark, Chief of Naval Operations, congratulated Clarence Floyd Patten, fifty-two-year-old father of seven enlisted men in the Navy, by radio as Mr. Patten joined the Navy himself tonight.

Patten, a Ridgefield, Wash., farmer, took the oath on the quarterdeck of the battleship Nevada in the presence of his sons, Myrne, Roy, Marvin, Allen, Gilbert, Bruce and Clarence jr. The location of the Nevada was undisclosed. The father, like his sons, signed up as a fireman. They will all be on the same ship.

PILOT WANTS FERRY EXPERIENCE

Hatboro, Pa., Sept. 9 (A. P.). William Herron, 27-year-old training pilot with 2,000 hours in the air behind him, wants more experience, so he's going to ferry bombers to Britain.

He turned over the management of his Hatboro airport and ten training planes to his wife and left for Montreal for a month's course in ocean navigation.

Mrs. Herron, also a flyer who helped her husband in training amateurs here, said she "felt pretty badly" over their first separation in six years of married life, but added: "I'll be able to get along."

Freighter to Take Food to Ireland

Philadelphia, Sept. 9 (A. P.).—A 4,660-ton freighter, the Arena, first of six foodships bought in this country by the Irish Free State, will sail soon for Ireland without protection, agents disclosed.

"We'll take her across single-handed. No help needed" declared Capt. Thomas Freehill and his volunteer crew of thirty-two who reached here by way of Montreal after signing in Irish ports.

The Arena, built during the world war and formerly the Democracy, was under Panamanian registry before her sale to Eire to take needed foodstuffs through Nazi submarine zones.

Simple Rites For Mother Of President

Service Held at Hyde Park Home With Burial in Family Plot at St. James's Church

By anny Porter

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 9.—(AP.)—Sara Delano Roosevelt was buried today behind a little country church while her only son, the President of the United States, blinked away his tears.

Slanting rays of a late afternoon sun picked out the simple mahogany casket. The coffin head was laid to the west in keeping with an old tradition that on resurrrection day the arising dead should face the rising sun.

While Rev. Frank R. Wilson conducted Episcopal rites at the family burial plot in St. James Churchyard. . . . "O Lord, support us all the day long, until the shadows lengthen and the evening comes". . . The President, tense, face immobile, looked downward.

He never looked toward the grave as the casket, brightened with a single spray of assorted flowers, was lowered, nor did he return an anxious glance cast his way by his wife.

Stand in Semicircle.

The President and 11 other members of the Roosevelt family stood in a silent semicircle at the foot of the grave, while Mr. Wilson read the solemn words:

"Unto Almighty God we commend the soul of our sister departed, and we commit her body to the ground, earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust. . ."

The church bell then tolled the hour of four.

The President stood with one hand on the open door of the White House sedan in which he rode to the cemetery, along with his wife and his son, James, and his mother's surviving brother and sister, Frederick A. Delano and Mrs. Price Collier.

Tension was so great that when Mrs. Collier coughed, Mr. Roosevelt started. He lapsed into immobility until he was roused again by a sudden commotion in the ranks of the estate people, who were standing on the west side of the burial plot, facing the family. A young man had fainted. Someone revived him with smelling salts.

In spite of the family's no flowers request, the side of the grave was banked with them and they overflowed into the rest of the plot. On top of the casket was a single spray of bright gladiola, lavendar, pink and yellow asters and red roses. A huge wreath of red roses, white lilies and baby breath bore the only identification. It was from the Democratic National Committee.

Estate Workmen Bearers.

Mrs. Roosevelt's grave was to the left of that of the President's father, James Roosevelt, who died in 1900. Nearby were the graves of Rebecca, first wife of James, and of the President's son and first namesake, who died in infancy.

In keeping with tradition, the bearers who lowered the casket into the grave were eight men from the Roosevelt estate. Mrs. Roosevelt's husband, James, requested that workmen from the ancestral acres be his pallbearers.

Mr. Roosevelt wore a dark blue business suit and black tie. On his left arm was a black silk sleeve band. He wore his glasses.

Three sons, James, Elliott and John, were similarly dressed, but only Elliott among them wore a band of mourning on his arm.

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt was garbed entirely in black, her dress a sheer chiffon and net. Mrs. Collier, also in black, wore a hat with a flowing black mourning veil thrown back from her face.

The brother of the President's mother had on a cutaway coat and striped trousers.

Other members of the family present were the wives of the three sons, and Ethel du Pont Roosevelt, wife of Franklin D., Jr., who is on sea duty with the Navy, and Mrs. James R. Roosevelt, widow of the Chief Executive's half brother.

The public was barred from the funeral service, which Mr. Roosevelt considered a personal affair. Only three members of the press, representing three wire services, attended.

The short ritual beside the open grave ended with the words, "Depart, O Christian soul, out of this world, in the name of God the Father Almighty who created thee. In the name of Jesus Christ who redeemed thee. In the name of the Holy Ghost who sanctifieth thee. May thy rest be this day in peace, and thy dwelling-place in the paradise of God."

For a moment, there was silence. Then Mr. Wilson stepped away from the grave, and the little crowd moved to go. Mr. Roosevelt got into the car with his family, to return to the home where his mother died Sunday at the age of 86.

He expected to remain there perhaps another day, then go to Washington in time to make a radio talk of "major importance" Thursday night.

Memorial at Campobello

CAMPOBELLO ISLAND, N. B. Sept. 9 (AP).—Island natives and summer folk joined tonight in a memorial service for Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt at Little St. Ann's Church, where the President's mother had worshipped for almost sixty summers.

The Episcopal burial office—the same ritual intoned earlier in the day at Hyde Park, where Mrs. Roosevelt was buried beside her husband—was the basis of tonight's service. Two favorites of Mrs. Roosevelt, "Abide With Me," and "O Love That Wilt Not Let Me Go," were sung.

30.24— 11715

Practically every one in the church had known Mrs. Roosevelt, and many had renewed their friendship or acquaintance with her during the last summer. She had left her red, rambling cottage on the shore overlooking the American mainland only a week before her death on Sunday.

By Logan Reavis

New York, Sept. 8 (The Special News Service).—Leningrad, Russia's fortified seaport of the north, is menaced from land—its railroad link with Russia suffering the shells of Nazi guns, the city itself reported encircled by the Germans.

Thus, a city which remained secure for 238 years from attack by sea faces a threat from the rear, from the land side.

For generations, Russians had armed the city to beat off attack from the Baltic, through the Gulf of Finland.

Ships were built there, forts constructed and defense points established on the gulf's edge to make Leningrad impregnable to sea assault.

The long-range artillery and the long-range airplane of today have changed the picture.

Main defense of Leningrad against the mechanized power of modern armies is the marshy terrain which recurs around the southerly, westerly and easterly approaches to the city.

If the panzer units should bog down in the marshes, it might be that the U. S. S. R. could produce special tanks able to maneuver successfully in that soft soil.

It is known that the Soviets have employed Vickers and Ford tanks efficient for combat in water and on land. Whether a fleet of these tanks, able as they are to take streams in their stride, could perform in the marshlands remains a question.

But the success or failure of Leningrad's stand against her attackers may well prove a vital lesson for the cities of the world's seacoasts—cities like New York, Charleston, Boston and San Francisco, as well as cities in foreign lands.

For the harbor cities of the world have been fortified primarily against sea attack.

Leningrad was strongly fortified on the sea side by the island fortress of Kronstadt, by a chain of gun-bristling smaller islands, and by three-decker forts commanding the sea approach to the city. Her ships controlled the gulf.

But today the great menace has come to Leningrad through the back door—by land.

THE WAR TODAY

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

Herr Hitler has made known in general terms the nature of his new order calling for the Nazification of Europe (and then some), and the Anglo-American leaders have announced the policies "on which they base their hopes for a better future of the world."

Nobody else has claimed, or been accorded, a dominating position in the tangled affairs of the continent. Most folk seem to have taken it for granted that Europe is prediestined to come under the guardianship of either (1) the fuehrer, or (2) the Anglo-American brotherhood, when the war has picked the victor.

Maybe that's the correct answer, but it seems passing queer that the prophets should ignore Russia as potential boss of a good part of the old world—provided the Axis is beaten.

Perhaps they are avoiding a mighty delicate issue, purposely, and that this column is rushing in where angels would find tough going. Still, the great strength being disclosed by the Bolshevists, as the fiercest and most bloody battle of history rages from the Baltic to the Black Sea, certainly gives pause for thought.

If the Allies are victorious in this war, it isn't at all unlikely that the Muscovites will emerge as the dominant force in Europe as far west as the Rhine—and maybe farther.

Much must depend on whether the peoples of all the Russias are solidly behind the Communist government. That long has been a moot question among observers, but up to this moment the situation has been shrouded in mystery. The only answers we have had are such as comes out of besieged Leningrad, where civilian men and women are fighting beside the troops.

When I toured Eastern Europe just before the European war began, the experts all expressed the view that it would take a major war to demonstrate whether the people of the Soviet Union were solidly behind the government. Well, we have the war all right, and thus far Stalin's support appears steady enough. However, the conflict is still young.

It's schoolboy stuff that Russia covers a seventh of the land surface of the globe, and that it contains all the resources required by modern man. They say that Russia and the United States are the only two countries which are so nearly self-contained that they could wage war just about indefinitely on their own resources.

The Soviet's young but strong industrial development, with its strategically distributed factories and the powerful army, have been brought into the open by the war. Russia has disclosed an actual strength, quite apart from potentialities, which has astonished the outside world.

So if Russia is on the winning side in this war, and emerges strong, the Red tide may surge across Europe to the Rhine at least.

German

BERLIN, Sept. 9 (AP)—The communiqué from the German High Command said today:

Speed divisions of the German Army, excellently supported by air force combat units, reached the Neva River on a broad front east of Leningrad as previously reported in a special announcement. The city of Schluesselburg on Lake Ladoga was taken by storm by one infantry regiment. Thus the German-Finnish ring closed around Leningrad, and the city is now cut off from all land connections.

Combat planes bombed armament and supply facilities in Leningrad yesterday and last night. Another air force night raid was directed against Moscow.

Submarines sank four merchantmen totaling 21,500 tons in the North Atlantic.

The air force last night bombed military objectives in Yorkshire and port facilities at Greater Yarmouth on the British Isle.

The attack by German bombers night before last on enemy ships in the Gulf and roadstead of Suez had great success. A 7,000-ton tanker was destroyed and five other large merchantmen were badly damaged.

Last night the enemy flew into Western and Southwestern Germany. Bombs on residential sections, primarily in Kassel, caused dead and wounded among the civilian population. Anti-aircraft bagged one of the attacking British bombers.

Carrying out convoy duty while supplying troops fighting in the extreme north, the artillery cadet ship Bremse (1,460 tons) surprisingly encountered British naval forces during bad visibility in Northern Norwegian waters. The enemy forces consisted of one cruiser and two destroyers.

Protecting the convoy, the Bremse accepted the fight against superior enemy forces, and was lost after a short, fierce fight, because of several torpedo hits. All ships of the convoy, because of the courageous operation of the Bremse, reached their destination undamaged. Part of the crew was saved.

British

LONDON, Sept. 9 (AP)—The British Admiralty issued the following today:

An enemy convoy and two supply ships with a strong escort were intercepted and attacked last night by our patrols in the English Channel.

In the first attack just before midnight one of the supply ships, a vessel of about 3,500 tons, was hit by a torpedo. This ship was certainly badly damaged and probably sunk.

While the enemy convoy was being shadowed after the first attack, an engagement took place between our ships and the enemy convoy escort. In this engagement one E-boat probably was sunk and an armed trawler was set on fire.

Shortly afterward a second attack was made on the enemy convoy. In this attack the remaining supply ship, a vessel of about 4,000 tons, was torpedoed. This caused very big explosions and much wreckage was seen to be thrown into the air. That this ship was sunk was confirmed by air reconnaissance at daylight this morning, when wreckage was sighted.

The only casualties suffered by our ships during these operations were four wounded.

One of the vessels which torpedoed and sank an enemy supply ship was a motor torpedo boat of the Royal Norwegian Navy.

The Admiralty issued the following communiqué tonight:

Light forces under command of Rear Admiral P. L. Vain had been operating against German convoys supplying their troops on the Murmansk front. These operations have been successful.

A German destroyer, an armed trawler and another vessel have been sunk. The German light cruiser Bremse, which was damaged by naval aircraft during the raid on Kirkenes in July, is believed to have been sunk. Other ships probably have been damaged.

We sustained no casualties. Further details are awaited.

The Admiralty also issued the following communiqué:

A large Italian schooner has been torpedoed and sunk by one of our submarines in the Central Mediterranean.

Off the harbor of Bengazi another of our submarines engaged two self-propelled supply lighters by gunfire. Both of these were hit and damaged and one of them may have been sunk.

The Air Ministry today issued this communiqué:

R. A. F. attacks last night were directed against the industrial town of Kassel, where there are important railway workshops.

The weather was favorable and many bombs were seen to burst on the targets.

Objectives at Muenster and other places in Western Germany as well as the docks at Cherbourg also were bombed.

None of our aircraft is missing.

A joint communiqué of the Air and Home Security Ministries said today:

During the night only a very small number of enemy aircraft, operating singly, have flown over coastal districts in Eastern and Southwest England and one was destroyed.

Bombs which were dropped at a few widely separated points caused only minor damage, but at one place on the northeast coast a small number of casualties was reported.

CAIRO, Egypt, Sept. 9 (AP)—Middle East General Headquarters issued the following:

Libya—In the Tobruk area there was some exchange of artillery fire. Our patrols again penetrated deep into the enemy position. Several light enemy bombing attacks resulted in regligible damage. In the frontier area there is nothing to report.

The R. A. F. Middle East Command in Cairo issued this communiqué tonight:

Sicily—Heavy bombers of the R. A. F. successfully bombed shipping and the harbor at Palermo during the night of Sept. 7-8. Many direct hits were obtained on sheds, docks, main jetties and a drydock, causing explosions and a large fire, visible twenty miles away.

One direct hit on the north jetty caused debris to be thrown high into the air. Near the fire station further fires broke out. On the return journey from the target our aircraft machine-gunned a Coast Guard station and railway sheds at Licata.

A reconnaissance has revealed that a merchant ship torpedoed in Syracuse harbor by aircraft of the Fleet Air Arm the night of Aug. 10-11 now has her stern under water.

Cyrenaica—Today aircraft of the R. A. F. raided Derna and Capuzzo and Bardia was bombed by aircraft of the South African Air Force.

From these operations all our aircraft returned safely.

VALLETTA, Malta, Sept. 9 (Reuter)—A communiqué states:

Last night there were three alarms in Malta. The raiders dropped a number of bombs on widely scattered areas. One person was killed and others were injured. Some damage was done to civilian property, including a hospital. One heavy bomber was shot down into the sea by one of our fighters after it had been illuminated by searchlights.

Italian

ROME, Sept. 9 (AP)—The Italian High Command issued the following communiqué today:

On the Tobruk front there was considerable activity by our artillery.

Italian-German air detachments successfully bombed munitions dumps, artillery emplacements, troop cantonments and concentrations of motor vehicles at Tobruk, Matruh, Jarabub and Sidi Barrani. German fighter planes attacked the Sidi Barrani airport, destroying a Hurricane fighter plane on the ground.

Enemy planes again flew over Palermo last night, dropping several bombs, almost all of which fell in the sea with little damage and no casualties. Losses among the Palermo population caused by an air raid Sunday night rose to twenty-seven dead and fifty-eight injured. The behavior of the population for calm and discipline was exemplary.

In East Africa, our advanced detachments of the outpost at Culquabert carried out a sortie Sept. 6, dispersing enemy elements facing them. At Uolchefit, in an air machine-gunning action, serious losses were inflicted upon the enemy.

The steamer Esperia was sunk by an enemy submarine in the Central Mediterranean. Almost all persons embarked and the crew were rescued by escorting units.

Formations of the Italian air force attacked air and naval bases on the island of Malta last night, causing fires and much damage. One of our planes failed to return from this action.

MOSCOW, Wednesday, Sept. 10 (AP)—The Soviet Information Bureau issued this communiqué today:

On Sept. 9 our troops engaged the enemy in stubborn battles along the entire front.

Our air force dealt blows on enemy troops on the battlefields and destroyed aircraft on enemy airdromes.

On Sept. 7 seventy-one German airplanes were destroyed in air battles, by anti-aircraft fire and on enemy airdromes. Our losses were twenty-four planes.

On Sept. 9 during the day two German reconnaissance planes were brought down near Moscow.

SEP 10 1941

Russian

Moscow, Sept. 9 (AP)—The Soviet information bureau issued this communique today:

During the night of September 8-9 our troops continued to fight the emeny along the entire front.

The enemy is sustaining heavy casualties near Odessa. Within the last ten days the Rumanians lost over 20,000 men and officers. The battlefield was littered with Rumanian bodies. In these engagements the Rumanian guards division and the Eleventh, Twenty-first and First frontier divisions suffered most heavily.

The first regiment of marines of the Black Sea fleet is fighting heroically. Red navy men launch several attacks daily and inflict enormous losses on the enemy. In three days alone this regiment destroyed about two regiments of Rumanian infantry, four tanks, many trucks, guns and machine guns. Trophies captured from the Rumanians include six tanks, eighteen guns, several hundred rifles, many rifle cartridges, eight mine-throwers, twenty automatics, seventeen machine guns, several thousand shells and many hand grenades.

Red navy men took prisoner over 200 Rumanian infantrymen and a squadron of Royal Cavalry together with its commander.

The Red army man, Filin, discovered a camouflaged German gun. He crept fearlessly up to it and by several well-aimed hand grenades destroyed it with its crew. A group of Nazis, attracted by the explosions, surrounded the dranig Red army man and wanted to capture him alive. When they approached quite close Filin flung his last hand grenade. The explosion killed several Nazi soldiers. The Red army man died a hero's death.

For several hours a machine-gun company commanded by Junior Political Instructor Kurenkov successfully repulsed a numerically superior enemy. The gallant machine gunners let the Nazis get quite close to their trenches and calmly machine-gunned them. When the enemy ceased to attack and retired nearly 200 Nazi bodies were left on the battlefield.

Red army men, commanders and political instructors are displaying courage and resourcefulness in fighting the German Fascist troops.

Two sections commanded by junior Lieutenant Grunin were cut off from their unit and surrounded by two German companies. They rapidly dug in and, arranging a circular defense, opened rifle and machine-gun fire at the Fascists. The Red army man, Popov, although wouned four times, did not cease firing. Red army man Makeyev was thrice wounded, but continued to fight. The field was littered with the bodies of killed and wounded Germans. Killing over one hundred German men and officers, the Red army men forced their way back to their unit.

A small group of men and commanders repulsed three enemy attacks launched against the command post of Major Mikhailov's unit. Section commander Grebennikov Baku, a worker, especially distinguished himself in these encounters. He rolled his machine gun forward and fired at the Fascists point-blank. The enemy retreated, leaving twenty-five killed and their arms on the battlefield.

Second rank commissary-technician Ryabov was proceeding from headquarters to his unit. On the way he learned from peasants that not far off a small Soviet unit was engaged by a large Fascist group. Ryabov stealthily crept to the enemy's rear and opened fire from concealment. He quickly dispatched the mine-thrower and machine-gun crew. The Fascists tried to capture the daring commander, but the latter defended himself stubbornly and killed ten more Germans. Meanwhile, our unit took the offensive and dislodged the Germans from their position.

The real masters in many districts captured by the German Fascist troops are the guerrillas. They wear down the Germans' strength and make conditions intolerable for them.

A detachment commanded by a former tractor driver destroyed large German ammunition and fued bases in the town of Porkhov.

One night a small guerrilla group set fire to hay stacks outside a town and opened fire. The alarm was raided in the town. Germans rushed to the scene of the fire and shooting but nobody was to be seen near the hayricks. Meanwhile the main guerrilla body entered Porkhov from the other end and made its way to the stores, which were surrounded by barbed wire. Grenades were thrown at the sentinels from various sides. After killing the sentries the guerrillas set fire to the fuel and blew up the ammunition dumps.

In the Strugikrasnye district a guerrilla detachment led by a member of the district Soviet annihilated a group of German cyclists and captured a wireless station. The detachment also attacked a platoon of Fascist soldiers bound for the district center. The Fascists lost over thirty men killed and wounded. In this encounter the guerrillas captured a truck, three machine-guns and twenty-four rifles.

In the Seredking district guerrillas caught fifteen marauders carting goods stolen from the peasants to the rear in three trucks. In a short fight the marauders were annihilated.

Soviet miners are working self-sacrificingly to strengthen the country's defensive power. The Bondarenko stripper in a mine in the Shakhty district has completed his eleven months' quota. A stripper headed by one Gorbunkov is daily stripping 128 to 130 tons of coal per shift instead of the standard eighty.

A FEW DAYS LATER THE FIELD HOSPITAL WHERE LYUDMILA PONOMAREVA WORKED WAS MACHINE-GUNNED BY TWO GERMAN PLANES. THE HOSPITAL BUILDING WHERE THERE WERE SIX WOUNDED RED ARMY MEN CAUGHT FIRE. RISKING HER LIFE SHE CARRIED ALL SIX OF THE WOUNDED RED ARMY MEN OUT OF THE BURNING BUILDING.

S.S. Sessa En Route Iceland Was Shelled Without Any Warning

SEP 11 1941

State Department Points Out That In Two Minutes Freighter Sunk After Being Torpedoed At Night

F. D. Confers With Cabinet Men

By RICHARD L. TURNER

Washington, Sept. 10 (AP)—Word that the S.S. Sessa was torpedoed and shelled without warning at night and sank in two minutes was issued today by the State Department while President Roosevelt nearly doubled the length of the important address he has scheduled for Thursday night.

Washington, the country and the capitals of the world looked forward expectantly and impatiently to the address as an expression of American reaction and policy at a grim moment, with relations between the United States and the Axis nations strained as they seldom have been before.

The address will follow closely upon the sinking of the Sessa, 300 miles this side of Iceland, the bombing and sinking of the S.S. Steel Seafarer in the Red Sea and last week's attack upon the destroyer Greer, near Iceland, by a German submarine.

Most observers looked for a strong statement from the Chief Executive and an announcement of actual steps taken to safeguard American ships and lives upon the seas—possibly including orders to the Atlantic naval patrol to sink on sight any Axis war vessels found in the area between the United States and Iceland.

RADIO SPEECH TONIGHT

En route to Washington after attending the funeral of his mother at Hyde Park, N. Y., Mr. Roosevelt announced that his speech, originally scheduled for 15 minutes, had been increased to 25. The news of both the Sessa and the Steel Seafarer had been received since the original plan was made.

The President had finished writing the speech before he left his home at Hyde Park, but it was, of course, still open to revision. Judge Samuel I. Rosenman of the New York Supreme Court, who has advised the President on the content of many of his important speeches, was a passenger on the train.

Ahead to Washington, Mr. Roosevelt sent word that he wished to confer with his Secretaries of State, War and Navy tonight or tomorrow, and when a presidential secretary was asked whether this had any connection with the radio speech, he replied:

"You might make your own deductions."

Mr. Roosevelt also planned a meeting with Democratic and Republican congressional leaders at 10 a. m. tomorrow at which time he would have an opportunity to discuss his speech with them if he desired.

Neutrality Act Issue.

One legislator predicted that Mr. Roosevelt would discuss with the leaders the possibility of repealing the Neutrality Act. He said it was his information that the Chief Executive had not decided whether to ask repeal of the act and wanted advice as to whether it could be repealed.

Although asserting that any such request would stir up a major controversy, one seasoned member of Congress expressed the belief that the Administration could obtain sufficient votes to repeal the law.

The law, enacted in 1939, forbids American vessels to carry goods or passengers to belligerent nations, requires belligerents to obtain title to their purchases in this country before shipment, forbids Americans to travel on belligerent ships except in accordance with presidential recommendations and prohibits the arming of American merchant ships.

The President, informed sources said, will demand that Germany give a strict accounting for the American lives and the American shipping lost at sea because of Nazi operations.

Since the start of the war in 1939, these sources said, five American-owned ships have been sunk, presumably by German action, and at least 65 United States citizens have met death in the sinking of American and other vessels.

Informed congressional quarters also said that Mr. Roosevelt probably would outline his plans for protecting American ships plying between this country and Iceland.

A report to Congress on the operations of the Lend-Lease Act and a second request for lend-lease funds were expected to command the President's immediate attention upon his return to the capital. Acting Speaker Woodrum, Democrat, Virginia, predicted today that the request for additional money would be submitted to Congress before the end of the week.

A total of $7,000,000,000 has been appropriated for lend-lease aid to Britain and other nations resisting the Axis powers, and the new request is expected to be for at least $5,000,000,000.

The State Department made public these bare details of the sinking of the Sessa on the basis of information relayed to it by the Navy:

"The Sessa was torpedoed without warning at midnight Aug. 17 about 300 miles from Reykjavik (Iceland) while proceeding from New York to that port.

"After the torpedoing, the Sessa was struck amidships by two shells. The Sessa sank two minutes after being torpedoed."

The Sessa was originally a Danish ship, one of those left stranded in American ports when the Nazis marched into Denmark. Later it was among those taken over by the United States government by arrangement with the Danish minister here.

The Maritime Commission chartered the ship to the Marine Operating Company of New York. Later it was transferred to Panamanian registry.

Among those presumably lost when the ship was sunk was one American.

Only three of the Sessa's crew of 27 have been rescued and these picked up by the United States Destroyer Lansdale, were listed by the State Department today as H. J. Bjerreiaarad, chief mate, a Danish subject; G. L. T. Ljunggren, able seaman, of Sweden; and J. De Oliverira Correia, able seaman of Portugal.

The area of the incident is included in what Adolf Hitler has described as a combat zone. It is not recognized as such by the United States however, and President Roosevelt has already said that at all costs the way would be kept open for carrying supplies to American forces in Iceland.

Survivors of the Sessa have reported to Bertel E. Kuniholm, American consul at Reykjavik, that the submarine, presumably German, which sank the ship was not sighted.

They said the Sessa was darkened with dimmed navigational lights when struck by a torpedo.

"Survivors describe light conditions," the consul reported, "as deep twilight. Mate thinks visability so low that submarine could not have seen ships markings. Ship struck by torpedo starboard side just forward bridge. Listed to starboard, sinking almost immediately. Two shells fired, one striking bridge, one probably killing captain, third mate and quartermaster, other striking bunkerhouse.

"Submarine not seen nor did survivors see gunfire flashes. Forward raft probably destroyed by torpedo explosion. No chance to use lifeboats. Six men reached after raft by swimming. Two Portuguese and one Canadian died on raft. Survivors saw no other boats or rafts and were unable to reach other seamen in water."

Also on the international front and of interest in Washington were reports from the Orient that anti-American agitation in the Japanese newspapers had noticeably subsided coincident with word that the American Ambassador Joseph C. Grew had conferred with the Japanese Foreign Minister some 12 times within the last week. At the State Department, however, Secretary Hull said he had no advices of any pending agreement or announcement concerning Japanese-American talks which have been in progress for some time.

From London, meanwhile came assurances that materials sent to England under the Lease-Lend Act would not be used in the British export market. The statement presumably was made in response to charges by opponents of the administration's foreign policy that Britain was selling Lease-Lend materials in other countries in competition with American exporters.

Secretary Hull announced he had taken steps to help Americans stranded in war zones to reach home, by permitting them in specific instances to travel on the ships of belligerent nations. Without special permission such travel is forbidden by the Neutrality Act.

Senator McCarran (D.-Nev.) questioned the State Department's authority to permit Americans to travel on belligerent ships. While the Neutrality Act permits such travel under presidential regulations, McCarran said it was never intended to authorize such an order as that issued by the department.

"That order is not in keeping with the aim of the neutrality law," he told reporters. In this crucial time, it will only jeopardize our chances of keeping out of the European war."

Five American-owned Ships Sunk And Four Lives Lost in War to Date

Washington, Sept. 10 (A. P.).—Five American-owned vessels, with four American lives, have been lost to date in this war. Some sixty other Americans have died in the sinking of foreign flag vessels. Prior to the entry of the United States into the world war in April, 1917, twenty-eight American ships had been sunk or attacked by German naval forces, with a death toll of seventy.

SEP 11 1941

The American-owned ships sunk so far are:

City of Rayville, owned by the United States Maritime Commission and operated by the United States Lines, sunk on November 9, 1940, after striking what was believed to have been a German mine off the coast of Australia. One American out of a crew of thirty-eight was lost.

Charles Pratt, 9,000-ton tanker with 5,000,000 gallons of fuel oil, sunk by a submarine on December 21, 1940, off Freetown, British West Africa. Two Americans out of a crew of forty-two were lost. The tanker was owned by a subsidiary of the Standard Oil Company and flew the flag of Panama, to which registry it was transferred when the neutrality act passed.

Robin Moor, American flag ship, torpedoed in the South Atlantic on May 21, 1941. No lives were lost, but President Roosevelt declared that a Nazi submarine had "flagrantly violated the right of United States vessels freely to navigate the seas subject only to a belligerent right accepted under international law."

Steel Seafarer, sent to the bottom of the Red Sea by a bombing plane on September 7.

Sessa, former Danish vessel taken over by the Maritime Commission and operated by an American company, although flying the Panamanian flag, sunk by a submarine 300 miles southwest of Iceland on August 17. One American is missing.

Roosevelt Back To Whitehouse; Expands Speech

Hull, Knox, Hopkins Confer With F. D.

Washington, Sept. 10 (AP)—President Roosevelt returned tonight from Hyde Park and the funeral of his mother to plunge immediately into activity reflecting deep concern over the impact of the war on this country.

Secretary of State Hull met the Chief Executive at the railroad station and drove with him through the oppressive heat to the White House. The Secretaries of War and Navy also were called to the executive mansion for conferences tonight, in advance of Mr. Roosevelt's important radio report to the nation tomorrow, which was expanded from its original scope.

The address will be broadcast over all networks at 9 p. m., Eastern Standard Time.

Secretary of War Stimson and Secretary of the Navy Knox reached the White House within minutes after the President and Hull arrived. Harry L. Hopkins, Lease-Lend supervisor, also attended the conference. White House aides said the conferees were enjoined to strict secrecy and no statement was forthcoming after the meeting.

Mr. Roosevelt's address tomorrow night undoubtedly will touch on the delicate relations between the United States on the one hand and Germany and Japan on the other. He authorized an announcement in advance that the speech would be of "major importance"—an unusual procedure in itself.

Originally he planned to speak 15 minutes. Now he expects to use 25.

The Chief Executive gave all his attention today to work which he had put aside for a few sad days, finding in it a measure of relief from his sorrow over the death of his mother on Sunday, a day after he arrived at Hyde Park house for a week-end visit.

His first action was to issue a proclamation which, in effect, will delay a strike which threatened to stop the nation's trains and "deprive the country of essential transportation service" at a time when such service is indispensi-ble to the defense effort.

Mr. Roosevelt ordered creation of a five-man board to investigate differences over wages between the railroads and their workmen and report to him within 30 days. A strike must be delayed, in accordance with the Railway Labor Act, until at least 30 days after the report has been handed to the President.

Non-operating unions, with a membership of 900,000, had voted to strike at 6 p. m., tomorrow for an hourly wage rate 30 to 34 cents higher than the carriers now pay. The 350,000 members of the operating brotherhoods had decided to strike next Monday for a 30 per cent pay increase.

Switch tenders, lowest paid workers of the operating brotherhoods, currently receive $5.06 daily.

Mr. Roosevelt named Dean Wayne Lyman Morse of the University of Oregon Law School to head the board. He appointed these other members: Thomas Reed Powell, Harvard law professor; James Cummings Bonbright, professor of finance at Columbia University; Joseph Henry Willits, director of social sciences for the Rockefeller Foundation, and Huston Thompson, Washington, D.C., attorney.

The national (railway) mediation board announced at Washington that the emergency fact-finding board would meet at Chicago Monday (Palmer House 10 a. m., est) to decide in what city the proceedings will be held, and to set a date and place for commencing the formal investigation designed to head off a strike.

Two of Mr. Roosevelt's most trusted advisers boarded the presidential special at New York to make the rest of the run to Washington. They were Harry L. Hopkins, lease-lend supervisor, and judge Samuel I. Roseman of the New York State Supreme Court.

The President, it was explained, wanted Hopkins to bring him up to date on the program of supply of war materials and weapons to Britain, China and Russia and on the latest turn in foreign affairs.

William D. Hassett of the presidential secretariate said Roseman had a supplementary report for Mr. Roosevelt on a study he has been making of the possible necessity of further revision of the defense organization.

Hassett was unable to say whether shifts in the high command of the defense program might be expected, suggesting that reorganization was a continuous process.

Mrs. Roosevelt accompanied her husband back to Washington from their family home beside the Hudson. Both came to the train wearing the same garments of mourning in which they appeared at the funeral.

Crew of Steel Seafarer Describe How Craft Was Sunk in Red Sea.

Suez, Sept. 10 (A. P.).—The American freighter Steel Seafarer rocked as if she had struck a reef and sank twenty minutes after a dive bomber had blasted open her hull on the moonlit Red Sea Friday night, members of the crew said yesterday on their arrival here.

Informed sources said that the vessel was carrying a typical lease-lend cargo, including some machinery, army stores, accessories and spare parts, but that it represented less than 2 per cent of the total American war shipments to Britain's Middle East forces.

"I will say this for the German," commented Ralph S. Pratt of New York, the gray-haired first mate, "he didn't machine-gun us afterward as some of them have done."

[The identification of the attacker as German was not amplified.[

All of the forty-eight men aboard the craft survived. Thirty-six pulled ten miles in lifeboats against strong currents to a rocky island, where they were rescued by a British warship. Another British vessel picked up the remainder.

Agree on Single Explosion.

Most agreed that a single explosion—a gigantic blast that ripped a hole beneath the waterline under the No. 4 hatch—marked the raid. They differed regarding whether an aerial torpedo or a bomb was the cause.

"It was 11:30 o'clock Friday night when it happened," said Robert Cartwright of Nantucket, Mass., the helmsman. "The moon was full and we were steaming peacefully northward. Suddenly I heard a very heavy explosion to starboard and the ship rocked as if we had struck a reef.

"At the same time I heard an airplane engine roar and saw a brown streak flash overhead. The plane crew must have cut off its engines, dived and then turned them on again."

The first mate said he was thrown from his bunk.

"The washstand came out," he reported. "Everything was topsy-turvy. I got one shoe and couldn't find the other. I grabbed a slipper and rushed up on deck."

Capt. John Halliday of Baltimore, who was on the bridge with the third officer, sounded an alarm and the crew poured up on deck, some in pajamas, nightshirts or shorts.

The officers found nothing could be done to save the ship and "her decks were awash" three minutes after they pulled away, Pratt said.

All the survivors were landed here yesterday, reporting no particular hardships aside from loss of their belongings. British crews, which rescued the Americans, supplied them with clothing.

Various members of the Steel Seafarer's crew said it was a question whether the pilot of the raiding plane was able to distinguish the ship's nationality in the moonlight, although the United States emblem was painted on her sides.

took a list to port, he reported, and then to starboard before it settled and sank quickly by the stern.

The wireless was put out of action almost immediately, he said.

The captain said boats were launched with the crew and were in the water within five minutes and had just pulled clear from the ship when she sank.

The boats made for Shadwan Island, 12½ miles from the scene. One boat became separated owning to the wind and the rough sea. After repairs were made two boat loads of survivors proceeded to Hurghada to report the sinking.

(The attacking plane has not been identified, but Cairo sources said it was a German ship. A Berlin spokesman indicated it was either German or Italian.)

Capt. Halliday said today in a radio interview from Cairo, Egypt, that the vessel was bombed "with the Stars and Stripes flying."

In a broadcast carried by the National Broadcasting Company Blue network the ship's master declared there could not have been any doubt of its nationality because "it was a clear moonlight night and not a cloud in the sky."

"The entire crew was cool and collected and maintained the American tradition of the sea in a crisis," he said.

Captain Tells About Sinking of U. S. Ship

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10—(AP) — Capt. J. D. Halliday, of Baltimore, master of the American freighter Steel Seafarer which was sunk by a dive bomber in the Red Sea on Sept. 5, informed the State Department today that the first warning of the attack came when the aircraft were heard, and two seconds later there were two explosions on the starboard side of the vessel. No flames were seen, he said.

The report was forwarded to the State Department by the American Legation in Cairo, Egypt. The legation said more detailed information would be transmitted as soon as possible.

The plane, Halliday said, flew low over the ship from starboard to port with the engines shut off. The ship

A Challenge, Says London

LONDON, Sept. 10 (AP)—Sinking of the Sessa and the Steel Seafarer and the encounter of a U-boat with the United States destroyer Greer were described in British newspapers today as a German challenge to the United States.

The incidents stepped up already keen British interest in President Roosevelt's broadcast tomorrow night.

Cables from British newspaper men in Washington forecasting a Roosevelt announcement of sterner action by United States warships in the Atlantic were put on the first page.

"U-Boat Crisis in United States," said a Daily Express headline; "Anger Rises at Nazi 'Challenge.'"

The Daily Mail summed up the situation as "unrestricted U-boat war on United States—anger rising."

The Daily Sketch wrote: "From these outrages it is clear that Hitler once again has lost his patience and determined to defy American rights completely. Surely such acts as these should convert isolationists of the United States."

Prime Minister Churchill's warning yesterday that Britain would have to make "serious sacrifices in the munitions field" was approved by London writers, reporting Britons to be confident of the strength of their defenses to repel invasion and angered at delay in the Moscow conference.

As one phase of the eastern front situation, press reports from Teheran said that 6,000 tons of war materials and other supplies for Russia were now at Basra, Iraq, at the head of the Persian Gulf, ready for movement north over the newly acquired route through Iran.

No Word Regarding Sessa.

Berlin, Sept. 10 (A. P.).—Authorized sources declared at the daily press conference today that they still were without word from the German Navy concerning the sinking of the 1,700-ton United States-operated freighter Sessa and, therefore, could not comment.

Permit Americans To Return Home On Belligerent Ships

Takes Emergency Measures For Stranded Citizens

Washington, Sept. 10 (A. P.).—The State Department has authorized consuls in Great Britain to grant permission to Americans stranded there to return home on other than American ships, Secretary Hull disclosed today.

Means of making possible the return of many more United States citizens stranded in other countries also is under study, other department officials said.

The Secretary of State emphasized that the ruling regarding Americans in Britain was not a blanket authorization but that consuls could grant visas, as an emergency measure, to enable United States citizens to return home by the safest means available. Americans who travel on foreign craft would do so at their own risk, he added.

Under the neutrality act, United States citizens are barred from travel on belligerent ships unless special exceptions are made for them by this Government.

For a long time, Mr. Hull said, there has been a terrific clamor among Americans in Great Britain, Europe and Asia to return to the United States.

Between seventy-five and 100 in Britain alone, he explained must come back within the next few weeks or lose their citizenship. They are naturalized Americans who must live a prescribed time in the United States.

Among others who desire to return, he said, were a large number of technicians who had gone to England on various duties connected with the war and American assistance to England and who now wish to return.

The United States has done everything possible, he added, to expedite the return of Americans in foreign countries on American ships, but it has been found impossible to send an American vessel to England at this time because the Germans have refused to assure such vessel safe conduct.

Americans in the past, Hull said, have traveled on British planes from Lisbon to London, and some have flown across the Atlantic in British planes at their own risk.

The American consuls abroad, Hull said, have now been given discretion to visa passports, as an emergency measure, to enable United States citizens to return home by the safest means available. Such Americans must travel on foreign flag ships at their own risk, the Secretary declared.

Americans May Leave Britain On English Vessels

London, Sept. 10—(AP(—American citizens in Britain may now embark for home on belligerent ships if they so wish, acting U. S. Consul Glenn Abbey announced today in disclosing a relaxation of previous state department regulations against such travel.

"You are advised," said the announcement, "that the department of state has now given permission for the passports of American citizens to be validated for return to the United States either direct or via Canada as well as via Lisbon. Such a journey would be entirely at the traveler's own risk."

An embassy official remarked in elaboration:

"This means that United States citizens can now get home any way the British can get them home."

(In Washington, Secretary Hull explained that the new ruling was not a blanket authorization for American travel on belligerent ships or planes, but would be limited to provide a way home for Americans who have been marooned abroad for a long time.)

In the past, the only means for most Americans in Britain to get home was to take a plane to Lisbon, Portugal, and then cross the Atlantic by American or other non-belligerent ships or by Clipper plane. Many have thus been prevented from leaving, for plane seats to Lisbon have often not been available because of the demands of officials and others holding priority and space on ships has been far short of demand.

It was said reliably that the state department in Washington had rejected a suggestion originating in the embassy here that American citizens be sent to Iceland aboard British boats and then be taken home by escorted American vessels.

Some 5,000 Americans are understood to be in the United Kingdom. Those who are naturalized were warned that they might lose citizenship if they did not now prepare to go home, since such citizens are forbidden with cetrain exceptions to live in foreign countries beyond a specified time.

London Embassy Is Silent on Reversal of Policy—Refers All Questions to Washington.

London, Sept. 10 (A. P.).—The American State Department today relaxed its restrictions in order to permit American citizens in Britain desiring to return home to travel on belligerent ships.

The announcement was made by Glenn Abbey, acting Consul General in London, who notified American citizens that henceforth they may travel directly to the United States or by way of Canada. Hitherto the only route open to homeward-bound Americans has been by plane to Lisbon and thence across the Atlantic by American or other non-belligerent ships or by Clipper plane.

[In Washington Secretary Hull said the State Department had taken emergency measures to permit Americans stranded in belligerent countries to return home.]

'At Traveler's Risk.'

A reliable spokesman said that the State Department had rejected a suggestion originating at the London embassy to transfer American nationals to Iceland by British boats and then have an American vessel take them to the United States under escort.

Mr. Abbey's announcement, addressed to American citizens here, said: "You are advised that the Department of State has now given permission for the passports of American citizens to be validated for return to the United States either direct or via Canada as well as via Lisbon. Such a journey would be entirely at the traveler's own risk."

Clarifying this announcement, an embassy official said: "This means that American citizens can now get home any way the British can get them there."

According to the embassy, there now are slightly more than 5,000 Americans in the United Kingdom. The reason for the Stat Department's change of attitude would have to be announced at Washington, the embassy spokesman added.

Asked whether travel on belligerent ships would constitute a violation of the neutrality act, he said that this question likewise should be referred to Washington.

Mr. Abbey warned all naturalized Americans in Britain that they may lose their citizenship if they fail to return to the United States, and advised all such persons to notify him immediately of their intentions. Naturalized citizens, with certain exceptions, are forbidden to reside in foreign countries beyond a specified time.

Previous restrictions on the route by which citizens might return home have prevented many from leaving Britain. Scores of Americans in London have been trying for weeks to get air passage to Lisbon, but have been told there was no space on the planes because of demands for places by officials and other priority holders.

British Spike Nazi Propaganda Of Distrust On Lease-Lend Act

Point Out Unfounded Allegations That U. S. Attempts To Keep Britain From Exporting To Steal Trade And Vice Versa

(By The Associated Press)

London, Sept. 10—The British government, moving to spike what was unofficially termed a German propaganda campaign to promote distrust over operations of the Lease-Lend Act, assured the United States today it would make certain that American goods were not used to bolster or extend British world trade at the expense of United States business.

This was done in a White paper, accompanied by an official statement of the British Board of Trade, which was described by a reliable informant as but one in a number of actions prepared "to prevent Germany from using Lease-Lend grumbling as the thin edge of a wedge to pry Britain and the United States apart and hamper the Allied war effort."

Already, he said, unfounded allegations were being spread here that the United States was trying to use Lease-Lend to keep Britain from exporting anything so that American exporters could steal British foreign markets, while in the United States the story went to the effect that Britain was accepting Lease-Lend goods and at the same time sending British goods to South America to steal United States trade.

"Actually," he added, "our exports to South America have fallen off considerably, but the service departments won't let us give figures because they might give too much information to German sea raiders."

These were the principal undertakings made to the United States in the White paper:

"Lease-Lend materials sent to this country (Britain) have not been used for export and every effort will be made in the future to insure that they are not used for export, subject to the principle that where complete physical segregation of Lend-Lease materials is impracticable, domestic consumption of the material in question shall be at least equal to the amounts received under Lend-Lease.

"His Majesty's government has not applied and will not apply any materials similar to those supplied under Lend-Lease in such a way as to enable their exporters to enter new markets or to extend their export trade at the expense of the United States exporters. Owing to the need to devote all available capacity and manpower to war production, the United Kingdom export trade is restricted to the irreducible minimum necessary to supply or obtain materials essential to the war effort."

As to distribution in the United Kingdom of lend-lease goods:

"The general principle followed in this matter is that the remuneration received by the distributors, whatever the method of distribution, is controlled and will be no more than a fair return for the services rendered. . . . The arrangements rigorously exclude any opportunity for a speculative profit by private interests from dealing in lend-lease goods.

". . . The justification for retaining existing channels of distribution operating under strict government control is that the creation of elaborate new organizations in their place would inevitably result in loss of efficiency and the wasteful use of manpower, and retard the war effort."

The statement of the board of trade, supplementing the promises of the White paper, declared:

"It would not be tolerable that we should use for the purpose of maintaining our export trade, still less of expanding it at the expense of United States exporters, materials of which the United States exporter has been deprived in order that that material should be made available for our defense."

The board added that as long as Britain was operating under the cash and carry plan that preceded the lease-lend program, Britain's prime necessity was to obtain the greatest possible amount of dollars, since these were required for exchange, and thus during that period every effort was made to increase British exports "even at the cost of very great self denial on the part of United Kingdom consumers."

"Since that situation was widely appreciated among manufacturers for exports and because industry must lay its plans many months ahead," it was added, "it will doubtless happen that some goods will arrive in United States and South American markets in the days of lease-lend, delivery of which was planned in the days of cash-and-carry."

Other sources said that this had in fact happened and that the resultant misunderstanding had provided the basis for some of the accusations made against Britain.

ENGLAND WILL NOT USE U. S. SUPPLIES TO RIVAL EXPORTS

SEP 11 1941

Agreement Is Reached on Lease-lend Materials Sent From Here.

London, Sept. 10 (A. P.).—Great Britain, gravely concerned over charges that materials obtained from the United States under the lease-lend act were being used in direct competition with American industry in export markets, promised today to prevent such misuse and to restrict British exports.

The British Government was concerned, among other things, over what its leaders called the propaganda value to Germany of these charges that American industry, after sacrificing to send raw materials to Britain under the lease-lend act, was being hit in foreign markets by competition with goods made from these materials.

The agreement with the United States was announced in a White House paper and was said by a reliable source to be one of a series of steps planned "to prevent Germany from using lease-lend grumbling as the thin edge of a wedge to pry Britain and the United States apart and hamper the Allied war effort."

Britain, this informant said, expects such a German propaganda campaign to come to a head soon and wants to be able to meet it. He asserted the campaign is now under way in Britain as well as in the United States; that by word of mouth seeds of dissension were being sown in British pubs and factories.

Outlines Charges.

The charge is heard here, this source said, that the United States is trying to use the lease-lend program to bar Britain from exporting anything so that the United States can steal all British foreign markets, thus throwing British labor out of jobs after the war.

On the other hand in the United States, it was said, charges are made that Britain was accepting lease-lend goods and then sending British goods to South America to steal United States trade.

"Actually," this source said, "our exports to South America have fallen off considerably, but the service departments won't let us give figures, because they might give too much information to German sea raiders."

Cites Basis For Charge.

"One example of the kind of thing being used to strike at Anglo-American friendship," the source said, "is good will advertisements a British airplane concern published in a magazine with circulation abroad.

"Actually, this concern did not have any planes to export, but advertised to keep itself from being forgotten when the war ends and it can export planes."

In some cases, it was said, Britain was exporting goods made from materials of the cash-and-carry days and contracted for then, but delivered during the time of lease-lend. This provided a source for some of the charges heard, it was said.

The White Paper consisted of correspondence between Foreign Secretary Eden and United States Ambassador Winant regarding the lease-lend agreement, and a memorandum in general terms stating the reasons and background of the agreement.

Three Points Noted.

A memorandum which accompanied a letter from Mr. Eden to Mr. Winant made these points:

1. All materials the British obtained under lease-lend are required for prosecution of the war effort and the British Government promises to continue to take action to prevent diversions to the furtherance of private interests.

2. Lease-lend material has not been used and will not be used by the British for export.

3. The British "have not and will not apply any materials similar to those supplied under lease-lend in such a way as to enable exporters to enter new markets or extend their export trade" at the expense of United States exporters.

4. From its promise not to re-export lease-lend material, the British Government made an exception of special cases such as parts to complete installations already under construction.

5. The British promised to control distribution of lease-lend goods in the United Kingdom so that there "will be no more than a fair return for services rendered in the work of distribution," and this will be mainly through Government agencies.

6. No food obtained through lease-lend will be sold at uncontrolled prices.

7. Free distribution of such goods as milk products will be adopted in some cases.

The Board of Trade issued a statement on the agreement as follows:

"As a result of discussions which have taken place between Ministers and the United States Ambassador, correspondence has been exchanged and laid before Parliament as a White Paper setting out principles which should govern the use and distribution of lease-lend materials in this country.

"As United States export trade is being impeded by restrictions imposed by the United States Government upon the supply of raw materials being supplied to us under the lease-lend act, his Majesty's Government are under obligation to take steps to secure that no advantage is thereby enjoyed by United Kingdom manufacturers for export over their United States competitors.

"It would not be tolerable that we should use for the purpose of maintaining our export trade, still less of expanding it at the expense of United States exporters, materials of which the United States exporter had been deprived in order that that material should be made available for our defense. His Majesty's Government has therefore offered to the United States Government the undertaking which is obtained in the white paper.

"So long as it was necessary to pay cash for whatever supplies were required from the United States, the first consideration was that we should earn the greatest possible amount of dollars. Every effort was accordingly made to increase our exports even at the cost of very great self-denial on the part of United Kingdom consumers.

Some Goods May Arrive.

"Since that situation was widely appreciated among manufacturers for export and because industry must lay its plans many months ahead, it will doubtless happen that some goods will arrive in United States and South American markets in the days of lease-lend delivery of which was planned in the days of cash-and-carry.

"While the export policy of his Majesty's Government must still be to maintain such export trade as is possible, it must be a trade properly directed to sustain the war effort and so controlled as not to allow of the use of lease-lend materials to facilitate competition with the United States.

"So far as the distribution of lease-lend material is concerned it is plain that no one must be allowed to use the fact that we get supplies on these terms from the United States as an opportunity for private gain. His Majesty's Government has been careful to see that proper remuneration and no more is paid to those to whom distribution of such material is entrusted. They (the Government) are resolved that lease-lend supplies of every kind shall be used for the good of the community as a whole and for prosecution of the war effort."

Britain Pledges No Misuse Of U. S. Goods

SEP 11 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 10—Great Britain assured the United States today that no lend-lease material supplied to Britain would be used in any way to extend British export trade at the expense of United States exporters.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull said the action simply put in writing what had been agreed to by Britain and the United States.

The policy statement, he told his press conference, does not contain anything new, or anything that would change materially the existing situation.

He added it might, however, serve to correct some of the misunderstandings and misinterpretations which he said had resulted from the extent and nature of the Lend-Lease Act.

Given By Eden

The official assurances were given in a memorandum on the policy of the British Government by Anthony Eden, British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs. The memorandum was transmitted to the State Department by John G. Winant, the American Ambassador.

The text:

"1. All materials which we obtain under the Lend-Lease Act are required for the prosecution of the war effort. This principle governs all questions of the distribution and use of such goods and His Majesty's Government have taken and will continue to take action to secure that these goods are not in any case diverted to the furtherance of private interests.

Export Policy

"2. Lend-lease materials sent to this country have not been used for export and every effort will be made in the future to insure that they are not used for export, subject to the principle that where complete physical segregation of lend-lease materials is impracticable domestic consumption of the material in question shall be at least equal to the amounts received under lend-lease.

"3.—His Majesty's Government have not applied and will not apply any materials similar to those supplied under lend-lease in such a way as to enable their exporters to enter new markets or to extend their export trade at the expense of the United States exporters. Owing to the need to devote all available capacity and manpower to war production, the United Kingdom export trade is restricted to the irreducible minimum necessary to supply or obtain materials essential to the war effort.

Confined To Essentials

"4—For some time past exports from the United Kingdom have been more and more confined to those essential, (I) for the supply of vital requirements of overseas countries, particularly in the Sterling Empire; (II) for the acquisition of foreign exchange, particularly in the Western Hemisphere. His Majesty's Government have adopted the policy summarized below:

"(I) No materials of a type the use of which is being restricted in the United States on the grounds of short supply and of which we obtain supplies from the United States either by payment or on lend-lease terms will be used in exports with the exception of the following special cases:

"(a) Material which is needed overseas in connection with supplies essential to the war effort for ourselves and our allies, and which cannot be obtained from the United States.

Minor Components

"(b) Small quantities of such materials needed as minor though essential components of exports which otherwise are composed of materials not in short supply in the United States.

"(c) Repair parts for British machinery and plant now in use, and machinery and plant needed to complete installations now under construction so long as they have already been contracted for.

"Steps have been taken to prevent the export except to Empire and Allied territories of such goods which do not come within the exceptions referred to in (a), (b) and (c) above.

"(II) Materials similar to those being provided under lend-lease which are not in short supply in the United States will not be used for export in quantities greater than those which we ourselves produce or buy from any source.

Distribution In The United Kingdom Of Lend-Lease Goods

"5. The general principle followed in this matter is that the remuneration received by the distributors, whatever the method of distribution, is controlled and will be no more than a fair return for the services rendered in the work of distribution. The arrangements rigorously exclude any opportunity for a speculative profit by private interests from dealing in lend-lease goods. In most cases, lend-lease supplies will be distributed through organizations acting as agents of His Majesty's Government in the strict sense of the term and not as principals.

"Where for strong practical reasons this cannot be done a full explanation will be supplied to the United States' administration and their concurrence sought beforehand in any alternative arrangements proposed. The justification for retaining existing channels of distribution operating under strict Government control is that the creation of elaborate new organizations in their place would inevitably result in loss of efficiency and the wasteful use of manpower, and retard the war effort. In the distribution of lend-lease goods there will be no discrimination against United States firms.

Food Distribution

"6. Food is a special case. Only some five or six per cent. in tonnage of the total British food supply is coming from the United States and without great practical complications it would be impossible to have a separate system for the distribution of lend-lease food. Food distribution is carried out in the United Kingdom by wholesalers, to whom the Government sells food as principals. In fact, the Ministry of Food has established a close control over all distributive margins so that neither the wholesalers nor the retailers receive any greater remuneration than is adequate to cover the cost of the services performed."

"No food obtained on lend-lease terms is or will be sold at uncontrolled prices. Thus the general arrangements as regards the issue of lend-lease food fit into his Majesty's Government's policy of stabilizing the whole private level of foodstuffs, a policy to which the Government contributes £100,000,000 a year.

"7. In some cases direct free distribution is practicable and will be adopted. For example, some milk products (including lend-lease supplies from the United States) are distributed direct and free of charge to children and others in need through schools, clinics and hospitals. The distribution is undertaken by state agencies and the cost of the distribution is borne by the Government."

Hot Leningrad Defense Makes Nazis Fall Back on Siege Tactics

SEP 11 1941

By The Associated Press

MOSCOW, Sept. 11 (Thursday).—Mighty Red counter-blows have crumpled three German drives on the vital central front, and Soviet defenders are standing firm on the approaches to Leningrad, Kiev and Odessa, Russian front dispatches said early today.

The savage counter-attacks, aimed to relieve pressure on those besieged cities, were not detailed in the early morning communique, but war correspondents said Nazi troops, defeated in the twenty-six-day Battle of Yelnya with a loss of from 75,000 to 80,000 men, were in headlong flight westward toward Smolensk, forty miles away.

[At Berlin it was admitted that the Russians were attacking only thirty-seven miles northeast of Smolensk. The Germans also acknowledged that the Red Army still had access to Lake Ladoga from Leningrad and intimated that rather than storm the city the Nazis would starve and bombard it into surrender. However, a number of field fortifications blocking the German advance on the city were reported destroyed.]

The morning communique told only of continuing fierce fighting along the entire front and of repeated German air attacks on Leningrad. Some German bombers broke through Leningrad's defenses Tuesday and dropped explosives and incendiaries, but thirty-one planes were shot down, the communique said. On Monday fifty-nine German planes, compared with twenty-seven Russian, were shot down, it was added.

In the Gomel area, midway between Kiev and Smolensk, the 29th German Infantry Division was said to have been routed, leaving thousands of dead on the battlefield. The third prong of the counter-assault was said to have driven the Germans back across the River "N" after a five-day tank battle.

The Battle of Yelnya was fought along a thirty-eight-mile front, the Russians said. The Germans concentrated their heaviest artillery fire of the war along both sides of a bottleneck through which the German troops retreated from Yelnya, the dispatches reported. The Red Army, however, was said to have closed the gap, catching many Germans in a trap. It was believed these were a part of the eight divisions which the Russians said Monday had been routed.

At Leningrad, workers in defense factories sent a delegation to the front and received assurances from political commissars that "Fascist scoundrels will never enter our glorious city."

At Kiev, the Ukraine capital, dispatches reported, schools all remained open, theaters were crowded and 60 per cent of the Kiev province wheat crop was stored. Sowing of winter wheat was said to have been started.

The siege of Odessa went into its second month, with sailors of the Black Sea fleet reporting continued counter-attacks against the Rumanians.

The publication "Red Fleet" reported that the Russian navy had successfully escorted a large convoy into port after an encounter with German bombers in "one of the greatest" air-versus-sea battles of the war. The Germans were said to have attacked the warships in a heavy sea fifty miles outside the port, but two waves of planes failed to find their targets and were repulsed by anti-aircraft fire. More than forty bombs were said to have been dropped in vain around a single destroyer.

The army newspaper "Red Star" said in its report of the counter-attack across the River "N" that "almost 4,000 German soldiers and officers found their graves in the waters of the river." Several German divisions retreating across the river were said to have lost 238 tanks, 50 planes, 486 trucks and 135 guns. The staff of the motorized 15th Regiment was said to have been routed and twelve officers killed.

All three counter-attacks were said to be continuing, and calls were broadcast for new guerrilla attacks behind the German lines. Soviet planes dropped 20,000,000 leaflets behind the lines in a series of propaganda flights.

The Russians said that in the first days of German occupation of western White Russia and the western Ukraine guerrilla companies arose. These now are reported to have been grouped into "formidable battalions," ready to pounce upon German supply trains.

The army's Wednesday communique said that "our troops continued to fight the enemy along the entire front" and emphasized the fierceness of tank battles. It said that on Sept. 7 alone, Russian tank units on all sectors of the front destroyed more than 100 German tanks and armored cars, eighty anti-tank guns, forty-two other cannon, 300 machine guns, 560 trucks, 7,000 German infantrymen, three cavalry squadrons, 300 carts, 225 motorcycles, 415 bicycles and sixteen wireless stations.

This was pictured as a typical day's bag for Soviet tank columns, whose operations have begun to take increasing space in official accounts of the fighting.

The official accounts also take ains to mention that the Red air orce cooperates constantly with the ank units.

Thousands Killed In Counterattacks, Moscow Claims

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Sept. 10.—The Red Army reported today it had routed the 29th German Infantry Division in a powerful attack in the Gomel sector of the eastern front, inflicting thousands of casualties.

Gomel is about midway between Kiev and the Smolensk sector where the Russians said bloody expulsion of a strong Nazi spearhead from a 150-square-mile zone had dealt a heavy blow to Adolf Hitler's legions.

Red Army counterattacks in both vital sectors were understood to be continuing full blast.

(Although the Russians did not mention in detail the fighting around Leningrad, the Soviet's former capital, authorized Germans in Berlin acknowledged that the Nazi armies had not yet succeeded in cutting Leningrad off completely from the rest of Russia. They indicated the German forces may decide to starve and shell Leningrad into surrender.)

Attacks Smashed.

Red Star, the army newspaper, said the sweeping counteroffensive in the Gomel area was launched after the Russians had smashed repeated German attacks on Red Army positions.

At an undesignated sector, apparently in the same general area, Red Star said the Russian troops forced a German retreat across the river "N" after a five-day tank battle.

The Red Air Force co-operated with ground forces in striking at a wedge of several German tank and motorized divisions, the paper said, the Germans finally losing 238 tanks, 50 planes, 486 trucks and 135 guns and other equipment.

"Almost 4,000 German soldiers and officers found their graves in the waters of the river 'N'," the account declared. The German 17th division alone, already "considerably battered," lost 60 tanks, 30 guns and 1,600 men, Red Star added.

Referring specifically to the fighting around Gomel, it said the 29th German infantry division was routed, "leaving thousands of corpses on the battlefield.

"Our land forces alone destroyed 47 German tanks, 11 field guns, 6 armored cars and 96 automobiles.

"The staff of the 15th Motorized Regiment was routed, 12 officers of which were killed."

Massed Forces Repelled.

In another sector, designated only as village "K," Tass news agency said the Germans massed large forces supported by artillery and mine-throwers to attack "our very advantageous" positions, but were repelled by concentrated fire in a first charge and by a flanking counterattack when they attacked again.

German losses were almost 600 killed and wounded, the agency said. It listed 12 machine-guns, a mine-thrower battery and two fuel tank cars in the Russian booty.

"The impending rout of all the German armies," said S. A. Lozovsky, vice commissar of foreign affairs, "can already be discerned."

Luftwaffe bombers struck twice toward Moscow in the night and the blacked-out capital was under an alarm for a total of 4 hours, 50 minutes, but it was announced officially that the raiders were dispersed by Soviet night fighters and anti-aircraft fire.

One of the swastika-marked bombers was said to have been shot down, this following by a few hours the reported destruction of two hostile scouting planes near Moscow.

Tanks' Destruction Described.

The Soviet Information Bureau said Red Army troops "continued to engage the neemy on the entire front" overnight and told of the destruction of 100 German tanks and armored cars in operations Sunday.

It also declared 42 German guns, 300 trench mortars, 560 trucks and cars of three cavalry squadrons, 225 motor cycles and 16 radio stations had been put out of action in recent fighting.

SEP 11 1941

Lozovsky said the scope of the Russian attack on the central front was limited, but that the reported shattering of eight Nazi divisions in a drive 12 miles or more westward from the railroad village of Yelnya toward Smolensk fitted into a military pattern with Red Army defense plans at Odessa and Leningrad.

"The main thing," he said, "is that the might of the Red Army, the unity of the Soviet people and the reserves of manpower and industry are great potentialities not only for resistance but also for counter-blows."

Incessant Fighting.

Lozovsky declared there was "incessant fighting of unprecedented intensity" along the zigzag battleline.

The information bureau reiterated an often-repeated declaration as to the severity of the fighting yesterday, saying "our troops engaged the enemy in stubborn battles along the entire front."

"Our air force dealt blows to enemy troops on the battle fields and destroyed aircraft on enemy airdromes," its early morning communique said. It declared that plane losses in Sunday air battles were 71 Germans to 24 Russians.

The bureau commented that "at one time the German radio announced that the Soviet air force was completely annihilated." Now, it said, "the Berlin radio disseminates the most stupid fabrications alleging that 'the whole Soviet Baltic navy was destroyed.' * * * Who is it, then, that sinks German and Finnish transports and submarines?"

Fighting Around Kiev.

Following up Russian declarations that 20,000 Rumanians had fallen in the attack on Odessa, the communique said hundreds of German tanks had been destroyed by Russian flyers, artillery and infantrymen in fighting at the approaches to Kiev.

"Every day tank destroyers set fire to and blow up Fascist machines," it reported.

It told of a victory over the crews of four of the German machines by four Soviet soldiers hurling flaming fuel bottles.

After the crew of one tank was annihilated," it added, "the Red Army men succeeded in extinguishing the fire in this tank and brought it to our unit."

Rain and cold weather, forerunners of more severe conditions to come, were reported by Lozovsky to have set in on the northern front.

Soviet Military Schools Carry On Uninterrupted

Correspondents Watch 2,000 at Artillery Training Course

MOSCOW, Sept. 10 (AP).—Red Army military schools are going on with their courses despite the war, turning out thousands of young officers to reinforce the front against the Germans.

Correspondents were shown today through the first Moscow artillery school, where 2,000 youths between the ages of eighteen and twenty are taking a two-year course to become lieutenants. The institution is one of Russia's oldest and best, but is only one among many.

Squads of students smartly clad in khaki uniforms were training on a heavy artillery battery of four 122-millimeter guns on an open range, while bombers and fighter planes flew overhead on practice flights. Others weer studying gunnery, topography, tactics and social sciences in classrooms in a row of red brick buildings. Closely shaven heads bent gravely over books.

The rooms were lined with red banners and portraits of Josef V. Stalin and his three top field commanders, Marshals Budenny, Voroshilov and Timoshenko.

The school's orchestra played the "Internationale," "God Save the King" and "The Star-Spangled Banner" as the visit ended.

WATER SUPPLY ALSO REPORTED HIT BY BOMBS

Berlin Intimates Siege To Starve Out City May Be Program

Tells Of "Red-Hot" Defense And Mining Of Buildings

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 10—The Berlin radio said tonight that Smolensk, on the central front in Russia, is "still strongly in German hands and has been for many past weeks—far behind the German lines." CBS heard the Berlin broadcast.

SEP 11 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Thursday, Sept. 11—German military reports said today that a number of Soviet field fortifications blocking the German advance on Leningrad had been destroyed in terrific five-bombing raids.

The raids also were said to have silenced a number of Soviet anti-aircraft and artillery positions about Leningrad.

Leningrad's water works received several direct bomb hits and large fires resulted, the dispatches said.

Describe Red-Hot Defense

The reports of intensified Luftwaffe activity came as Germans described Leningrad as "still shooting from all barrels" in a red-hot defense.

There were intimations that to avoid a costly storming operation the Nazi high command might try to starve, shell and bomb the city to surrender.

Authorized sources acknowledged that Leningrad still had access to Lake Ladoga, but declared that the value of this route was diminishing rapidly and that all land approaches were cut off, with German forces within fifteen miles of the city at the nearest point.

The effects of hunger and internal confusion as aids in breaking the Russian resistance were described as unpredictable elements, and Germans in responsible positions shunned speculation on the possible duration of the Leningrad siege.

Decries Prestige Successes

Dienst Aus Deutschland asserted that there would be no unnecessary sacrifices of lives to gain a swift triumph. It reiterated previous German declarations that the Nazis were not interested in "prestige successes."

"The fate of Leningrad, with 3,000,000 inhabitants and about 1,000,000 Soviet troops encircled within it, undoubtedly will be considerably influenced by the food problem," Dienst stated.

German artillery continued to pump shells into the city, and flyers reported the fires set in industrial and military plants guided them to their targets.

Picture Long-Range Guns

The Germans were using some of their biggest and best guns on Leningrad. A German weekly newsreel which foreign correspondents were shown in advance today included action shots of long-range cannon bombarding the city.

They were gigantic weapons partly concealed in trees, having great barrels which vibrate like a snapped whip for seconds after their ponderous shells start on their missions of distant destruction. Technical details of the guns and their exact location were not dislcosed.

Such guns in the past have been used on the German-controlled French Channel coast, some at Cap Griz Nez, for bombarding Channel shipping and England itself.

Depends On Outside Power

Most electric power for Leningrad normally comes from outside, it was said, especially from power plants east of Lake Ladoga along the Svir river, a stream the Finns have reached.

With its problems thus multiplying, Leningrad nevertheless was declared to be putting up a strong fight.

The Russians' last resort in their grudging retreat was to leave thousands of land mines, Germans said.

After taking Schlüsselburg, twenty-one miles east of Leningrad, German engineers had to remove 10,000 mines.

There was nothing in German reports to indicate whether losses were suffered in locating and exploding these mines. A Schlüesselburg dispatch, however, said that homes, public buildings and even a hospital were mined thoroughly. The hospital beds and the tiles of its stoves were reported connected with detonation fuses of infernal machines.

A military spokesman said the Leningrad operations had trapped a number of Russian warships in the Baltic by blocking the Stalin canal route to the Arctic. He gave the strength of the Soviet Baltic fleet as 2 battleships, 6 cruisers, 30 destroyers, 100 submarines, 50 minesweepers, 12 torpedo boats and numerous minelayers and auxiliary vessels.

South of Lake Ilmen, which is southeast of Leningrad, the Germans claimed 15 Russian tanks were smashed in a drive to clean up an outlying field position.

From the far southern front came reports of continuing air raids on besieged Odessa. Several thousand additional Russians have been taken prisoner, and German artillery has sunk a transport loaded with Russian troops on the lower Dnieper River east of Kherson, it was declared.

Air Activity Reported Intense

Artillery duels between shore guns and monitors were reported all along the river clear up to Kiev.

On the central front, D. N. B. said the Soviets supported by tanks attacked German positions 37 miles northeast of Smolensk throughout Monday to Tuesday, but were routed "with bloody losses."

At another unnamed point the agency claimed the 300th Russian Infantry Division suffered especially heavy losses, with one of its regiments reduced to a fighting strength of only five officers and 120 men.

[There was scanty news from the central area, but the Berlin radio quoted "competent quarters" as claiming capture of Vyazma, 36 miles east of Smolensk and 130 miles west of Moscow.]

Dispatches concerning intense air activity on the Eastern front brought into prominence the name of Major Gotthardt Handrick, who was an Olympic Games pentathlon winner. The air squadron he commands has destroyed 500 Russian planes, dispatches said.

In the West, DNB said the British had lost 1,200 planes between June 22 and September 9.

The non-stop British raids are changing in character, it said, with fewer daylight attacks on well-defended Channel ports and more night assaults on inland German cities and occupied regions.

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Thursday, Sept. 11—Three out of ten Italian planes fighting their first air battle since arriving on the Russian front were reported brought down today in the Dnieper river area of the southern front.

GERMANS MAY TRY TO STARVE OUT LENINGRAD

SEP 11 1941

Berlin Hints It May Cut Off City and Shell It Into Submission.

EX-CAPITAL NOT RINGED YET

But a Retreat by Lake Ladoga Is Becoming an Increasingly Difficult Matter.

Berlin, Sept. 10 (A. P.).—High sources intimated today that the German army might decide to starve and shell Leningrad into surrender rather than undertake a costly storming of the beleagured city.

German forces are reported to be within fifteen miles of Leningrad at the nearest point.

Authorized sources acknowledged that the city had not yet been cut off from access to Lake Ladoga, out said it was otherwise surrounded and the Ladoga connection was declared to be of diminishing value.

Dienst aus Detutschland, the commentary service, said there would be no unnecessary sacrifice of German lives to gain a swift triumph at Leningrad.

There were continued reports that the Russians, when finally forced to retreat, leave their trail sown with land mines. In the city of Schluesselburg alone, Germans say, engineers had to remove 10,000 of these.

There is nothing in these reports to show how many mines exploded beneath German troops. But, it is recounted, even a hospital at Schluesselburg was thoroughly mined, the explosives being found in mattresses of beds and tiles of stoves.

Dispatches from the front indicated that the great conflict for possession of the former capital of the Czars was becoming more bitter with each passing hour, with the Russians "firing from all barrels"—as one German war correpsondent put it. A Nazi reporter who flew over the lines described the battle area as an inferno of rifle artillery and machine-gun fire.

Artillery Pounds City.

Government spokesmen still would not hazard a guess how long Leningrad would be able to stand the German pressure from the south and the Finnish pressure from the north. German artillery, however, was reported pouring a devastating fire into Leningrad's industrial and military machinery. Pilots reported fires raging in the area, guiding them like beacons to their targets. The city was declared to be largely dependent upon electrical power from the outside, especially from power plants along the Svir River to the east of Lake Ladoga, and the Finns have reported reaching that river.

The German air force was reported to have turned its attention to the other end of the line, to Odessa on the Black Sea, though many attacks were also directed at railway lines in the middle sector. Spokesmen declared twenty Russian planes were shot down in that area.

Today's communique from Hitler's headquarters threw little light on the situation, however, merely reporting further steady successes in attack on the eastern front.

Blames the Finns.

Although it was ackuowledged that an outlet across Lake Ladoga was still available to the Leningrad defenders, a German spokesman said there were no adequate harbors along the lake where ships could be loaded to send re-enforcements to the city.

"Meanwhile," he added, "our air force is getting in some licks here, too."

The spokesman reiterated emphatically that all Leningrad's land connections are severed and said the Neva Canal was in German hands, thereby cutting communications with Schluesselburg, twenty-one miles east of Leningrad.

Amplifying his statement on the situation at Lake Ladoga, the spokesman said that portions of the northern and eastern shores of the lake were not yet in the hands of the Finnish troops who have been pressing down from the north. "There is a strip of coastal area which theoretically is still in Russian hands," he said.

[The shores of Lake Ladoga are for the most part heavily wooded and only scantily inhabited. Navigation on the lake is dangerous because of frequent storms at this time of year. Ice generally begins to form about the first of October and the lake usually is closed to traffic from then until March.]

Meanwhile today other Nazi military commentators estimated that at least 1,000,000 Russian troops were manning the defenses of Leningrad and said that their eventual capture or annihilation seemed inevitable.

Expressing confidence that the fall of the great city was only a matter of time, they asserted that even if the Russians could hold out under the shells and air bombs already raining upon them, lack of food would ultimately compel them to surrender. Vast quantities of food are necessary to feed a city of 3,200,000 people augmented by a third as many troops, and it is inconceivable that Leningrad has sufficient supplies to last very many days, the Germans said.

Sees Arms Plants Halted.

By cutting off the city—a great industrial center—from the rest of Russia, the German armed forces have also struck a heavy blow at Russian armaments production, the commentators declared. The blow is even more paralyzing, it was said, because the manufacturing areas around Dnieperopetrovsk and Krivoi Rog, in the Ukraine, are now in German hands and the destruction of the great Dnieper Dam by the Russians themselves has left many factories east of that river without power.

Leningrad's industries were reported badly crippled by the German occupation of a big hydro-electric plant near Schluesselburg, twenty-one miles east of the city. Another important result of the Leningrad encirclement, the Germans said, has been to halt traffic on the Stalin canal linking the Gulf of Finland with the White Sea, thus in effect isolating the Russian Baltic fleet.

Fluid Front—Amid Torrents

Heavy rainstorms were said to be hampering operations both around Leningrad and on other sectors of the front, but Dienst aus Deutschland, which has close connection with the Foreign Office, said that the front remained fluid and that fighting had not entered into the phase of trench warfare.

Though there were few details available concerning land operations outside of the Leningrad area, repeated emphasis was placed on the damage being done to Russian supply lines and bases by the German Air Force. Adolf Hitler's paper, Voelkischer Beobachter, devoted a whole page to photographs which it said were aerial views of Russian warehouses destroyed by bombs near Bryansk, on the central front.

DNB, the German official news agency, emphasized the part the air force was playing in the German military transport system, saying that since the start of the war one squadron had carried 9,000 tons of supplies to the front on 2,550 trips, returning with 1,155 wounded soldiers.

BERLIN NEWS REEL SHOWS SIEGE GUNS

Berlin, Sept. 10 (A. P.).—A German newsreel previewed by correspondents today showed giant long-range cannon said to be bombarding Leningrad, their long barrels vibrating like snapped whips with the recoil from the firing of ponderous shells.

They were partly hidden in trees and there was no disclosure either of technical details or of the exact place they were stationed.

The British Broadcasting Corporation reported today that it had just picked up a Leningrad broadcast in which the booming of cannon and the shouted commands of Russian artillery officers could be heard clearly as a background to the announcer's statement that fighting was continuing. NBC received the broadcast here.

Finns Scorn Quisling's Plan

[By The Associated Press]

Helsinki, Sept. 10—The organ of Finland's largest political party, the Social Democrats, denied today that Finland had a Quisling type of government and insisted that Finland, despite her military alignment with Germany, still stands for "political freedom and the intrinsic sovereignty of her people."

The newspaper Sosiali Demokraatti took sharp issue with views expressed in a recent speech by Vidkun Quisling, head of the Norwegian Nazi Government, linking Finland with Norway and Denmark in an anti-democratic Scandinavian order.

People Still Sovereign

The paper said:

"The fact that Germany's mighty army is fighting on the same front with us hasn't in the slightest changed the views of the Finnish nation of the nature of her political freedom and the intrinsic sovereignty of her people.

"The speech alleging that we here are ready to adopt some kind of a new domestic system similar, for instance, to what Mr. Quisling's party represents in Norway does not correspond to the real conditions.

Defending Own Democracy

"Since the beginning of the winter war (against Russia in 1939-40) all of our most representative statesmen, including Parliament, the President of the Republic and the members of the Government, have time and again emphasized that our struggle aims to defend and secure our free democratic social order."

The paper acknowledged that after the war many radical social reforms must be undertaken in Finland, as elsewhere in Europe, but that here "this will happen within the free framework in which the Finnish people are accustomed to live and which, when the war is ended, they will cherish more than ever."

Finns Claim Air Victories.

Helsinki, Sept. 10 (A. P.).—The Finnish Army today announced that its air force shot down seventeen Russian planes on Monday and Tuesday and that direct hits were scored on Russian supply bases and troop camps. A machine gun attack put out of action two engines on the railway between Murmansk and Leningrad, it was stated.

FINNS TO EXECUTE PARACHUTISTS

Helsinki, Sept. 10 (A. P.).—Parliament today approved a law providing that henceforth enemy parachute troopers captured behind the Finnish lines would be accorded the same treatment as spies.

Death before a firing squad is the usual fate of captured spies in times of war.

IRAN TO HAND OVER GERMANS AT ONCE

British To Start 225 Today On First Leg Of Way To India

Russians To Quiz 50 In Their Custody To Be Sent To Siberia

By DAN DELUCE

[By the Associated Press]

Teheran, Sept. 10—German residents of Iran named in the British and Russian black lists as leading Nazi agents will be handed over to the Allies by this country for immediate internment, a mixed commission decided today.

The British legation arranged for a special train to transport 225 Germans to Ahwaz en route to India Thursday night. The Russian Embassy is sending fifty Germans to Kazvin, where they will be examined by the Soviet military commandant and then sent to Siberia.

By semi-official estimate 900 Germans are in refuge in the German legation's summer compound—including 300 women and 100 children.

Believed Trapped By Russians

When the British-Russian invasion started German nationals were estimated in some quarters at 2,000. What has happened to the 1,100 who have not reached Teheran is not known but it is believed most of them were trapped in Russian-occupied provinces and already have been sent to Siberia.

An informant in the British legation said London had not yet determined whether women and children would be repatriated to Germany or join their menfolk in Indian camps, but that no men in the compound without diplomatic passports would escape internment.

Some German Jews, however, will not be interned by the British.

Same Prospect For Italians

About 350 Italians are in the Italian legation grounds and the same prospect is awaiting them as confronts the Germans.

The first Russian black list contained the names of men previously accused by the Moscow radio of heading a fifth column and directing espionage and plotting sabotage. The German legation told neutral diplomats that it feels all these will be executed by the Russians.

The British legation was informed that Iran's crown jewels, which were used to cover the whole note issue of its national bank, were flown to Kirman in the midst of the invasion crisis and have not yet been returned to the Teheran Government.

Confirms Plea To Roosevelt

The American legation finally confirmed today that the Shah sent to President Roosevelt on August 25, the first day of the invasion, a personal message appealing to him to try to stop hostilities.

The President's reply arrived September 4—a week after Iran had ceased resistance—and was understood to have expressed the friendship of the United States for Iran as well as a hope that problems here would be solved. The Shah invited the United State Minister to the palace on September 6 and thanked him for what was described as Mr. Roosevelt's cordial answer of friendship.

Nazis Deceived By Spitzbergen Radio Messages

False Weather Broadcasts Kept Away German Patrol During Allied Raid

LONDON, Sept. 10 (AP).—The Canadian-Norwegian-British expedition to Spitzbergen kept up constant wireless communication with German forces in Norway, sending false weather reports and information, and the Germans did not discover the deception until the raid was over, Canadians said today.

False messages telling of misty, cloudy weather and zero ceiling were sent to Tromsoe, Norway, to keep Nazi planes from making their regular flights to the islands, the Canadians said.

Several days after the radio stations were destroyed, frantic messages from the Nazis at Tromsoe were picked up by wireless men on one of the expedition's returning warships. The Nazis were trying to find out what had silenced Spitzbergen.

Frenchmen Tell of Escapes

French soldiers and officers, 199 of them, brought here by the Spitzbergen expedition, told thrilling stories of escapes from German prison camps, internment in Russia and removal to the Arctic islands, which was negotiated by the British Embassy after Germany attacked Russia. Now they are off to a Free French training camp.

They escaped from Germany, some said, by making "arrangements" with their captors. One young officer, speaking perfect English, said, "It took about three months for three of us to make arrangements.

"Don't ask us how we got civilian clothes and so forth, but remember that I say for French chocolate you can buy any Nazi conscience. We had chocolate—and some money.

"When the arrangements were complete we shaved off our mustaches, cut our hair short, put on civilian clothes and boarded a train. We chose Saturday for our escape because the trains were crowded. Some officers who had been our captors got on the same train, but never recognized us. We always had our 'Heil Hitler' ready, as well as German coins to tip the trainmen.

Traveled on Nine Trains

Two of us spoke German. One, who didn't, kept a German book open on the entire journey, pretending to read assiduously, though he couldn't understand a word.

"We traveled on nine trains in three days and nights and finally got to the Russian frontier.

"A couple of German border guards fired on us, but finally we got through the barbed wire and arrived in Russia in weather 20 below zero."

Another Frenchman said he actually persuaded a German soldier to lend him a bicycle to get to the Russian frontier.

1800 RUSSIANS ARE WITHDRAWN AT SPITSBERGEN

SEP 11 1941

No Information Is Given on Where They Have Gone, However

LONDON, Sept. 10 (AP)—The question of what happened to 1800 Russians withdrawn from Spitsbergen after the Allied occupation went unanswered today.

Embassy Silent

The Soviet Embassy spokesman here said he knew nothing of the present movements or whereabouts of the evacuated Russian colony.

—DASH—

This dispatch gave the first intimation that the Russian colony had been removed from the Norwegian Arctic archipelago after Canadian-led Allied forces landed to destroy the productive coal mines and took most of the Norwegian population to England.

It also supports advices reaching New York Tuesday night to the effect that some French refugee soldiers surprisingly found in the Far Northern islands had been taken to Russia rather than to England.

The French interviewed in Spitsbergen said they had been imprisoned by the Germans after the Flanders campaign last year but had escaped and made their way to the Far North. Those who went to Russia, presumably by ship to Murmansk, might have taken that route as the shortest of the long ways to join the DeGaullist Free French in the Middle East or possibly to fight beside the Russians against Germany.

There has been no official acknowledgement in London that Russian forces operated in co-operation with the Canadians, British and Norwegians in the Spitsbergen expedition or that any of the ships on the venture put into any Russian port.

Eyewitness accounts from Spitsbergen told, however, of friendly intermingling between the occupying forces and the Russian colonists who had worked the mines beside the Norwegians.

Oslo Placed Under Martial Laws By Decree Of Nazi Commissioner

Steel-Helmeted Police Patrol Streets Of Norway's Capital And Environs Due To State Of Civil Siege Imposed By Germany

(By The Associated Press)

Oslo, German-Occupied Norway, Sept. 10—Steel-helmeted police patrolled the streets of Oslo tonight as a State of civil siege decreed by Joseph Terboven, the German commissioner for Norway, was imposed on this occupied capital and its environs.

Sweeping regulations which went into effect at 5 a. m. applied to Oslo and the Aker Police District, including the localities of Aker and Berun.

A stringent curfew barred Norwegians from the streets between 8 p. m. and 5 a. m., forbade the sale of alcohol, banned dancing, shut down movies and theaters.

The decree compelled Norwegians in Oslo, Aker and Berun to surrender their radio sets immediately, ordered all communications suspended nightly at 7:30 and restaurants closed at 7 o'clock, and prohibited gatherings in public places or the streets.

Authorities said no disorders were reported and that all was quiet in the city. Terboven's decree warned that any resistance would be crushed with weapons and that violators would face military trial.

The Oslo newspapers 'Aftenposten said the state of siege was imposed because of "irresponsible elements working among the people." The newspaper Frittfolk said "friends of England" had brought the order down on all classes and the Morgenbladet said the edict would stop "subterranean activity of disturbers."

Like a previous edict invoked in certain Norwegian coastal areas Aug. 2 with the official explanation that the war had reached "a decisive stage for Norway," the new decree authorized German officials to conduct summary executions, mete out sentences of death or life imprisonment and confiscate property.

The previous decree made sharp the distinction between a civil state of siege—which is iron-clad rule by civil authorities—and a military state of siege which, in effect, is the status of all occupied regions.

A British radio announcement of the decree said the Norwegian press reported "complete chaos" developing in the Norwegian civil administration because of a German attempt to remove all anti-Nazis from office.

The broadcast said there was a rise of 28 per cent in the amount of fire insurance paid out in the first half of 1941 over last year and that of a "considerable increase in the number of fires" most were in garages containing German military cars and in war-supplies factories.

The Norwegian Ministry of Justice last week ordered trials by jury discontinued and juries replaced by a board of four judges.

Germans Place Oslo In State Of Siege

[By the Associated Press]

Oslo, German-Occupied Norway, Sept. 10—A state of civil siege for Oslo and surrounding districts was decreed today by the German commissioner for Norway, Joseph Terboven.

The step follows a similar order covering certain Norwegian coastal regions put into effect August 2 to deal with disturbances to public order and security.

At that time it was explained officially that the move was a precautionary legal step taken because the war had moved into "a decisive stage for Norway."

Like the August 2 decree, today's order provides that violators of new restrictions will face courts-martial, and like the earlier decree, the German authorities are enabled to conduct summary executions, sentence accused persons to death or imprisonment up to life term and to confiscate property of those accused.

Today's decree, which became effective at 5 A. M., was ordered, the German authorities said, because of "criminal disturbance of labor peace" by Communist and Marxist elements in recent days.

Nazis Feared Strikes

It was charged that these elements in the labor unions had made preparations for strikes.

The state of siege is effective in Oslo and the Aker police district, including the localities of Aker and Berun.

The decree forbids Norwegians to appear on the streets in those districts between 8 P. M. and 5 A. M.

All communications cease at 7.30 P. M. Restaurants close at 7 P. M. The sale of alcohol is forbidden. Theaters and movies are closed. Dancing is banned.

Radios Confiscated

Punishments are prescribed for gatherings in restaurants or formations of groups in streets or public squares.

The sweeping orders say resistance will be broken with weapons.

Norwegian residents of Oslo, Aker and Berun are obliged to turn over their radio sets immediately.

On August 2 official sources emphasized that a civil state of siege differed from a military state of siege in that civil authorities administered one, military the other. A military state of siege, they pointed out, has, practically speaking, been in effect continually in all German-occupied regions.

(The British radio in reporting the state of siege said that the Norwegian press "reports a considerable increase in the number of fires which have occurred this year," most of them hampering the German authorities.

Insurance Payments Up

("During the first half of the year," the British said, "there was an increase of 28 per cent. in the amount of fire insurance paid out as compared with the same period last year. Most of the fires broke out in garages containing German military cars and in factories producing war materials.

("It is reported that complete chaos is developing in the Norwegian civil administration as the result of a German attempt to remove from office all anti-Nazis. Nearly a hundred officials have been dismissed from the postal service.")

BISMARCK'S PLANES

Connecticut Official Says They Planned Quebec Raid.

Branford, Conn., Sept. 10 (A. P.).—Robert C. Deming, assistant State defense administrator, quoted British sources today as saying that the German battleship Bismarck, sunk May 27 in the North Atlantic, carried two planes which were intended to bomb Quebec and Montreal.

Mr. Deming, addressing the Connecticut conference of social work, said he heard the story from a high ranking British Army officer who had received it "directly from the British FBI."

Each plane carried a cargo of 1,200 thermite bombs, he said, and intended to land in the United States and submit to internment after the Canadian raid.

"Does his bring the war to our door, or does it not?" Mr. Deming asked.

"We must be prepared," he continued, "for the possibility of attack and that is why the State defense council was formed."

Deny Bismarck Carried Planes To Bomb Canada

British Naval Informants Say Connecticut Man Quoted Result Of "Imagination"

London, Sept. 10 (AP)—British naval informants said today that reports the sunken Nazi battleship Bismarck carried planes equipped for the bombing of Montreal and Quebec were based on "somebody's imagination," and that nothing was known here to suggest that the warship was in the Atlantic for any other purpose than to raid shipping.

The London statement was in reply to Robert C. Deming, Assistant Connecticut Defense Administrator, who at Branford quoted British sources today as saying the Bismarck carried two planes which were intended to bomb Quebec and Montreal.

Deming, addressing the Connecticut Conference of Social Work, said he heard the story from a high-ranking British army officer who had received it "directly from the British F. B. I." Each plane carried a cargo of 1,200 thermite bombs, he said, and intended to land in the United States and submit in internment after the Canadian raid.

Acoustic Mine Peril Curbed By British

SEP 11 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 10—The British Government kept secret for more than a year its knowledge that German planes were laying acoustic mines in the waters around Britain, to prevent the Nazis from knowing the Royal Navy had found an effective answer, informed, sources said today.

Prime Minister Winston Churchill broke the secret yesterday when he told the House of Commons the mine problem had been "largely mastered." He said that mines, "with all their ingenious variations," were being laid nightly in British waters by thirty to forty Nazi planes.

Answer Kept Secret

The acoustic mines are said to be touched off by sound waves from the propellers of passing ships, but exactly how they have been mastered still is a secret.

A hint of how effective the new mines were at first was given in an article by the naval correspondent of the Daily Herald.

He declared the magnetic mine had been mastered, but said that "every day of the week ships were blowing up from no apparent cause around our coasts"

Antidote Found

Stating that scientists had decided the explosions must have been caused by an acoustic mine, the correspondent wrote:

"Ordinary sweeping methods were useless and hopeless, so daredevils of the navy volunteered to combat it. They well knew they might die in the process.

"They were the pioneers There was no shortage of volunteers as the days went by. Later, by further tests, scientists discovered the antidote."

AIR FERRY DEATHS ARE LAID TO PILOTS

British Minister Blames Their Judgment.

SEP 11 1941

London, Sept. 10 (A. P.).—The crashes of two westbound Atlantic ferry planes with a loss of forty-four lives, including eighteen Americans, on August 10 and August 14 were due to errors of navigation and pilot judgment, the Air Minister, Sir Archibald Sinclair, told Commons today.

The first plane went far off course, he said, and struck a mountain when visibility was poor; the second took off along the wrong runway into grass, and the pilot failed to shut off his engines immediately.

In answer to a question, Sir Archibald denied that there had been any sabotage or mechanical defects.

A third ferry plane crash which killed eight persons, including two Americans, is still under investigation.

London, Sept. 10 (AP)—A British Beaufort plane was reported officially today to have torpedoed a German supply ship off the southwest coast of Norway, and tonight listeners along the English Channel heard British planes again attacking German positions near Calais.

The Air Ministry news service said squadron of Beauforts sighted a German convoy off Norway, and that when last seen one of the torpedoed ships "had come to a complete standstill."

Bad weather halted air operations of both the British and Germans last night.

R. A. F. BOMBS CITY IN SOUTH OF ITALY

Reggio Calabria Attacked —Messina Also Hit.

Rome, Sept. 10 (A. P.).—Heavy blows and counter-blows by Italian and British air forces in the Mediterranean war zone were today reported by the Italian High Command.

British planes, it said, raided Reggio Calabria, in southern Italy and Messina, across the strait in Sicily.

Italian planes were reported to have bombed harbor works at Famagusta on the British island of Cyprus, and to have raided Haifa, in Palestine, causing fires and big explosions in the oil plants there.

R. A. F. Raids Greece and Crete.

Cairo, Sept. 10 (A. P.).—British air raids on Axis-conquered Greece and the island of Crete were reported by the R. A. F. Middle East Headquarters today. A communique said considerable damage apparently was caused Monday night on both banks of the Corinth Canal, which makes the Peloponnesus an island off the Greek mainland, and that the Candia airport on German-held Crete was also bombed.

A German dive bomber was reported shot down and several other Axis craft damaged during an attack on the Suez last night. Damage was slight and there were no RAF casualties, the British said.

Berlin, Thursday, Sept. 11—Budapest, capital of Hungary, was cut off by telephone from Berlin early today.

Operators declared the morning newspapers in the Hungarian capital, continually manned, "won't answer" and it was also claimed that the American Legation did not answer calls.

German authorized sources said they knew of no startling political developments in Hungary.

The Associated Press Bureau in Bern, Switzerland, also was unable to get in contact with correspondents in Budapest and representatives of the Havas news agency and of the New York Times had their connections severed while dictating stories relating to Regent Admiral Nicholas Horthy, of Hungary.

Geneva, Thursday, Sept. 11 (AP)—Airplanes were heard over this city three times early today, leading to the supposition that the British were resuming air attacks on Italy, which had been suspended during the summer. No alarm was sounded here.

BERLIN, Sept. 10 (AP).—The airport at Ismailia, on the Suez Canal, was bombed with several tons of explosives and hundreds of incendiaries last night by the German Air Force, D. N. New Berlin Raid Warning

D. N. B. Again Tells Civilians to Go to Shelters When Alarm Sounds

BERLIN, Sept. 10 (AP).—As a result of the latest British raid on Berlin, D. N. B., German official news agency, renewed tonight a warning to civilians to go to their shelters when an alarm sounds and stay there until it is over.

It is a big mistake to assume there is no danger when anti-aircraft guns are silent, the agency said.

"Naturally our anti-aircraft gunners are at their posts and fire out of all barrels when enemy planes approach," it said, "but there are occasions when anti-aircraft fire remains silent for well-considered reasons."

It did not explain the reasons.

Two Merchant Ships Damaged in Suez Area, Naxis Say

Canal Zone Airport Also Is Attacked, Berlin Reports

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 10.—Two more merchantmen have been damaged in the Suez Canal zone by German air assaults, the high command reported today.

A bomb hit, it said, was scored on a freighter in Great Bitter Lake, part of the canal system, and another merchant ship damaged in the Gulf of Suez below the canal.

Both attacks were made Monday night when German raiders also attacked the canal zone airport of Abu Seir, the communique said.

Again hammering on British Mediterranean defenses, the communique said, the Luftwaffe raided airports and rail facilities in Northern Egypt and port facilities of the besieged British-held Libyan port of Tobruk last night.

Informed sources also said a destroyer had been damaged off the African coast in a low-altitude German air attack yesterday.

Most air blows on the Russian front, they said, were directed on rail lines in the middle sector. They declared 20 Russian planes were downed in that area.

TAYLOR TALKS WITH POPE FOR OVER AN HOUR

Roosevelt Emissary And Pontiff Open Important Exchange Of Views

War And Peace Aims Indicated Subject—Parley Set Next Week

[By the Associated Press]

Vatican City, Sept. 10—Myron C. Taylor, President Roosevelt's personal emissary, began an important exchange of views between the President and the Vatican today in two long private audiences with Pope Pius XII and Luigi Cardinal Maglione, Papal Secretary of State.

There were indications that war and peace aims figured largely in the talks.

The President's envoy was understood in usually informed circles to have told the Pope that in so far as Soviet Russia was concerned, Mr. Roosevelt was more interested in the welfare of the world's peoples than in the form of government as such.

Sees British Minister

Earlier the British Minister, Sir Francis D'Arcy Godolphin Osborne, had an hour's private audience with the Pope. The subject matter of the discussion was not disclosed.

The urgency of Taylor's mission was indicated by the Pope's receiving him within twenty-four hours after his arrival by plane. They talked for one hour and ten minutes alone in the Pontiff's private library.

Cardinal Maglione interrupted a vacation in southern Italy and returned to the Vatican to talk with Taylor. Their conference lasted more than two hours and was said to have been a Tour de L'Horizon of the war and the European situation.

Only The Beginning

Harold Tittman, American diplomatic officer attached to Taylor's office, and the Rev. Walter Carroll, American attache in the Papal Secretary of State's office, accompanied Taylor to the Vatican, but did not take part in the conference.

The talks today were only the beginning. Taylor is to see Cardinal Maglione again tomorrow and the Pope next week. The President's envoy, who flew to Rome with his wife despite his 67 years and a serious illness last year, intends to return to Washington to report more fully to the President than he can by cable.

Taylor declined to disclose what was said in the audiences. From other sources, however, it was learned that "the welfare of the peoples of various countries" was the keynote of the talks.

Has 5-Point Program

The Pope set forth a five-point program for peace on Christmas Eve, 1939, which he elaborated last Christmas Eve. President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill have an eight-point program. Both call for political justice, access to economic goods and disarmament.

Some observers suggested the conferences might hinge on those programs and their coordination.

Others suggested that Mr. Roosevlt may be seeking to enlist the Pope's aid in conciliating the positions of Catholics, particularly in America, to the aid which the United States and Britain have promised Russia, whose atheistic tendencies have long been denounced by the church.

Pope's English Improved

Before leaving New York Taylor indicated that programs for readjustment of the world after the war figured prominently in the conferences he was to have at the Vatican.

He spoke then of cooperation between the Vatican and the United States in bringing about "fair, permanent justice in the world."

The Pope and Taylor talked in English and Taylor was understood to have found the Pope's use of the language even further improved since he left Rome in August last year.

The Pope's five terms for peace include the "right to life and independence for all nations," disarmament, "juridical institutions" to guarantee, revise and correct treaties, satisfaction of the "real needs and just demands of nations and people" in economic and social fields, and "a sense of responsibility" among "those who guide the fates of peoples."

Taylor Talks With Pope

[By the Associated Press]

Vatican City, Sept. 10—Myron C. Taylor, President Roosevelt's personal emissary to the Vatican, conferred today for half an hour with Pope Pius XII—within twenty-four hours after ending an air journey from the United States especially for the meeting.

The audience lasted from 6.30 P. M. to 7 P. M.

Its brevity led some observers to believe the audience served mainly for President Roosevelt's envoy to reestablish contact with the Pope and perhaps delier a letter from the President.

Envoy, Cardinal Talk

If Taylor outlined Mr. Roosevelt's attitude toward the present belligerents—particularly as regards aid to Soviet Russia—this must have been done in a long talk which Taylor had before the papal audience with Luigi Cardinal Maglioni, Papal Secretary of State.

Envoy and Cardinal talked for almost two hours in what was described as a "tour de l'Horizon" of the war and the European situation in general.

Luigi Cardinal Maglione, Papel Secretary of State, interrupted a vacation in southern Italy and returned here this morning especially to talk with Taylor.

Taylor, who was absent from Rome for more than a year, is expected to leave again within ten days to return to the United States.

Japanese Newspapers Slacken Clamor Against U. S.

Softening of View Is Noted With Disclosure Of Grew-Toyoda Talks

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Sept. 10.—A general slackening of newspaper clamor against American foreign policy moves was noted today concurrently with the disclosure that United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew has conferred with the Japanese Foreign Minister about 12 times within a week.

As Japanese concern over the Russian-German war became more noticeable, the press criticism of the United States subsided from a shout to a murmur.

The main theme was that Germany's war in Russia would be a long one, in contrast with previous optimism expressed by the papers at the start of the conflict.

The subject of Ambassador Grew's frequent talks with Foreign Minister Teijiro Toyoda was not disclosed, but they occurred while the first American tankers carrying oil to Soviet Russia were passing near Japanese waters and while Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye was reported considering proclamation of a safety zone around the Japanese islands.

Another Sidelight.

Another possibly significant sidelight on Japanese-American relations was the evident lack of United States Embassy moves toward removal of Americans from Japan, such as the British Embassy has arranged for its nationals.

The Japanese Privy Council heard a review of the European situation by War Minister Eiki Tojo at a two-hour conference today, and then was received in audience by the Emperor.

Meanwhile, the Japan Times and Advertiser, English-language paper controlled by the Japanese foreign office, praised the newly appointed Ambassador to French Indo-China, Kenkichi Yoshizawa, as "a first-line diplomat of the old order in tune with the new."

Indo-China, the paper said, "will prove to the Pacific states the real intentions and helpful efforts of this country in the policy of establishing a co-operative sphere."

Nine-Man Delegation.

It was announced that a nine-man delegation would assist Yoshizawa's diplomatic endeavors in Indo-China.

(Japan has not previously named ambassadors to colonies of foreign powers. The only parallel to Yoshizawa's appointment is the ambassadorship to Manchukuo, which is in effect a proconsulate for that Japanese-controlled country.)

Yoshizawa is expected to establish headquarters in Hanoi in October for an all-inclusive mission which authoritative sources said would deal with diplomatic, cultural and economic questions, among others.

Commenting on the arrival of Alfred Duff Cooper in Singapore as special co-ordinator for British Far Eastern possessions, the newspaper Yomiuri urged that Japan keep a close watch on his activities.

Metal to Be Collected.

The Japan Times and Advertiser reported, meanwhile, that householders would be asked to contribute to the state metal utensils they can do without—from iron teakettles to doorknobs. The collection will be made October 1.

The publication said that if every household in Japan donated one pound of metal the total would be enough to produce 8,500 armored cars.

Vive Admiral Eikichi Katagiri was appointed chief of the naval air force today. He came to Tokio last week from a post with the Japanese fleet in China waters.

The Navy Minister also announced appointment of Admiral Shigataro Shimada, commander of the fleet in China waters, as commandant of the Yokosuka naval yard, replacing Admiral Koichi Shiozawa, who was named a member of the Supreme War Council. Vice-Admiral Shigeichi Koga was named to succeed Shimada.

Yoshizawa's New Job

[By the Associated Press]

Saigon, French Indo-China, Sept. 10. The appointment of Kenkichi Yoshizawa as Ambasador to Indo-China was regarded here today as an indication that Japan is starting to coordinate her entire program in southeastern Asia.

Yoshizawa, former Minister of Foreign Affairs, is coming here with full powers to administer relations between Japan and Indo-China.

Although his recent commercial negotiations with the Netherlands East Indies were unsuccessful from Tokyo's view, his new assignment indicates he has lost no prestige.

After the commercial parleys at Batavia, Yoshizawa professed in private a strong desire for a rapprochement between Japan and the United States.

Workers In Japan To Be Forced To Save

Deferred Pay And Lottery Also Recommended As Means Of Checking Inflation

Tokyo, Thursday, Sept. 11 (AP)—The Japanese Economic Federation suggested today to the Finance Ministry that it institute a four-point campaign to prevent inflation caused by mounting expenditures and a shortage of materials.

It recommended a nation-wide savings program, a system of deferred pay, lottery tickets and special taxation privileges for savings depositors. The deferred pay system would give workers only a part of their salary in cash and the balance in Government bonds.

Nazi Ambassador Faces Expulsion From Argentina

SEP 11 1941

By John Lear

Buenos Aires, Sept. 10—(AP)—Expulsion of German Ambassaddor Edmond Von Thermann was recommended today by Argentina's congressional "Dies committee" on the grounds that he had "overstepped his functions and abused his diplomatic privileges."

When the presentment of the committee investigating anti-Argentine activities was placed before the house of deputies a leading member of congress predicted privately that the house would vote tomorrow for Von Thermann's ouster.

The committee reported it had documentary proof that Von Thermann was directing Nazi political organizations in violation of Argentine law.

The investigators earlier had decided to summon Capt. Fritz Wiedemann, Hitler's World war commander and former consul-general at San Francisco, on his arrival in Buenos Aires on an unexplained mission.

Meanwhile, Wiedemann announced in Rio De Janeiro that he would remain there two or three weeks awaiting the arrival of his wife from Europe by boat.

In Santiago, Chile, it was reported no arrangements had been made for Wiedemann's arrival by way of Argentina to take a ship for the Far East on a reported mission for Germany. When asked in Rio De Janeiro whether he was going to China via Santiago, Wiedemann replied: "dont you think that is good idea—is ther any other way?"

Wiedemann was expelled from the United States along with other Axis consular officials and their aides. All returned to Europe on the U. S. Naval transport West Point.

The Argentine "Dies committee" action against Von Thermann follows the contention of various legislators that he should be held persona non grata—an act against him personally and not necessarily affecting diplomatic relations with Germany itself.

ARGENTINA AWAITS FRITZ WIEDEMANN

Buenos Aires, Sept. 10.—(AP)—An Argentine Congress committee investigating subversive activities decided today to summon Captain Fritz Wiedemann, former German consul general in San Francisco, for questioning when he reaches Buenos Aires from Rio de Janeiro.

Committee members said their intention was "to clear up some questions" with which he was familiar from his position in the Nazi party.

The decision of the committee to summon the German for questioning was announced after the committee chairman, Deputy Raul Damonte Taborda, and the committee secretary, Juan Solari, had called on Foreign Minister Enrique Ruiz Guinazu.

Ruiz Guinazu previously had been criticized by the committee for allegedly permitting Gottfried Sandstede, who was press attache in the German embassy in Buenos Aires, to leave the country when the committee was seeking him.

Nazis Insist Costa Rica Remove Her Consuls

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 10.—The German government turned its back today on Costa Rica's plea that she be allowed to retain her consuls in Nazi-occupied territory.

Declaring that Costa Rica's failure to comply with a German request for removal of the consuls was based on arguments "irrelevant to international practice," an official statement issued last night said:

"The Reich's government has advised Costa Rica consuls in territories belonging in the war zone that their official activity is inadmissible. It further is left to their discretion to surrender their archives to the consul-general of Costa Rica in Hamburg."

Costa Rican foreign office officials said last night an "energetic protest" would be made if the consulates were closed.

SPAB Orders Full Survey Of Demands

Nelson Directed to Work Out Schedule of Military and Civilian Requirements

Plastics Factory Expansion Banned

Further Curtailment in Automobile Production Seen as Henderson Gets Control

SEP 11 1941

Washington, Sept. 10.—(AP.)—The Supply Priorities and Allocations Board instructed its executive director, Donald M. Nelson, tonight to work out a complete schedule of the nation's military and civilian requirements in an effort to solve the problems of shortages of materials and of expansion of production facilities.

The board announced the action, which it termed a detailed planning of the defense program, after bringing to a full stop the expansion of civilian industries which would require large quantities of defense materials.

New Aluminum Plants.

Simultaneously, the Government moved to obtain vast new supplies of aluminum and magnesium for the defense effort by financing the construction of three new plants.

The Board ordered Nelson to plan the program on a basis of accurate coordinated knowledge of military and civilian requirements and as far in advance as possible.

The schedule which Nelson will compile will include procurement needs of the Army, Navy and the Air Force, and include also such goods as are to go to Great Britain and other lend-lease countries.

Both the military production schedules and the statements of civilian requirements are to be broken down into the schedules of the raw materials, labor and machinery needed for their production.

"In calling for the long-range, all inclusive survey of the nation's total needs under the defense program," the announcement said "SPAB followed the view that there must be one authority to develop the official requirement figures on both levels, holding that there would be confusion otherwise, because the several parts of the requirement picture must be developed by separate agencies."

Plant Expansion Banned.

The Supply Priorities and Allocations Board denied for the time being a proposal of the Tennessee Eastman Corporation to expand its plastics plant at Kingsport, Tenn., and thereby established a policy bringing to a temporary halt the further expansion of civilian goods plants.

Although construction of additional facilities would have provided plastics capable of replacing 8,000,000 pounds of aluminum, 18,000,000 pounds of chrome plated nickel steel, 6,000,000 pounds of stainless steel, and 34,000,000 pounds of the zinc, the Board found, that their immediate construction was "not advisable."

"Building of the plant," said the Board, "would have required the use of large amounts of various critical materials, including stainless steel, which is inadvisable in view of an expected early winter increase in the demand for nickel for armor plate and ordnance items."

Hundreds of similar applications were on file with the Board. "No single one," the Board said, "can properly be granted until it is known how much of a drain on scarce materials would be involved in granting all of them."

Meanwhile, Jesse Jones, Federal Loan Administrator, moved to get critical materials in ever-increasing quantities by announcing plans for producing an additional 30,000,000 pounds of aluminum a year and an additional 112,000,000 pounds of magnesium.

The aluminum will be produced in a $3,900,000 plant at Tacoma, Wash. to be operated by the Olin Corporation of Alton, Ill., and financed by the Defense Plant Corporation.

Two Magnesium Plants.

The magnesium will be produced in two plants, one costing $52,000,000 and having an annual capacity of 72,000,000 pounds, to be operated near Freeport, Tex., by the Dow Chemical Company; the other to cost $16,000,000 and having an annual capacity of 36,000,000 pounds to be operated by the Diamond Alkali Corporation at Painesville, Ohio.

Jones said all magnesium plants producing, and in prospect, would have a capacity of 274,000,000 pounds a year. The aluminum plants will increase total annual production to 1,130,000,000, he said. His goal, he said, is 1,500,000,000.

Henderson Auto Curb.

While these steps to speed up defense production were being taken there were indications that private motor car production might be curtailed further. William S. Knudsen director of the Office of Production Management announced that Leon Henderson, Defense Director of Civilian Supply, had been placed in full control of automobile quotas.

Henderson has been outspoken in his belief that further cuts in auto production were necessary to conserve materials for the defense industries.

The Automotive Defense Advisory Committee has fixed a maximum car production for August, September, October and November of approximately 74 per cent of output for the same months of 1940. December quotas will be announced soon.

In addition to being placed in control of auto production, Henderson was given primary responsibility for all branches of industry serving civilian needs. These include pulp and paper, printing and publishing, electrical products and the consumers durable goods.

Mandatory Priorities.

Nelson issued an order during the day making all preference ratings mandatory in an effort to strengthen enforcement of government priority rules and regulations.

Mandatory priority orders have been issued before on some government purchases, but the ratings issued for civilian contracts, for foreign governments and for some other United States governmental contracts were based on the voluntary cooperation of the persons concerned.

Meanwhile, the Navy announced a program to spread naval defense contracts "just as widely as possible."

Acting Secretary James Forrestal issued an order creating a naval contracts distribution division, to be headed by Captain Charles W. Fisher, Director of Shore Establishments.

Fisher is charged with combatting "priorities unemployment" by extending the practice of subcontracting on big Navy orders, breaking up purchases among a number of suppliers, and helping to convert factories making civilian goods into defense plants.

The Work Projects Administration announced a program for assisting millions of persons to establish the fact of birth in the United States, as a means of increasing the flow of workers into defense industries.

President Roosevelt was reported to have approved a $1,208,000 expenditure for the work.

The program is designed to accelerate the issuance of birth certificates to meet the requirements of defense industries that their workers be American citizens.

SENATE DUE TO GET GAS REPORT TODAY

Probe Halts Temporarily, With Committee Ready To Resume At Any Time

Davies Looks To "Patriotic Citizens" To Curtail Non-Essential Motoring

SEP 11 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 10—A special Senate investigation of the Eastern gasoline situation was halted temporarily today after the committee conducting it had heard testimony that joy-riding and non-essential motoring must be curtailed for the next few months.

Ralph K. Davies, acting Petroleum Coordinator, told the Senators that despite "public confusion" and doubt that real gasoline shortage existed in the Eastern States, he expected patriotic citizens to cooperate in the present curtailments.

May Report Today

Senator Maloney (Dem., Conn.), chairman, said the special committee would try to report to the Senate tomorrow, and would adopt an attitude of "watchful waiting," ready to reopen public hearings at any time.

Maloney agreed with Davies that conservation of petroleum products was necessary, and said he leaned toward the proposal to construct a vast pipe line from the Gulf to the Atlantic seaboard to assure a steady large supply of crude petroleum

"Can't Give It Away"

"You can't sink a pipe line and you can't give it away," the Senator observed He apparently referred to transfer of more than fifty oil tankers to England, which the Petroleum Administration says has resulted in an Eastern shortage.

Davies told the committee today that such a pipe line could be in operation within nine months, and possibly before July 1, and would, he said, provide 250,000 to 300,000 barrels of petroleum daily to the most thickly populated part of the country

To Pursue All Means

There was no direct reference at the Senate hearing to yesterday's action of the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board denying immediate supplies of steel needed for the $80,000,000 pipe line.

Meanwhile, Davies said, every possible means of conserving petroleum supplies and increasing them would be pursued. He mentioned completion of smaller pipe lines, construction of new tankers, and scores of similar suggestions for meeting the shortage threat.

Ration Plans Ready

Plans were ready, he said, for rationing of gasoline and fuel oil, but these would not be used except as a last resort.

Davies said the Eastern supply of all petroleum products would drop to about 52,000,000 barrels by the end of the year. He added that this was 20,000,000 barrels below the previous year and a dangerously narro margin for gasoline, heating oil, industrial oil and other products.

Travel Shows 100% Rise.

[By the Associated Press]

San Pedro, Cal., Sept. 10—Travel on the hand-paved Burma road—it is China's life line in the war against Japan—has increased one hundred per cent. within the last thirty days, three American transportation experts said today.

They expressed belief that Japan, which has been sending its bombing planes against the road, never would succeed in closing it.

"There is nothing like the Burma road anywhere in the world," said Daniel C. Arnstein.

"It is paved by hand, with broken stones and cobblestones."

Arnstein, Harold C. David and Marco Hellman, all of New York, arrived on the Maston liner Matsonia from Honolulu. They made a survey of the Burma road for the Chinese Government.

Arnstein said his specific recommendations included:

Elimination of tax delays at the border and in individual provinces. At one point 300 trucks were held up for twenty-four hours for toll collections and examination of cargo.

Inauguration of a dispatching and maintenance system. Fifty American technicians are being sent to put this program into effect.

A road patrol, with six checking stations along the 600-mile length from the border to Chunking.

Mechanics Needed

Operation has been entirely without organization, Arnstein said, with the result that trucks often took thirty days to make a trip which should require five.

One of the chief needs is training of mechanics. Many trucks were broken down, he declared, because maintenance is not understood. Even ordinary lubricating care was too rare.

Arnstein said Capt. James Wilson, a West Point graduate and former associate in the trucking business in New York, had been left in charge of the development program. He anticipates an increase in the number of vehicles operating from 2,000 to 7,000 within a few months. The trucks will be chiefly American importations.

Farley Thinks Sinkings Are Not Cause for War

Says U. S. Must Expect to Lose Some War-Aid Vessels

SAN PEDRO, Calif., Sept. 10 (AP).—James A. Farley, former Postmaster General, returned from a Honolulu vacation today and remarked in an interview that recent U. S. ships sinkings are "not in my opinion sufficient cause for war."

"Ship operators and the general public concur in this opinion," he went on. "People are cognizant of the danger in sending our ships with supplies to Britain; they expect to lose some ships."

The former Democratic national chairman, still New York State chairman, said:

"I'm in politics to stay the rest of my life, that's my career."

Along the same line, he said, laughing:

"You can ask me, 'do you think Roosevelt is going to run for a fourth term?' and I will reply, "I didn't think he was going to run for a third term.'"

Says "Incidents" Are Inevitable

Washington, Sept. 10 (AP)—Gen. Robert E. Wood, of Chicago, acting chairman of the America First Committee, said in a statement tonight that President Roosevelt "has been sending American ships into zones of war where an incident of some sort is inevitable."

"And now it is to be supposed he will go on the air to whip up the fears and hatreds of our people and urge them still closer to war," Wood said.

COUNTER-SPY RECOUNTS NAZI DUPING BY FBI

By Pat McGrady

NEW YORK, Sept. 10 (AP)—The testimony of William G. Sebold, that under a death threat by German agents he agreed to establish a secret radio station for them on Long Island and then disclosed the plan to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, remained unshaken today in the trial of 16 defendants charged with participating in a German spy ring here.

In the second day of cross-examination by defense counsel, Sebold admitted that he had been under observation in Bellevue hospital in 1937, but declared that doctors eventually discovered that his illness was purely physical and caused by stomach ulcers.

Lawyers for the defendants questioned him in detail.

He told the attorneys, George Herz, Charles Oberwager and Frank J. Walsh, that he went to Germany in 1939 for a rest and cure, and there was urged by Gestapo agents to establish the radio station. When he returned and divulged their proposal to the FBI, he said, he was employed by the FBI for $50 a week.

FBI BUILT STATION

Sebold said the FBI built and operated the radio station and for the last 18 months had transmitted messages from German agents in the United States and received messages from Gestapo headquarters in Hamburg and from other agents throughout the world.

At different times, he said, he received funds from the Gestapo but turned all over to the FBI, just as he surrendered $910 of the initial German grant of $1,000.

30.24 — 11735

Sebold said that while the Gestapo was threatening him for failure to join them immediately, he appealed to the American consulate in Germany for aid in getting out of that country. His passport, he said, had been stolen.

"The consular officials just laughed at me," he said. "They asked me to leave. But I could understand their attitude. Many people were wanting favors about the time this war broke out."

SEP 11 1941

He said that ultimately, after he had disclosed communications from Gestapo officials, the Consulate informed the State Department in Washington; and Sebold was met, as he requested, by FBI and State Department agents in New York.

SECRET DOCUMENTS

Oberwager, questioning closely some of Sebold's translations of German, asked what word the German officials used when they threatened to bring to bear "pressure of the state" if Sebold did not join the conspiracy.

Sebold said the word was "unterstuetzung."

"Why that doesn't mean pressure," said Oberwager. "Doesn't that mean assistance?"

"In the present day Germany, they mean the same thing," replied Sebold.

Herz attempted to procure for the defense nine pages of the findings surrendered by Sebold to the FBI on his return from Germany. In these notes were the secrets of Sebold's observations, treatment and dealings with German Gestapo agents, as well as details of the proposed American espionage setup.

The court, however, upheld the U. S. Attorney's contention that these could not be released to counsel, and denied them the right even of perusing parts of the documents.

GENERAL WARNS OF POISON-GAS USE

Decision Up To Hitler, Chief Of U. S. Chemical Service Says

War Will Never Be All-Out Without Resort To Fumes, Porter Declares

SEP 11 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Atlantic City, Sept. 10—Maj. Gen. William N. Porter, chief of the United States Chemical Warfare Service, predicted tonight the present European war "will never be really 'all out' until poison gases once more flood the battlefields."

In a speech before the American Chemical Society's annual banquet, General Porter asserted the only reason the Axis powers had not used poison gas already was because they didn't think it to their advantage.

"Whether or not gas warfare will be used," he said, "depends solely on whether Hitler's generals feel that the advantage to them would surely outweigh any disadvantages.

Why Hitler Hasn't Used It

"Up until now they have not felt so, and I think rightly, since gas is primarily a defensive weapon and would have been of much more value to the retiring Russians than to the advancing Germans. Hitler understands well that mustard gas on British beaches would add materially to the precariousness of an invasion.

"But should he believe that one gigantic stroke with gas would win the war for him, I am convinced he would use it without question. Treaties signed and sealed have not restrained dictators from any course of action suited to their purpose. This war will never be really 'all out' until poison gases once more flood the battlefields."

General Porter observed Italy did not hesitate to use mustard gas "on the unprotected Ethiopians" to bring the first Ethiopian campaign to a sudden end, and added: "You can be certain that neither Hitler nor Mussolini has forgotten this."

"Wars are not won by gas masks or other defensive material," concluded General Porter. "To overcome the enemy we must take the offensive.

Defense As "Weasel Word"

"I believe the word 'defense' has actually hindered our military preparations. If we are to carry out the declared purpose of our commander in chief (President Roosevelt) and crush Hitlerism, no amount of defensive preparations can do the job.

"Only an army organized as a striking force can build a true and disciplined morale. Defense is a word, an insincere word, and it at all around which to rally a m... effort. It has its place in any military vocabulary but we have endowed it in this country with connotations which make it a weasel word."

War Department Also Estimates 70,000 Will Be Injured In Maneuvers

Casualties Will Be Among 752,000 Troops To Take Part In Field Training

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 10—The War Department estimated tonight there would be 236 deaths and 70,000 other casualties among approximately 752,000 troops who will take part in the record peacetime field maneuvers in September and November.

The department said, however, that the accident and death rates would be considerably lower than for a corresponding number of civilian persons during the same period of time.

The estimates were prepared by the Surgeon General of the army and include the anticipated casualties for both the ground and air forces.

Dangers In Field Greater

"Casualties are expected to be more numerous during maneuvers than during preliminary training in camps," the department said, "because of the greatly increased activities under simulated war conditions. Troops will be constantly in movement over all kinds of terrain and at night operations will be under blackout conditions.

"Roads in the maneuver areas will be congested with men and fast moving tanks, mechanized equipment and motor vehicles. Realism in the war games also will put all troops under stress of keen competition for the outcome of these 'free maneuvers' will depend entirely on the action taken by the man in the field."

Medical Corps Ready

For the September maneuvers in Louisiana, in which approximately 450,000 troops will participate, the army estimated there would be 119 deaths because of injury and 17 because of disease. It estimated 30,000 troops would be admitted to hospitals for treatment of disease and 10,000 for injuries.

The November maneuvers in the Carolinas will involve approximately 302,000 troops and the department said probably seventy of them would be killed and thirty die of disease. About 22,500 will be hospitalized by disease and 7,500 by injuries, the department said.

Air Freighters To Carry Defense Goods To Alaska

Sacramento, Calif., Sept. 10, (AP)—Big aerial freighters soon will be racing vital defense supplies to America's outposts in Alaska, on a regular schedule over a 2,000-mile route.

That was the army's answer today to the necessity of whipping up defense preparations at the isolated far north bases.

Air corps pilots of the 50th Transport Wing will fly the freight, using twin-engine transport planes. The route will be between the Sacramento air depot and Ladd field, Fairbanks, Alaska. Service will start just as soon as equipment arrives.

The new supply line will expedite shipment of air corps supplies to Alaska at a time when international developments have emphasized the strategic importance of America's northern outpost.

Instead of requiring long weeks to get materials and equipment to Alaskan destinations by water routes, Ladd field now will be only three days away—even closer in event of emergency.

Because of the shortness of northern days, the projected flights will be made in three stages, the first stop at McChord field, Wash., another "somewhere along the route," and finally Ladd field itself. At the start at least, plans call for trips not more frequently than weekly.

The flights will be made from the Sacramento air depot, which is the supply base for a vast area extending from Mexico to Alaska, and from Hawaii and the Philippines on the west, to a line from Tucson through Albuquerque, Salt Lake City, Boise and Spokane on the east.

Behind the preparations stand years of army experiments with air freighting and a record of millions of ton-miles, without serious mishap to either crew or cargo.

The present C-39, a low-winger Douglas transport, lifts 22,000 pounds, including fuel, crew and 3200 pounds of payload.

Sen. Clark Hits Movie Magnates As Warmongers

Trying To Plunge Nation Into War, Missourian Says

Washington, Sept. 10 — (AP) — Senator Clark (D-Mo) contended in testimony before a senate subcommittee today that the motion picture industry was a "monopoly controlled by a half dozen men" who were determined to "plunge this nation into war."

The Missouri senator made the assertion in urging an investigation of what he called moving picture progaganda "to arouse their emotions and make them clamor for war."

Clark's testimony drew from Wendell Willkie, 1940 Republican presidential nominee and counsel for the film industry, an assertion that the Missouri senator had failed to produce any evidence of propaganda and was seeking to "prejudice the public with his monopoly charge.

"After this charge falls of its own weight," Willkie said in a statement, "the isolationists will have another charge, for they are obviously determined to use this opportunity to fight with whatever weapons they can find, the foreign policy of the country."

Willkie renewed an earlier appeal to the committee to suspend further hearings until it had been the moving pictures objected to by Clark and Senator Nye (R-ND), co-author of the investigation proposal.

For the second time in as many days Chairman Clark (D-Idaho) of the senate interstate commerce subcommittee hearing the testimony refused to permit cross-examination of witnesses by Willkie. Senator McFarland (D-Ariz) a member of the committee, asked that Willkie be permitted to question the Missouri senator after he had completed reading a prepared statement.

Clark ruled that Willkie could appear as a witness later if he chose.

Willkie said in his statement that "we have been refused the right to cross-examine them (Nye and Clark), or to present our refutation."

"To all my requests to protect the motion picture industry from slander, I get one answer—it is not the custom to permit this," he added. "The power to make the rules on these hearings lies with the rump sub-committee that is conducting them."

In his testimony Clark said that the press was free, the radio "partially free" but that "the moving picture machine is utterly without one scrap of freedom."

"Five or six men," he said, "can sit around the table together or contact each other on the telephone and tell this nation what 80,000,000 people can see and hear in 17,00 theaters each week. That is too dangerous for any democracy to permit.

"If this motion picture industry is to beicome an agency of discussion and propaganda, then this monopoly must be destroyed immediately and at all costs.

"I for one pledge that if the industry does not end this propaganda for war and return to its normal function of entertainment, I shall do everything in my power to bring about at once and forever the utter destruction of the grasp of these men on the screen."

3 New York Agents Of F. B. I. Discharged

Accused Of "Personal Misconduct," Official Reveals—Details Are Withheld

Washington, Sept. 10 (AP)—Three agents in the New York office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation have been discharged for "personal misconduct," an official disclosed tonight.

He declined to identify the agents or to detail the alleged misconduct in line with what he said was a long-standing policy of not discussing administrative matters publicly.

The dismissals, he said, involved no sweeping personnel shakeup. Some field agents have been shifted, however, in connection with the recent expansion of the staff so that new men may be mingled with the experienced agents.

Nazi Consular Officials Detained Aboard Vessel

Three Ousted From Cuba Not Allowed To Leave Ship To Sail From Brooklyn Tomorrow

New York, Sept. 10 (AP)—Lacking American passport visas, three Nazi consular officials and their families, ousted from Cuba, were confined today to the Spanish liner Marches de Comillas.

Immigration officials said they had no instructions other than to keep the Germans on board the ship, which arrived at Brooklyn last night and is scheduled to sail for Bilbao Friday.

The Nazis, returning home under a Cuban order closing their offices, were Clemens Landmann, Walter Koehler and Anton Heisinger.

Would Have U. S. Take Danish Training Ship

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10 (AP)—Aides of Senator Pepper (D-Fla.) said today the Coast Guard had requested the State Department to requisition the Danish training ship Danmark, now in port at Jacksonville, Fla.

It would be used as a Coast Guard training vessel, probably at the New London (Conn.) Academy.

The request to the State Department came after Capt. K. L. Hansen of the Danmark conferred today with Rear Admiral Harvey F. Johnson, chief of the Coast Guard materiel division.

The Danmark has been at Jacksonville since Germany invaded Denmark.

PRESIDENT CHIEF HEIR OF MOTHER

Some of Estate's Residue Goes to Grandchildren.

Poughkeepsie, Sept. 10 (A. P.).—Sara Delano Roosevelt left the bulk of her estate of "over $5,000 real and over $5,000 personal property" to her son, the President, in a will filed for probate today with the surrogate of Dutchess county where she had lived many years.

The will, dated September 20, 1928, placed one-tenth of the residue in six equal trust funds for her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Anna Eleanor Roosevelt, and five grandchildren, Mrs. John Boettiger, and James, Elliott, Franklin D. and John A. Roosevelt.

Mrs. Roosevelt bequeathed $5,000 to St. James Church, at Hyde Park, behind which she was buried yesterday. She died Sunday at the family home in Hyde Park.

The President, Arthur J. Morris, a Poughkeepsie banker, and Henry T. Hackett, a Poughkeepsie attorney, were named executors.

Jersey Youth Killed With R.C.A.F. in England

High Bridge, N. J., Sept. 10 (A. P.).—The parents of Sergt. Observer Coukell of the Royal Canadian Air Force have received word of the death of their son in an airplane accident in England last Sunday.

Coukell, 25 years old, a graduate of High Bridge High School, enlisted in the Canadian Air Force in August, 1940, and went overseas on June 19, 1941. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Coukell, had learned that he participated in bombing raids over Germany. The cablegram notifying them of his death referred only to an accidental crash in England.

Bristle, Brush Business Blasted

War Puts Crimp in Imports and Uncle Sam Buys All Supplies Available in U. S.

SEP 11 1941

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 10 (AP)—The war has just about brushed off the bristle business.

Expert in Field

Take the word of John T. Opie, a big brush and bristle expert.

The only good bristles, it seems, grow on Siberian boars. From cold, Northern Asia come the stiff bristles that make tooth brushes, paint brushes, hair—there are 50,000 different kinds of brushes, Mr. Opie says. He's in the business.

Time was when you could buy all the Siberian boar bristles you wanted for $2.25 a pound. Today they're $18.50 a pound—if you can get them.

The postwar famine of 1919 snatched Russia's Siberian boars off the bristle market and into the meat markets. Starving Siberians ate them down from 19,000,000 to 11,000,000 in no time at all.

Bristle-breeding moved to China then and flourished until the recent Japanese embargo on bristles for Britain—and her allies and friends.

Uncle Sam has purchased all available bristle in this country. A factory in the Federal Penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kan., is converting it into Army and Navy brushes.

Substitutes?

Horsetail Hair

Next best is horsetail hair only it has to be dressed. They do that too in China, under the shadow of Japanese embargo.

"Horsetail hair is too limp anyway," says Mr. Opie.

Just the same the Government has bought up all the horsetail hair it can find.

There are fibers, less satisfactory—tampico, palmyra, bahia, bassine, bass, bamboo and rattan. Palmetto fiber is native to the United States. The others come from the Orient or from South America and Mexico which have none to spare.

The brush industry, meanwhile, is banking on two hopes.

"One," said Mr. Opie, "is that the war will end soon. The other is that some chemist will be stimulated by the emergency to create a really satisfactory synthetic bristle."

MacKenzie's Views On War Today

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

On the basis of somewhat auspicious signs one is not too optimistic in believing that a real effort has been made during the past few days in the direction of an accord between the United States and Japan over the grave differences which have arisen as the result of Tokyo's expansionist policy.

It would be folly, however, not to recognize that war is sulking outside the doors of the Japanese council chambers where midnight oil has been burning.

The Tokyo Government is in a tight and precarious position. The majority of the people of the island empire are against war with America, but at the same time they appear to be unwilling to stand for abandonment of the policy of a new order for Asia.

Should the government give up this cardinal program, which already has cost so many lives in battle and has brought the country to grave economic straits, there certainly would be a mighty outcry from the public. Indeed, some observers believe that it might [illegible] revolt.

The strong probabilities are that Premier Prince Konoye and his cabinet have been trying to figure out some sort of compromise between the extreme of war on the one hand and the desertion of the cherished new order on the other. It is a difficult and momentous problem, and there can be small doubt that war and peace have been balanced uncertainly on a razor edge before the harassed ministers of state.

One vital problem which must have been under consideration is whether Nippon should cut loose from the Axis. Such a switch, while startling, has plenty of precedent to encourage it, and they do tell us that only fools and dead men never change their minds.

The Japanese backed a doubtful horse when they subscribed to the Axis back in November of last year, but it certainly looked a good deal more like a winner then than it does now. What the Nipponese overlooked was that it might not be a good mud-horse, or maybe they figured there wouldn't be any mud. Anyway, the mud has arrived in the worst type of gumbo across the steppes of Russia, and Tokyo is debating whether to hedge the bet.

The probabilities are that the general public of Japan would shed no tears if the government tossed the Axis pact overboard—provided always that the new order weren't jettisoned also. Of course, a boon for which the government would give a good right arm would be about six months leeway in which to look the field over and see whether Germany is, or is not, going to win the war.

In this connection I recall that the Allies struck a spot of bother in 1916 over a phenomenon that developed in Tokyo, although so far as I know a stern censorship prevented publication of the affair. I was in London, and received from New York a letter saying that the American financial pundits had noted an exceptional flow of gold to Tokyo, and an unusual manipulation of stocks and bonds, and were anxious to know just what it meant.

I took the problem to the manager of one of the big American banks in London. The minute I mentioned the subject he glanced hastily over his shoulder and said mysteriously:

"I can't talk about that here. Come to my house for dinner tonight and I'll tell you what's in the wind."

Well, to cut the story short, he said that English bankers also had been watching this phenomenon in Tokyo, and were convinced the Japanese were getting themselves into such a favorable financial position that they would be masters of their own fate, just in case Tokyo felt impelled to dissociate herself from the Allies. At that time, of course, relations between the Nipponese and the other Allies weren't too happy, though later they were straightened out.

One-Time Gayest Capital

Leningrad Retains Shadows Of Opulent Past As St. Petersburg Of The Days Of Czars Of Old Russian Empire

By MARY ANN BODINE

([illegible] Special News Service)

New York, Sept. 10—The ghosts of St. Petersburg are hearing strange sounds these days as the Germans draw their net closer and closer around modern Leningrad once the gayest and most magnificent capital in all Europe.

The imperial city of the czars has known famine, fire, floods, revolution and plagues since Peter the Great set it down on the banks of the Neva, but never has its broad avenues echoed the footfalls of a conqueror.

It has been almost a quarter of a century now since grand dukes and grand duchesses drove down the Nevsky Prospect in their droskies; still the shadows of St. Petersburg's opulent past remain.

"PALACE OF ARTS"

The winter palace now is called the Palace of Arts; Tsarskoye Syelo, retreat of the czars, has become the "Children's Village." The imperial chateau of Peterhoff, the Russian Versailles, is a resort for laborers. Some of the 20 palaces formerly belonging to members of the imperial family are falling in ruins, others are being preserved as museums.

However much the people and the spirit of the one time capital have changed, its bodily frame has remained the same whether mapmakers wrote its name as St. Petersburg, Petrograd, or even Leningrad in honor of the man who supplanted the czar as ruler of Russia.

It is, or was before the visits of German bombers, a city of harmonious proportions, its streets broad, its squares enormous, its buildings low and vast. Unlike Moscow it is European in architecture and has the neatness of formality.

Not even the long winters which sheathe Northern Russia in snow and ice could dim the splendors of imperial St. Petersburg. The huge golden dome of the Cathedral of St. Isaac, built in the early part of the eighteenth century, gleamed through the mists. By order of the founder himself, there had sprung up the stately fortress of St. Peter and St. Paul, containing the tombs of all the sovereigns of Russia, save that of Peter II who was buried at Moscow.

The Admiralty, housing the naval department, was an imposing building of incredible length. Kazan Cathedral with its semi-circular and arched colonnade of 136 pillars was in imitation of St. Peter's at Tome. Ornate Winter Palace, one of the world's largest buildings, housed the fabulous treasure of crown jewels, but it had not the beauty of the czar's summer residences.

There was Apothetcary's Island with its wonderful botanical garden and the Alexander monolith, greatest of modern times. There were quays of granite, barracks and palaces. On an island out to sea rose the mighty fortress of Kronstadt, guardian of the harbor and of the strong, proud city on the Neva.

For all its impressiveness, St. Petersburg was the most unhealthy capital in Europe for many years. Typhoid and cholera were periodical scourges, for sanitation was virtually unknown until the turn of this century. Seven times water invaded the city, and there were often bogs in the streets.

It was due solely to Peter's obstinacy that the city was completed. Contrary to popular belief, the Russian czar did not select an uninhabited site for his new town. Swampy it was, and forested, but the Finns had settled there in early times and given their names to the Neva Delta. The czar began preparations in the summer of 1703.

An incredible amount of drainage had to be done before the city could be built, and the region was so unhealthy that 10,000 workmen perished before the work was well started. With amazing disregard for human life (Peter maintained you couldn't make an omelet without breaking eggs), the czar ordered more men to take their places. At the end of the first year thousands of houses had been constructed and there were wharves, bridges, canals and formidable defenses.

Nine years later Peter moved the court to his new city. He insured himself adequate company by ordering all who owned 500 serfs or more to build houses in St. Petersburg and live in them during the winter season. He invited experts from Western nations to establish themselves there. The following year a ukase was issued requiring the provinces to furnish 40,000 men a year for three years to work on the city's construction. Everyone entering St. Petersburg was commanded to bring in a certain amount of stone, and no other stone buildings were permitted to be built in the empire.

Peter's new city was immensely unpopular with its residents. The reforms Peter introduced there were enough to scandilize them. He ordered all long beards and all long skirts to be cut off and induced his people to wear European clothing. He even exposed them to the culture of the learned men he gathered at his court.

After Peter's death, his grandson, who succeeded him on the throne, removed the court to Moscow, its former home. Residents of St. Petersburg left the city by the thousands, but the Empress Anne ordered them to return in 1729 and under Catherine II the population was forcibly increased to 300,000. It became a center of learning. A university was opened there in 1790 and the imperial library was founded.

Peter's tastes were so simple that he lived in a log structure of three rooms, but his successors quickly made St. Petersburg the most expensive capital in the world. It became a city of palaces and park, and the royal court was breathtaking in its unparalleled magnificence.

When the czar held an assembly, the most glittering society in Europe gathered in the winter palace. Three thousands guests climbed the wide stairs where stood a formidable array of court servants in colorful livery and hats with ostrich plumes.

Hussars in white and gold uniforms with scarlet dolmans slung over their shoulders and Cossacks in vivid crimson or deep blue stood in attention while the court ladies in extravagant gowns and a blaze of jewels passed into the throne room.

Every afternoon those of nobility, diplomatic ranking or great wealth drove along the palace quay. In the winter they took the air, wrapped in rich furs and attended by servants, in sledges propelled by high-stepping teams. It was a spectacle of opulence which made the peasants mutter as they made their way on foot through the snow-encrusted streets.

All this glory was to fade like a dream and the aristocrat was to give way to the working men of the Soviet regime. In 1917 the Communists forbade foreigners to enter or leave Petrograd, as St. Petersburg had been known since 1914. This stricture reduced the city to poverty made more acute the removal of the capital to Moscow for the second time. Not until 1922 was its port re-opened to foreign trade.

Today Leningrad is an industrial center. It is a modern city with 60 institutions of higher learning, one of the world's largest libraries, 107 scientific research institutes, 89 hospitals and 37 museums.

Soon it may be only charred ruins.

GERMAN EXPERTS TRY TO GIVE RYE TASTE OF WHEAT

BY ERNEST G. FISCHER

Berlin (Correspondence of the Special News Service)—The Kaiser Wilhelm Institute is trying to make rye bread look and taste like wheat bread.

It is cultivating the bitter lupine bean to make it sweeter for use as coffee.

In recent years Germans have been leaning toward the American preference for white bread, but most of the Reich's land is more suitable for rye than wheat, and with limited wartime importation of wheat, wheat bread rations have been cut.

While the government has been telling the people constantly that "rye bread is more healthful," Institute experts have crossed rye and wheat to produce a product which some have said the "similarity to wheat stood out." But further experiments appear necessary before white rye bread tasting like wheat bread is likely to materialize.

Bitter lupine beans, which have been poor folk's fare for centuries, have been made more palatable for fastidious tastes, Institute workers declare. For years they pottered around among some 1,500,000 lupine plants and found five sweet ones. These were developed to the extent that now you can get noodles made of lupine beans, and in the absence of real coffee—practically non-existent in wartime Germany—you can get lupine bean coffee.

Cellulose, used in hundreds of ersatz products, is obtained from poplar trees. But German poplars didn't grow fast on thin soil. So the experts crossed them with American and Siberian poplars.

Then they gave the sprouts a shot in the arm by soaking them with the sap of meadow-saffron. This is colchicine, the gout remedy—an American discovery. Sprayed on plants, it results in permanent changes, such as thicker stems, larger flowers and sometimes useless freaks.

With this treatment, the experts say, has at least doubled the growth of the poplars.

Among other experiments, they are trying to make sugar beets grow above ground like kohlrabi, and they're making lifebelts out of sunflower stems.

MARINES IN ICELAND TO REPEL FOES

SEP 11 1941

Totally Equipped to Fight—Sure They Can Win, Too

Editor's Note—Drew Middleton, war correspondent, who was with the British Expeditionary Force in France early in the war and later covered the German aerial blitz on England, tells how the U. S. marines are getting along in Iceland.

NO. 1

BY DREW MIDDLETON

U. S. MARINE CORPS HEADQUARTERS IN ICELAND, Sept. 10 (The Post Special News Service) (Passed by Field Censor)—Hard-bitten soldiers of the sea, men of the United States marine corps, are confident they can repel any foe.

FULLY EQUIPPED

Anti-aircraft and anti-tank guns, tanks and scout cars are evidence the marines are not in Iceland merely to build snug winter quarters. They are a fully-equipped fighting force.

Their commanding officer, Brigadier-General John Marston, is confident they will be able to fight well if the need arises. The British in Iceland concur—they are impressed by the marines' extensive equipment and their soldierly bearing.

The basic force is infantry, armed with Springfield and Browning automatic rifles and machine guns. The foot soldiers boast plenty of marksmanship medals, and left the United States after long and complicated maneuvres convincing officers they were skilled not only in the prime marine duty of landing operations but also of holding their position.

Scout Gun Carrier

The most startling novelty in the marines' equipment is a scout car mounting two 30-calibre and one 50-calibre machine guns. It hurls its armored body over the rough Icelandic roads and rougher fields at speeds up to 60 miles an hour.

Faster than the British Bren gun carrier, it lacks the overhead protection of the armored cars which the British use for scouting duties.

The marines say it is useful for patrol, pointing out that two more machine guns could be mounted and the car thus making a valuable weapon of great fire power for such things as covering withdrawals.

The anti-tank guns are very similar to the British two-pounder. They appear easier to move, however, and have a wider range.

Can Halt Tanks

The marines are enthusiastic about the possibilities of these guns. "Tank vs. tank is bad strategy when an anti-tank gun can do the work," one officer said, adding he believes tanks ultimately will be halted, not by other tanks or make-shift weapons like French 75s, but by anti-tank guns firing armor-piercing shells.

I asked a sergeant from Portland, Ore., whether he'd like to have a shot at a tank with this gun. "You bet your teeth I would," he said. "If the French and British had enough of these, they would have knocked h—l out of those panzer divisions."

The British say this is bad country for tanks.

Good Sample

But I rode in one of the American tanks up hill, across a field thickly strewn with jagged lumps of lava, and across a bed of fine sand, and it went well enough.

The anti-aircraft equipments consist of 30 and 50-calibre machine-guns for low flying craft, and three-inchers for high flying bombers.

The guns under command of Lieutenant W. R. Wendt of Milwaukee, were a good sample. A great deal of work has gone into protecting their positions with sandbags and camouflage. All the detection devices are brand new.

Veteran Force

The marines admit they could use more trucks to transport infantry rather than rely on marching men. Their pride was hurt because they had to borrow some trucks from the British.

Not that they don't like the British. They do. It's just the idea of the United States marines asking anything from anybody.

But in essentials this is a well-equipped, veteran force, by the standards of the present conflict. It is better equipped in all but the trucks for troop transport, than any of the British Expeditionary Force units I saw in France except the guards regiments, the crack units of the British army.

War Communiques

Russian

SEP 11 1941

Moscow, Sept. 10 (AP)—The Soviet Information Bureau issued the following communique today:

Throughout the night of September 9-10 our troops continued to fight the enemy along the entire front.

Soviet tank troops are battling heroically with the German Fascist hordes. According to far from complete data, on September 7 alone, in the course of stubborn encounters with the enemy, our tank units destroyed on all sectors of the front more than 100 German tanks and armored cars, 80 anti-tank guns, 42 guns of various calibers, about 300 machine guns and mine-throwers, 560 trucks, 7,000 German infantrymen, 3 cavalry squadrons, 300 carts, 225 motor cycles, 415 bicycles and 16 wireless stations.

The men, commanders and political instructors of tank units are displaying valor and courage in the battle.

In the northwestern direction of the front, forty German tanks attempted to attack our units, capture a railway station and break through our lines. When the enemy machines approached within 500 meters of the station, Soviet tanks violently attacked the German column from ambush. A battle of tanks ensued. In one hour the Germans lost nineteen tanks. The rest took flight.

Assistant Political Instructor Flegentov especially distinguished himself in this battle. Although his tank was damaged, Flegentov, by accurate gunfire, put out of action two light enemy tanks.

The following day the enemy hurled a new column of forty-six tanks and an infantry battalion into an attempt to capture the station. Soviet tank men repulsed this attack, too, inflicting heavy losses on the enemy. In the fighting, which lasted two days, the Germans lost forty tanks and 743 men.

Tank Commander Lieutenant Lobassov distinguished himself in action. He brought his tank into close range of a group of German machines and opened fire. In this engagement Lobassov disabled eight German tanks.

Tank Commander Lieutenant Alexeyenko has repeatedly displayed initiative and courage in action. Ordered by the command to cover our units retreating to a new defense line, Alexeyenko single-handed held the enemy at bay a while day and night, setting fire to four German tanks and killing many soldiers and officers.

Lieutenant Mishustin's tank platoon made a daring raid into the enemy's rear. In the dead of night the Soviet platoon destroyed the headquarters of an enemy regiment, two field wireless stations, eight guns and six mine throwers. Taking advantage of the enemy's confusion, our tankists successfully carried out their orders and returned to their unit without loss.

Lieutenant Slesarenko's heavy tank was guarding a bridge across a river. Selecting a suitable vantage point, the crew camouflaged the machine. Soon German tanks and about a half company of soldiers appeared on the opposite bank. Allowing the enemy to approach quite close, the Soviet tank opened fire. Six German tanks were disabled. The remnants of the German column retired.

Examples of courage and heroism are displayed by artillerymen of Major Sobolev's unit, operating in the northwestern direction of the front. In seven days they killed more than 3,000 German soldiers, inflicting heavy losses on the second and third battalions of the Forty-third German Infantry Regiment, the first battalion of the Two Hundred and Seventy-first Infantry Regiment and the ninth company of the Five Hundred and Sixth Infantry Regiment. Our men destroyed 15 guns, 31 mine-throwers, 56 machine guns and 6 ammunition trucks.

Numerous reports continue to come in of incredible atrocities perpetrated by the German armies in occupied districts.

All inhabited localities around Yelnya, recaptured by the Red Army, were completely demolished and devastated by the Nazis. There are villages where the Nazi blackguards destroyed all peasant dwellings. The population was robbed literally of everything, down to the last ounce of bread, clothing and children's footwear.

In occupied villages of the Smolensk region the Nazi fiends are brutally outraging the non-combatant population. A telephone wire was cut near the village of Pochinko. The Germans rounded up in collective farm offices all the old folk, women and children still remaining in the village and burned them alive.

In the village of Lyady the Germans brutally treated three Red Army men who refused to answer questions. During interrogation they were savagely tortured, then tied to trees and beaten. The Nazis meted out the same punishment to two local residents who expressed sympathy for the wounded Red Army men.

A seventh-grade schoolboy, Shura Marmov, was shot by the Germans in Yelnya because a safety razor blade which he used for sharpening pencils was found in his pocket.

Two kilometers from the village of Bolshie Nezhody the Germans shot several scores of peasants, including children 13 and 14 years of age, and an old man named Khydakov, both of whose eyes were first gouged out.

After these bloody deeds in the village the drunken Fascists fired from rifles and pistols at the portrait of the great Russian poet Pushkin.

In the village of Khanino a group of German officers arranged a drunken orgy to which they dragged the local teacher and raped her. A 16-year-old collective farm girl, "CH.," was raped by five German soldiers in turn.

The Fascists herded together all girls and young women from Tokarevo and neighboring villages and drove them in an unknown direction. None of them so far has returned home.

Lettish guerrillas are causing heavy damage to the Fascists. They destroy communication lines, blow up bridges and set fire to armament repair shops set up by the Nazis on Latvian territory.

In the vicinity of Krustpils and Daugavpils (Dvinsk) the guerrillas noticed that the Germans were regularly using waterways to transfer war materials to the front. On September 2 a flotilla of barges on the Dvina river was attacked by a guerrilla detachment commanded by Micis. In the dead of night the guerrillas from their boats boarded a tug and two barges, killed the guards and seized the barges and steamer.

The barges were found to be laden with 2,000 bicycles and large quantities of ammunition. The barges and steamer were sunk.

A detachment under Karlson's command attacked a detachment of Storm Troopers which had requisitioned food and warm clothing from peasants near Plajavinjas. The German Storm Troopers barricaded the house and opened fire from automatics. The guerrillas threw fuel bottles and grenades through the windows. The house was set on fire and the Fascist pillagers were destroyed.

A guerrilla detachment of railway men commanded by Lacis is operating successfully. In fifteen days of August this detachment wrecked several munitions trains. Since its formation Lacis' detachment has increased numerically sevenfold, Micis' detachment ninefold and Karlson's detachment twelvefold. In two weeks these detachments have annihilated 390 German privates and 40 officers.

During the night of Sept. 8-9 enemy aircraft raided Malta but caused only slight damage to civilian property. One of our night fighters shot down a Cant-Z1007 into the sea after it had been caught in searchlights. Five survivors of the crew were captured.

On the same night an unsuccessful attempt was made to raid Haifa. No damage or casualties were caused.

Last night enemy aircraft carried out two attacks on R. A. F. stations in the Canal zone. On both occasions our night fighters intercepted the enemy. One JU-88 was shot down and another damaged. There were no R. A. F. casualties and damage caused was slight.

From all above operations two of our aircraft are missing.

Today's Middle East General Headquarters communiqué said:

Libya: At Tobruk our patrol activity continues and our artillery carried out successful shoots against enemy positions. A small enemy patrol which attempted to approach our line was driven off. In the frontier area there is nothing to report.

AT ONE SECTOR OF THE NORTHERN FRONT SENIOR LIEUTENANT BAGRIKOV'S INFANTRY BATTALION INFLICTED A HEAVY DEFEAT UPON AN EMEY UNIT. THE ENEMY LEFT ON THE BATTLE FIELD ABOUT 500 MEN KILLED AND WOUNDED, EIGHT SMASHED MINE-THROWERS, AND FOUR DAMAGED GUNS. BAGRIKOV'S MEN CAPTURED 30 MACHINE-GUNS, 15 SUB-MACHINE-GUNS, MANY RIFLES AND A LARGE QUANTITY OF AMMUNITION.

BY ACCURATE FIRE JUNIOR LIEUTENANT SHCHERBAKOV, COMMANDER OF A BATTERY OPERATING IN A SOUTHWESTERN DIRECTION, REPELLED AN ATTACK BY A LARGE ENMY UNIT. HAVING LOST ABOUT 500 OFFICERS AND MEN, THE ENEMY RETREATED.

IN A WESTERN DIRECTION OF THE FRONT OUR TROOPS TOOK PRISONER A LARGE GROUP OF GERMAN SOLDIERS. THE PRISONERS TESTIFY THAT THEIR UNITS ARE SUSTAINING ENORMOUS LOSSES. THE MEN WERE WEARIED AND EXHAUSTED BY THE SUSTAINED FIGHTING. MANY SOLDIERS HAVE LOST EVERY HOPE OF RETURNING HOME AND HAVE LAPSED INTO COMPLETE INDIFFERENCE.

CAPTIVE WILHELM HEIFEL, A LANCE CORPORAL OF THE SECOND COMPANY OF THE 510TH INFANTRY REGIMENT TOLD UPON QUESTIONING:

"AT NIGHT COMPANY COMMANDER OBERLIEUTENANT KRAR TOLD US THAT AT DAWN WE WOULD ATTACK. THE SOLDIERS' SPIRITS SANK. TO RAISE THEIR SPIRIT THEY WERE ALL GIVEN LIQUOR BUT EVEN DESPITE INTOXICATION MANY SOLDIERS COULD NOT FORGET THE DANGER AWAITING THEM. AT NIGHT SOLDIERS SHERKER, BUSHKE AND KRAUSE SHOT THROUGH THEIR OWN HANDS. DURING THE ATTACK OFFICERS FOLLOWED BEHIND THE MEN SHOOTING THOSE WHO REFUSED TO ADVANCE. OWING TO THE FIRE OF SOVIET GUNS AND RED ARMY SNIPERS WE COULD NOT MAKE A SINGLE STEP WITHOUT LOSSES. AFTER TWO ATTACKS NOT MORE THAN 30 MEN OF OUR COMPANY SURVIVED."

CAPTIVE ILATTO SAYS: "EPIDEMICS OF DYSENTERY BROKE OUT AMONG THE GERMAN TROOPS. TO COMBAT IT HEADQUARTERS ISSUED ORDERS FORBIDDING SOLDIERS TO DRINK UNBOILED WATER. THE SICK ARE LEFT TO THEMSELVES. MEDICINES ARE ALMOST IMPOSSIBLE TO PROCURE. MEDICAL PERSONNEL IS LACKING. WITHIN FIVE DAYS TWELVE SOLDIERS OF THE THIRD COMPANY OF THE 511ST REGIMENT DIED OF DYSENTERY."

SEP 11 1941

CAPTIVE PRIVATE GERHARDT FAUSE OF THE 84TH INFANTRY REGIMENT RELATED:

"EPIDEMICS OF GRIPPE AND DYSENTERY RAVAGED OUR REGIMENT. THE SOLDIERS THINK WITH HORROR OF THE FORTHCOMING WINTER. ALREADY THE TROOPS ARE EXPERIENCING AN ACUTE SHORTAGE OF CLOTHES. WHAT WILL IT BE LIKE IN THE WINTER?"

CAPTIVE PRIVATE JOACHIM BICHELM OF THE SAME REGIMENT TOLD ABOUT THE INHUMAN TREATMENT OF SICK SOLDIERS BY GERMAN OFFICERS: "THEY ARE GIVEN

NO MEDICAL AID. THEY ARE DYING IN HUNDREDS, NOT FROM SHELLS ONLY BUT ALSO FROM DISEASE."

BEGINNING WITH THE VERY FIRST DAYS OF THE OCCUPATION OF WESTERN DISTRICTS IN THE DNIEPEROPETROVSK REGION THE HITLERITE INVADERS HAVE SUSTAINED HEAVY LOSSES FROM THE HANDS OF NUMEROUS GUERRILLA PARTIES.

SEP 11 1941

ON SEPT. 5 A GUERRILLA DETACHMENT COMMANDED BY A MEMBER OF THE DISTRICT SOVIET LAID AN AMBUSH FIVE KILOMETERS FROM THE HIGHWAY BETWEEN PAVLOVO AND MIKHAILOVKA. TEN MEN HEADED BY TRACTOR DRIVER SEMENOV WERE DETAILED TO THE HIGHWAY. WHEN A GERMAN INFANTRY COMPANY APPEARED ON THE ROAD THE GUERRILLAS OPENED FIRE. THE GERMANS SENT TWO PLATOONS AGAINST SEMENOV'S GROUP. THE GUERRILLAS RETURNED THE FIRE AND BEGAN TO RETREAT OVER ROUGH TERRAIN IN THE DIRECTION OF THE AMBUSH. HAVING DRAWN THE GERMANS TO CLOSE RANGE THE DETACHMENT'S MAIN FORCES OPENED A MACHINE-GUN AND RIFLE FIRE. LOSING 40 MEN KILLED AND WOUNDED THE ENEMY RETREATED. THE GUERRILLAS CAPTURED 30 RIFLES, TWO MACHINE-GUNS AND DISAPPEARED.

A GUERRILLA DETACHMENT COMMANDED BY "G," FOREMAN OF THE DNIEPEROPETROVSK METAL WORKS, WAS INFORMED BY COLLECTIVE FARMERS THAT HEADQUARTERS OF A LARGE GERMAN FORMATION WAS STATIONED IN A GROVE AT A GULLEY NEAR THE VILLAGE OF BASSHMACHKA. ON SEPT. 5 THE STAFF OFFICERS GATHERED FOR A DRUNKEN ORGY. AT NIGHT THE GUERRILLAS SURROUNDED THE GROVE, SILENTLY DISPOSED OF THE SENTRIES AND ATTACKED THE DRUNKEN FASCISTS. TEN GERMAN OFFICERS AND MORE THAN 20 SOLDIERS WERE KILLED. THE GUERRILLAS DESTROYED FIVE TRUCKS AND CAPTURED ARMS.

NEAR THE VILLAGE IVANOVKA, A DETACHMENT COMMANDED BY "C," STOREKEEPER OF A MACHINE AND TRACTOR STATION, INTERCEPTED AND DESTROYED 14 GERMAN TRUCKS WITH SAPPERS' EQUIPMENT.

DURING THE FIRST DAYS OF SEPTEMBER THE SAME DETACHMENT BLEW UP TWO BRIDGES JUST RECENTLY BUILT BY THE FASCISTS ACROSS THE MOKRAYA SUMA RIVER AND SET FIRE TO A LARGE FUEL DUMP AT SURSKOYE STATION.

NEVILLE MILLER, PRESIDENT OF THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF BROADCASTERS, TOOK ISSUE TONIGHT WITH A STATEMENT HE SAID CLARK, OF MISSOURI, HAD MADE TO THE COMMITTEE THAT THE NATION'S BROADCASTING FACILITIES WERE BEING USED LARGELY TO DISSEMINATE PROPAGANDA FOR WAR, AND THAT A SMALL GROUP OF RADIO BROADCASTERS WERE EXERCISING MONOPOLISTIC CONTROL OVER FREEDOM OF THE AIR.

SEP 11 1941

"OF COURSE," MILLER SAID IN LETTER TO THE COMMITTEE, "IT IS ABSURD ON ITS FACE TO SAY THAT ANY GROUP OF MEN CONTROL WHAT IS BROADCAST IN THIS COUNTRY. THE AMERICAN PEOPLE AND THEY ALONE EXERCISE A DAY-TO-DAY CONTROL OF BROADCASTING FAR TOO POWERFUL FOR ANYONE, EVEN GOVERNMENT ITSELF, TO INTERFERE WITH. BUT BEYOND THIS, THESE MEN AND WOMEN HAVE VOLUNTARILY ACCEPTED AS PART OF THEIR PUBLIC RESPONSIBILITY THE DUTY TO SEE TO IT THAT RADIO SHALL PROMOTE AND ENLARGE FREE PUBLIC DISCUSSION AND DEBATE, THAT IT SHALL SERVE AS AN INSTRUMENT OF ENLIGHTENMENT AS WELL AS OF ENTERTAINMENT FOR ALL THE PEOPLE. X X

"RADIO IS 'ALL-OUT' FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE. IF THAT IS WHAT THE SENATOR MEANS, RADIO ADMITS IT. AND ANY MALICIOUS ATTEMPT TO SMEAR A GREAT INDUSTRY AT A TIME WHEN IT IS PLAYING SO IMPORTANT A PART IN THE INTEREST OF THE PUBLIC WELFARE--ANY ATTEMPT TO PRODUCE CONFUSION, DISBELIEF AND DISUNITY AMONG OUR PEOPLE--WILL FAIL, AS ALL SUCH EFFORTS HAVE FAILED IN THE HISTORY OF THE UNION."

WILLKIE SAID THE INDUSTRY WAS UNDER INVESTIGATION BY THE JUSTICE DEPARTMENT FROM 1938 TO 1940 WITH THE RESULT THAT AN AGREEMENT WAS ENTERED INTO UNDER THE AUSPICES OF A FEDERAL COURT "WHICH COMPLETELY SATISFIED THE DEPARTMENT OF GOVERNMENT CHARGED WITH ENFORCING THE ANTI-TRUST LAWS."

SEP 11 1941

CLARK NAMED MEN WHOM HE SAID RULED THE INDUSTRY AND WERE RESPONSIBLE FOR "PROPAGANDA."

"UP NEAR THE TOP OF THE LIST," HE SAID, "I WILL PUT THE MEN WHO CONTROL THE METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER COMPANY. THEY ARE THE MEN WHO CONTROL LOEW'S,INC., WHICH IS HEADED BY MR.NICHOLAS SCHENCK IN NEW YORK, WHO HAVE MADE ONE PROPAGANDA FILM AFTER ANOTHER TO ROUSE THE HATREDS OF THE PEOPLE OF AMERICA.

(PROMPTED BY CHAIRMAN CLARK, THE SENATOR ACKNOWLEDGED THAT WHILE SCHENCK HAD BEEN CONVICTED OF INCOME TAX EVASION, HE HAD APPEALED AND WAS NOT IN A PENITENTIARY.)

"I SHOULD SAY, NEXT TO THEM, THOUGH SOME MIGHT DISPUTE THEIR CLAIM TO THIS DISTINCTION, IS THE UNITED ARTISTS, WHICH MR. ALEXANDER KORDA NOW HEADS--A HUNGARIAN WHO IS A BRITISH SUBJECT AND WHICH COMPANY IS DOMINATED BY TWO BRITISH SUBJECTS--MR.ALEXANDER KORDA

AND MR.CHARLIE CHAPLIN, WHO HAS LIVED IN THIS COUNTRY FOR THIRTY YEARS AND MADE A GREAT FORTUNE HERE, AND NEVER THOUGHT WELL ENOUGH OF THE UNITED STATES TO BECOME A CITIZEN.

"AND HIGH ON THE LIST, OF COURSE, MUST GO THE MARCH OF TIME AND THE MEN WHO CONTROL THAT, CHIEFLY MR.HENRY LUCE, WHO DOMINATES THAT AND A GROUP OF PUBLICATIONS WHICH ARE PLUGGING NOT MERELY FOR AMERICAN ENTRY INTO THE WAR, BUT FOR AMERICAN ABDICATION OF HER INDEPENDENCE TO FORM A UNION WITH GREAT BRITAIN."

CLARK DECLARED THAT WHILE A "HANDFUL" OF MEN WERE TURNING THE NATION'S 17,000 THEATERS INTO "17,000 DAILY AND NIGHTLY MASS MEETINGS FOR WAR," NON-INTERVENTIONISTS GOT NOT "A FOOT OF FILM OR A SYLLABLE OF SOUND ANYWHERE, ANY DAY IN ANY OF THE 17,000 THEATERS IN THIS COUNTRY."

IN HIS STATEMENT TO REPORTERS, WILLKIE CONTENDED THAT NEITHER CLARK OR NYE, WHO TESTIFIED YESTERDAY, HAD "PRESENTED AN IOTA OF EVIDENCE THAT WOULD STAND UP IN A COURT."

"ALL THEY HAVE SAID, IN EFFECT," HE ADDED, "IS THAT THEY OPPOSE THE UNITED STATES FOREIGN POLICY, AND THAT MEN WHO DISAGREE WITH THEM ARE NEITHER OF GOOD WILL NOR OF INTEGRITY. AND THAT SOME OF THE MEN WHO DISAGREE WITH THEM ARE THE EXECUTIVES OF THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY.

"INDIVIDUALS, UNDER THE CONSTITUTION, HAVE INALIENABLE RIGHTS OF PROTECTION. THE POWERS OF THE SENATE SHOULD NOT BE USED, AS SENATORS NYE AND CLARK ARE NOW USING THEM, TO DISSEMINATE UNSUBSTANTIATED GOSSIP. X X X

"THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY IS ANTI-NAZI AND FRIENDLY TO THE CAUSE OF LIBERTY. WE HAVE MADE NO PRETENSE ON THIS. BUT I CHALLENGE SENATOR NYE AND SENATOR CLARK TO POINT TO ANY INACCURACIES IN THE PICTURES ABOUT WHICH THEY COMPLAIN.

"THERE IS A BASIC ISSUE INVOLVED IN THIS HEARING, THE RIGHTS OF AN INDUSTRY TO FREEDOM OF EXPRESSION AND THE RIGHTS OF INDIVIDUALS TO THINK AS THEY PLEASE. THIS IS AS IMPORTANT AS ANYTHING IN OUR WAY OF LIFE.

SEP 11 1941

"I THINK THE TIME HAS COME TO END THE SPORT OF UNITED STATES SENATORS BADGERING AND THREATENING UNPROTECTED WITNESSES ON THE ONE HAND, AND REFUSING TO ALLOW THOSE WHO ARE BEING ACCUSED FROM HAVING A HEARING. U. S. NAVY TO 'SHOOT FIRST;' RAIDERS ENTER ATLANTIC AT 'OWN PERIL,' FDR WARNS AXIS

SEP 12

President Says U. S. Does Not Seek Shooting War, But Puts It Up to Axis

Declares Nation Will Protect Its Vessels "No Matter What It Costs"; Does Not Define Defense Waters, but Obviously Would Include Iceland, Bermuda, Caribbean, Panama Areas; Critics Call Address "Declaration of War"; Others Applaud It

Text of President Roosevelt's Address on Page SEP 12 1941

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11 (AP) — President Roosevelt firmly warned the Axis tonight that "no matter what it takes, no matter what it costs," German and Italian warships will be sunk on sight if they enter areas vital to American defense.

At the same time, delivering a world-wide address in reply to recent attacks on American shipping, the chief executive offered the protection of the United States Navy to any merchant vessel "of any flag" plying those waters. And, he asserted:

"No act of violence or intimidation will keep us from maintaining intact two bulwarks of defense: First our line of supply of materiel to the enemies of Hitler, and, second, the freedom of our shipping on the high seas."

The President, in solemn and earnest mood, spoke from the diplomatic reception room on the ground floor of the White House. Mrs. Roosevelt was with him, and a few aides.

Speaks Quietly

He spoke slowly, clearly and quietly, raising his voice only occasionally to emphasize such phrases as, when striking at foes of his foreign policy, he said that despite "what any American obstructionist organization may prefer to believe," the German submarine struck first in its skirmish last week with the destroyer Greer.

And, he chose to emphasize a statement that "we have sought no shooting war with Hitler," and "do not seek it now," but:

"Neither do we want peace so much that we are willing to pay for it by permitting him to attack our naval and merchant ships while they are on legitimate business."

Stephen Early, presidential secretary, had said earlier in the day that the speech would leave no questions unanswered. One, however, did remain. That was a definition of what areas of the sea were considered vital to American defense.

Obviously they were intended to include the North Atlantic as far as the American outpost in Iceland, and a little beyond. How much beyond was the question. Obviously, too, they would include the areas of approach to the Nation's outposts in Bermuda, in the Caribbean and in the Panama Canal area.

Sees Step Toward War

Congressional opponents of the President's policy were quick to declare that the country had gone a step nearer full-fledged war.

"Clearly," said Senator Nye (R-N. D.) "we are going to have convoys irrespective of law and irrespective of President Roosevelt's own promises and assurances. This means definitely that we are nearer to a shooting war by presidential proclamation."

Senator McCarran (D-Nev.) called it an "unauthorized declaration of war" and Senator Gillette (D-Iowa) "a declaration of war so far as it can be made by the executive branch alone."

But Chairman Connally (D-Tex.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said it was "an eloquent and clear exposition of the historical and traditional policy of the United States with regard to freedom of the seas." Majority Leader Barkley (D-Ky.) said "he has laid before the American people the problem that faces them and the method by which he proposes to deal with it. In my opinion, he could pursue no other course."

Mr. Roosevelt himself called his action purely a defensive one.

"We have not sought a shooting war with Hitler," the President said in a world-wide address. "But neither do we want peace so much that we are willing to pay for it by permitting him to attack our naval and merchant ships while they are on legitimate business."

"Let Warning Be Clear"

SEP 12 1941

And, he asserted:

"Let this warning be clear. From now on, if German or Italian vessels of war enter the waters, the protection of which is necessary for American defense, they do so at their own peril.

"The orders which I have given as commander-in-chief of the United States Army and Navy are to carry out that policy—at once."

Before making this historic announcement, the chief executive recounted, one after another, attacks upon American ships which led to his statement of policy—the U. S. S. Greer, the Robin Moor, the Steel Seafarer, the Sessa. And to these he added an incident at sea which had not hitherto been known to the public.

SEP 12 1941

"On July 4," he said, "an American battleship in North American waters was followed by a submarine which for a long time sought to maneuver itself into a position of attack.

"The periscope of the submarine was clearly seen. No British or American submarines were within hundreds of miles of this spot at the time, so the nationality of the submarine is clear."

Sees Nazi Scheme

These incidents, taken collectively, the President said, could only be regarded as part of a general Nazi design "to abolish the freedom of the seas, and to acquire absolute control and domination of the seas for themselves."

With that control in their hands, he said, the next step would be "domination of the United States and the Western Hemisphere by force," with no American vessel "free to carry on any peaceful commerce except by the condescending grace of this foreign and tyrannical power."

Although, Mr. Roosevelt continued, some like to regard the United States Navy as invincible, this was true only so long as the British Navy survives. With Britain gone, Hitler would be able to far outstrip the United States in building ships.

"It is time for all Americans of all the Americas," he added, "to stop being deluded by the romantic notion that the Americas can go on living happily and peacefully in a Nazi-dominated world."

Freedom of Seas

Then, he turned to the question of freedom of the seas, terming it a "basic and fundamental" policy for which generation after generation of Americans had battled.

"That has been our policy proved time and again, in all our history," he said.

"Our policy has applied from time immemorial — and still applies — not merely to the Atlantic but to the Pacific and to all the other oceans as well.

"Unrestricted submarine warfare in 1941 constitutes a defiance—an act of aggression — against that historic American policy.

"It is now clear that Hitler has begun his campaign to countrol the seas by ruthless force and by wiping out every vestige of international law and humanity.

"His intention has been made clear. The American people can no longer have any illusions about it. . . .

"We Americans are now face to face not with abstract theories but with cold ruthless facts. . . .

"There has now come a time when you and I must see the cold inexorable necessity of saying to these inhuman, unrestrained seekers of world conquest and permanent world domination by the sword:

"'You seek to throw our children and our children's children into your forms of terrorism and slavery. You have attacked our own safety. You shall go no further'."

Calls Subs "Rattlesnakes"

Calling Nazi submarines "the rattlesnakes of the Atlantic," he said it was clear that the time had come when the Americas themselves must be defended, because if submarines and raiders can attack in distant waters "they can attack equally well within sight of our own shores."

If attacks within our own waters or in waters which could be used for further and greater attacks upon us are continued, he argued, they "will inevitably weaken American ability to repel Hitlerism."

There was no sense in "splitting hairs," Mr. Roosevelt said, about whether American resistance should begin after the fifth attack or the 10th or the 20th.

"The time for active defense is now."

Nor, he continued, should there be hair-splitting on whether we should defend ourselves only "if the torpedo succeeds in getting home," or passengers and crew are drowned.

"This is the time for prevention of attack," the President said, and then added:

"In the waters which we deem necessary for our defense, American naval vessels and American planes will no longer wait until Axis submarines lurking under the water, or Axis raiders on the surface of the sea, strike their deadly blow — first.

"Upon our naval and air patrol — now operating in large numbers over a vast expanse of the Atlantic Ocean —falls the duty of maintaining the American policy of freedom of the seas—now.

"That means, very simply and clearly, that our patrolling vessels and planes will protect all merchant ships—not only American ships but ships of any flag—engaged in commerce in our defensive waters.

"They will protect them from submarines; they will protect them from surface raiders."

It was not "an act of war," he said, "when we decide to protect the seas which are vital to American defense," for "the aggression is not ours; ours is solely defense."

There followed his direct warning to Germany and Italy that if their vessels of war enter areas of the sea which this country considers vital to its protection, those ships of war do so at their own risk.

"That is my obvious duty in this crisis," he said. "That is the clear right of this sovereign Nation. That is the only step possible, if we would keep tight the wall of defense which we are pledged to maintain around this Western Hemisphere.

"I have no illusions about the gravity of this step. I have not taken it hurriedly or lightly. It is the result of months of constant thought and anxiety and prayer. In the protection of your Nation and mine it cannot be avoided. . . .

"And with the inner strength that comes to a free people conscious of their duty and of the righteousness of what they do, they (the American people) will—with divine help and guidance—stand their ground against this latest assault upon their democracy, their sovereignty and their freedom."

Wide Radio Hookup

Arrangements were made for all major networks to carry the speech, and for all available short wave transmitters to carry it about the earth in foreign translations—French, German, Spanish, Portuguese, Italian, Polish and Serbo-Croat among others.

A series of recent incidents at sea formed the background for the address.

Last Thursday, a German submarine fired torpedoes at the American destroyer Greer in the North Atlantic, some 300 miles southwest of Iceland. The Greer, unhit, replied with depth bombs, but the submarine apparently escaped. Mr. Roosevelt ordered the Navy to search for the U-boat and eliminate it.

Other Incidents

Then, it was announced that he would address the Nation on Monday night. On Sunday, the chief executive's mother, Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, died, and the speech was postponed until tonight. In the interim, further incidents at sea were reported.

The Navy picked up three survivors of an American-owned steamship, the Sessa, formerly Danish, who said she was torpedoed, shelled and sunk without notice on Aug. 17. Twenty-four of her crew were presumed lost. The Sessa flew the Panamanian flag.

The American flagship, Steel Seafarer, was bombed and sunk in the Red Sea by an unidentified plane on Sept. 5.

Apparently as a result of these further incidents, the President extended the length of the speech from 15 to 25 minutes. It was drafted at Hyde Park, N. Y., and was all but finished when the presidential party entrained yesterday to return to Washington.

The address, however, remained open to revision until the time of delivery, and last night, Mr. Roosevelt went over it with Secretary of State Hull, Secretary of War Stimson, and Secretary of the Navy Knox.

Sees Congress Leaders

Today he called in congressional leaders of both parties. His conferees, in addition to Connally were Vice-President Wallace, Senator Barkley, the Democratic floor leader; Senator McNary, the Republican floor leader; Rep. Woodrum (D-Va.), the acting majority leader; Rep. Martin (R-Mass.), the Republican floor leader, and Chairman Bloom (D-N. Y.) of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

In connection with the Greer incident, Senator Nye (R-N. D.), an opponent of the President's foreign policy, today proposed a secret congressional investigation, with officers and men of the destroyer and high government officials on the witness stand.

"Congress ought to be informed," he said, "about the circumstances of this encounter. It ought to know from an official source, also, the nature of the orders under which American vessels are proceeding in the Atlantic patrol."

Boundaries Of Defensive Waters Vague

SEP 12 1941

Seas Barred to Axis War Vessels Presumed to Extend From Iceland to South America

Washington, Sept. 11. — (AP.) — President Roosevelt, warning tonight that Axis vessels entering American defensive waters did so at their own peril, gave no definition of those waters.

He made entirely clear, however, that waters about all American Atlantic outposts were so considered.

It was generally presumed that defensive waters included, as a minimum, the vast Atlantic stretch from Iceland to the South American coast now being patrolled by American craft.

The presidential statement recalled to some Mr. Roosevelt's publicly-expressed attitude toward what is the Western Hemisphere.

At press conferences and in public addresses, the Chief Executive has left no doubt that he considers it futile to attempt to mark off a geographical line and to say that to cross it is an attack on this hemisphere.

Thus, he has made clear that assembly of a German force at Dakar on the African Coast, or any point useful as a springboard for attack, could only be regarded as an aggressive action against the Americas.

In the same way, many thought that the term defensive waters might prove, in practice, to be elastic and applicable to different waters as the necessity of time and circumstances might dictate.

Labrador an Outpost Of U.S., Sneech Shows

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11 (AP).—Mention by President Roosevelt tonight that the United States has an outpost in Labrador, as well as those in Iceland, Greenland and Newfoundland, was believed to be the first revelation of such an outpost.

The President did not amplify the statement.

In the historic deal by which the United States transferred fifty over-age destroyers to Great Britain, President Roosevelt said the nation acquired the right to establish naval and air bases in Newfoundland, Bermuda, the Bahamas, Jamaica, St. Lucia, Trinidad, Antigua and British Guiana. Outposts have also been established at Greenland and Iceland, but available sources tonight recalled no previous mention of a Labrador outpost.

300 Warships in Atlantic Get Roosevelt's Order

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11—The exact make-up of American naval forces in the Atlantic is a military secret.

Opinion in well-informed quarters, however, is that there are about 300 surface craft, great and small, as well as numerous aircraft to enforce President Roosevelt's policy of keeping American defensive waters free of Axis war craft.

It was noted that Mr. Roosevelt said that his instructions had been given to the Army and the Navy.

There was no elaboration of what might be the Army's part, but it was presumed this referred primarily to planes of the Air Force based on island outposts.

It is time for all Americans of all the Americas to stop being deluded by the romantic notion that the Americas can go on living happily and peacefully in a Nazi-dominated world.

Normal practices of diplomacy —note writing—are of no possible use in dealing with international outlaws who sink our ships and kill our citizens.

Washington, Sept. 11 (AP)—Here are some of the salient sentences from President Roosevelt's address tonight:

All Around The World

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 11—Powerful short-wave radio stations broadcast throughout the world tonight President Roosevelt's warning that the United States Navy had been ordered to shoot first any Axis warcraft found in areas considered vital to the country's defense.

SEP 12 1941

The National Broadcasting Company immediately began broadcasting the speech in Portuguese and Spanish, following later with German, Italian and French translations. It will be rebroadcast again tomorrow. The Columbia Broadcasting Company included Polish and Serb-Croatian in addition to the other languages in its broadcasts.

In Boston the World Wide Broadcasting Company prepared translations for broadcast in Norwegian, Dutch, Czech, Slovakian, Arabic, Greek, Turkish and Russian.

A Chinese translation was to be sent out on the air at San Francisco.

"Policy Obviously Means War," Says Peace Group Leader

New York, Sept. 11 (AP)—Mary W. Hillyer, executive director of the Keep America Out of War Congress, said tonight that if it were possible for a President to declar war, Mr. Roosevelt's instructions to United States armed forces "would constitute such an act."

"While the American people through Congress have approved the policy of aid to Britain," she declared, "they have given no sanction to the President's duly-announced policy of shooting our way through belligerent waters to get the supplies to Britain, since such a policy obviously means war."

How Congress Reacted To Speech

SEP 12 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 11—Capital reaction to President Roosevelt's address tonight ranged from the assertion of Senator McCarran (Dem., Nev.) that it was "nothing short of an unauthorized declaration of war" to the statement of Senator Thomas (Dem., Utah) that "driving pirates off or out of the seas is not war." Here are some of the comments:

WENDELL L. WILLKIE, 1940 Republican Presidential Nominee — "The President spoke as he should have spoken. He could not yield on such a fundamental right. This is the time for all Americans to rally to his support. No man can say whether this will involve the United States in war, but every thoughtful person knows that if the President were less firm disastrous war woulud be inevitable."

SENATOR NYE (Rep., N. D.)—"Clearly, we are going to have convoys irrespective of law and irrespective of President Roosevelt's own promises and assurances. This means definitely that we are nearer to a shooting war by Presidential proclamation. The President declares in eect that we shall defend our rights on such seas as are essential to our security, with the President reserving to himself alone the determination of which waters are thus essential, be they the Caribbean, Red or Black seas."

SENATOR BARKLEY (Ky.), Democratic Leader — "He has laid before the American people the problem that faces them and the method by which he proposes to deal with it. In my opinion, he could pursue no other course."

SENATOR MCNARY (Rep., Ore.), Republican Leader — "It was a candid statement on the part of the President of his purposes and policies, without any attempt to involve Congress."

SENATOR CONNALLY (Dem., Texas), Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee—"The address was an eloquent and clear exposition of the historical and traditional policy of the United States with regard to the freedom of the seas. . . . If our ships or our citizens are attacked we shall defend them. I hope our destroyers will shoot hard and straight."

REPRESENTATIVE PATRICK (Dem., Ala.) —"It was the only tenable position the President could take. To follow that action through is the logical way to hold what has been gained."

REPRESENTATIVE YOUNG (Dem., Ohio)—"Our commander-in-chief gave the nation a masterly appraisal of the danger of a Nazi-controlled world. His clarion call to defend our sovereignty will have approval of a united people."

REPRESENTATIVE MARTIN (Rep., Mass.) Republican Leader—"The President has told the country what his course of action will be in the event Axis shipsappear in certain sea zones. This means we move closer to the shooting."

REPRESENTATIVE BLOOM (Dem., N. Y.)—Chairman of the Foreign Avairs Committee—"President Roosevelt is on eternally solid ground when he declares that the American flag will be protected wherever it flies."

SENATOR GILLETTE (Dem., Iowa)—"The address of the President is a declaration of war so far as it can be made by the Executive branch alone. Every American citizen will support the commander in chief in any step he takes in foreign relations regardless of whether we approve or not. However, in my opinion, it would have been a preferable approach if the Executive had laid before the Congress a message citing the facts he had covered in the speech and had asked for the appropriate legislative action."

REPRESENTATIVE COCHRAN (Dem., Mo.), acting majority leader—"I don't think the American public could expect the President to do anything else."

SENATOR HILL (Dem., Ala.)—"All Americans can thank heaven that we have a President who has the courage and the wisdom to repel the assault by Hitler on the United States. The defense of our country demands such action."

REPRESENTATIVE MAY (Dem., Ky.)—"The President's speech was a fearless statement of sound American doctrine and ought to and will receive the support of the American people."

SENATOR O'MAHONEY (Dem., Wyo) praised the address as a "masterpiece of hard-headed Americanism." The Senator said he believed the President's words had the "wholehearted support of American people," and added that he thought the talk was "indicative of his desire to keep America out of a shooting war" but left the next move entirely up to Germany.

ALF M. LANDON, 1936 Republican Presidential Nominee and a Critic of the President's Foreign Policies—"I have had no illusions for many months that when you go looking for trouble you always find it."

ENGLAND PUTS COMMENT UP TO CHURCHILL

Everyone Else Declines To Discuss President Roosevelt's Speech

But Germans Attack Address Even Before It Is Delivered

SEP 12 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Friday, Sept. 12—The official British response to President Roosevelt's declaration for shooting Axis craft on sight in American defense waters was expected by authoritative sources today to come from Prime Minister Churchill.

These sources declined comment on the President's speech, saying it was of such import that the reaction must be left to a "person of equal standing"—Churchill—so far as the British are concerned.

The statement that United States warships would shoot to protect merchant ships of any flag in a large part of the Atlantic was believed to be just what the British were hoping the President would announce.

Churchill In Bed

The Prime Minister was in bed when the President started speaking—at 3 A. M. here—but he had made arrangements to hear rebroadcasts by the British Broadcasting Corporation later in the morning.

Late editions of the morning papers splashed the speech under the biggest captions carried in weeks. But the speech came too late for editorial comment.

The Daily Mail's front-page banner was "U. S. To Guard Our Ships," and the second line, "Roosevelt Warns Hitler 'Keep Out.'"

The Daily Herald carried a picture of the President at the microphone and printed the speech under the headline, "F. D. R. Orders 'Sink Nazis in U. S. Seas.'"

SEP 12 1941

"Sensational," One Paper Says

The Daily Express described the "shoot first" declaration as "sensational," and in the first editorial comment to appear said:

"Today is a big day for the democratic cause, a decisive day in the war.

"In advance of Roosevelt's speech the Germans feared the worst. They shouted abuse to keep up their courage. And as the first flashes of the President's speech reached this office early this morning the fears of the Germans proved to be justified."

Official Silence In Reich Greets Roosevelt Speech

Berlin, Friday, Sept. 12 (AP)—Official silence today met President Roosevelt's broadcast warning that Axis naval units and aircraft entering areas deemed vital to American security would risk destruction.

The speech lay on official German desks hours before the broadcast, but no spokesman would comment on it before or after its delivery.

German commentators in anticipation of the speech earlier had denounced the President, and Adolf Hitler's newspaper carried a red underscored headline: "Warmonger Roosevelt Needs Provocation Corpses."

"Feverish Search"

The article in the Völkischer Beobachter added that the President was "on a feverish search for possibilities of further friction."

Ordinarily, the controlled press waits twenty-four hours to react to public utterances abroad, because it takes that long for the higher-ups to lay down the guiding lines for comment, but this time the unofficial German view was that the tone of Mr. Roosevelt's speech had been suggested in advance by his previous speeches, together with recent statements of the American Government concerning torpedoed and bombed American ships.

"Propaganda Appeal"

The authoritative commentary Dienst Aus Deutschland, which sometimes expresses the views of the German Foreign Office, said:

"It did not go unobserved in Berlin with what propaganda appeal the reports of the sinking of United States freighters off Iceland and the Red Sea were given to the American public.

"From the German standpoint they appeared undoubtedly as an attempt to create the necessary atmosphere for an announced declaration of Roosevelt, inasmuch as such sought-for incidents are piled up in order to excite public opinion in the United States."

Cites Greer Case

Referring to the case of the U. S. Destroyer Greer (which the United States declares was attacked in Iceland waters by a German submarine) Dienst recalled Hitler's declaration that any ship coming within range of German guns within blockade zones would be subject to attack.

The German press was even more angry in reference to the United States government's approval of American nations' traveling homeward from Britain on belligerent ships.

The President, said the Lokal Anzeiger, "consciously puts American citizens in the position where they must jeopardize their lives and whereby one has to assume a great probability of many North Americans losing their lives. By their sacrifice the war monger of the White House wants to promote his policy of hatred."

Axis Answers Beforehand

Berlin, Sept. 11 (AP)—Late editions of Adolf Hitler's Völkischer Beobachter, dealing with President Roosevelt's speech hours in advance of its delivery tonight, carried the scarlet-underscored headline:

"Warmonger Roosevelt Needs Provocation Corpses."

Its story said the American President was "on a feverish search for possibilities of further friction."

SEP 12 1941

The authoritative commentary Dienst aus Deutschland, under the heading "Preparations for Roosevelt Address," cited the "wide publicity" given the sinking of American ships near Iceland and in the Red Sea as preparing public opinion for "what the President is going to say."

Rome, Sept. 11 (AP)—Virginio Gayda, a leading Fascist editorialist, predicted today a new American step toward war, citing what he called a publicity buildup for President Roosevelt's radio address tonight.

Writing in Il Giornale d'Italia, he said, "The American war patrol is heading toward some new fatal gesture that would satisfy the anxious requests of England and delude the Moscow Government on the efficiency of American aid. . . . Everything would seem to prove that American war-mongering is preparing to take a new step forward on the slippery slope toward the unknown."

The President's Address

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—The complete text of President Roosevelt's address tonight follows:

My fellow Americans:

The Navy Department of the United States has reported to me that on the morning of Sept. 4 the United States destroyer Greer, proceeding in full daylight towards Iceland, had reached a point southeast of Greenland. She was carrying American mail to Iceland. She was flying the American flag. Her identity as an American ship was unmistakable.

She was then and there attacked by a submarine. Germany admits that it was a German submarine. The submarine deliberately fired a torpedo at the Greer, followed later by another torpedo attack. In spite of what Hitler's propaganda bureau has invented, and in spite of what any American obstructionist organization may prefer to believe, I tell you the blunt fact that the German submarine fired first upon this American destroyer without warning, and with deliberate design to sink her.

Our destroyer, at the time, was in waters which the government of the United States had declared to be waters of self-defense—surrounding outposts of American protection in the Atlantic.

In the north, outposts have been established by us in Iceland, Greenland, Labrador and Newfoundland. Through these waters there pass many ships of many flags. They bear food and other supplies to civilians, and they bear materiel of war, for which the people of the United States are spending billions of dollars, and which, by Congressional action, they have declared to be essential for the defense of their own land.

"On Legitimate Mission"

The United States destroyer, when attacked, was proceeding on a legitimate mission.

If the destroyer was visible to the submarine when the torpedo was fired, then the attack was a deliberate attempt by the Nazis to sink a clearly identified American warship. On the other hand, if the submarine was beneath the surface and, with the aid of its listening devices, fired in the direction of the sound of the American destroyer without even taking the trouble to learn its identity—as the official German communique would indicate—then the attack was even more outrageous. For it indicates a policy of indiscriminate violence against any vessel sailing the seas—belligerent or non-belligerent.

This was piracy—legally and morally. It was not the first nor the last act of piracy which the Nazi government has committed against the American flag in this war. Attack has followed attack.

A few months ago an American-flag merchant ship, the Robin Moor, was sunk by a Nazi submarine in the middle of the South Atlantic, under circumstances violating long-established international law and every principle of humanity. The passengers and the crew were forced into open boats hundreds of miles from land, in direct violation of international agreements signed by the government of Germany. No apology, no allegation of mistake, no offer of reparations has come from the Nazi government.

In July, 1941, an American battleship in North American waters was followed by a submarine which for a long time sought to maneuver itself into a position of attack. The periscope of the submarine was clearly seen. No British or American submarines were within hundreds of miles of this spot at the time, so the nationality of the submarine is clear.

"Torpedoed Without Warning"

Five days ago a United States Navy ship on patrol picked up three survivors of an American-owned ship operating under the flag of our sister republic of Panama—the S. S. Sessa. On Aug. 17 she had been first torpedoed without warning, and then shelled, near Greenland, while carrying civilian supplies to Iceland. It is feared that the other members of her crew have been drowned. In view of the established presence of German submarines in this vicinity, there can be no reasonable doubt as to the identity of the attacker.

Five days ago another United States merchant ship, the Steel Seafarer, was sunk by a German aircraft in the Red Sea two hundred and twenty miles south of Suez. She was bound for an Egyptian port.

Four of the vessels sunk or attacked flew the American flag and were clearly identifiable. Two of these ships were warships of the American Navy. In the fifth case the vessel sunk clearly carried the flag of Panama.

In the face of all this, we Americans are keeping our feet on the ground. Our type of democratic civilization has outgrown the thought of feeling compelled to fight some other nation by reason of any single piratical attack on one of our ships. We are not becoming hysterical or losing our sense of proportion. Therefore, what I am thinking and saying does not relate to any isolated episode.

Instead, we Americans are taking a long-range point of view in regard to certain fundamentals and to a series of events on land and on sea which must be considered as a whole—as a part of a world pattern.

It would be unworthy of a great nation to exaggerate an isolated incident or to become inflamed by some one act of violence. But it would be inexcusable folly to minimize such incidents in the face of evidence which makes it clear that the incident is not isolated, but part of a general plan.

The important truth is that these acts of international lawlessness are a manifestation of a design which has been made clear to the American people for a long time. It is the Nazi design to abolish the freedom of the seas and to acquire absolute control and domination of the seas for themselves.

"Next Step Domination"

For with control of the seas in their own hands, the way can become clear for their next step—domination of the United States and the Western Hemisphere by force. Under Nazi control of the seas, no merchant ship of the United States or of any other American republic would be free to carry on any peaceful commerce, except by the condescending grace of this foreign and tyrannical power. The Atlantic Ocean, which has been, and which should always be, a free and friendly highway for us, would then become a deadly menace to the commerce of the United States, to the coasts of the United States, and to the inland cities of the United States.

The Hitler government, in defiance of the laws of the sea and of the recognized rights of all other nations, has presumed to declare, on paper, that great areas of the seas—even including a vast expanse lying in the Western Hemisphere—are to be closed, and that no ships may enter them for any purpose, except at peril of being sunk. Actually, they are sinking ships at will and without warning in widely separated areas both within and far outside of these far-flung pretended zones.

This Nazi attempt to seize control of the oceans is but a counterpart of the Nazi plots now being carried on throughout the Western Hemisphere—all designed toward the same end. For Hitler's advance guards—not only his avowed agents but also his dupes among us—have sought to make ready for him footholds and bridgeheads in the New World, to be used as soon as he has gained control of the oceans.

His intrigues, his plots, his machinations, his sabotage in this New World are all known to the government of the United States. Conspiracy has followed conspiracy.

Reviews Series of Plots

Last year a plot to seize the government of Uruguay was smashed by the prompt action of that country, which was supported in full by her American neighbors. A like plot was then hatching in Argentina, and that government has carefully and wisely blocked it at every point. More recently an endeavor was made to subvert the government of Bolivia. Within the last few weeks the discovery was made of secret air landing fields in Colombia, within easy range of the Panama Canal. I could multiply instances.

To be ultimately successful in world mastery, Hitler knows that he must get control of the seas. He must first destroy the bridge of ships which we are building across the Atlantic, over which we shall continue to roll the implements of war to help destroy him and all his works in the end. He must wipe out our patrol on sea and in the air. He must silence the British Navy.

It must be explained again and again to people who like to think of the United States Navy as an invincible protection, that this can be true only if the British Navy survives. That is simple arithmetic.

For, if the world outside the Americas falls under Axis domination, the shipbuilding facilities which the Axis powers would then possess in all of Europe, in the British Isles, and in the Far East would be much greater than all the shipbuilding facilities and potentialities of all the Americas—not only greater, but two or three times greater. Even if the United States threw all its resources into such a situation, seeking to double and even redouble the size of our Navy, the Axis powers, in control of the rest of the world, would have the manpower and the physical resources to outbuild us several times over.

'Time to Stop Being Deluded'

It is time for all Americans of all the Americas to stop being deluded by the romantic notion that the Americas can go on living happily and peacefully in a Nazi-dominated world.

Generation after generation, America has battled for the general policy of the freedom of the seas. That policy is a very simple one—but a basic, fundamental one. It means that no nation has the right to make the broad oceans of the world, at great distances from the actual theater of land war, unsafe for the commerce of others.

That has been our policy, proved time and time again, in all our history.

Our policy has applied from time immemorial—and still applies—not merely to the Atlantic but to the Pacific and to all other oceans as well.

'Act of Aggression'

Unrestricted submarine warfare in 1941 constitutes a defiance—an act of aggression—against that historic American policy.

It is now clear that Hitler has begun his campaign to control the seas by ruthless force and by wiping out every vestige of international law and humanity.

His intention has been made clear. The American people can have no further illusions about it.

No tender whisperings of appeasers that Hitler is not interested in the Western Hemisphere, no soporific lullabies that a wide ocean protects us from him—can long have any effect on the hard-headed, far-sighted and realistic American people.

Because of these episodes, because of the movements and operations of German warships, and because of the clear, repeated proof that the present government of Germany has no respect for treaties or for international law, that it has no decent attitude toward neutral nations or human life—we Americans are now face to face, not with abstract theories, but with cruel, relentless facts.

This attack on the Greer was no localized military operation in the north Atlantic. This was no mere episode in a struggle between two nations. This was one determined step toward creating a permanent world system based on force, terror and murder.

And I am sure that even now the Nazis are waiting to see whether the United States will by silence give them the green light to go ahead on this path of destruction.

The Nazi danger to our Western World has long ceased to be a mere possibility. The danger is here now—not only from a military enemy but from an enemy of all law, all liberty, all morality, all religion.

Time to Call a Halt

There has now come a time when you and I must see the cold inexorable necessity of saying to these inhuman, unrestrained seekers of world conquest and permanent world domination by the sword—"You seek to throw our children and our children's children into your form of terrorism and slavery. You have now attacked our own safety. You shall go no further."

Normal practices of diplomacy—note writing—are of no possible use in dealing with international outlaws who sink our ships and kill our citizens.

One peaceful nation after another has met disaster because each refused to look the Nazi danger squarely in the eye until it actually had them by the throat.

The United States will not make that fatal mistake.

No act of violence or intimidation will keep us from maintaining intact two bulwarks of defense: first, our line of supply of materiel to the enemies of Hitler, and second, the freedom of our shipping on the high seas.

'No Matter What It Costs'

No matter what it takes, no matter what it costs, we will keep open the line of legitimate commerce in these defensive waters.

We have sought no shooting war with Hitler. We do not seek it now. But neither do we want peace so much that we are willing to pay for it by permitting him to attack our naval and merchant ships while they are on legitimate business.

I assume that the German leaders are not deeply concerned by what we Americans say or publish about them. We cannot bring about the downfall of Nazism by the use of long-range invective.

But when you see a rattlesnake poised to strike, you do not wait until he has struck before you crush him.

These Nazi submarines and raiders are the rattlesnakes of the Atlantic. They are a menace to the free pathways of the high seas. They are a challenge to our sovereignty. They hammer at our most precious rights when they attack ships of the American flag—symbols of our independence, our freedom, our very life.

It is clear to all Americans that the time has come when the Americas themselves must now be defended. A continuation of attacks in our own waters, or in waters which could be used for further and greater attacks on us, will inevitably weaken American ability to repel Hitlerism.

Do not let us split hairs. Let us not ask ourselves whether the Americas should begin to defend themselves after the fifth attack, or the tenth attack, or the twentieth attack.

The time for active defense is now.

Do not let us split hairs. Let us not say—"We will only defend ourselves if the torpedo succeeds in getting home, or if the crew and the passengers are drowned."

This is the time for prevention of attack.

If submarines or raiders attack in distant waters, they can attack equally well within sight of our own shores. Their very presence in any waters which America deems vital to its defense constitutes an attack.

In the waters which we deem necessary for our defense, American naval vessels and American planes will no longer wait until Axis submarines lurking under the water, or Axis raiders on the surface of the sea, strike their deadly blow—first.

Upon our naval and air patrol—now operating in large number over a vast expanse of the Atlantic Ocean—falls the duty of maintaining the American policy of freedom of the seas—now. That means, very simply and clearly, that our patrolling vessels and planes will protect all merchant ships—not only American ships but ships of any flag—engaged in commerce in our defensive waters. They will protect them from submarines; they will protect them from surface raiders.

This situation is not new. The second President of the United States, John Adams, ordered the United States Navy to clean out European privateers and European ships of war which were infesting the Caribbean and South American waters, destroying American commerce.

The third President of the United States, Thomas Jefferson, ordered the United States Navy to end the attacks being made upon American ships by the corsairs of the nations of North Africa.

My obligation as President is historic; it is clear; it is inescapable.

'Defense, Not Aggression'

It is no act of war on our part when we decide to protect the seas which are vital to American defense. The aggression is not ours. Ours is solely defense.

But let this warning be clear. From now on, if German or Italian vessels of war enter the waters, the protection of which is necessary for American defense, they do so at their own peril.

The orders which I have given as commander in chief of the United States Army and Navy are to carry out that policy—at once.

The sole responsibility rests upon Germany. There will be no shooting unless Germany continues to seek it.

That is my obvious duty in this crisis. That is the clear right of this sovereign nation. That is the only step possible, if we would keep tight the wall of defense which we are pledged to maintain around this Western Hemisphere.

I have no illusions about the gravity of this step. I have not taken it hurriedly or lightly. It is the result of months and months of constant thought and anxiety and prayer. In the protection of your nation and mine it cannot be avoided.

The American people have faced other grave crises in their history—with American courage and American resolution. They will do no less today.

They know the actualities of the attacks upon us. They know the necessities of a bold defense against these attacks. They know that the times call for clear heads and fearless hearts.

And with that inner strength that comes to a free people conscious of their duty and of the righteousness of what they do, they will—with divine help and guidance—stand their ground against this latest assault upon their democracy, their sovereignty, and their freedom.

CLARK DEMANDS LOG OF THE GREER

Missourian Asks Senate to Request It of Navy.

SEP 12 1941

Washington, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—Senator Clark, Democrat, of Missouri, proposed in the Senate today that the Navy Department be required to furnish Congress witn the log of the United States destroyer Greer covering its encounter with a German submarine near Iceland a week ago.

Mr. Clark introduced a resolution of this nature immediately after the Senate had referred to its Naval Committee a proposal by Senator Nye, Republican, of North Dakota, for a senatorial investigation of the incident.

Asserting that "a great many of us are unwilling to accept the statements of the propaganda bureau of the Navy Department," Senator Clark said he thought the Greer's log would furnish "the very best evidence" of what happened when the submarine fired torpedoes and the destroyer dropped depth charges.

He said he had been informed by the Navy that while it had been publicly stated that the Greer's encounter with the submarine took place on September 4, the events of the two preceding and subsequent days were military secrets which could not be disclosed.

[The Navy Department announced that the Greer was attacked first by the submarine. Berlin contended that the Greer was the aggressor.]

Senator Nye's resolution said that "numerous groups in America, many of them high public officials, have been calling on the navy to shoot first on the Atlantic."

"This and similar incidents," the Nye proposal said, "might well bring about a situation resulting in actual warfare, either declared or undeclared, against the Axis Powers with consequent great loss of life and staggering debt to the nation."

Thousands In Foreign Countries Must Return By Oct. 14

By Lloyd Lehrbas

Washington, Sept. 11. (AP)—Several thousand naturalized Americans who have lived in foreign countries beyond the time limit permitted by the Nationality Act of 1940 will lose their American citizenship unless they return to the United States by October 14 .

Officials said today that the new law becomes effective on that date and any naturalized Americans outside American territory—unless they are within categories excepted by the act—will automatically forfeit their citizenship.

They said that all of the absent Americans have been warned through United States consulates in European and Asiatic countries of the law's provisions and the consequences of its violation.

Some naturalized Americans, desirous of returning to this country, have been stranded in belligerent territory or other areas which they have been unable to leave, because of war-disrupted transportation facilities.

Arranging For Transportation

The State Department, which has arranged for the return of more than 50,000 Americans since the start of the war, is now intensifying efforts to arrange for their transportation home before October 14.

In that category, officials said, are between 75 and 100 naturalized Americans living in the British isles. Until the State Department announced a new policy yesterday, they had been unable to secure maritime transportation back to the United States since American ships are barred from navigating belligerent waters.

Secretary Hull has explained that a major reason for permitting Americans in the British Isles to take passage on foreign vessels was to enable them to save their citizenship.

The Neutrality Act prohibits Americans from traveling on belligerent vessels "except in accordance with such rules and regulations as may be prescribed" by the Secretary of State acting under authority from the President.

Under the emergency rule Americans living in the British Isles who can show urgent need to return to this country may secure visas from American consular officers there to sail at their own risk on British, Norwegian, Dutch or other vessels sailing from British ports.

Many Have Lost Lives

Although heretofore only a very small number of exceptions have been granted, between 50 and 60 Americans have lost their lives when the foreign ships on which they were traveling were sunk by German submarines, planes or mines. Twenty-eight Americans died in the sinking of the British liner Athenia, lost September 3, 1939.

SEP 12 1941

The Nationality Act of 1940 provides that a naturalized American shall lose his citizenship by:

1. Residing for at least two years in the country where he was born, or of which he was formerly a national, if he acquires through such residence the nationality of that state.

2. Residing continuously for three years in the country of his birth or of which he was formerly a national, except as exempted by specific provisions of the law.

3. Residing continuously for five years in any other foreign state, except as exempted by the law.

Those exempted from the time limit on residence in foreign countries include:

Persons employed by or under the orders of the United States government.

Persons receiving compensation from the United States Government and residing abroad on account of disability incurred in its service.

Persons who resided in the United States not less than 25 years subsequent to naturalization and who were 65 years old when foreign residence was established.

Education, Religious Exemptions

Residents abroad representing a bona fide American educational, scientific, philanthropic, religious, commercial, financial, or business organization having its principal office in the United States, or paid representatives of an international agency of an official character in which the United States participates.

Persons residing abroad on account of ill health.

Persons residing abroad to pursue studies of a specialized character or attending an institution of learning (above that of a preparatory school) for a period not exceeding five years.

Wife, husband, or child under 21, residing abroad with an American citizen who is exempt from the law's provisions.

A person born in the United States or its possessions, originally of American nationality, and who, after having lost such nationality by marriage, reacquired American citizenship.

London, Sept. 11. (AP) — The United States embassy said today inquiries had poured into the consulate from American citizens desiring to return to the United States even though they must go back by belligerent boat.

The consulate estimated these numbered several hundred.

First making application were naturalized citizens many of whom were threatened with the possibility of losing their American citizenship unless they return to the United States by October 14.

BERLIN ASSAILS NEW U. S. POLICY ON SEA TRAVEL

Safety Of Americans On Belligerent Ships Not Guaranteed

Berlin, Sept. 11. (AP) — The United States' decision that American nationals may return from England on belligerents' ships was interpreted by authorized German sources today as a "direct result of efforts to create possibilities for incidents."

Germany, it was asserted, cannot guarantee the safety of American passengers traveling on belligerent ships because the areas around Britain not only are subject to air and submarine attack but also are heavily mined.

Panama to Close Its Consulates

SEP 12 1941

Complies With Nazi Request; to Probe Sinking

PANAMA, Panama, Sept. 11 (AP)—Panama today complied with Germany's request that its consulates in Nazi-held territories be closed, and also ordered an investigation of the recent sinking of the American-owned freighter Sessa flying the Panama flag in North Atlantic waters.

A reliable source indicated Panama would retaliate shortly by ordering the closure of all German consulates in this country.

Panama's ambassador to Washington was instructed to investigate the case of the Sessa but observers did not expect strong government action in the matter. Should it develop that a German submarine attacked the vessel "outside the belligerent zone," it was indicated a formal Panamanian protest would be made.

But observers recalled a government decree last February which read:

"The Government of Panama does not assume responsibility for risks incurred or damage received by vessels of the Panamanian flag engaged in unneutral activities whether in European war zones or generally in belligerent waters and establishes that responsibility shall fall only on the persons or entities assuming them."

SAYS U-BOAT SANK ICELANDIC VESSEL

Official Reports 1,215-Ton Hekla Was Attacked by Submarine Late in June

14 OF CREW LOST, 6 SAVED

Ship Said to Have Been Bound for Canada—Survivors on Raft 10½ Days

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11 (AP)—V. Thor, chairman of the Icelandic Government Trade Commission, said today that the 1,215-ton Icelandic vessel Hekla was sunk in late June by a submarine while en route from Iceland to Canada.

Mr. Thor said that the vessel was torpedoed and that fourteen members of the crew were lost, while six survivors were picked up by a British warship.

He thought the sinking took place June 29. United States armed forces did not occupy Iceland until July 7.

Mr. Thor said that the Berlin radio announcement picked up by the National Broadcasting Company's listening post in New York was the first positive information that the vessel was sunk by a German submarine.

The vessel was Icelandic-owned and flying the Icelandic flag, Mr. Thor said.

He added that the Hekla was normally engaged in trade between Iceland and England, Canada and the United States before the war and on its last voyage was in ballast, bound for a Canadian port.

The Hekla was the second Icelandic vessel to be lost since the start of the war.

An Icelandic fishing trawler was machine-gunned, then shelled and sunk by a submarine, presumably German, in April.

The Hekla was not one of the former Danish vessels taken over by the Maritime Commission, and no Americans were among the crew.

The State Department said it had received word of the sinking but had no official information.

[The Berlin radio announcement, to which Mr. Thor referred, said that the Hekla was sunk while en route to the United States. The announcement as heard by the N. B. C. listening post in New York gave no further details except that fourteen men of the crew were lost.]

With Icelandic colors painted plainly on her sides, the Hekla was torpedoed without warning in broad daylight and sunk in two or three minutes, Thor Thors, Iceland Consul General in New York, said here yesterday.

She left Reykjavik on June 27, he reported, and was sunk two days later about 500 miles southwest of Iceland. The survivors spent 10½ days on a raft before being rescued by the warship which took them to St. John's, Nfld.

Nazis Report Icelandic Vessel Sunk, 14 Men Lost

New York, Sept. 11 (AP)—The Berlin radio reported today that the 1,215-ton Icelandic vessel Hekla was sunk while en route to the United States and that 14 men of her crew were lost, according to the NBC listening post.

No further details were given in the first report.

It was received following the U. S. State Department's publication yesterday of details of the sinking of another vessel on the Iceland route, the American-owned, Panamanian-registered Sessa.

This ship was torpedoed and sunk without warning Aug. 17, 300 miles from Reykjavik, Iceland, while en route to New York.

The Hekla is a 225-foot ship registered out of Reykjavik.

Great Losses Inflicted On German Tank Forces, Moscow Reports

Many Machines, 2,500 Men Part In One Battle, Soviet Asserts

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Friday, Sept. 12—Red soldiers, forging ahead through the center of the German lines at a reported rate of seven to ten miles daily, today claimed to have inflicted heavy losses on the Forty-seventh German Tank Corps, wiping out several armored salients.

The Russians employed the Germans' own tactics against the invaders, it was reported, closing in with a pincers movement around tank wedges, cutting them off from the infantry and destroying them unit by unit.

2,500 Casualties Claimed

In a single encounter, the Russians said, a Red army tank unit destroyed 9 tanks, 32 guns, 2,500 officers and men and routed the staffs of two regiments.

The successes in the center were reported as Soviet defenders of Leningrad jabbed back at the Germans in a series of counter-attacks and Red airmen and German dive bombers engaged in constant day and night air battles on the fringes of Russia's second city.

Great Losses Near Kiev

To the south, in the heavy fighting for the Ukraine capital, Kiev, the Germans were said to have lost 30,000 dead and wounded in fifty days.

The counter-attacks of Marshall Semeon Timoshenko's western armies were reported spreading.

A dispatch to Red Star, the army newspaper, said the seven-to-ten-mile daily pace was being maintained in the pursuit of the Germans toward Smolensk.

Nazi Retreat Forced

The increasingly strenuous Red army push was said to have forced the Germans to retreat in sectors where they had dug in, apparently intending to hold the center while attacking Leningrad, Kiev and Odessa on the flanks.

Dispatches said the counter-drive had thrown the Germans back as much as twelve miles in twenty-four hours at some points.

Naval pilots of the Baltic fleet were said to have joined the Leningrad air fights. Germans thus far have tried to raid Leningrad 123 times. The raids reached the city itself for the first time Tuesday.

"Carpeted With Nazi Dead"

Approaches to both Leningrad and Kiev were said to be carpeted with German dead.

Front-line dispatches pictured Red troops as holding the initiative along a front of some 400 miles, from Gomel north to Yelnya and thence to Velikie Luki.

The Russians claimed the railway connection with Leningrad still was unbroken and said there was no confirmation of the reported German capture of Schlusselburg east of that city on Lake Ladoga.

Fighting In Far North

In the far north the Russians reported repulsing a German-Finnish attempt to cut the Leningrad-Murmansk railroad, and said fierce fighting continued in defense of Murmansk.

Although the official communique Thursday said merely that stubborn fighting was continuing, this picture of the war was given in dispatches received during the day by the army newspaper Red Star and by Tass, the official news agency.

Central Front

Tanks which crossed River "N" Wednesday and advanced six miles have pushed forward another twelve miles and captured ten towns. The Gomel, Yelnya and Smolensk counter-attacks continue.

A Red army attack against the village of Starina, on the west bank of the upper Dvina, 135 miles northwest of Yelnya, has frustrated a German attempt to cross. Large forces concentrated at Starina and near-by Zapadnaya Dvina were forced to withdraw.

340 Tanks Claimed

Russians captured, killed and wounded 12,000 German officers and men, destroyed 340 tanks and armored cars and 140 cannon in fierce fighting at Velikie Luki, sixty miles northwest of Starina.

Leningrad—Russian defenders in five days of counter-attacks closed in on the German-occupied village of "Y." The numerically superior Germans attempted a counter-drive with artillery and plane support, but were repulsed.

Central front — tanks which crossed River "N" yesterday and advanced six miles have pushed forward another 12 miles and captured ten towns. The Gomel, Yelnya and Smolensk counter-attacks continue.

A Red Army attack against the village of Starina, on the west bank of the upper Dvina 135 miles northwest of Yelnya, has frustrated a German attempt to cross. Large forces concentrated at Starina and nearby Zapadnaya Dvina were forced to withdraw.

Russians captured, killed and wounded 12,000 German officers and men, destroyed 340 tanks and armored cars and 140 cannon in fierce fighting at Velikie Luki, 60 miles northwest of Starina.

Leningrad — Russian defenders in five days of counter-attack closed in on the German-occupied village of "Y." The numerically superior Germans attempted a counterdrive with artillery and plane support but were repulsed.

Kiev — Russians working under the fire of German guns have surrounded Kiev with an unbroken series of fortifications, anti-tank obstacles, trenches and artillery emplacements. In 50 days of fightitng at Kiev the Germans have lost 30,000 dead and wounded and hundreds of planes and tanks.

Odessa—A "considerable part" of the Rumanian force which Gen. Ion Antonescu hurled against Odessa has been annihilated. This force was one-half of Antonescu's Army.

Northern front — Russians advancing in the area between Lake Ladoga and Lake Onega are driving German-Finnish troops back toward the Soviet-Finnish frontier. The Russians recaptured point "D" and destroyed an infantry battalion.

The Communist party newspaper Pravda issued a call for defenders of Leningrad, Kiev and Odessa to hold every inch of Soviet soil they now occupy.

"Exterminate the Nazis in every town and village," Pravda urged. "Exterminate them on land and water and in the air. Defend every street and every house. Many Fascist divisions already have been destroyed at the approaches to Leningrad, Kiev and Odessa. A similar fate awaits the entire Fascist horde."

Pravda compared the three cities with Verdun in the World War, where the Germans lost hundreds of thousands in a futile attempt to capture the French fortress. Verdun undermined the strength of the German Army," Pravda said. "Not one but many Verduns are already mincing the frenzied Fascist hordes."

Other ships arriving here had told of having been pursued by a raider along the route of the Kota Nopan and recently a report said that a vessel with a rubber cargo bound for the United States had been sunk by a raider.

The Kota Nopan, which had a crew of forty-eight and accommodations for twelve passengers, was said to be carrying rubber, tin and palm oil to the United States. The fate of her crew and any passengers she had at the time of her departure from Batavia were not known here.

CITY HOLDS OFF INVADERS

Nazi Raider Sinks Ship West Of Canal Zone

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 11—A German raider operating in the Pacific Ocean about 1,000 miles west of the Panama Canal has sunk the 7,322-ton Dutch motorship Kota Nopan and threatened other vessels, shipping sources said today.

Close on the heels of an announcement that she was long overdue at the canal on a voyage to New York from Batvia, in the East Indies, and presumed lost due to enemy action, came confirmation of the Kota Nopan's sinking, placing the action in the general locale of the Galapagos Islands.

Germans Drop Leaflets Offering Residents a Chance to Save Homes From Destruction.

Moscow, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—The Red Army declared today that its counter-attacks had pushed as deep as twelve miles into German lines on the central front and repulsed a German-Finnish attempt to cut the Leningrad-Murmansk Railroad in the north.

Red Star, the army newspaper, said the defenders of Leningrad also had taken the initiative on the approaches to the northern city and had closed in on a German-occupied point from three sides. The point was identified only as village "Y" where, the report said, the Russians have been attacking for five days. The Russians held the village yesterday against an attempted counter-attack with numerically superior forces supported by planes and artillery, it was said.

Battles continued also outside Russia's two other beleaguered cities—Kiev, the Ukraine capital, and Odessa, the big Black Sea port.

Fifty days of fighting in front of Kiev has cost the Germans 30,000 dead and wounded and hundreds of planes, tanks and guns, Red Star estimated. It said the Germans at first tried to storm the city, relying on an enormous concentration of forces to take it with one sweeping blow but the frontal assault failed.

Kiev Surrounded.

Kiev now is surrounded by a "steel ring" of fortifications and anti-tank obstacles and has unbroken circles of artillery fire and trenches manned by Red Army and civilian soldiers of the People's army, the newspaper said.

The Germans and Finns were reported resisting fiercely on the north, but the dispatch said they were being driven back to the west with heavy losses.

Russian counter-attacks, Red Star declared, have pushed the line back toward the Russian-Finnish frontier in the Kesteng sector on the shores of a Karelian Isthmus lake. It said the Russians retook one position, destroying an opposing infantry battalion and taking considerable booty, including radio-transmitting apparatus.

[This apparently is in the region of the Svir River where the Leningrad-Murmansk rail line curves westward to parallel the Stalin canal system. The Germans have reported both the railroad and the canal cut in the encirclement of Leningrad.]

The advances on the central front were claimed on the sector where the Russians said three wedges had been thrust into the German lines to relieve pressure on the Red Army's flanks.

By last night, one report said, Russian forces under Commander Eremenko had regained ten villages and had driven forward roughly ten to twelve miles, overcoming stubborn German resistance with the help of the Russian air force in the central sector.

SEP 12 1941

Air Support Described

Soviet bombers, the army newspaper, Red Star, said, "do not allow Fascist troops a moment's respite, dropping tons of metal on their heads continuously, destroying tank columns and exterminating the enemy's manpower."

The Red army said it had frustrated a German attempt to cross the upper Dvina river at the town of Zapadnaya Dvina and had driven the invaders not only from the town but also from nearb, Starina in a determined counter-attack.

More than 700 Germans killed and a large amount of armament were left on the battlefield, it said.

Deep Front Indicated

This dispatch, coupled with a Tass report of fierce fighting in the Velikie Luki area, indicated an active front of considerable depth about 300 miles west of Moscow. Velikie Luki is deep behind the farthest German penetration and about sixty miles northwest of Zapadnaya Dvina.

In recent fighting, Tass said, Soviet troops have captured, killed and wounded more than 12,000 German officers and men and have destroyed 340 tanks and armored cars, 140 guns, 400 trucks.

Forty-seven German planes have been shot down, it said.

Termed Axis Graveyard

An editorial in Pravda, the Communist party organ, declared the tenacious defense of Leningrad, Kiev and Odessa was making their approaches an Axis graveyard. It compared those cities with Verdun in the World War, where the Germans sent hundreds of thousands of soldiers against the never-captured French fortress which Pravda called a "mincing machine."

"Verdun undermined the strength of the German army," said the editorial. "Not one but many Verduns are already mincing the frenzied Fascist hordes."

It declared that Rumanian Generalissimo Ion Antonescu already had hurled half his army against Odessa and "a considerable part of it has been annihilated."

[A British radio report heard by NBC in New York quoted Russian sources as saying the German 95th and 97th divisions had been hard hit in fighting around Kiev and that Rumanian forces had met disaster outside Odessa.]

More than 300 German planes, it said, lie scattered around Leningrad.

Prisoners, a communique reported, said epidemics of influenza and dysentery had struck among the invaders, "wearied and exhausted by the sustained fighting."

Official midday and early morning communiques repeated the familiar, "Our troops continued to fight stubbornly against the enemy along the entire front."

Pursuit Reported Continued

Dispatches to Moscow reported continued pursuit westward of German troops defeated in the twenty-six-day battle of Yelnya, the Soviet crossing of a river identified only as "N" in the same battle-torn region and routing of the Twenty-ninth German Infantry Division in the Gomel area, 170 miles south of Smolensk.

Red Army defenders of Leningrad, Kiev and Odessa are standing firm, dispatches said. The Soviet information bureau said thirty-one German planes were downed Tuesday in the Leningrad area, although some bombers went through at high altitudes and "several fires broke out in dwelling houses."

SEP 12 1941

Kiev Schools Operated

Kiev dispatches said all schools in that Ukrainian capital were open, theaters were crowded, sixty per cent of the provincial wheat crop was stored and sowing of winter grain had begun.

There was other evidence of the tenacity of Soviet purpose. Red army military schools maintained their courses despite war conditions, to turn out thousands of shaven-headed young officers to reinforce the front. Soviet plane scattered 20,000,000 propaganda leaflets at the rear of the German lines.

Three out of ten Italian planes fighting their first air battle since arrival on the Russian front were reported to have been shot down yesterday in the lower Dnieper river area.

75,000 Casualties Claimed

War correspondents said German units routed in the battle of Yelnya

30.24 — 11753

30.24 - 11753

with a loss of 75,000 to 80,000 men in dead and wounded were in flight toward Smolensk, forty miles away.

Thousands of German dead were declared to have been left on the battlefield in the defeat of Adolf Hitler's Twenty-ninth Infantry Division near Gomel.

In the German retreat at the river "N" after a five-day tank battle, it was said, almost 4,000 Germans drowned and the survivors lost 238 tanks, 50 planes, 486 trucks and other material. Russian infantrymen reported that they had pursued the Nazis six miles beyond the stream in large-scale operations.

NAZIS SCOFF AT CLAIMS OF RED VICTORIES

Fires Raging in Leningrad, German Spokesman Asserts

SEP 13 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 11—Scoffing at Russian claims of successful counter-attacks on the central front, German military spokesmen tonight concentrated on besieged Leningrad, declaring that fires set by bombs and shells were raging in many sections of that old northern capital.

No general conflagration has yet been set, they said, in the hope that the Russians will "think it over" and decide to surrender the city before it is destroyed.

Pamphlets urging the citizens to make that decision were dropped today, along with bombs.

"No Fear Of Winter"

There was no intimation when this avowed policy would change, Germans stating, "the time of Leningrad's capture will be determined by Germany and by no one else."

A military spokesman raised the question of winter weather, saying the Germany army "does not fear winter," having made thorough preparations for that eventuality.

In any event, he said, it is safe to count on two months of good fighting weather in the north and more in the south, and "the most important decisions will fall before blizzards hamper operations."

Wide Successes Claimed

All along the front, offensive operations were declared to be proceeding successfully.

Replying to reports abroad of Russian successes in the Smolensk and Gomel regions in the center, the spokesman declared the fighting front was about 70 kilometers (43½ miles) east of Smolensk, with Gomel even deeper behind the German lines.

Other German sources acknowledged that at one point a Russian tank thrust broke into the German lines, but said the Reds were repelled with the loss of 63 out of a 100 tanks at one point and that 3,700 attackers were captured at another. The Russian counter-attacks were described as "bold," however.

2,000 Captives Reported

In one village north of Kiev the Russians fought for each house, but were reported defeated, with 2,000 captured and 60 of their guns, 90 machine guns and many motor vehicles seized.

Reports from the southernmost sector indicated the German air force again was concentrating on railways, claiming derailment of numerous trains.

Other reports claimed that dive bombers had smashed a Russian submarine base on the Black Sea, destroyed a number of submarines and sunk a 10,000-ton steamer which was trying to leave Odessa. Location of the base was not disclosed.

25 Ships Reported Involved

German flyers said they hurled their bombs with devastating effect among about twenty-five ships at the base.

"One stick struck near three subs," a flyer said. "They were literally torn to bits."

A submarine mother ship also was reported destroyed and oil depots burned.

Leningrad Bombarded With Nazi Pamphlets Urging Surrender

SEP 13 1941

Might Is Withheld to Give Citizens Chance to Yield Peacefully, Germans Say

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 11.—German planes showered Leningrad today with pamphlets urging its civilians not to defend the city, and Germans said the Russians must decide whether Leningrad is to be taken as a fairly intact city or as a heap of debris.

An authorized commentator said the Germans were in a position to inflict much heavier punishment on Leningrad but were withholding their full might to give its citizens a chance to reconsider defense tactics.

The pamphlets, he said, emphasized that if civilians resist, the German army must regard them as enemies and act accordingly. They warned that if a civilian house-to-house defense were attempted, Leningrad would be subjected to a more general bombardment.

Decision Up to Inhabitants.

Shells and air bombs up to now have been concentrated on food and munitions stores and other facilities to enable the city to withstand siege, it was asserted, with electricity and transport serves marked out first for demolition.

The commentator declared it was hoped that would be enough to soften Leningrad, but the decision lay with its inhabitants. Smoke already is visible at considerable distances from the city, he said, but there is no general conflagration.

German sources acknowledged that at one point on the Russian front tank-supported Soviet forces broke into the German lines, but said they were repelled.

Dispatches reported destruction of 68 of 100 attacking Red Army tanks on "one sector of the eastern front" yesterday and said a two-day battle at another point had ended with the Russians losing 3,700 men in prisoners as well as heavily in killed and wounded.

"Important Locality" Taken.

Other reports said Germans had captured an important locality in heavy fighting yesterday north of Kiev, taking 2,000 prisoners and seizing 60 cannon, 90 machine guns and large numbers of motor vehicles, horses and munitions.

German news dispatches said tonight that dive bombers had smashed a Russian submarine base on the Black Sea, destroyed a number of submarines and sunk a 10,000-ton steamship which was trying to leave Odessa. Location of the base was not disclosed. German flyers said they hurled their bombs with devastating effect among about twenty-five ships at the base.

"One stick struck near three subs," a flyer said. "They were literally torn to bits."

A submarine mother-ship also was reported destroyed and oil depots burned.

In the middle sector the Germans annihilated one Soviet "combat group," the news agency D.N.B. said, and in mopping up an encircled area captured more than 2,000 prisoners. In all, it said, the Russians lost 23 tanks on that front.

The agency claimed capture of an undisclosed town on the central front after driving the Russians back house by house. While infantry was storming the town, it said, a motorized detachment encircled it and captured Red Army staff officers.

The Russians, the news agency said, sent blazing oil tankers down the Dnieper River in the Ukraine to fire a bridge, but failed.

These terse dispatches provided the only elucidation to a terse comment on the eastern front contained in today's high command communique: "In the east, offensive operations continue successfully."

Waterworks Damaged.

Luftwaffe dive-bombers were reported in German dispatches to have destroyed a number of Leningrad's field fortifications and effectively damaged the city waterworks in support of ground siege operations.

Several Soviet anti-aircraft guns and artillery batteries of the Leningrad defense system were silenced in the aerial attacks, war correspondents said.

Military commentators said damaging of water distribution facilities was intended to hamper fire-fighting work in the oft-bombed former czarist capital as well as to restrict the supply for other services among the defenders.

However, supporting a possibility that the Germans might rely on bombers and long-range guns to the exclusion of direct assault, the commentators said the day and hour of the city's fall was a matter of secondary importance. Red-hot defense was acknowledged.

D.N.B. said a tank-supported Russian attack on German positions throughout Monday and Tuesday on the central front 37 miles northeast of Smolensk had been broken "with bloody losses" among the Red Army units.

(Russian war correspondents said the Red Army had driven three wedges into the German lines on the central front. A German panzer spearhead once was reported operating as far east as Vyazma, 90 miles northeast of Smolensk.)

Fleeing Barges Sunk.

The bomb sinking of several barges laden with fleeing Russian soldiers was reported in military dispatches from an unidentified sector. Troop concentrations and railway lines also were strafed, the accounts said.

The newspaper Boersen Zeitung spoke of "assault troop successes on the far side of the lower Dnieper."

A German infantry captain in the last half of August, the newspaper said, led assault detachments across the wide stream and captured 164 prisoners without losing a man. The newspaper carried no more recent references to that embattled zone.

New Offensive Reported.

London, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—Authoritative spokesmen said today that there were indications that the Germans had launched an attack in the Murmansk area in northern Russia, presumably from the west.

FINNS REOPENING KARELIAN RAILWAY

Helsinki, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—A large network of railroads in territory recaptured from Russia will be opened tomorrow by the Finnish Railroad Administration. The roads from here to Viipuri and Sortavala are under repair and rails imported from Sweden are being used to facilitate the restoration of service, it was said.

Finns said that with the resumption of railway operations a resettlement of the Karelian Isthmus was expected to develop into boom proportions.

SOVIET GETS PLANES

Hundreds of British Craft Reported Sent.

London, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—Hundreds of British fighter planes are being sent to Russia and many already have arrived, it was stated officially today.

Presumably the planes are being flown to the U. S. S. R., via the Near East, across Iran.

Two Finn Athletes Killed

Ex-Champion Skier and Shotputter Are Victims at Karelian Front

HELSINKI, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—Two of Finland's outstanding athletes, Kalle Jalkanen, skier, and Kalle Jarvinen, shotputter, were killed in action on the Karelian Isthmus Sept. 5, it was announced today.

Jalkanen, former world champion cross-country skier, scored a notable victory in the 1936 Olympics when he came from behind in anchor position to beat Norway in the forty-kilometer relay race.

Jarvinen was the oldest of three athletic brothers. His best known brother is Matti, who hurled the javelin 251 feet, six inches, in 1934 for a world record. In the 1936 Olympics Matti Jarvinen walked away with the championship. The other Jarvinen is Akilles, who finished second in the 1936 Olympic decathlon. Their father, Werner, was Finland's first Olympic performer of note.

REDS ACCUSE BULGARIA OF HOSTILE ACTS

Full-Scale Bases For Axis Land, Sea, Air Attacks Reported Set Up

Swift And Stern Soviet Reprisals Intimated By Foreign Office

SEP 12 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Sept. 11—Soviet Russia formally accused Bulgaria tonight of acting as a full-scale base for German-Italian land, sea and air attacks on the Soviet Union and strongly intimated that Red reprisals would be swift and stern.

Bulgaria herself is preparing to participate in the attacks, Soviet Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov declared in a long statement handed to the Bulgarian Minister in Moscow and broadcast on the Moscow radio.

The Crimea, the Caucasus and Odessa are the main objectives of the Axis forces concentrating in Bulgaria, Molotov charged.

Warnings Recalled

Long before the German attack on Russia, he said, Bulgaria had evinced lack of loyalty and friendship for Russia, her long-time friend, and had been warned repeatedly as far back as last January.

This was even before Bulgaria signed with the Axis in March, a step which caused Britain to sever relations with her.

Citing Bulgaria's role as a jumping-off place for German-Italian attacks on Yugoslavia and Greece last April, Molotov alleged a long list of more extensive acts against Russia, including:

Concentration of German-Italian troops in Bulgaria.

Use of Bulgarian airdromes.

Preparation of the Black Sea ports of Verna and Burgas as bases for submarines and warships which are being concentrated there under personal command of Grand Admiral Erich Raeder, of the German navy.

Use of Bulgarian railways to transport troops, naval forces and materials for Germany.

Use of a German-built bridge across the Danube river at Ruschuk, Bulgaria.

Other Charges Made

For her own part, the statement said,

RUSSIANS ACCUSE BULGARIA OF AID TO AXIS POWERS

Hint at Reprisals in Note—Hungarian Leaders Talk With Hitler.

London, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—The Soviet Government tonight formally charged Bulgaria with turning her seaports, airports and soil over to Germany and Italy for attacks on Russia, particularly against the Crimea, the Caucasus and Odessa.

The charge, contained in a statement made by Foreign Commissar Molotov to the Bulgarian Ambassador and broadcast by the Moscow radio, apparently presaged Russian sea-air reprisals against Bulgaria, a nation long friendly to Russia.

The Russian declaration charged that Bulgaria herself was preparing to attack the Soviet Union along with the Germans. It cited a long list of alleged provocative acts, accused Bulgaria repeatedly of disloyalty, denied that Russia had attacked or provoked Bulguria in any manner, and concluded ominously:

"This attitude of the Bulgarian Government to a high degree does not correspond with the interests of Bulgaria and the Bulgarian nation."

The announcement said: "On September 10 Comrade Molotov, People's Commissar for Foreign Affairs, received the Bulgarian Minister, and on behalf of the Soviet Government gave the following declaration to the Bulgarian Government:

"'Up to the treacherous aggression by Germany on the Soviet Union, the Bulgarian Government had taken up in relation to the Soviet Union a position incompatible with official assurances given by the Bulgarian Government on loyal or even friendly relations of Bulgaria with the Soviet Union.

Warnings Cited.

"'The Soviet Government has repeatedly drawn the attention of the Bulgarian Government to this attitude contrary to normal relations between the two States and leading to an entirely inadmissible situation. The Soviet Government had especially drawn attention to this unfriendly attitude on January 14, February 4 and February 20 this year and on a series of other occasions.

"'Such an unfriendly and, more than that, disloyal atitude on the part of the Bulgarian Government increased even more after the aggression by Hitlerite Germany against the Soviet Union.

"'According to data at the disposal of the Soviet Government, Bulgaria recently started to become a jumping off place for military activities against the Soviet Union on the part of Germany, Italy and Rumania and other States which have attacked the Soviet Union.

"'Last spring Bulgaria, without formal declaration of war on Greece and Yugoslavia, played the role of "places d'armes" for aggression by Germany and Italy, by giving Bulgarian territory to Germany and Italy as a base for this attack. All the facts are known to the Soviet Government, undoubtedly proving that Bulgaria has become a "place d'armes" for this attack by Germany and her allies on the Soviet Union, employing Bulgarian soil for attacks on Odessa, the Crimea and the Caucauses

Reports Troops Massing.

"'The following facts prove the allegation:

"'1. German and Italian divisions in increasing numbers are concentrating on Bulgarian territory and preparing for landing operations on the Soviet Crimea.

"'2. The German Air Force is being concentrated on airdromes in Bulgaria, and Bulgarian airdromes are under control of German military authorities.

"'3. The Bulgarian ports of Varna and Burgas in the Black Sea are adapted as bases for German and Italian submarines and warships.

"'4. In the Black Sea ports of Varna and Burgas as well as the Bulgarian Danubian port of Rushchuk, German and Italian warships and submarines and German and Italian naval troops are being concentrated.

"'5. German Admiral Raeder, who at present is dwelling in Bulgaria, and other representatives of the German naval staff are busy organizing a naval fleet on the Black Sea consisting of German and Italian submarines and war vessels for operations which are being prepared against the Soviet Union.

"'6. Bulgarian railways are employed in transporting German troops and naval forces and German war material.

"'7. German authorities have built up and are using a pontoon bridge over the Danube at Rushchuk for the transport of German material and troops.'"

Says Attack Is Prepared

"Repeated attempts by the Bulgarian Government to put at the Soviet Government's doorstep bombing by Soviet aircraft of Bulgarian territory despite the obviously provocative character of these attempts and despite categorical denials by the Soviet Government; the provocative attempted shooting of a deputy Soviet military attaché in the center of Sofia on Sept. 7, together with a series of similar provocations against the Soviet Union, not to speak of the hostile war campaign against the Soviet Union in the pages of the semi-official Bulgarian press; all these facts prove the Bulgarian Government does not only not maintain a loyal attitude toward the Soviet Union but even has encouraged provocative acts against the Soviet Union.

"All these facts as well as measures by the repressive military regime in Bulgaria prove that Bulgaria is preparing to attack Soviet Russia together with Germany. Similarly Rumania has become a 'place d'armes' for attack on the Soviet Union from the Black Sea.

"In view of all the above-mentioned, the Soviet Government considers [itself] unavoidably forced to inform the Bulgarian Government and to draw their attention to the fact that the attitude and actions of the Bulgarian Government in relation to the Soviet Union are disloyal and do not correspond to the attitude and activity of a State maintaining normal relations with the Soviet Union.

"According to the deep convictions of the Soviet Government, this attitude of the Bulgarian Government to a high degree does not correspond with the interests of Bulgaria and the Bulgarian nation."

BLACKGUARD LABEL HURLED AT CHURCHILL

SEP 12 1941

Communist M. P. Assails Premier For Attitude Toward Russia

Retraction And Apology Are Made Later, However, In House

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 11—Winston Churchill defending one of his Ministers from charges of hostility toward Britain's Russian allies, was called a blackguard and a liar today by William Gallacher, the only Communist member of Parliament, who later apologized to both the Prime Minister and the House.

The brief and ugly storm arose over allegations made recently by Jack Tanner, a Labor leader, that Col. J. T. C. Moore-Brabazon, the Minister for Aircraft Production, had expressed a hope that the German and Soviet armies would exterminate each other

It brought an incidental and official disclosure that hundreds of British fighting planes already are being sent to Russia by Moore-Brabazon's ministry.

Bitter Feeling Reported

"Very deep and bitter feeling" existed among trade unionists over the colonel's alleged remark concerning Russia, Gallacher said at the outset.

He went on then to demand that Churchill "clear out of this Government anyone who is not one hundred per cent. for cooperation with Russia."

"I do not think," Churchill retorted coldly, "that I should be prepared to receive guidance in policy or conduct from an honorable gentleman who, it is notorious, has to change his opinions whenever he is ordered to by a body outside this country."

Withdrawal Demanded

Shouting a demand for withdrawal of this "insulting remark," Gallacher cried out:

"I have never at any time taken orders from anyone outside this country. . . . It is a dirty, cowardly, rotten action on the part of the Prime Minister. It is the action of a blackguard. It is a foul and dirty lie."

Later Gallacher returned repentantly to address the speaker:

"After very deep reflection about what occurred this morning, I want to apologize to you, sir, and to the House for the offensive words I used when I put to you my point of order, and I want to make a complete withdrawal of the offensive remarks made and directed toward the Prime Minister."

Conversation Recalled

The House cheered and went on with its business.

Churchill already had stated that on the day that Germany attacked Russia he had telephoned Moore-Brabazon to advise him of "the line I was going to take that night"—that is, a promise of all aid to the Soviet.

Moore-Brabazon, the Prime Minister recalled, "wholeheartedly supported that line and he expressed enthusiastic assent.

"Moreover, he has been ardently at work sending hundreds of fighter aircraft to Russia, many of which have already got there."

Regret Is Expressed

As to the accusation against Moore-Brabazon, Churchill declared he was "astonished that anyone could have taken the mischievous action of making this a sensation which does nothing but harm to Russia as well as Britain and leads to suspicion between those whose fortunes are linked together."

Moore-Brabazon, the Prime Minister added, "is with us heart and soul—otherwise, I should not have appointed him."

Asked in the beginning whether the hoped-for mutual destruction of the German and Russian armies represented the Government's policy, Churchill had replied that versions given the public of Moore-Brabazon's remarks at a private gathering "bear a construction which represents neither the policy of his Majesty's Government nor the views of the Minister."

Commmunist Calls Churchill A 'Blackguard' in Commons

Later Apologizes for Attack Made on Prime Minister to His Face When He Rejected Red M. P.'s Advice.

SEP 12 1941

London, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—William Gallacher, the only communist Member of Parliament, today called Prime Minister Churchill a "blackguard" to his face and accused him of "dirty, cowardly, rotten action" in an angry outburst in the House of Commons.

Mr. Gallacher later apologized to the House.

The incident came over charges that Col. J. T. C. Moore-Brabazon, Minister for Aircraft Production, had expressed hope that the Russian and German armies would annihilate each other.

Florid and excited, Gallacher first told the House that very deep and bitter feeling exists among trade unionists over statements attributed to Col. Moore-Brabazon. He asked Mr. Churchill to "clear out of this Government any one who is not 100 per cent for co-operation with Russia."

Churchill Answers.

The Prime Minister replied to this:

"I do not think I should be prepared to receive guidance in policy or conduct from an honorable gentleman who, it is notorious, has to change his opinions whenever he is ordered to by a body outside this country."

Mr. Gallacher retorted that "I have never at any time taken orders from any one outside this country," and he shouted a demand for withdrawal of the "insulting remark."

SEP 12 194

"It is a dirty, cowardly, rotten action on the part of the Prime Minister," he said. "It is the action of a blackguard. It is a foul and dirty lie."

The speaker of the House requested the press gallery not to use a story on the outburst, but the request came long after the evening newspapers already had published their accounts.

The debate, which thus brought the harshest words leveled at Mr. Churchill since he became Prime Minister, was the aftermath of an accusation against Col. Moore-Brabazon in a speech by Jack Tanner, president of the Amalgamated Engineers Union, to the Trades Union Congress at Edinburgh on September 2.

Question on Policy.

Mr. Gallacher opened with a question whether the statements attributed to Col. Moore-Brabazon, namely Mr. Tanner's charge that the Minister had publicly expressed a wish for the exterminа-tion of both the Russian and German armies, represented the Government's policy.

Mr. Churchill answered that the versions given the public of Col. Moore-Brabazon's remarks at a private gathering "bear a construction which represents neither the policy of his Majesty's Government nor the views of the Minister."

Mr. Churchill asserted that he had telephoned Col. Moore-Brabazon the day that Germany attacked Russia and had told him "the line I was going to take that night" in a world-wide broadcast pledging aid to the Soviet Union.

The Minister of Aircraft Production "wholeheartedly supported that line and he expressed enthusiastic assent. . . ." Mr. Churchill added.

"Moreover," Mr. Churchill continued, "he has been ardently at work sending hundreds of fighter aircraft to Russia, many of which have already got there."

He said that he had read correspondence relating to the accusation against Col. Moore-Brabazon and that he was "astonished that any one could have taken the mischievous action of making this a sensation which does nothing but harm to Russia as well as Britain and leads to suspicion between those whose fortunes are linked together."

He added that he was convinced that Col. Moore-Brabazon was "with us heart and soul."

"Otherwise," he said, "I should not have appointed him."

Mr. Gallacher's demands for withdrawal of Mr. Churchill's remark were interrupted by the speaker's call for the next question, whereupon the House went on with other business.

In his apology, addressed to the speaker this afternoon, Mr. Gallacher said:

"After deep reflection about what occurred this morning I want to apologize to you, sir, and to the House for the offensive words I used when I put to you my point of order and I want to make a complete withdrawal of the offensive remarks made and directed toward the Prime Minister."

The House cheered.

NAZIS THREATEN IRAN REPRISALS

SEP 12 1941

Berlin, Sept. 11 (AP)—German authorized quarters threatened broad reprisals today if Britain and Russia persist in their demands for surrender and extradition of German nationals in Iran.

"Not only Iranians in Germany but subjects of certain other nations" might become subject to reprisal, they said.

The latest reports from the German legation in the Iranian capital, received yesterday, indicated that as yet the legation still was officially uninformed concerning the British-Russian demand regarding the German nationals.

(An Associated Press dispatch from Teheran Wednesday said that a mixed commission had decided that German residents of Iran named on British-Russian blacklists as leading Nazi agents would be handed over to Britain and Russia for immediate internment. A special train was arranged to transport 225 Germans out of the country tonight, with another 50 leaving later.)

2,000 Russians Removed By Spitzbergen Force

Miners Put on Liner by Landing Party

LONDON, Sept. 11 (AP).—The Canadian-British Norwegian expeditionary force which landed recently at Spitzbergen, it is now disclosed, withdrew 2,000 Russian miners as well as the Norwegian population of about 1,000 after destroying rich coal shafts of the Arctic Archipelago so that they would not fall into German hands.

Thus the landing party removed the entire population of Spitzbergen, which is owned by Nazi-occupied Norway.

Some forty-eight hours after the operation was first reported, along with the fact that Norwegian families were taken to England, censorship was relaxed last night to permit announcement of the Russian evacuation aboard a giant liner. Where the Russians were taken was still regarded here as a military secret.

Most of them were taken aboard at the Town of Barentsberg, an occasional jumping-off place for expeditions to the North Pole, 700 miles away.

Many of the Russian men expressed a desire to join the Red Army to fight against the Germans. (Murmansk, Russian Arctic port, is about 700 miles southeast of Spitzbergen and a logical destination for the party in the event it was headed toward Russia).

SPEED URGED IN DISPATCHING AID TO SOVIET

Red Ambassador Confers For Hour And A Half With Roosevelt

Meanwhile, Special Mission To Moscow Prepares To Begin Journey

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 11—Constantine Oumansky, the Russian Ambassador, was understood to have urged the quick shipment of available war supplies to the Soviet Union today in a conference with President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull.

The three were together in the President's office for an hour and a half, and meanwhile the American mission to Moscow prepared to begin its journey to the Russian capital. There it will confer with a similar British delegation and with Russian officials on ways to help the Red army.

Press Conference Canceled

Before it leaves, however, the chairman, W. Averill Harriman, will discuss the situation with President Rosevelt. To make room on his program for the meeting, the President canceled tomorrow's regularly scheduled press conference.

Soon after the Nazi army invaded Russia, the United States and Britain announced that the Soviet Union would receive war materials from both countries.

Such assistance does not come under the lease-lend program, however, and Russia has been paying for materials purchased here. Jesse Jones, Federal Loan Administrator, has said if need be loans would be made to Russia to finance these purchases.

Loans Believed Discussed

It was understood that the question of extending such loans was discussed at today's conference at the White House.

The American Red Cross announced tonight it would send a delegation, headed by Allen Wardwell, of New York, to Russia "within a few days" to study and report on the most urgent relief needs of the nation and how to supply them. Dr. George K. Strode, associate director of the International Health Division of the Rockefeller Foundation, and Robert J. Scovell, of the Red Cross staff here, will accompany Wardwell.

Reich Plugged Blockade Gap

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 11—Germany herself sealed "the ring of the Allied blockade" by invading Russia, the Commerce Department said today, and "shut off, for the time being at least, supplies of the utmost importance to the Reich's war effort."

This conclusion was reached in an economic survey of Germany prepared for the department's foreign commerce weekly, which called attention to pre-invasion Nazi claims that food and raw materials from Russia were of decisive importance in "breaking" the Allied blockade of Continental Europe.

Vital Supplies Cut Off

German agricultural journals "emphasized repeatedly," the department said, the importance of fodder grain from the Soviet for maintenance of the German hog population.

The department also held that the loss of such products as petroleum, barley, cotton, manganese ore, asbestos and similar items was of great added significance.

"German authorities are said to believe," the survey said, "that the Reich will be able to obtain from Soviet territories occupied, organized and exploited by Germany, larger quantities of materals than it had been able to obtain as voluntary deliveries on the part of the Soviet Government.

Door To Far East Slammed

"Such a prognosis is undoubtedly predicated on a complete and early victory of Germa arms in the Russian campaign. However, regardless o. ti.. outcome, several factors may very possibly postpone the realization of these plans, including deliberate destruction of stocks and equipment by a retreating enemy and congestion of transport by military operations."

Another consideration, the department added, is the cutting off of trade from Middle Eastern and Far Eastern countries. This has put an end to heavy imports of soybeans from Manchuria and of cotton, hides, rice and other products from Iran and Afghanistan. At the same time, the department noted, Germany has slammed the door on the route that could bring the Reich shipments of rubber, tin and other war essentials by way of Siberia.

Horthy Sees Hitler.

Berlin, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—Admiral Nicholas Horthy, regent of Hungary, and Hungarian Premier Laszlo de Bardossy visited Adolf Hitler at his field headquarters from Monday until yesterday, it was announced officially tonight.

[The Hungarian Premier's visit to the front presumably accounts for the sudden and mysterious interruption of international communications with Budapest last night, probably pending the Regent's safe return.]

Hitler and Horthy were said to have held penetrating discussions on military and political questions concerning their two countries, comrades-in-arms against Soviet Russia.

Der Fuehrer decorated the Hungarian Regent with the knight's cross of the iron cross.

Horthy, accompanied by Hungary's highest military leaders, also visited Reich's Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering and Field Marshal Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, commander in chief of the German Army.

Envoys Visit Hitler At Front

SEP 12 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 11—Adolf Hitler has received the Hungarian Regent and Premier and new envoys of Spain, Portugal and Denmark at his headquarters on the Eastern front, it was announced tonight.

Regent Admiral Nicholas Horthy and Premier Laslo de Bardossy of Hungary visited the Führer from Monday until yesterday.

The visit was believed to have accounted for sudden interruption of international communication with Budapest last night. Communications were cut off presumably pending the Regent's safe return.

The Führer decorated the Hungarian Regent with the Knight's Cross to the Iron Cross.

Horthy, accompanied by Hungary's highest military leaders, also visited Reichsmarshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering and Field Marshal General Walther von Brauchitsch, commander in chief of the German army.

BUDAPEST CUT OFF FROM THE OUTSIDE

Nazis Deny They Know of Any Political Flare-up.

Berlin, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—A mysterious interruption of telephone service to Budapest drew interest in Central European cities today.

Authorized German spokesmen said they knew of no startling political developments in Hungary. Newspaper correspondents in countries surrounding Hungary were unable, however, to get in touch with spokesmen there, and some earlier telephone conversations were cut off abruptly without any explanation.

Communication Restored.

Berne, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—International communication with Budapest was restored this morning after interruptions during the night by difficulties described in the Hungarian capital as technical. All was said to be quiet in the Danubian city.

[Advices from Budapest indicated that an official announcement of some nature was to be expected.]

Telephone service to Budapest was interrupted mysteriously, some cenversation being cut off abruptly without explanation. Newspaper correspondents in countries about Hungary were unable to get in touch with sources there for several hours.

Hitler's Paper Ignores War Action on First Page

By The Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 11—Adolf Hitler's newspaper, the Voelkischer Beobachter, did not carry a single action story of the war on its front page today.

The front-page headlines included:

"United States Taxpayers Must Pay for Roosevelt's Adventure."

"Ciano: 'All the Peoples of the Earth Will Harvest Victory With Us.'"

"Plutocrats Approve Stalin's Murder Plan [referring to transfer of Volga Germans to Siberia]."

"Painful Confessions of English Sea Losses."

Nazi Expert Says England Bound To Be Invaded Soon

Berlin, Sept. 11 (AP)—A German military expert threatened tonight that England would be invaded "at a time and in a manner which the English do not expect."

"England," he added in an article in the weekly Das Reich to which especial attention was called here because Propaganda Minister Goebbels is a regular contributor, "may rest assured that the catastrophe is nearer than (American) help."

Invasion of an island, like the storming of a fortress, follows after a through-going preparation, the writer said. A wise General, he said, gives the command to storm only after a previous siege, comparable to the blockade, and after previous shelling, comparable to bombardment of English cities from the air, have made the fortress ripe for conquest.

"The British haven't noticed that invasion in this respect has long been under way," the writer said. He accused the British of thinking in terms of the last war. "The war won't be won with rigid outdated rules, but with imagination and boldness," he wrote.

Discussing Britain's sea warfare strategy, the writer maintained that England's position has "worsened exceptionally" because of the development in sea warfare tactics.

This, he said, has led to a "shrinkage" of the sea, bringing English waters into the sphere of the European continental coast. As a result, the mass use of new types of coastal weapons and of aeroplanes loaded with mines, torpedoes and bombs becomes possible, it was stated.

GERMANS PROMISE SURPRISE INVASION

Tell British Catastrophe Is Nearer Than U. S. Aid.

Berlin, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—England will be invaded "at a time and in a manner which the English do not expect," a German military expert predicted tonight in the widely circulated weekly Das Reich.

"England may rest assured that the catastrophe is nearer than (American) help," the article said.

The authoritative Dienst aus Deutschland commentary emphasized the "great importance" of the statement because of its publication in the weekly, to which Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels is a regular contributor.

4-Motor Bombers Bombard Italian Industry Cities

British Squadrons Give Mussolini Targets Drubbing

(By The Associated Press)

London, Sept. 11 — The R.A.F raided Northern Italy last night and early today for the first time since January, pounding Turin and other industrial cities with new 4-motored bombers in the heaviest attack there of the entire war.

Heavy loads of explosive and incendiary bombs were dropped from new Sterling and Halifax warcraft making, in the 1,200-mile round trip, their first crossings of the Alps.

Large fires were left burning in Turin, the Air Ministry said, where the main objective was the royal arsenal.

The British Middle East Command disclosed at Cairo, that on the night before R.A.F. fliers of the Mediterranean front delivered a heavy attack on the Sicilian city of Messina, attacking a power station, ferries and landing stages and on Monday night pounded docks and quays at Palermo, Sicily.

(Rome stated that two civilians were killed and several injured Wednesday night in attacks on both Turin and Genoa. Four persons were injured in the Messina attack, the Italians reported.

(French anti-aircraft guns at Vichy opened fire on a British plane, apparently one of those en route to Northern Italy, which flew over the capital of unoccupied France early Thursday morning.)

Today Spitfire fighter planes carried out patrols over German-occupied territory, flying at a height of only 50 feet over the Channel and then sweeping inland over Northern France, Belgium and Holland to attack airdrome hangars with their cannon and machine-guns, the Air Ministry reported.

As the Admiralty announced that the 3,867-ton Italian tanker Maya had been sunk by a British submarine in the Aegean, an official British compilation was made public at Alexandria stating that 200 Axis merchant ships totaling 651,000 tons had been lost in the Mediterranean and Red Sea areas since Italy entered the war 15 months ago.

bombers. It was the first time they had crossed the Alps, although some of the crews which bombed Turin were over Berlin Sunday night.

One Crew Counts 3 Fires

They described the trip to Italy as "like an air-liner trip in peacetime."

The pilot of a two-engined Wellington which took part in the raid came down to 2,000 feet to plant five large fires, the Air Ministry said. Another crew counted thirty-four fires and said that smoke was rising 7,000 feet from a single blaze in the center of the city.

Other bombs hit a big factory, it was stated.

One pilot said: "Things seemed to burst out of the fire and explode at heights of 2,000 to 6,000 feet. Flashes were visible from the French side of the Alps on the homeward journey.

Blast Other Objectives

The last previous attack on northern Italy occurred the night of January 12-13 when Turin was raided for the fifteenth time.

Other targets also were blasted by the R. A. F., the British said.

Italian objectives in southern Italy and Sicily have been bombed frequently, but these operations were carried out by planes based in the Mediterranean area.

558 R. A. F. Bombers Lost Since April 1

London, Sept. 11 (AP)—The R. A. F. lost 558 bombers in Western Europe between April 1 and September 8, Capt. Harold H. Balfour, Under Secretary of State for Air, disclosed in the House of Commons today.

This period included the unusually heavy mass attacks on Germany and German-occupied territory undertaken this summer.

SEP 12 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 11—Cannon-carrying British Spitfire fighter planes raided northern France, Belgium and Holland today, attacking airdromes and hangars of the occupied territories, the Air Ministry reported tonight.

Royal Air Force bombers raided Turin last night in the heaviest attack yet made on northern Italy, authoritative British sources said.

The main objective of the many heavy bombers was given as the royal arsenal. British officials said large fires were started.

The attackers were led by Britain's new Stirling and Halifax four-motored

1,200-Mile Round Trip

Turin and other northern Italian industrial centers which were attacked last Winter by the R. A. F. are about the same distance from airdromes in Britain as Berlin—roughly a minimum of 1,200 miles for the round trip.

(Geneva, Switzerland, heard airplane engines overhead three times during the night and concluded even before the British announcement that the R. A. F. had reopened offensive operations against northern Italy. No alarm was sounded.

Turin, Genoa, Milan and Marghera, near Venice, were bombed in last Winter's operations. Industrial works and oil tanks were the main objectives.

LIST AXIS LOSSES IN MEDITERRANEAN

British Say 200 Ships Were Sunk in 15 Months.

Alexandria, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—Two hundred Axis merchant ships, totaling 651,000 tons, have been lost in the Mediterranean and Red seas since Italy entered the war fifteen months ago, an official British compilation showed today. Scores of other vessels were listed as hit and possibly sunk.

An official compilation of Axis naval losses, all Italian, follows:

Cruisers: Four 8-inch-gun cruisers sunk, one doubtful; one damaged; three 6-inch-gun cruisers sunk; two to six damaged.

Submarines: Undisclosed.

Destroyers and torpedoboats: Thirty, possibly more.

Battleships: None listed as sunk, but one damaged in battle off Calabria early in war, three torpedoed at Taranto, one torpedoed at battle of Cape Matapan, one salvaged but out of commission.

Italian Tanker Sunk.

London, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—The 3,867-ton Italian tanker Maya has been torpedoed and sunk by a British submarine in the Aegean Sea, the Admiralty announced today.

Palermo Docks and Quays Bombed, British Report

CAIRO, Egypt, Sept. 11 (AP).—The R. A. F. reported today it scored main hits on docks and quays and believed three merchant ships were damaged in a raid the night of September 8-9 on Palermo, Sicily. Airdromes at Satania and Gerbini were bombed the same night.

A power station, ferries and landing stages at Messina, Sicily, were raided the night of September 9-10.

Genoa and Turin Bombed.

Rome, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—Two civilians were killed and several others injured when British planes attacked Genoa and Turin last night in the first raid on north Italian cities since last winter, the Italian High Command reported today.

The communique said the raiders "dropped several bombs" on the outskirts of Genoa and Turin, and that the Sicilian city of Messina suffered a new air raid.

"Several civilian buildings were damaged," it said of the Messina operations, and four persons were injured among the population. An enemy plane was shot down by the anti-aircraft defense."

On the other hand, Axis bombs were declared to have hit a British destroyer and a British merchant ship in Mediterranean operations, and German fighters were credited with shooting down five Hurricanes in combat. The destroyer was struck while steaming east of Salum, Egypt, the communique said, and the merchant ship near Tobruk, the British-occupied Libyan port.

Report Havoc in Egypt.

Berlin, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—DNB, the German official news agency, reported today that the entire traffic system of lower Egypt "is involved in damage wrought by continued German air force attacks."

The agency also said that German pursuit planes shot down five British fighters without a loss in a combat near Matruh, Egypt, on Tuesday, and that munition dumps, anti-aircraft positions, truck columns, warehouses and port facilities at Tobruk were bombed during the last two days and last night by German planes.

Vichy's Anti-Aircraft Guns Fire

VICHY, France, Sept. 11 (AP)—French anti-aircraft guns opened fire early today on a British plane that flew over Vichy.

Inhabitants who were up at 2 A. M. could hear the roar of the airplane motors and the sound of anti-aircraft fire.

It was forbidden at first, however, to speak of the presence of R. A. F. fliers over this seat of government, although there had been a two-hour air alarm before.

Vichy's anti-aircraft guns, which were not known to have fired on British planes before, recently have been practicing.

Danish Ship Reported Sunk

Berlin, Sept. 11 (AP)—DNB reported today the 1,831-ton Danish refrigerator ship Chilean Reefer, operating in the service of Great Britain, had been sunk. There were no other details.

Sweden Gets U. S. Goods

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 11 (AP).—Three Swedish motorships, the 2,595-ton Bardaland, 6,017-ton Peru and 2,734-ton Vingaland, loaded with cotton, wool, piece goods, hides and provisions from the United States, have reached Sweden. The vessels had British and German licenses to pass through the belligerents' blockades.

Two Labor Chiefs Shot In Norway

Status of General Strike Uncertain as Minister Warns Germans 'Not Fooling'

SEP 12 1941

Stockholm, Sweden, Sept. 11.—(AP.)—The Quisling regime in Oslo asserted today that two days of strikes in the iron and shipbuilding industries of the Norwegian capital had ended after the execution by a firing squad of two Norwegian labor leaders.

The Oslo area was encircled by German troops Vidkun Quisling's men took over complete control of both workers' and employers' organizations in Norway, but the status of a general strike called for today remained uncertain.

Viggo Hansteen, secretary of the Norwegian Labor Federation, and Rolf Vickstroem, a trades union president, were shot by a firing squad last night a few hours after they had been condemned by summary courts set up by Joseph Terboven, the German Commissioner for Norway. Four other men were sentenced to from 10 years to life.

Ludvig Byland, vice-president of the Workmen's Trade Union Congress was sentenced to death in Oslo but because there were no serious disturbances in the city during the day Terboven commuted the sentence to life imprisonment.

Another member of the union was sentenced to life and two union representatives to 12 years.

Terboven also dissolved all scout organizations, including Salvation

30.24 — 11757 30.24 - 11757

Army Scouts.

The state of siege which Terboven proclaimed yesterday when German authorities reported discovering plans for the general strike in Oslo was expected to be extended to other areas of Norway.

It empowers German officials to conduct summary executions, mete out sentences of death or life imprisonment and confiscate property. It also imposes a curfew from 8 p. m. to 5 a. m.

The situation was said to be critical in the cities of Moss, Fredrikstad and Sarpsbork, on the railroad connecting Oslo and the east shore of the Oslofjord with the Swedish Coast.

Professor Biger Meidell, Norwegian Minister of Welfare, said in a broadcast from Oslo that he had evidences of Bolshevist disruptive activities.

"I do not dare to think what will happen if there is a new strike," he warned. "You have seen that the Germans will not stand for any fooling."

There were no details of the charges under which Hansteen and Vickstroem were executted. Vickstroem was one of the leaders of transport workers and was a well-known figure in Norwegian workers' youth organizations.

Hansteen was a lawyer and one of the most prominent men in the Norwegian labor movement.

Under authority granted by the state of siege, the Norwegian Federation of Labor was absorbed into Quisling's so-called corporative state structure.

The head of the federation was ousted and the entire board of the employers' union was removed and put under police surveillance.

German S. S. group leader and Lt. Gen. of Police Rediss than appointed Odd Fossum, leader of Quisling's Nasjonal Samling labor organization, to head the labor federation. He picked a Quislingist named Lippestad as head of the employers' union.

Nazi-sponsored regime today took over complete control of both workers' and employers' organizations in German-occupied Norway.

The status of a general strike called for today was uncertain.

(A dispatch from Oslo, censored by the Germans, claimed work was resumed after two days of strikes in iron and shipbuilding industries. There was no amplification. SEP 12 1941

The head of the Norwegian Federation of Labor was ousted, arrested and replaced by Odd Fossum, leader of Quisling's Nasjonal Samling labor organization. This put the nation's Federation of Labor into Quisling's so-called corporative state structure.

The entire board of the employers' organizations then was removed and placed under police surveillance. A new employers' leader, one Lippesad, a Quislingist, was apppointed.

The German forces were prepared to meet all strike eventualities under a state of civil siege, proclaimed for the capital and its environs yesterday. Quisling spies betrayed the plan to authorities, bringing on the state of siege.

In last night's darkness, a firing squad executed Viggo Hansteen, secretary of the Norwegian Labor Federation, and Rolf Vickstroem, a trades union president, shortly after they had been condemned by summary courts set up by Joseph Terboven, the German commissioner for Norway.

Four other workers received prison terms of from 10 years to life. There were no details of the charges.

Siege May Be Extended.

The situation was very critical and it was expected that the state of siege would be extended to new areas.

The executed men were shot after Commissioner Terboven refused petitions for their pardon. Details of the charges against the men were not given in first reports.

"State Of War Not At End"

The Norwegian Minister of Welfare, Prof. Biger Meidell, said in a broadcast from Oslo that a small strike in Oslo several days ago had made it clear that Terboven would proclaim a state of siege.

An even smaller strike movement also had broken out, he said, because Oslo workers had not received their ordinary milk ration.

The Minister then accented that the state of war between Germany and Norway was not at an end and in expressing the hope that strikers would go back to their jobs immediately he warned against any new strikes.

Blames Bolsheviks

He said he had evidence of Bolshevist disruptive activities and in warning Oslo in particular and Norway in general against these forces he said:

"I do not dare to think what will happen if there is a new strike. You have seen the Germans will not stand for any fooling."

Prominent Labor Leader.

Hansteen, one of the executed men, was a lawyer and one of the most prominent men in the Norwegian labor movement. He was 41 years old. He was a member of the Communist party for some time, but left when Russia invaded Finland in 1939.

Vickstroem was a well known figure in Norwegian workers' youth organizations and one of the leaders of transport workers.

Under the decree of a state of civil siege, German officials were authorized to conduct summary executions, mete out sentences of death or life imprisonment and confiscate property.

Strikes Reported Ended

OSLO, Sept. 11 (AP).—Authorities said normal work was resumed today after two days of strikes in the iron and shipbuilding industries.

German Troops Encircle Oslo As Norse Nazis Battle Strikes

Quisling Regime Takes Over Both Labor and Employer Groups

SEP 12 1941

By the Associated Press.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Sept. 11.—With all of the Oslo area encircled by German troops and two Norwegian labor leaders already dead by firing squad, Vidkun Quisling's had been handed the job of keeping Norway tranquil while the German armies were busy in Russia, but that he had succeeded only "in uniting our people and making them a violently hostile nation."

Trouble in Holland.

The British radio announced today that there is growing evidence of sabotage in Holland. The broadcaster quoted the Swedish magazine Die Welt as stating that 500 Dutch workers have been arrested by the Nazis on suspicion.

The Columbia Broadcasting System's short-wave listening station recorded the broadcast here.

Vichy Acts In Dakar

SEP 12 1941

Vichy, Sept. 11 (AP)—The Vichy colonial administration in Africa today ordered the internment of persons reporting that Germans are in Dakar, France's reinforced West African base.

The order, issued by Pierre Boisson, Governor General of French West Africa, coincided with the arrival in Algeria of Admiral Juan Esteva, resident general of Tunisia, to confer with Gen. Maxime Weygand, Vichy's proconsul in North Africa.

Vichy has denied the presence of any Germans in French West Africa.

Policeman Shot By Communists

Vichy, Unoccupied France, Sept. 11 (AP)—A policeman was shot today near the town of Douai, near the Belgian border, by an accomplice of Communists whom he had arrested, Paris newspapers reported.

The policeman arrested the Communists for distributing propaganda material, the reports said.

In Paris one of the new anti-Communist courts sentenced seven persons, including two women, to prison terms varying from two to seven years.

A military court at Clermont-Ferrand handed down two sentences of five years each for distribution of Communist tracts.

Quisling Seen Failing In Duty in Norway

London, Sept. 11 (AP)—Disturbances in Oslo and declaration of martial law there are "very definite evidence that Quisling has failed in his assigned task of pacifying the Norwegian people and now the job has been turned over to Heinrich Himmler and his Gestapo," a Norwegian government official declared here today.

He asserted that Vidkun Quisling, the Norwegian Nazi leader,

Germany, France and Spain Join in West African Defense

Reports Indicate They Fear U. S. and Britain Will Try to Seize Bases—Troops and Arms Said to Be on Hand.

United — [illegible]

France, Germany and Spain have worked out elaborate joint plans to defend West Africa, according to information reaching the Associated Press in New York today. Belief that the United States and Great Britain some day will try to seize bases in the strategic French, Spanish and Portuguese possessions on the South Atlantic has brought the three Powers into virtual alliance, it is stated.

Three-way staff talks started months ago are said to have reached such a point that a permanent joint staff has been set up at Melilla, Spanish Morocco.

Steadily, German - produced arms are flowing down to Casablanca in French Morocco, Villa Cisneros in Spain's Rio de Oro and Dakar, vital port in French Senegal. Ships slipping out of French Mediterranean ports to scud across the Mediterranean to Oran go loaded with coastal and anti-aircraft guns, searchlight batteries, mines, knocked-down 80-and 120-ton submarines and fast torpedo boats.

From Credible Sources.

Such is the outline of the story brought by Europeans of credibility, persons who can cite adequate if unpublishable sources for their information.

Britain and America's general staffs already have most of the story, it is believed. Bits and pieces have been published. But few outside high official circles know the extent to which the three Powers have carried their military collaboration.

Germany, it is asserted, would like to extend the South Atlantic line of defense to Portugal's Atlantic possessions—the Azores, Madeira and Cape Verdes.

Portugal, however, careful of her neutrality, turned down an invitation to participate in joint staff talks. Those talks, it is learned here, began in June, or before. In early July, Gen. von Rintelin, Hitler's African ace; Gen. Nogues, Governor-General of French Morocco, and one of Spain's generals met at Melilla. Out of that meeting grew the permanent tri-Power staff.

Gist of the Plan.

Following is the gist of the plan as outlined by the Associated Press's informants:

Germany will furnish material to fill out France's and Spain's war left-overs, give technical advice and assign needed technicians and specialists, including aviators; France will contribute the sizable remnant of her once-potent navy, planes, officers and troops, and Spain's big Moroccar army will be the backlog of man power, to be thrown into action if needed.

Germany started filling her part of the bargain even before Von Rintelin, Nogues and the Spanish general met. Since early June ships sailing from Marseilles, Toulon and Port Vendres, near Perpignan, have been slipping across the Mediterranean to Oran, loaded with war supplies.

Between June 20 and July 1 the big ships Etoile and Belle Arlesienne and the smaller freighters Juno and L'Orient transferred an estimated 3,000 men of Germany's famed Condor aviation unit, which fought for Franco in Spain, its equipment and other material.

From Oran the Condor unit proceeded to Casablanca, thence to Fez and finally to Mogador, where staff headquarters were set up in the Hotel Paris.

On July 1, the steamship Nazareth and another freighter took aboard three French aviation units previously based at Clermont Ferrand, Rivelsaltes and Tarbes and shifted them across the Mediterranean for African service.

SEP 12 1941

Others Sent to Africa

Other ships are known to have transported to Africa an artillery regiment formerly based at Aix-en-Provence and the 81st regiment of Senegalese tirailleurs.

Early in July, shipment of the heavier German equipment—the long-range coastal batteries and the baby submarines, these to be mounted and put into the water at the Lyautey yards in Casablanca—began.

Embarkation of the troops and equipment, it was stated, was under the supervision of German Col. Koch, commander of the condor legion, who was last reported making his headquarters at the Hotel Louvre et de La Paix in Marseille.

Taylor Confers Again With Cardinal Maglione

By the Associated Press.

VATICAN CITY, Sept. 11.—Myron C. Taylor, President Roosevelt's personal envoy to the Vatican, conferred today with Luigi Cardinal Maglione, papal secretary of state, for the second time in two days in an important exchange of views between the White House and the Vatican.

War and peace aims, it was indicated last night, figured largely in the talks between Mr. Taylor and Pope Pius XII and the cardinal yesterday.

Harold Tittman, United States diplomatic officer attached to Mr. Taylor's office, accompanied the emissary for the interview, which presumably was for further discussion of how to provide for "the welfare of the peoples of various countries" in war and in peace.

Informed sources said they understood the envoy told the Pope yesterday that, in so far as Soviet Russia was concerned, Mr. Roosevelt was more interested in the welfare of the world's peoples than in the form of government as such.

Mr. Taylor plans to leave tomorrow afternoon with Mrs. Taylor for Florence to spend the week end at their villa and then return for another audience with the Pope next week before starting back to the United States.

When Premier Made Bombs

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 11—Winston Churchill was a bomb maker when a mere boy, it was disclosed today.

And he was inquisitive, determined and forceful—all of which characteristics are described in a book published today under the title "Winston Churchill and Harrow."

Trying to explore a haunted house while attending the Harrow school, the boy, Churchill, found an old well at the bottom of which ran a passage to the house. Churchill made a bomb to clear the passage.

He lighted a time fuse and lowered the bomb. Nothing happened for some time. Churchill leaned over and looked down. The bomb exploded, singeing his eyebrows and blistering his face.

In another incident Churchill was called before the headmaster, who said: "Churchill, I have grave reason to be displeased with you."

To this Winston replied: "And I, sir, have very grave reason to be displeased with you."

Japan Acts Suddenly To Place Its Armed Forces Under Control

Defense Council Set Up Directly Under Emperor In Move Termed Step To Check Military Domination

SEP 12 1941

By GLENN R. BABB
Of the Associated Press Cable Staff

New York, Sept. 11—The Japanese government, faced with the necessity of making decisions that may fix the empire's course for a generation, apparently moved energetically today to place the army under control and prevent military or other terroristic violence that might deflect it from its chosen path.

Japan has given indications of a willingness to review drastically the whole question of war or peace in the Pacific. Sweeping changes of policy may be necessary. Profoundly shaken by the course of the European war and by the rising power of the United States and Britain in the Pacific, the Japanese are trying to come to terms with the United States.

Mistrust Of Ability

For the last decade one major obstacle to an American accord with Japan has been a profound mistrust of the ability of any Tokyo Government to fulfill any pledges opposed by the military.

There was established in Tokyo today a new national defense headquarters under direct command of Emperor Hirohito. It is headed by Gen. Otozo Yamada, inspector general of military education, 60-year-old veteran of the Russo-Japanese and China wars and a leader of the conservative wing of the army. It will control all the land and air forces in Japan proper, Korea, Formosa and Sakhalin.

The circumstances of its establishment suggest strongly that its purpose is not so much to deal with the dangers of foreign invasion as to keep the armed forces in the homeland under control. Tokyo dispatches interpret it as a move to check military domination of imperial policy and establish safeguards against outbreaks of military dissatisfaction with the future course of events.

Important Step

If that is the purpose and if the action is effective the Tokyo Government will have taken an important step in the direction of stability in the Pacific. For the last decade the power of the army, especially its "radical" element, in the form of intimidation, threats or actual violence, has hamstrung the few efforts of the civilian Government to steer a moderate course.

Ten years ago next week the army seized control of imperial policy by launching the conquest of Manchuria. In 1932 army and navy cadets assassinated the comparatively moderate Premier Tsuyoshi Inukai. In February, 1936, part of the Tokyo garrison revolted and held the heart of the capital for four days before yielding to a direct order of the Emperor that they surrender. The army launched the China war four years ago.

Must End Army Domination

If the Government of Prince Fumimaro Konoye is to regain freedom to direct the empire's destinies, measures must be taken first to end this army domination and the terroristic activities of the "patriotic" civilian organizations, such as the notorious Black Dragon society, which support it.

Tokyo dispatches leave unanswered the question of the attitude of the army of nearly 1,000,000 men in China and the powerful force being concentrated in Manchoukuo against Soviet Siberia under command of the Kwantung army, that semi-independent military force which led the empire into the Manchurian and China adventures.

But the very magnitude of the military tasks confronting them tends to lessen their influence at home; the Government will have made a good beginning if it brings the home forces under control.

Premier Prince Konoye has told his people that Japan faces the gravest crisis in her history and there is no reason to believe that he overstates the case. The Government spokesman says that relations with the United States form the most important question before the empire. What goes on in Tokyo may be interpreted as part of the process of clearing for action in the diplomatic contest with Washington.

Repent Last Year's Move

There are indications that many highly placed Japanese—some generals and admirals among them—have repented the decisions of a year ago, when Adolf Hitler's star rode high—that aligned their country with the Axis. They hope that out of the negotiations with Washington may come changes that will at least restore to Japan her freedom of choice between the two groups of powers contending for world mastery.

They see Britain and Russia still standing against the Nazi storm. They foresee a long war with an eventual Axis victory far more doubtful than a year ago. They watch with deep anxiety the rapidly expanding naval power and war industrial capacity of the United States.

They cry out that they are being encircled, and indications are that this cry, originally perhaps only a rallying slogan for the military party, now is tinged increasingly with genuine fear. American pressure on the badly strained economy of the empire is having its effect.

"The encirclement has become strangulation," said a high Japanese military authority in Shanghai today. "America has so tight a grip on our throat that Japan can not even breathe or speak."

Seek Escape From Impasse

In this situation the Japanese are trying to negotiate with the United States in search of an escape from their impasse. But just how far they are ready to go in search of an accord remains to be revealed. Perhaps Prince Konoye indicated this in the personal letter delivered to President Roosevelt two weeks ago, but the contents of that letter remain secret and there has been no word of a reply.

Nor is there any indication from Washington of a willingness to make any important alterations in American policy in return for new Japanese pledges. Nevertheless, some Japanese leaders have indicated their belief that the American negotiations may determine not only Japan's role in this war but her place in the world to be remade after the conflict.

The policies of Washington and Tokyo apparently still are poles apart. It is difficult to see how either or both can withdraw far enough to make any fundamental agreement possible even if the Konoye Government gains freedom from military dictation. Secretary Hull said yesterday he knew of no major development in the near offing.

Committed To Aid China

President Roosevelt and his Administration are committed fully to the policy of aid to China against Japan and of aid to both Britain and Russia, two powers standing in the way of Japan's expansion policies. American aid to China is now reaching Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's forces in a rapidly swelling flow that soon may alter the entire course of the China campaign. Already the Japanese have relinquished some of their conquests, notably the port of Foochow, and reports persist that further withdrawals are to come.

The Japanese military authority in Shanghai quoted recently said flatly that the United States must choose between Japan and China, that any accord "must be at the expense of Chungking," that none is possible as long as the United States aid to China continues. But the civil government in Tokyo may be preparing to recede from this position. Even the military authority hinted that concessions on French Indo-China were not impossible.

The possibility remains that the Japanese, in their much publicized search for an accord with the United States, merely are stalling for time, seeking to postpone the fateful day when they must choose between the Axis and the Anglo-Saxon combination. They would give much for another six months' or a year's grace.

Do Not Consider Choice Final

There are accumulating evidences that they do not consider that choice finally made, in spite of the treaty they signed with the Axis last September.

Also the Japanese leaders may be building up a picture of a sincere effort to reach terms with the United States so that if they must choose the path of war they can go before their people with the plea that their efforts for peace were rejected.

Further, there is apparent in all the talk of negotiations with the United States the continuing effort to divide the United States from Britain, from China or from Russia. It is noteworthy that the Japanese are announcing their intention of withdrawing their nationals from the British Empire, but taking no such step with respect to American territories.

Japanese Emperor Takes Over Defense To Curb Military

New Headquarters Set Up Believed Barrier to Army Dissatisfaction

By the Associated Press.

SEP 12 1941

TOKIO, Sept. 11—A national defense headquarters, under direct control of the Emperor and apparently apart from the regular imperial high command, was established today for Japan, Korea, Formosa and Sakhalin.

The new system was interpreted as designed to strengthen home defense and at the same time to check militaristic domination of imperial policy and erect a barrier to possible dissatisfaction among the military group with the future course of events.

Gen. Otozo Yamada, an old-line conservative whose fame dates back to the Russo-Japanese war, was named commander in chief of the new headquarters, answerable directly to Emperor Hirohito, in whose favor he is said to rank high.

Gen. Yamada also will retain his old job as inspector of general military education.

Japan Split Into Four Areas.

All national defense activities of Korean and Formosan garrisons as well as the air forces attached thereto will be placed directly under the new headquarters.

A new system of defense provides for the division of Japan proper into four military districts, the eastern, western, central and northern.

Domei, Japanese news agency, in reporting the new setup did not explain what relation the national defense headquarters would have with the imperial high command, which includes the army and the navy.

Liaison Conference Held.

The high command held a liaison conference with the government earlier in the day. This was followed by a luncheon given by the Emperor for Premier Prince Konoye and other cabinet members in appreciation of their outstanding services to the state an announcement said.

Meanwhile, the Japanese economic federation suggested to the Finance Ministry that it institute a campaign to prevent inflation caused by mounting expenditures and a shortage of materials.

The federation recommended a nation-wide savings program, a system of deferred pay, lottery tickets and special taxation privileges for savings bank depositors. The deferred pay plan called for giving workers part of their salaries in cash and the balance in government bonds.

The Government announced coal supplies would be rationed this winter with priority given to factories, stores and plants where coal is indispensible for defense needs. Gasoline already has been rationed.

With further operation of gasoline-powered taxicabs banned and charcoal burners restricted, the rain-soaked streets of Tokio presented a particularly deserted appearance today.

The newspaper Yomiuri called it a "return to the good old days," accompanying its feature article with a large picture of jinrikisha on the main street.

Only physicians, local newspapermen and government officials were permitted to operate gasoline automobiles.

The Imperial Rule Assistance Association announced that Fumio Goto, former Home Minister, had been appointed chairman of its Central Co-operative Council, replacing Admiral Nobumasa Suetsugu.

Domei reported that the National Mobilization Inquiry Committee approved the drafts of ordinances calling for compulsory labor service for men up to 40 and women up to 25.

Umekichi Yoneyama, chairman of the Mitsui Trust Co. and former president of the dissolved Japan-Manchukuo Rotary Club, turned over 38,000 yen (approximately $9,000) from club funds to the International Students' Association today to assist foreign students inconvenienced by fund-freezing regulations.

British ships rarely dock at Rangoon, but materials arrive in American or American-chartered vessels, Domei reported.

French Warship Off to Japan

TOKIO, Sept. 11 (AP).—Domei news agency announced in a Hanoi dispatch today that the cruiser Lamotte-Picquet, 7,249-ton flagship of the French Indo-China fleet, was heading to Japan for a month's repair work at Japanese yards.

Accord With U. S. Held Unlikely.

Shanghai, Sept 11 (A. P.).—Well-informed spokesmen in Shanghai expressed the belief today that no agreement between the United States and Japan is likely at present, despite indications from Washington and Tokio that an accord may be near. Tending to strengthen this negative impression, a high Japanese Army officer here said that while Japan is anxiously seeking an agreement with the United States, "it must be at the expense of Chungking."

He refused to confirm or deny reports that a possible general settlement might include Japanese withdrawal from French Indo-China and part of China, but hinted that this may be possible on a give-and-take basis, saying: "It is out of the question to discuss a Japanese withdrawal from China so long as the United States sends military assistance to Chungking. The United States must choose between Japan and Chungking."

30.24— 11759 30.24 - 11759

Authorized American spokesmen, commenting on this statement, said there was no reason to believe the United States was contemplating any alteration of its policy of supporting the Chungking Government.

A high Japanese army officer said here today that the Tokyo Government, with united support of all factions, was seeking an amicable settlement of its dispute with the United States if the settlement did no involve a surrender by Japan.

This officer has just returned from a flying trip to Tokyo, which he said was for the express purpose of informing himself and the Japanese command in China regarding "reports of confusion" among the Japanese leaders and people over national policy.

At Chungking's Expense

He said he found no confusion but instead a unanimous desire to reach an understanding with the United States.

He said he talked with "generals and statesmen" whose personal views probably reflected the trend of present thought in Tokyo.

Nazi Move In China Reported

SEP 12 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Shanghai, Sept. 11 — Unconfirmed Chinese reports from generally reliable sources in Peiping said today that the Chinese National Socialist party there was preparing to form a "North China autonomous government."

Its purpose would be to forestall any effect of a Japanese-American rapprochement on North China's already fairly strong political and economic autonomy, it was said.

Prompted by Germans and approved by the Japanese, the Government would be built along the lines of the one operating in Manchoukuo, the report said.

Nazi Reported Taking Hand

A secret meeting, September 3, attended by high Japanese and pro-Nazi Chinese as well as Dr. Walter Fuchs, veteran German diplomat, decided to announce the new Government when Japanese and American negotiations appeared to be nearing a successful conclusion, the report said.

Fuchs is head of the Deutschland Institute in Peiping, a supposedly cultural organization. Actually, reports said, Fuch's institute is spending vast sums entertaining political and other important Chinese in the city.

Wiedemann Rumor

Peiping observers were reported to be linking the alleged plans for a North China autonomous Government with advices from South America that Capt. Fritz Wiedemann, former German counsul general in San Francisco, was en route to China via South America to become consul general in Tientsin, thus indicating the importance the Germans may attach to North China's political potentialities.

Attracting attention also was an announcement in the Peiping press of the formation of a Chinese-German-Japanese trading corporation called the San Yang Company with capital equivalent to $10,000,000 in United States money. The company's announced purpose is to rebuild Chinese-German trade. Observers here said they were unable to see how such trade could be rebuilt in view o Great Britain's control of the sea and Russia's regulation of the Trans Siberian Railroad.

MALAYA EXPORTS RISE

July Total Sets New Peak as Russia Buys.

Singapore, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—British Malaya today reported exports valued at $55,674,000 during July, the highest monthly total ever recorded. One item consisted of $3,189,000 worth of goods, chiefly rubber and tin, sent to Russia, the first such shipments since the outbreak of war.

July trade with the United States netted the Imperial War Treasury $29,343,000, with imports from that country amounting to $2,362,000.

Despite an over-all increase in exports, rubber and tin were 17,000 tons and 18,000 tons, respectively, behind the quotas set by international committees.

This was attributed partly to shipping shortages early in the year and to the reluctance of plantation and mine owners to make large capital outlays to increase production sharply.

Imports to South Africa Restricted

Private Purchases Now Subject to Permit

JOHANNESBURG, Sept. 11 (AP) —The government of the Union of South Africa advised importers and consumers today that private purchase in the United States of steel, oil and certain other articles no longer would be possible.

Beginning Sept. 15, it was announced, goods from countries outside the British commonwealth would be subject to permit unless already in transit. There were minor exceptions.

In addition to steel and oil, the private purchase of metals, motor vehicles except passenger cars, fertilizers, machine tools, tobacco, sulphur, timber and agricultural machinery would be impossible.

Arrangements, however, may be may be made by the government with other countries in the commonwealth to obtain goods for essential purposes under the Lease-Lend Act.

Chile Holds 3 In Nazi Probe

SEP 12 1941

Santiago, Chile, Sept. 11—Police officials investigating alleged Nazi activities in Chile held three Germans in custody overnight and released eight others after questioning.

A number of other Germans were ordered to appear today for questioning, the police said.

Those held were identified as officials of German firms and banks here.

ARGENTINES ASK BAN ON NAZI AIDE

Conservative Deputies Cry Out Against Ambassador Von Thermann

Chamber Debates Action On Envoy Said To Have Abused Privileges

SEP 12 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Buenos Aires, Sept. 11—A demand that the German Ambassador, Edmund von Thermann, be declared persona non grata on grounds of abusing his diplomatic privileges was indorsed unexpectedly tonight by the Conservative bloc of the Chamber of Deputies.

Cries of "he's got to go" arose amid cheers which greeted the announcement made by Reynaldo Pastor, Conservative leader.

In making his announcement Pastor said "after we adopt this (resolution) it will be up to the German Ambassador to see if he still wishes to stay."

The chamber adjourned after hours of debate without voting on the resolution asking the executive branch of the Government to declare Von Thermann's presence no longer desirable, but the Conservative decision ended doubt about adoption of the measure.

An Argentine Congressional committee investigating subversive activities told the chamber that Von Thermann headed an "almost military" organization of cells disciplined by storm troops and secret police, and financed by taxes on the pay checks of German workers and their Argentine-born sons sworn to support Adolf Hitler "to the death."

Lashly Says U. S. Accepts Challenge to Democracy

Bar Association Head Defines Issue in Toronto Talk

TORONTO, Sept. 11 (AP).—Jacob M. Lashly, of St. Louis, president of the American Bar Association, told the Canadian Bar Association here today that the United States has accepted Hitler's challenge to democracy.

"We will build all our moral support and physical efforts toward the ultimate victory and revival of the democratic ideals," he said in a luncheon address at the association's annual meeting.

"The war which is raging across the seas today can no longer be viewed as just an armed conflict among nations. Even should the democracies of the Western Hemisphere be presently arranged alongside their brethren of the northern provinces and be plunged into total war it still would be inaccurate to describe it as an international war.

"Whether Britain, or Germany, or Italy, or Russia, or the United States shall survive the war is no longer the most important question. More fundamental and vital is the question: Which way of life, which philosophy of government, which standard of morality will eventually prove dominant?"

WAR WORKERS OUT IN CANADIAN SHOP

St. Catharines, Ont., Sept. 11. (AP)—A number of workers at McKinnon Industries, Ltd., which is engaged in war work, went on strike today, after a four-month-old dispute over wages between the company and the United Automobile Workers of America.

The strike went into effect at 7 a. m., when the night shift left the plant. Early picketing was orderly and Police Chief William Shennan said there had been no disturbances.

The McKinnon plant manufactures parts for motorized vehicles, anti-aircraft guns and munitions and the strike may curtail production in the General Motors plants at Oshawa, Ont., and Windsor, Ont., at the Chrysler plant at Windsor and at the Canadian General Electric Company's plant in Peterborough, Ont.

Including all shifts, McKinnon Industries employe 4,500 workers but neither the company nor the union would estimate how many were on strike. One unofficial estimate said that 1,000 strikers and sympathizers were outside the plant this morning .

The union has asked for a 10-cent-on-hour increase for workers who are paid on an hourly basis and a 15 per cent increase for bonus and piece workers. The company has stated it was complying with the dominion government's war-time policy which calls for a cost-of-living bonus instead of straight wage increases.

TRIO PUSHING FOR WAR, SAYS LINDBERGH

Jews, Roosevelt Administration And British Thus Charged

Iowa Audience Described As Most Unruly Flyer Has Faced

SEP 12 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Des Moines, Iowa, Sept. 11—"The British, the Jewish and the Roosevelt Administration" were charged tonight by Charles A. Lindbergh as "the three most important groups which have been pressing this country toward war."

Speaking before what was called the most unruly audience he has faced, the famous flyer's points were received with a chorus of mingled boos and cheers. The address was sponsored by the America First Committee and was broadcast.

Catcalls, Cheers Continue

Despite the admonition of several committee leaders that the crowd "not disgrace Iowa," the catcalls continued with the cheers as Lindbergh accused the three groups he named and other "war agitators" of planning a step-by-step campaign to put the United States into the conflict.

Earl C. Jeffrey, Chicago, national director of field operations for America First, who estimated the crowd at 8,500, declared "this is the worst I've seen."

"It is a very small minority, however," he added, referring to the vocal opposition. "It looks like an organized attempt to sabotage the meeting."

The audience heard President Roosevelt by radio before Lindbergh spoke on "Who Are the War Agitators?"

Tells Alleged Plan

"They planned: First, to prepare the United States for foreign war under the guise of American defense; second, to involve us in the war, step by step, without our realization; third, to create a series of incidents which would force us into the actual conflict," he said.

"Only the creation of sufficient 'incidents' yet remains; and you see the first of these already taking place, according to plan—a plan that was never laid before the American people for their approval."

A package of America First cards thrown from the balcony struck and knocked down a plant in a vase directly in front of the flyer.

Roosevelt Cheered

The crowd cheered President Roosevelt eleven distinct times during his address.

Robert J. Bannister, of Des Moines, meeting chairman, and others on the speakers platform, including the minister who pronounced invocation, were both booed and cheered as they entered.

Terming England's position "desperate," Lindbergh asserted:

"Her population is not large enough and her armies are not strong enough to invade the continent of Europe and win the war she declared against Germany. Her geographical position is such that she cannot win the war by aviation alone regardless of how many planes we send her.

"Even if America entered the war, it is improbable that she Allied armies could invade Europe and overcome the Axis powers."

Lindbergh said he could understand why the Jewish people desired the overthrow of the Nazi regime.

"The persecution they suffered in Germany would be sufficient to make bitter enemies of any race. No person with a sense of the dignity of mankind can condone the persecution of the Jewish race in Germany."

Advice To Jewish Groups

He advised, however, "that instead of agitating for war, the Jewish groups in this country should be opposing it in every possible way, for they will be among the first to feel its consequences."

Tolerance, he declared "cannot survive war and devastation."

"Their greatest danger to this country," he said of the Jews, "lie in their large ownership and influence in our motion pictures, our press, our radio and our Government."

Charging the international situation had been used to obtain a third Presidential term, the flyer declared "the power of the Roosevelt Administration depends upon the maintenance of a wartime emergency."

"The danger of the Roosevelt Administration lies in its subterfuge," he said. "While its members have promised us peace, they have led us to war—heedless of the platform upon which they were elected.

Assails Lease-Lend

"If any one of these groups—the British, the Jewish, or the Administration—stops agitating for war, I believe there will be little danger of our involvement."

Lindbergh assailed the lend-lease program for sending a major part of American plane production abroad.

"Today, two years after the start of the war," he said, "the American army has only a few hundred thoroughly modern bombers and fighters—less in fact, than Germany is able to produce in a single month.

"Ever since its inception, our arms program has been laid out for the purpose of carrying on the war in Europe far more than for the purpose of building an adequate defense for America."

IMMINENT NEW STEPS TO CHECK INFLATION SEEN

Morgenthau Says Treasury and Reserve Officials Have Conferred

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11 (AP)—Imminent new steps by the Administration to checkmate inflationary tendencies were indicated today by Secretary Morgenthau, who disclosed that Treasury and Federal Reserve Board officials have been conferring for a week "on the whole problem of what should be done to meet the present situation."

Study Whole Situation

He said the "whole fiscal and monetary situation is being explored."

Morgenthau suggested what might lie ahead in his pronouncement on inflation Tuesday night before the Advertising Club of Boston, when he declared:

"We may have to extend general controls over bank credit and create controls over selected capital expenditures."

At a press conference today, the Treasury chief evaded specific questions about the discussions with the Reserve Board which he said had been going on "continuously." He declined even to name those taking part.

Asked whether a principal item was the board's proposal last December for expansion of its power to increase bank reserves, Morgenthau said, "We have traveled a long way since December."

Some officials recalled the capital issues committee set up during the World War to examine proposed new security issues for their possible drain on men and materials needed for the war effort. The committee examined proposed issues totalling $2,350,000,000 and disapproved about 20 per cent, but had to depend on patriotism to enforce its findings.

Similar Examination

A somewhat similar examination has been under way at the Securities Commission since early in the year, although the commission's authority is limited to a requirement of adequate disclosure of pertinent facts.

The Federal Reserve Board wants additional power to increase the reserve requirements and thus make less money available for lending. The board has used all but about one seventh of its power and could add only about $1,000,000,000 to the total reserve requirements, while the lendable excess of such reserves is over $5,000,000,000.

Increases in reserve requirements and regulation of new capital are only two of the prospective measures, some officials said, still higher taxes and enforced savings were cited as possibilities.

One of the steps Morgenthau advocates is the release of food surpluses to hold down prices by increasing the available supplies. He said today that he also favored unlimited imports of wheat from Canada.

SPAB TO GIVE INVENTORY OF DEFENSE NEED

Priorities Board to Make Detailed Diagram of All Materials.

KEY TO INDUSTRIAL AID

Includes Civilian, Military, Navy and Air Essentials Under Lend-lease.

Washington, Sept. 11.—The Supply Priorities and Allocations Board moved today to make an over-all inventory of the nation's military and civilian requirements designed to give defense planners a detailed diagram of materials needed, likely shortages of specific supplies and a key to individual expansion needs.

SPAB instructed its executive director, Donald M. Nelson, to work out the schedule to include a detailed outline of both civilian and military needs, taking in procurement schedules for army, navy and air force and such goods as are to go abroad under the lend-lease and defense aid programs.

Both the military production schedules and the statements of civilian requirements are to be broken down into schedules of the raw materials, labor and machinery needed for their production.

Problem of Shortage.

SPAB called the inventory a move striking directly at the allied problems of shortages of essential materials and expansion of productive facilities. Its announcement said:

"In calling for this long range, all-inclusive survey of the nation's total needs under the defense program, SPAB followed the view that there must be one authority to develop the official requirement figures on both levels, holding that there would be confusion otherwise, because the several parts of the requirement picture must be developed by separate agencies."

Meanwhile SPAB announced it had denied, at least temporarily, the Tennessee Eastman Corporation's request for priorities on materials to expand its plastics plan at Kingsport, Tenn. The board found immediate construction was not advisable, although it would have produced plastics capable of replacing 8,000,000 pounds of aluminum, 18,000,000 pounds of chrome plated nickel steel, 6,000,000 pounds of stainless steel and 34,000,000 pounds of zinc.

"Building of the plant would have required the use of large amounts of various critical materials, including stainless steel, which is inadvisable in view of an expected early winter increase in the demand for nickel for armor plate and ordnance items," SPAB ruled.

Henderson Motor Quota Head.

"Hundreds of similar applications are on hand and no single one can properly be granted until it is known how much of a drain on scarce materials would bei nvolved in granting all of them."

Meanwhile William S. Knudsen, director of the Office of Production Management, announced that Leon Henderson, director of civilian supply, had been put in control of automobile quotas. Mr. Henderson was also given primary responsibility for dealing with industries serving civilian needs.

To get critical materials in ever-increasing quantities, Jesse Jones, Federal Loan Administrator, announced plans for producing an additional 30,000,000 pounds of aluminum a year and an additional 112,000,000 pounds of magnesium.

FORD SHOWS OFF NEW EFFORTS IN MANUFACTURING

BY DAVID J. WILKIE
Associated Press Automotive Editor

Detroit, Sept. 11.—Henry Ford, who believes that war never settled any dispute among the earth's peoples, showed a large group of newspaper and trade magazine writers today a few phases of the huge part he is taking in the automotive industry's $2,000,000 armament program.

At the same time he presented for private previewing the 1942 model automobiles his company will make in sharply reduced volume during the coming years because of the defense emergency.

Ford long ago explained the apparent paradox of his hatred of war and his factories in full blast on war material manufacture.

"I hate war," he said, "so I'm fighting like the devil to end it."

The Ford Motor Company has armament contracts — chiefly for bomber planes and aviation engines —totalling more than a half billion dollars. Already in production is a Pratt & Whitney radial, air-cooled aviation motor; in early prospect is mass production of the gigantic Consolidated B-24D bomber planes and in experimental testing is a 12-cylinder, V-type, liquid cooled motor with an injector fuel system and exhaust operated super-charger.

Shown today was the Pratt & Whitney engine in production in the new $37,000,000 aircraft engine plant Ford has built within the River Rouge factory grounds. The aircraft production program contemplates the delivey of 40 engines a day by next Spring. Currently the assembly schedule is one engine daily. The initial order to Ford is for 4,238 of the big double-row radial engines for the United States Army.

Hustling Bombing Plane Factory

Also shown today was the huge $47,000,000 bomber plane factory under construction day and night east of Ypsilanti and some 18 miles west of the main Ford factory in suburban Dearborn.

In this plant, which will include a mile-long assembly line as well as a flying and testing field Ford expects to build not only sub-assemblies for the four-engined 28-ton attack planes, but also complete bombers ready to fly. The plane factory, described as potentially the biggest of its type in the United States represents the major phase of the Ford defense undertaking. It is expected to be ready for occupancy soon after the first of next January.

A $480,000,000 contract awarded to Ford calls for sub-assemblies for 100 planes and 75 completed bombers a month, a program expected to be attained late next Spring.

The Ford war production effort includes also a new magnesium foundry for making lightweight castings for airplane engines; the assembly of small "Jeep" or army reconnaissance trucks; Red Cross wagons and mobile field kitchens. The latter, of which Ford has presented a large number as a gift to Britain, are equipped for feeding the people of bombed areas on short notice.

The new model automobiles shown today included the new six cylinder engine vehicle as well as the various types of Lincoln, Mercury and Ford units. Announced as new optional equipment on the 1942 Lincoln and Mercury cars is a newly perfected automatic gear shift called the "liquamatic drive." Distinctive new frontal designs have been adopted for the entire Ford line.

DAVIES INSISTS THERE STILL IS 'GAS' SHORTAGE

Contradicts Senate Probers, Declares Conservation Must Continue

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11 (AP) — Bluntly disputing a conclusion of a Senate committee that there is no gasoline shortage in the East, the defense petroleum co-ordinator's office asserted today that a shortage does exist and that conservation measures must continue.

As Previously Reported

Ralph K. Davies, acting co-ordinator in the absence of Secretary of the Interior Ickes on vacation, said in a statement:

"Our appraisal of the present and future stock deficiency remains as previously reported, and the necessity for public co-operation continues. To the co-ordinator's office, the admittedly low condition of petroleum stocks on the East Coast continues to mean shortage and the necessity for appropriate action."

The Senate committee in a report to the Senate earlier in the day had expressed the opinion that there was no existing shortage and had recommended that restrictions on deliveries of gasoline to filling stations be lifted.

By order of the petroleum co-ordinator's office, deliveries to retail outlets in the last five weeks have been held 10 per cent below July deliveries.

No Opinion on Curfew

In another conservation move, the office also has asked that filling stations close between 7 p. m. and 7 a. m. The five-man Senate group expressed no opinion regarding this curfew.

"We have not deemed it a part of our duty," the unanimous report said, "to make a study of petroleum prices, or the question of what hours gasoline stations should operate."

In addition to disagreeing with Ickes' office on the necessity for a cut in gasoline deliveries, the Senate group expressed the opinion that "in the handling of the petroleum problem unnecessary alarm was created."

"We are of the opinion that this was caused by over-enthusiasm on the part of those charged with the direction of the petroleum situation," their report added.

Sees No Danger

The Senate group said there appeared to be no danger of a lack of fuel for heating homes or operating defense industries, and that "with proper conservation motorists should find it possible to acquire the gasoline and oil products which they need."

"Paradoxical as it sounds, the shortage, as we see it, is a shortage of surplus—and not a shortage of products, or a lack of facilities to transport them," Senator Maloney (D-Conn.), chairman of the committee, informed the Senate in what he described as a preliminary report.

Completion of new tanker ships, use of railroad tank cars, and a dozen odd methods for increasing petroleum supplies were said to be adequate to take care of future needs as far as they could be seen now.

STIMSON PRAISES MORALE OF ARMY

Says Public Debate Hurts Soldier Esprit.

SEP 12 1941

Washington, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—Secretary of War Stimson said today that as a whole soldier morale was very good, but that public debate over the whole purpose for which the army is being trained has had a depressing effect on army esprit.

At a press conference the Secretary cited in the latter connection a story about Abraham Lincoln dealing with a similar problem in 1863. Lincoln, according to the story, questioned the justice of shooting a soldier for desertion while nothing was done to an agitator who incited the man to desert.

"I think," Lincoln was quoted as saying, "that in such a case to silence the agitator and save the boy is not only constitutional but withal a great mercy."

The Secretary was asked whether in his opinion such an attitude also should apply to 1941, but he responded by saying, "Well, I leave that to you."

Mr. Stimson said that another factor militating against morale in some instances was lack of military equipment. "That is a self-evident obstacle that we're trying to get rid of, as of course everybody is," he said.

The Secretary also reported that the army was on the way toward taking the "drastic, painful step" of removing least capable officers from troop command and replacing them with men of proved leadership.

Maneuver Tests Set

Washington, Sept. 11 (AP)—The army reported today that its total strength was 1,587,190 officers and men, including 705,000 selective service trainees.

[By the Associated Press]

SEP 12 1941

Washington, Sept. 11—The "finest air force in the world" in point of quality of aircraft, will go into action Monday in the Louisiana maneuvers between the Second and Third Armies, Robert A. Lovett, Assistant Secretary of War for Air, told a press conference today.

Lovett said his estimate of the unmatched caliber of new American-built warplanes was based on "the best information available from abroad" and on tests made by United States pilots with foreign aircraft.

12 To 15 Planes In Squadron

Deliveries, he said, have been speeded to the point of equipping a squadron—twelve to fifteen planes—every two days.

"In point of quantity, we still have a long way to go, but production is now beginning to roll," he said. "Our share of it from here on should enable us to equip combat units at the rate of about one squadron every other day. This rate should increase in the coming months."

Lovett said even better models of the planes he praised were "on the way."

"Fastest Plane In World"

The Assistant Secretary gave some hitherto undisclosed details on performance and armament of the combat planes to be placed at disposal of the Second and Third air-task forces which will collaborate with ground troops in the mock warfare.

The two-engined Lockheed P-38 interceptor, a strik[illegible] departure in pursuit ship design, is the "fastest military plane in the world today" with a speed well over 400 miles an hour with full military load, Lovett said.

It is armed with two 37-millimeter cannon and an unstated number of 50-caliber machine guns.

Other Types Listed

Besides the P-38, the Second and Third Army air commanders will have two other types of pursu[illegible]e Bell P-39 "Cannon With Wings" and the brand new Curtiss P-40E; two types of medium bombers, the Martin B-26 and the North American B-25; the Douglas A-20 attack bomber, or light bomber; and the Douglas A-24 dive bomber, the same plane as the navy's dive bomber which is recognized as the finest in existence.

Two squadrons of army dive bombers will give Blitzkrieg realism to the half-million troops in the war games, besides two squadrons lent by the navy and Marine Corps. As recently as June, officers had doubted that the army could get deliveries of the A-24's by maneuver time.

In each of the four main classifications—pursuit ships, light bombers, medium bombers and dive bombers—the air force has planes which "in maneuverability, performance and fire power represent the last word in fighting equipment," Lovett said.

He rated the Douglas A-20 attack bomber superior to anything in its class for its function of bombing ammunition dumps, bridges and troop concentrations. The British use it as a night fighter under the name "Havoc."

Other Good Planes.

The B-25 medium bomber, with a top speed of only slightly under "certain famous fighter types currently used abroad," has range, speed and bomb-load capacity beyond any foreign medium bomber, Lovett said. The Martin B-26, slightly faster at top speed, has a cruising speed which makes it the fastest bomber of its class in the air.

The single-engined pursuit ships are the Bell P-39 and the Curtiss P-40E. The waspish-looking P-39 mounts a 37mm. cannon as well as 50 and 30 caliber machine guns and is rated without equal as a middle-altitude fighter.

The new P-40 performs at high altitudes to meet modern sub-stratosphere bombers, and is a higher powered and more heavily armed successor to the P-40 employed by the British under the name of "Tomahawk" in the Middle East. It mounts six 50-caliber machine guns.

NAVY DEFENDS USE OF GUN TO HALT NEWSMEN

Says They Knew Boats Not Allowed to Come Close to Seattle Station

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11 (AP)—The Navy Department said today that newspapermen who were fired upon at the naval air station at Seattle, Wash., on Sept. 4 "were fully aware of the limits about the naval air station that were considered restricted areas."

Official Version

According to the Navy's official account, four shots were fired "well forward of the boat," occupied by the newsmen, by a guard using a .45-caliber pistol. The boat, the Navy said, had been ordered to halt.

The Navy account was a report from the commandant of the 13th Naval District at Seattle on the incident which occurred upon the arrival at Seattle from Sitka, Alaska, of two Russian planes carrying Moscow officials.

The Navy said that staffs of the daily newspapers in Seattle had received careful explanations of "the regulations concerning restricted areas now in force at the naval air station."

When the first plane came in, the report said, two small boats circled it and moved with it toward the loading ramp well within the defense area, the outer limit of which was given as 100 yards from the ramp.

Warned by Whistle

"These two boats, now within 100 feet of the ramp," it said, "were warned by sentries' whistle to move out. This they refused to do and came even closer.

"A crash boat was then ordered to bring them in and upon approach of the crash boat one of the small craft started to speed away.

"Four warning shots to halt were fired well forward of the boat by a guard, using a .45-caliber pistol. At the fourth shot, the boat stopped and the crews of both boats were brought ashore."

Films in the cameras, the report said, were developed by the Navy and "many of the pictures showed clearly the industrial section of the naval air station."

The Navy said that the boat which attempted to flee contained "photographers attached to the Seattle Times," while the boat which stopped when ordered to do so contained "photographers from the Post-Intelligencer."

PROBERS BAN WAR PROPAGANDA FILM

Refuse to Halt Hearing To See Questioned Movies

SEP 12 1941

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11 (AP)—Senators investigating charges of war propaganda in the film industry refused today to interrupt testimony and see the pitcures in question.

Senator McFarland (D-Ariz.) saying the Interstate Commerce sub-committee was "wasting a lot of time," urged a showing of the films because "the best evidence is the pictures themselves."

"Let's see the pictures and discontinue the bunk," added Wendell Willkie, the industry's counsel, in a statement to reporters.

But the committee rejected the proposal, Chairman Clark (D-Ida.) saying it would be impossible to see all the pictures mentioned, in the charges by Senator Clark (D-Mo) and Nye (R-ND.)

The request was made by McFarland when John T. Flynn, newspaper and magazine writer, asserted from the witness stand that a small group of men controlling the moving picture business was attempting to involve the United States in war.

SAYS FILMS CENSORED

Flynn contended:

"First, that there is a monopoly; second, that the monopoly exercises the most rigid censorship on the moving pictures in its own interests; third, that it has banned not only pictures affecting millions, but pictures based on political themes, and that at this very moment this hated censorship is being exercised to suppress one side of this debate affecting the lives and fortunes of 130,000,000 Americans . . .

"I do not think an intelligent man can have any doubt in his mind that this censorship is being used now to club those who want to present the side of peace in America and to promote the glorification of war, the interests of the British Empire and the involvement of the United States in a war which may destroy its liberties even though we win the war . . .

"I charge that the moving picture industry is using the screen in a concerted effort to make propaganda for the involvement of the United States in this war."

FEARS FASCISM

SEP 12 1941

Flynn said that he was opposed to Hitler but was "more against Fascism than I am against Hitler because I see in Hitler merely an excrescence thrown up by the economic and social chaos of Europe."

At the same time, he told the committee, he saw "in Hollywood and its monopoly of a great instrument of culture, something very closely resembling that kind of thinking which I understand as Fascism."

Willkie, counsel for the movie industry, asserted that in Flynn's testimony "the old monopoly humbug is dragged out again to divert attention momentarily from the real object of the investigation — the sabotage of the country's foreign policy."

Chairman Clark told reporters the committee would go ahead with testimony for several days next week.

Later he said, it would be possible to make a selection of films to be examined.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11 (AP).—Senator Pepper, Democrat, of Florida said yesterday that the Senate inquiry into the motion picture industry was a witch-hunt organized by a group of isolationists seeking to censor films not reflecting their viewpoint.

Biddle Gets One More Assignment

Envoy to Czechoslovakian Government in Exile

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11 (AP) — Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, Jr., of Pennsylvania was given an additional diplomatic assignment by President Roosevelt today to go along with the five he has had for many months.

He was nominated to be American minister to the Czechoslovakian government in exile in London, where he already serves as this country's diplomatic representative to the exiled governments of Poland, Belgium, Norway, the Netherlands and Yugoslavia.

Legionnaires Assail Totalitarian Powers

Committee Report Disapproves Any Compromise In U. S. Dealings With "Bandits"

Milwaukee, Sept. 11 (AP)—The foreign relations committee of the American Legion today denounced the totalitarian powers of the world as international bandits and expressed strong disapproval of any compromise in American dealings with them.

The committee's expression was contained in the report it will submit to the Legion's national convention here September 15-18. The report carried the signatures of Harry A. Sullivan, chairman, of Denver, and the committee membership: Adrian L. Bushman, of Clayton, Mo.; Anson T. McCook, of Hartford, Conn.; Drury M. Phillips, of Huntsville, Texas, and Robin S. Kirby, of Charlotte, N. C.

Defense Officials Outline Steel Industry Policies

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11 (AP)—Defense officials outlined to the steel industry today the policies of the Supply Priorities and Allocation Board in a closed meeting attended by executives of a number of major companies and by representatives of nearly a dozen government agencies.

The steel officials are members o[illegible]

the Iron and Steel Industry Defense Advisory Committee.

Among those who attended were Ernest T. Weir of National Steel, Tom Girdler of Republic, Benjamin J. Fairless of U. S. Steel and Eugene G. Grace of Bethlehem.

William S. Knudsen, Leon Henderson, Donald M. Nelson and other defense officials were scheduled to address the conference.

its cargo of American food supplies.

The Leda, a 4115-ton freighter bought from Panamanian interests, reached her home port three days ago, according to a notice received from Robert Brennan, Irish minister in the United States.

Carrying wheat and machinery, she left her Brooklyn pier on July 12 and proceeded to Halifax where she joined a transatlantic convoy.

F. B. I. Silent On Dismissals

Washington, Sept. 11 (AP)—Federal Bureau of Investigation officials refused today to discuss the dismissal of three special agents in New York for "personal misconduct" and said stories of a nation-wide F. B. I. shake up were "too fantastic" for denial.

Officials said the bureau had a long-standing policy of refraining from comment on the departure of employes from the service on the ground that such matters are entirely personal and should be left to the former employe himself for discussion.

From an authoritative source in New York it was learned the agents were discharged "with prejudice for association with a person or persons contrary to the best interests of the bureau."

Hurley Urges Repeal Of U. S. Neutrality Act

Hoover's Secretary Of War Says It Is A Cowardly Surrender Of Freedom Of Seas

Washington, Sept. 11 (AP)—Patrick J. Hurley, Secretary of War under President Hoover, urged today that Congress repeal the Neutrality Act, which he called "a cowardly surrender of the freedom of the seas."

Every American ship and individual going into the war zone or attempting to run the Germans' blockade, Hurley said, is violating the act. He added:

"We are a democracy and a democracy must survive on its integrity. If we are going into this war we should not back into it. We should repeal the Neutrality Act and go into it face forward."

First American-Bought Ship of Eire in Dublin

NEW YORK, Sept. 11 (AP)—Headquarters of the American Friends of Irish Neutrality said today that it had been notified of the arrival in Dublin of the Leda, first ship of Eire's newly acquired merchant marine to deliver

AMAZED THAT RUSSIAN STAYS BY TELESCOPE

Harvard Astronomers Hear Neujmin, Near War Front, Discovers Comet

CAMBRIDGE, Sept. 11 (AP)—Reporting the discovery of a new comet by a Russian astronomer in Eastern Crimea, Harvard scientists expressed amazement tonight that the observer still is standing by his telescope less than 150 miles from the invading German army.

Radiogram Delayed

Harvard's Dr. Fletcher Watson said a delayed radiogram had been received from the Russian Astronomical Observatory at Simeis, East Crimea, that Astronomer G. Neujmin, an expert asteroid observer, had sighted the comet on the 29th of August.

Simeis is east of Odessa, one of the main objectives of the Germans in the Russian war.

"With the international situation as it is," said Watson, "we were amazed that anyone still remains at Simeis."

Watson said he understood Russian reconnaissance planes maintained a steady patrol over Eastern Crimea to prevent a parachute invasion such as was made at Crete.

The Harvard scientist said more observations would be needed before the orbit of the new comet could be plotted.

He said that about a month ago, the same Russian scientist was a co-discoverer of another comet, a faint one, which also had been sighted by an observer in South Africa.

MacKenzie's Views On War Today

SEP 12 1941

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

Probably all of us are acutely conscious of the nearness of the war-danger as we await President Roosevelt's discussion of the position over the air tonight—a talk which cannot be expected to do other than emphasize the gravity of the crisis.

Possibly it is this thought which impelled me to write today on the duration of the war, or maybe the impulse came from the fact that the question most often thrown in my direction is how long the war will last—as though I were a major prophet. Anyway, it certainly is a topic close to all.

The way the European conflict is going right now I for one shouldn't be greatly surprised if it ended sometime next year.

Now that isn't a prophesy, because we know the war might drag on through the ten years for which the Axis claims to be prepared. Such duration isn't likely, however, for if the warring continues a decade poor Europe will be a bag of bones.

The thought that the war might end next year is based on the strong and growing possibility that an already tortured continent won't be able to support the Axis military operations, and may revolt against the terrific burden. Such a thesis presupposes, of course, that the Allies have a good chance to win—a view which this column has previously recorded.

This possibility doesn't condemn Herr Hitler to defeat without further trial. It would be poor judgment to suggest that the creator of the most poweful army in history (paging Moscow on that) hasn't a chance to win, because he has.

We have to know considerably more about the endurance of the Muscovite war machine which has been doing such great things, and which today claims to have mustered the strength to drive a big salient into the heart of the German line in the Smolensk area, before Moscow. We want a further view of the morale of the civilian population, too.

You know they tell us that the continued sounding of a certain high note on a violin may cause the sudden collapse of might stone structures. Herr Hitler says he has so undermined the strength of the Bolshevists that they are on the verge of disintegration. Time alone will prove whether that is so, but we shall be smart not to jump to conclusions.

Hitler may win, but the fact is that he has been grievously hurt in his clash with Russia. His losses in first-line fighting men and equipment have been colossal; he probably has opened up a permanent new war-front which will compel him to defend both east and west simultaneously; and as the Commerce Department in Washington today points out, he has sealed the ring of the Allied blockade by invading Russia and thus has cut himself off, for the time being at least, from vital supplies.

It's unnecessary to dwell over the widespread food shortages on the continent of Europe, or on the epidemics of typhus and other diseases which already are springing up on the trail of the hunger. This column has emphasized that repeatedly.

These facts should be kept in mind, however, for the spirit of revolt which is sweeping through many of the conquered territories is partly due to privation, though mainly to the burning desire to be free again. It will be increasingly difficult for Nazidom to maintain its position over the vanquished.

Look at the news from Norway today. There the anti-Nazi activities have reached the point where the Germans have declared a state of civil siege and the executions have begun. In France there is a similar tale—and so it goes in many parts of Europe.

Meantime the British blockade, which is close to air-tight, is squeezing, squeezing, squeezing. And the Allied fighting machine is growing more powerful, thanks in large degree to America's help.

The British are getting set for an invasion of the continent, and when that comes there will be all possible cooperation by the conquered peoples. They have no weapons, of course, but they can help much.

On the whole it doesn't seem to me so far fetched to say that the war may be over in another year, though as previously remarked, that's not a prediction.

German

BERLIN, Sept. 11 (AP)—The German High Command issued this communiqué today from Adolf Hitler's Headquarters:

In the east, offensive operations continue successfully.

In Northern Africa, German combat planes yesterday scored direct bomb hits on enemy supply dumps at Tobruk [Libya] and Matruh [Egypt] and dispersed motorized columns and destroyed rail facilities in Northern Egypt.

The air force night before last destroyed a 6,000-ton merchantman in the Gulf of Suez. The enemy lost five chasers in dogfights on the North African coast Sept. 9.

There were no enemy operations over Reich territory day or night.

British

SEP 13 1941

LONDON, Sept. 11 (AP)—The Air Ministry issued this communiqué today:

Targets in Northern Italy were attacked by aircraft of the Bomber Command last night. The Royal Arsenal at Turin, which was the main objective, was heavily bombed. Large fires were left burning. Four of our aircraft are missing.

An Air Ministry-Home Security Ministry communiqué said:

During the day a single enemy aircraft dropped bombs harmlessly at one point in Northeast Scotland. Otherwise there is nothing to report.

An Admiralty communiqué said:

The Italian tanker Maya of 3,867 tons has been torpedoed and sunk by one of our submarines in the Aegean.

The Admiralty tonight issued this communiqué:

The Board of Admiralty regret to announce that H. M. S. Tonbridge, Lieut. Comdr. D. E. Brown, R. N. R., an auxiliary vessel, has been sunk. Next of kin of casualties have been informed.

CAIRO, Egypt, Sept. 11 (AP)—The R. A. F. Middle East Command issued the following communiqué today:

Sicily: On the night of Sept. 8-9 R. A. F. heavy bombers attacked the harbor at Palermo. Bombs were dropped on docks and many hits were observed on three main quays and a dry dock. Three large merchant ships are believed to have been damaged. Fire broke out on the northern quay near oil storage installations.

On the same night bombs were dropped on airdromes at Catania and Gerbini and both objectives were machine-gunned.

Heavy bombers of the Royal Air Force attacked a power station, ferry ships and landing stages at Messina during the night of Sept. 9-10.

Many direct hits were scored and fires broke out near commercial oil tanks. Another very big blaze was started in the citadel area.

Aircraft of the fleet air arm on the same night bombed and machine-gunned the airdrome at Castelvetrano, where a large fire was started.

Cyrenaica: Aircraft of the fleet air arm bombed airdromes at Gambut and Menastir on the night of Sept. 9-10. At Gambut bombs fell among aircraft on the ground, two of which were destroyed, while others were damaged.

From these operations all our aircraft returned safely.

British Middle East Headquarters issued the following communiqué today:

Libya: At Tobruk our artillery dispersed a small enemy tank patrol. Enemy air raids were on a heavier scale, but no serious damage or losses resulted. In the frontier area there was some exchange of shellfire.

Italian

ROME, Sept. 11 (AP)—The Italian High Command communiqué today said:

English aircraft last night flew over the cities of Genoa and Turin, in whose outskirts they dropped several bombs. Two civilians were killed and several injured.

The city of Messina suffered new air raids. Several civilian buildings were damaged and four persons were injured among the population. An enemy plane was shot down by the anti-aircraft defense.

Axis aviation continued to successfully pound the harbor and supply works and defense fortifications of Tobruk. Troop cantonments at Matruh and motorized columns in the zone of Siwa oasis also underwent effective attack.

Italian bombers scored a direct hit on a British merchant ship near Tobruk. German planes hit an enemy destroyer in navigation east of Solum. German fighters shot down five Hurricane planes in combat.

In East Africa our troops in the Uolchefit and Culquabert sectors sustained various clashes. The enemy was repelled everywhere and suffered losses.

Russian

SEP 12 1941

Moscow, Sept. 11 (AP)—Today's Soviet Information Bureau communique:

In the course of the night of September 10 our troops continued to engage the enemy stubbornly along the whole front.

The regiment commanded by Serbrov is manfully battling the Rumanian and German troops at Odessa's approaches. There have been times when this regiment repulsed several attacks a day.

Recently our men repulsed a fierce attack by the First Rumanian Regiment of Chasseurs. The Rumanians advanced in dense columns. Allowing the enemy to approach within a short distance, machine gunner "X" was the firs to open fire at the front files. He was followed by other machine gunners, firing at the flanks and front of the advancing enemy. The attack ended badly for the enemy. Leaving hundreds of dead on the battlefield the Rumanians retired.

In another engagement Serbrov's regiment stanchly withstood an attack by a large Rumanian unit supported by fifty tanks. Our men demolished more than twenty of the tanks by anti-tank artillery and fuel bottles and hand grenades and then, passing to the counter-attack, turned the Rumanians to flight.

Despite heavy rai nand low clouds, Senior Lieutenant Sholpov's group of fighters operating in the northwestern direction of the front effected a successful raid on an enemy airdrome. The Fascist flyers were caught unaware. In this attack our flyers set fire to and destroyed by machine guns seven Messerschmitts and several bombers. Senior Lieutenant Sholpov and Lieutenant Aksenov especially distinguished themselves in this raid, destroying four enemy planes.

30.24— 11763 30.24 - 11763

Reports of the exploits of Soviet artillerymen are pouring in from all sectors of the front.

In a stubborn battle in the Western direction, Anti-Tank Gunner Junior Sergeant Makozubov, by accurate fire, put out of action seven enemy tanks. Lieutenant Kileshov's battery, operating in the northwestern direction while supporting an an infantry unit, disabled by direct fire five German tanks, two machine guns and two mine throwers.

Lieutenant Federonko's battery, in the course of one battle, destroyed seven enemy machine-gun pits, a large number of enemy motor-cyclists and eight regimental guns. In the past three days this battery has destroyed twenty-nine machine guns, five mine throwers and two field forts.

Fascist planes attacked a railway train which included fuel cars. A bomb set fire to one car and one engine, and there was danger that fire would spread to the oil tanks. Ruzanov, Totov, Grigoryev, Antonev and Stonikov, of a company of railway troops, who happened to be at the station, put the fire out by vigorous action. Spasky, junior commander of the railway company, displayed exceptional valor and initiative. He jumped onto the blazing engine and put it at full stream, beating down the flames by the speed of the train. Then, by skillful maneuvering, he quickly uncoupled the cars and shunted them in different directions.

On September 4 and 5 Senior Sergeant Bazilevsky's mine-thrower battery annihilated four enemy anti-tank gun crews and three armored cars. In one engagement the mine-throwers were surrounded, but headed by Bazilevsky the valiant fighters routed two Fascist infantry platoons and broke through the encirclement, preserving their mine-throwers intact.

Russia's Long Winter, Closing In on Armies, Brings Perils

SEP 12 1941

By CARL C. CRANMER

NEW YORK.—(The J... Special News Service) — Through a critical Summer—for 12 weeks—the Russians have stood off the Germans. Barring a sudden collapse of Soviet defenses, Adolf Hitler's armies which he has trained for blitzkrieg are fated to endure the fogs, rains, snows and gales of a six to nine month Russian Winter.

The war dispatches make it clear that Winter already is setting in. Steady, pouring rains and fog are reported from the northern front about Leningrad and Smolensk, west of Moscow. A German army reporter speaks of "bottomless mud" about Leningrad.

These are the Autumn rains which will extend to the Ukraine and be succeeded by the long, severe Winter. Not until April in the south, until May or June in the north, will there again be warm weather. And even then there will be the brief Spring when the thaw makes a morass of Russian plains and bogs. Huge ice blocks will grind and crunch along the broad, deep rivers then at flood stage.

RAINS INTERFERE

The Autumn rains and the Spring floods may interfere more with the campaign plans of the German generals than the actual Winter. Fog and rain ground scouting and bombing planes. Tanks and supply trucks become mired in the mud. Floods and ice floes sweep away pontoon bridges. Many a disaster can occur to an army depending upon a tenuous line of communications under such conditions.

It is the common German soldier who will hate the Winter. He will have to march and attack through snow two feet, even three or four feet deep. Terrible Winter gales will sweep his camp.

Snapping below - zero temperatures will numb his body. Added to the immense casualties the Germans have suffered in fighting will be the frozen feet, hands and faces which may send tens of thousands of them to the hospitals.

In the Winter War of 1939-40, the Finns and Russians fought in 40-below zero temperatures north of Leningrad. Extreme cold, however, extends far south to all Russia except the Crimea, a narrow strip north of the Black Sea and parts of the Caucasus.

Kiev, the capital of the Ukraine, is about the same latitude as Newfoundland or Winnipeg. The Caucasus is about the same as New York City or Salt Lake City. Moscow's latitude is about the same as Edmonton or the south shore of Hudson Bay. Leningrad is about the same as the southern tip of Greenland or Anchorage, Alaska.

RUSSIA A GREAT LAND MASS

But too much cannot be read into these latitudes, for Russia is a great land mass, untempered by warm waters.

By December it is cold enough in the Ukraine to freeze over the rivers. Cattle and sheep perish in the blizzards of mid-winter. Even the northern part of the Caspian sea freezes, and occasionally fishermen are trapped on floes there.

By the end of November Leningrad to the north is closed in by ice, and stays that way until May, sometimes June.

The Russians who started their invasion of Finland on Nov. 30, 1939, found themselves stopped by deep snowdrifts almost immediately.

Pictures of Napoleon struggling back from Moscow through the blizzards, however, should not cause Americans to think the same fate is certain to meet Hitler's armies.

SEP 12 1941

Skies over the present front probably will be their clearest in the Winter months. The blue Winter skies will be favorable to aerial operations. The rivers, when thickly frozen over, no longer will be formidable barriers to tanks and masses of infantry. The roads, now deep in mud, will be hard and firm for the movement of supplies.

HARD ON RUSSIANS, TOO

Hard as the Winter may be on the common soldier, it may not be the obstacle for the generals that mud and rain now presents. The Winter will be as cold for the Russians as for the Germans.

Much will depend upon who is best prepared for the weather. Fragmentary reports indicate, the Germans are preparing millions of fur coats for their soldiers, ordering skis to give them mobility, buying horses to substitute wagons and sleighs for their motor supply columns.

If the Russians are as ill-prepared with warm clothing and thick boots as they were in the Finnish campaign, they may be worse off than the Germans when their own Winter descends upon them.

One advantage the Soviets may have—the advantage of positions and trenches already prepared, and warm, largely undestroyed towns, cities and farm houses behind them.

The Germans will find it difficult to dig trenches in the frozen earth when they advance. Joseph Stalin's scorched earth policy will leave little shelter behind them.

Marines Face "Comfortable" Winter at Iceland Posts

Nissen Huts Designed to Withstand Northern Blizzards; Morale High

NO 2

By Drew Middleton

U. S. MARINE CORPS HEADQUARTERS IN ICELAND, Sept. 11 (The Special News Service) (Passed by field censor) — An old saying tells the story:

"The marines have landed and the situation is well in hand."

Have Strong Defenses

A two-day tour of United States marine posts by scout car, truck and once by a stubborn Icelandic pony, disclosed that the marines under Brig. Gen. John Marston have established themselves in positions which are strong defensively and as comfortable as can be expected in a treeless land just under the Arctic circle.

Gen. Marston is satisfied that his troops have done a good job of construction. He and his staff are proud of a cable of congratulations from Gen. Sir John Dill, chief of the British imperial general staff, lauding the marines for their fine appearance in a review before Prime Minister Churchill on the latter's homeward journey after his meeting with President Roosevelt.

Gen. Marston is convinced that the morale of his men is good, but he adds: "We never have to worry about that in the corps."

I talked to about 70 enlisted men and noncoms, and morale certainly appears high. The marines would like more facilities for recreation, such as softball and basketball, and officers have surveyed the craggy Icelandic landscape for possible fields. But every bit of tillable land is a hayfield, and Icelanders won't have their hayfields used for games at any price.

There are remarkably few beefs about food or housing. Some want to go home, but most of these admitted they didn't want to stay home.

"I enlisted in the marines because you keep moving," said one kid from Newcastle, Pa.

"I'd like to get home for a couple of days and show these to the family" — he pointed to his sergeant's chevrons—"and then be moving on again."

The marines get along all right with the British. They still call the Britishers "Limeys" but with an inflection of admiration like that of the true Brooklyn baseball fan when he hollers "You bums" at his Dodgers.

The noncoms — who Gen. Marston says are "as good as any in the world"—are responsible for good morale. They have taught young soldiers—in some battalions the average age of privates is 20—to make themselves at home in a bleak, desolate land.

These noncoms can't understand questions at home about morale.

Take Sgt. Joe Hennessey. "Why in hell shouldn't they feel good?" he asks. "They get three squares a day, they got guns that can shoot and they're in the marines. We don't have any summer soldiers in the Marine Corps."

Posts Cover Many Miles

Marine posts cover many miles. Almost all of the men live in Nissen huts turned over by the British, and the few still under canvas will move into huts when the building program is finished in the next couple of weeks.

"Huts" is a misnomer for these cylinders of tin thickly lined with tar paper. The inside wall is plywood. The British used them in France, and they proved warm even in the winter of 1939-40, the coldest Northern Europe had experienced in 30 years.

So the marines' homes will be snug and warm when the Icelandic winter comes with its blizzards driven by 100-mile-an-hour winds.

Col. W. A. Worton of the Boston Sixth Regiment commands a typical camp, situated on a hillside beside a roaring river which British nobility once fished for salmon, and sheltered partially from the wind.

The Nissen huts have been floored with wood or concrete, with wood and concrete ends. The Marines are naming them. Among the choice names are "Gopher Inn" and "Hogan's Alley"—the kitchen. While I was there, the lunch included soup, roast veal mashed potatoes, string beans, plenty of bread and butter, jelly and coffee.

The cook said fretfully that he was feeding "a lot of blankety - blank boa constrictors" when asked about the marines' appetites.

The officers' mess was about the same. Gen. Marston lunched on soup, hamburger, mashed potatoes, peas, canned fruit and coffee.

Col. Worton is proud of the recreation hall. The movie theater there is showing "That Hamilton Woman." There are about 1000 books, most of them recent and good.

So far as living conditions go, the marines are better off than the British. They have far more facilities for recreation, better if not more food, and more pay.

Effects Of Inflation

SEP 12 1941

When A Nation Fails To Spend All Its Purchasing Power, Chaos Prevails—Wages Can Not Keep Up And Values Depreciate

By CLAUDE A. JAGGER

(... Special News Service)

New York, Sept. 11—What is this vague and shadowy menace?

What is this ugly dragon which we are told will gobble up our income and savings?

Virtually every expert in Washington and in Wall street will assure that it is no myth, that you can feel the hot breath from its nostrils right now, you feel it every time you pay for your groceries.

It is the much-talked-about, long viewed-with-alarm inflation.

It is a vague and shadowy word, but when inflation comes, it is definite and real, as real as hunger.

Doubtless it has come to seem remote or unreal because we have heard about it so long. Ever since the spring of 1933, bankers and economists have been warning of inflation. So perhaps it is not surprising that these later crys of "wolf, wolf" fail to arouse us.

The very word inflation, unfortunately, is a rather abstruse economic term. Economists argue as to proper definitions.

But when it comes, it is very simple, brutally simple. Your money buys less. Most simply stated, prices rise. But there is more to it than that, much more. Only a few years ago the nation was striving to get out of depression by boosting prices. Rising prices are not uncommonly associated with prosperity.

But when inflation comes, prices rise because something is happening to our money.

Reduced to its essentials, inflation occurs when we are creating spendable purchasing power—regardless of whether we use coin, bills or bank checks—faster than we can manufacture goods to meet the demand.

In the early days of the New Deal, we cut the gold content of the dollar by about 40 per cent, and inflation warning signals went up. But it didn't happen. There was vast unused pro-capacity in the country, we could produce all the goods we had money to buy, and more. Later on, heavy government spending brought more warnings, but still nothing much happened, for the same reason.

Now a drastic change has occurred. The inflation warnings of a few years ago mostly originated in conservative financial quarters, and were promptly pooh-poohed in Washington. Now Treasury Secretary Morgenthau leads the parade of viewers-with-alarm.

What has happened is that our productive machinery has had a $50,000,000,000 defense plan saddled upon it. Just start to spend this money has put millions of unemployed to work, has given us a sharp boost in wage rates and in farm income. But vital machinery is working at capacity on defense. It cannot produce all the things that the purchasing power we are creating can buy.

Billions of spending power, thrown into a limited market, inevitably bring skyrocketing prices, unless something is done about it. Rising prices bring imperative demands for higher wages. The bigger labor costs push prices still higher and wages must be boosted again—and that can go on and on, unless something is done about it.

Now if it merely meant that prices and incomes were going up in the same ratio, it wouldn't matter so much. But that can't be accomplished. If experience means anything, wages can't keep up with prices. Also, the savings of the nation are in fixed numbers of dollars. What those dollars will buy becomes smaller and smaller as prices rise.

If the process were unchecked, your old age pension, your savings bank account, your life insurance would become worthless.

That actually happened in Germany after the World War, and it almost happened in France. The fact that middle class savings were wiped out in Germany, in the opinion of many analysts, left the normally stable element of the people so desperate and cynical as to pave the way for Hitlerism.

Probably almost no one thinks that anything as severe as this can happen here. It isn't happening in Europe now. Limited supplies of goods are being rationed and prices controlled. Much has been learned of inflation control since the World War days.

We are only developing our controls in the United States. There are, basically, three steps that can be taken:

1—Goods may be rationed. Although you have money to buy, you can only get as much as your ration card calls for, so you can't bid up the price. This, of course, requires enormously complex machinery and is almost impossible to apply to everything.

2—The Government may fix prices. This, too, is a job of staggering complexity, if we attempt to apply to the whole economic structure.

3—The Government may tax away your spending power in excess of what the nation's productive capacity can supply.

European Governments are applying all three, and we are making beginnings in the three directions.

There has been no rationing of what you can buy over the counter, but priorities are, in effect, rationing vital raw materials to manufacturers, and merchants and dealers are beginning to feel the pinch in getting deliveries. Congresss has before it a measure boosting taxes, and the Treasury already is studying new and more drastic proposals for Congress to work on next year.

But we haven't gone very far. We have a price administrator in Washington—Leon Henderson—but Congress has not yet decided on the legal forms which his controls will take. Meanwhile, he has made a sweeping start at holding down prices of a wide range of materials chiefly through moral suasion.

Yet comodity prices generally in this country, as measured by the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics, have aleady jumped about 20 per cent since August, 1939. That is about half as much as they have risen in England, wihch is actually at war. Britain was slow in clamping down her controls, but has held the line pretty steadily for nearly a year now.

But our price level has been pushing up steadily of late, and that is being reflected in the cost of living. Evidently, we have not made up our minds just where and how to try to hold the line. Meanwhile, administration leaders are becoming increasingly concerned. Treasury Secretary Morgenthau said in a speech in Boston last Tuesday:

"Our economy today resembles an overloaded steam boiler. The fire is growing hotter and is generating more steam than the boilers can safely hold."

SEP 12 1941

A YEAR AGO THE SAME WORDS WOULD HAVE BEEN HAILED AS PRACTICALLY A DECLARATION OF WAR AGAINST GERMANY AND ITALY.

CANADIANS IN RECENT WEEKS, HOWEVER, HAVE BECOME CAUTIOUS IN THEIR INTERPRETATION OF PRESIDENTIAL UTTERANCES, AND NEWSPAPER COMMENT ON THE PRESIDENT'S LABOR DAY SPEECH INCLUDED WARNINGS TO THE CANADIAN PUBLIC TO REMEMBER THAT THE PRESIDENT ALONE CANNOT PLEDGE THE UNITED STATES TO WAR; THAT HIS ASSURANCE OF AMERICAN DETERMINATION TO CRUSH HITLER AND HIS NAZI FORCES WAS NOT A PLEDGE BUT AN EXPRESSION OF OPINION.

IT WAS NOTED THAT THE PRESIDENT'S ANNOUNCEMENT TONIGHT THAT ANY GERMAN OR ITALIAN WARSHIPS ENTERING AMERICAN DEFENSE WATERS "DO SO AT THEIR OWN PERIL" WAS STRONGER THAN ANY OF HIS PREVIOUS DECLARATIONS. HOWEVER, GREAT IMPORTANCE ALSO WAS ATTACHED TO HIS STATEMENT THAT "WE HAVE SOUGHT NO SHOOTING WAR WITH HITLER. WE DO NOT SEEK IT NOW." ON THE OTHER HAND HIS ASSERTION THAT "WE SHALL CONTINUE TO ROLL OUT THE IMPLEMENTS OF WAR TO HELP DESTROY HIM AND ALL HIS WORKS" WAS REGARDED AS AN UMISTAKABLE REITERATION OF THE "CRUSH HITLER" POLICY.

ONE VIEW OF THE ESSENTIAL MEANING OF THE SPEECH WAS THAT IT

OFFERED HITLER A CHANCE TO STAY OUT OF A SHOOTING WAR WITH THE UNITED STATES PROVIDED HITLER HENCEFORTH REFRAINS FROM INTERFERING WITH UNITED STATES EFFORTS TO DELIVER THE WEAPONS NEEDED TO DESTROY HIM. AND SINCE IT IS TAKEN FOR GRANTED HERE THAT HE WILL CONTINUE TO ATTEMPT TO PREVENT WEAPONS FROM REACHING BRITAIN AND HER ALLIES IT IS REGARDED AS MORE LIKELY NOW THAT HE WILL BECOME INVOLVED IN A SHOOTING WAR WITH THE UNITED STATES -- AT LEAST AT SEA.

IT WAS NOTED WITH GREAT INTEREST THAT THE PRESIDENT DID NOT MENTION JAPAN, A FACT WHICH AROUSED CONJECTURE AS TO THE POSSIBILITY OF A COMPROMISE SETTLEMENT JUST AROUND THE CORNER IN THE PACIFIC.
